CAPITAL BUZZES OVER ITS LATEST WAVE OF CRIME

May Import Chicago Law Enforcer.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 23.—[Special.]—Washington's crime receded from the front page today, but echoes of the dozens of shots that have been fired within the last couple of weeks are still being heard around the city, not to speak of round about the country at large.

The senate promises to look into the matter of law enforcement in the capital. And there is talk that District Attorney Rover may have some matters to bring before the grand jury.

There is, for example, the still unexplained affair of John Mitchell Henshaw, said to have been an agent of the prohibition bureau, where he performed acceptably until—so it is rumored—he ran into some evidence implicating the "higher ups" one always hears about when inquiries are under way.

Sleuth Bashed Over Head.

Mr. Henshaw was bashed over the head a few days ago by a person or persons so far undisclosed. Questioned, he said that he had been doing some private sleuthing, that he had been warned to mind his own business, and then he told about being quizzed by police officials. Washington is interested in the police department's interest in Mr. Henshaw. Mr. Henshaw said he had been hired by Senator Brookhart, Iowa's insurgent and dry, but Senator Brookhart denied this and claims that Mr. Henshaw has consulted with him, but is strictly on his own.

The weaknesses in the enforcing machinery revealed by the recent shootings and killings have prompted some citizens to look around for an enforcer who would enforce, and the place to which they look almost unanimously is none other than the much maligned city of Chicago. The man on whom they have their eye is District Attorney George E. Q. Johnson, who is credited with having done more than any other public officer to make the Chicago gangsters' road a hard one.

Movement Unofficial.

So far, however, the movement to win District Attorney Johnson's transfer here as a special assistant to the attorney general lacks official sanction. The department of justice and the White House both say they have received no formal request and have no idea of making the transfer.

When it comes to liquor and night life in the capital, you will find divergent opinions. There are many who will tell you that Washington is no worse than other cities.

On the other hand there is the Chicago woman, prominent in civic enterprise and society, who recently came to Washington for a visit and went home to report that the capital was the widest open town in America.

Investigate Night Life.

Aroused to fresh endeavor by such word of the news it had been missing THE TRIBUNE's Washington bureau sent a young man out to locate the city's night life.

This is his report:

"While it's impossible to procure liquor from any of the smarter night clubs, the accoutrements of polite drinking—otherwise known as setups—with which to embellish the contents of a hip flask, can be had for the price on the menu card.

"Despite the customary cards requesting patrons to observe the prohibition law, the managements are inclined to temper law observance with observance of their clients' desires.

Setups Can Be Purchased.

"In all but one of the clubs visited, setups could be had. At the Shoreham, newest hotel to open a supper club, ginger ale is served only by the glass and cracked ice is peddled piecemeal instead of being furnished by the bowl.

"At the Madrillon, a downtown restaurant which operates a supper club and which caters to every class, there was no hesitancy whatever in serving setups, and no attention was paid to flourishing of flasks.

"At the more exclusive Wardman Park hotel, which attracts the younger members of Washington élite, drinking must be done more surreptitiously. The usual ice and ginger ale can be easily procured, but any unnecessary display of flasks is frowned on, and in unusually flagrant cases is halted by the removal either of the guest or of the flask.

"The only rule at the Club Chan-

TAKING HIM FOR A RIDE

'Charlie' Has $5,000 More for Chicago

This much is true, however. The $5,000 which the fictitious old California prospector sent to Mayor Cermak on Friday to distribute to the needy according to his own best judgment was real money and still remains to be given away. And it is to be followed by $5,000 more which THE TRIBUNE offers to give away today under the rules of a Good Time Charliegram contest, which is announced on page 21 of this newspaper.

Charlie was impersonated, it may be said, by a TRIBUNE man, who registered under the name of Dawson at the Drake hotel on Friday in order to give an aura of verisimilitude to the story which was intended to be broadcast when the mayor opened the envelope containing the $5,000 in $100 bills.

Reporters Besiege Hotel.

It was interesting to watch the reaction to this created situation. The only clew to Charlie was the Drake hotel stationery on which he had written the lengthy history of his career, his supposed discovery of gold, and the reasons for his unusual gift to the poor.

The Drake was immediately besieged by reporters and photographers, who waited until early yesterday morning for the westerner to return to his room, No. 615.

Mayor Cermak found it necessary also to disappear yesterday. He was besieged by inquiries as to what he was going to do with the money, and he retired to his summer home on Lake Catherine near Antioch.

Mayor Takes to Boat.

When tracked down by a reporter he abruptly refused to discuss how he intended to dispose of the $5,000, and said he was going out in the middle of the lake and sit in a rowboat to escape people who wanted to see him about the matter.

There were many calls at the hotel for Dawson. Everybody wanted to see him personally. Everybody was talking about him. He began to seem real even to his creators.

Charlie registered from San Francisco and this gave another supposed clue which was followed eagerly. In San Francisco it was found that a Charles H. Dawson had been arrested as a vagrant in Oakland, Cal., in 1929 and then surprisingly had produced $25,000 in cash and turned out to be the owner of valuable real estate.

Then Fred J. R. Dawson, Oakland confectioner, came forward yesterday with the statement that he had a brother of this name, and he wondered whether Charlie had suddenly become rich.

"I wonder where he got the money," said Fred. "Also I'm wondering why he didn't remember that charity begins at home."

If it had gone on, possibly a real Charlie would have appeared who would have demanded to know what had been done with his $5,000.

And so he emerges today from the fiction stage into the Good Time Charliegrams which, it is hoped, will bring cheer and good times into the homes of many Chicago families.

DOAK FORBIDS WOMAN TO REPRESENT U. S. AT GENEVA LABOR PARLEY

Washington, D. C., May 23.—(AP)—The international labor conference will open in Geneva Monday without Miss Mary Anderson, chief of the woman's bureau, watching the fate of an agreement among nations banning night work for women.

MISS MARY ANDERSON.

Appointed by Secretary Doak, Miss Anderson sailed May 12 to attend the Geneva sessions.

But after she arrived in Europe the departmental chief who sent her cabled her directions to detour to other missions on advice of the state department.

Making his action public today, the labor secretary said the state department had deemed it "wholly inadvisable" to have any one from the United States government at Geneva, either in official or unofficial capacity.

RACKET BUREAU AGENTS SEIZED ON GRAFT CHARGES

Two investigators attached to the racket bureau of the state's attorney's office were arrested late last night by prohibition agents on charges of an alleged beer flat bartender that the investigators impersonated federal officers and attempted to exact graft. The prisoners are Michael B. Tenner, 24 years old, 4934 Washington boulevard, and Jacob Greeneman, 42, of 3009 West 19th street.

They are held at the Hyde Park station and will be kept in custody until tomorrow without charges. Their accuser, whose charges they deny, is Emilio Fornero, 5410 Lake Park avenue. He is being held as a witness by the dry office.

Tenner and Greeneman visited a suspected beer flat at 5337 Lake Park avenue last night and confiscated two bottles of liquor. They departed after telling Fornero, according to their stories, that they would return to question the flat owner. Fornero alleges, however, the investigators told him they would return "to get some money." He notified the prohibition offices, and Agent W. A. Greene and another man responded. When Greeneman and Tenner returned they seized them.

Maid's Suitor Kills Lawyer and Himself

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., May 23.—[Special.]—William Sullivan, 37, of 1110 East Lexington boulevard, Whitefish Bay, widely known Milwaukee attorney and counsel for the Milwaukee Electric Railway and Light company, was shot to death tonight when he sought to protect the family maid from an attack by a rejected suitor.

Fred Reinke, 22, of 610 Wisconsin avenue, the suitor, then shot and killed himself after also critically wounding Louise Kammann, the Sullivan maid.

A suicide note found on Reinke's body indicated he had gone to the Sullivan home intent upon killing his sweetheart and then commiting suicide.

The maid was shot five times and was said by physicians at Columbia hospital to be gravely wounded.

Killer Pursues Victim.

The shooting occurred in the living room of the Sullivan gold coast home as the aftermath of Miss Kammann's refusal of Reinke's proposal of marriage.

Sullivan's body was found lying beside that of his slayer while Miss Kammann was lying semi-conscious on the davenport, a few feet away.

The maid told police that Reinke followed her into the home after firing one shot on the threshold which went wild and lodged in the walls.

In attempting to escape him, she raced through the spacious living rooms of the home, into the dining room and through the halls in a wild circle. Reinke pursued her, firing as he went.

Dies Aiding Employé.

Attracted by the commotion, Mr. Sullivan entered the front part of the home, and evidently was shot down immediately by the crazed suitor as he sought to protect the wounded girl.

The beautifully furnished living room of the home was disheveled by the frantic efforts of the girl to ward off Reinke. The pictures had been broken by shots and there were bullet marks in the beamed ceilings. The furniture and rugs were blood stained and other rooms bore mute evidence to the murder and suicide.

When Herbert Blum, 24 years old, of 1458 Melrose street, who is engaged in the decorating business with his brother George, journeyed to the latter's home at 3238 Southport avenue last night to divide some cash received on contracts he carried a revolver as protection against robbers. Arriving at the brother's home, Blum reached into his pocket for the money. The action discharged the revolver. Police took Blum to the Ravenswood hospital. He had shot himself in the right leg.

Illinois Suit Attacks Reno Divorce Mill

A legal assault on the Reno lightning divorce mill, challenging the right of a citizen of Illinois to bring suit for a Nevada decree, was brought yesterday in the Superior court. The attack invokes the doctrine of state rights in questioning the validity of Nevada decrees in this state, declaring the new laws of Nevada to be drawn for the citizens of other states, unable to obtain divorces in their homes.

The action is a petition for an injunction to restrain Schuyler C. Schwartz, an heir to wealth, from instituting divorce action at Reno. The petition is contained in the amended bill for separate maintenance of his second wife, Georgia Gene Schwartz, 415 Aldine street. The bill was drawn by the law firm of Socrates & Davis.

Easy Divorce in Reno.

The bill avers Mrs. Schwartz has been informed that her husband intends to get a Reno divorce under a recent Nevada law which enables him to acquire residence there in six weeks. She declares that her husband would be unable to obtain a decree in Illinois, but can easily dissolve their marriage in Reno for a light and trivial cause, to the jeopardy of her marital rights.

Schwartz is said to have been born in Chicago and to have always made his home here. His income is fixed at in excess of $20,000 annually from Chicago properties, inherited from his grandfather. Once he has secured a Reno decree, the bill states, he will return to Chicago and resume his home here.

Bill Tells of Rights.

"Each state, in the exercise of its sovereignty, grants certain rights to its citizens," the bill states. "Under the laws of the state of Illinois your oratrix [Mrs. Schwartz] has acquired certain rights by reason of her marriage such as dower, jointure, homestead, support and maintenance and the right to continue the marital status until dissolved for causes prescribed by our laws.

"These rights the defendant [Mr. Schwartz] can destroy by obtaining a divorce in Nevada upon grounds not recognized in the state of Illinois, and in evasion of Illinois laws."

The bill continues by declaring that each state jealously protects the rights of its own citizens and asks that such protection be accorded Mrs. Schwartz. Mrs. Schwartz says she has no means of defending herself in the Reno action. Superior Judge Rudolph F. Desort granted permission to Attorneys Benjamin B. Davis and Nicholas Socrates to file the amended bill. He will give decision Monday or Tuesday.

May Set a Precedent.

The action was interpreted as a step toward the contesting of all Reno decrees. The decision of Judge Desort will be of vital importance, as it will involve the validity of many Reno decrees secured by Chicagoans. It is expected that the decision will be followed throughout the country as a precedent in either upholding or invalidating Nevada divorces.

The Schwartzes were married in New Albany, Ind., April 6, 1929, two weeks after he was divorced by his first wife, Mrs. Maude E. Schwartz. His first wife charged he has thirteen automobiles and a different sweetheart for each of them.

The second Mrs. Schwartz filed a suit for separate maintenance against her husband on Nov. 3, 1929, seven months after their marriage. She charged cruelty. A reconciliation followed, which lasted six weeks, ending in a second suit. Schwartz has not been served in the last action.

U. S. IS FIGHTING WAY BACK, SAYS TREASURY HEAD

"Has No Doubt" of the Outcome.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 23.—[Special.]—Confidence that the United States is headed toward complete recovery from the current economic depression was expressed tonight by Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon in the fourth of a series of cabinet addresses. The secretary asserted that, while the national struggle against adverse economic forces is a severe one, "there can be no doubt about the outcome."

ANDREW MELLON.

"We know," he declared, "that we shall emerge not only with unshaken faith in our country's future but with renewed confidence in our own capacity as a people to meet and overcome any obstacles that may seem temporarily to impede our progress."

Mr. Mellon's expression of faith in the economic vitality of the nation came at the conclusion of an address in which he reviewed frankly the difficult financial problems before the government.

Another Deficit Next Year.

He stated that the treasury faces another deficit next year in addition to a "large one" at the close of the current year. The secretary pointed also to the "defects" in the nation's taxing system and indicated that the treasury possibly at some future time may recommend a revision of the taxing machinery designed to produce sufficient revenues in times of business adversity as well as in times of prosperity.

Recent surpluses, as well as the present deficit, Mr. Mellon said, were due in large measure to the fact that this country relies for two-thirds of its tax income on the income tax, which is "subject to sweeping variations with the upward and downward swings of business." He termed the income tax a class rather than a general tax.

Silent on Tax Increase.

While definitely raising the question as to whether this country has developed as yet a sufficiently well balanced tax system to provide the revenues on which the government must be able to count from year to year, Secretary Mellon refrained from stating whether the treasury will recommend an increase in taxes at the next session in order to insure a balanced budget in the future. He indicated, however, that the question of a tax boost would depend upon how long the adverse conditions which brought about the deficit will continue.

In view of the White House opposition to any move to increase taxes prior to the 1932 presidential elections, it now seems extremely doubtful that the treasury will recommend a tax increase this winter. Mr. Mellon stated, however, that while the present deficit can be met by borrowing, "such a course is only a temporary expedient."

Turns to Bright Side.

After calling attention to the failure of the existing taxing system during the depression to supply revenues sufficient to avert a deficit that amounts to a billion dollars, Mr. Mellon directed attention to the brighter side of the national ledger. He pointed to the unusually favorable conditions under which the government had been able to borrow to meet its day by day obligations and at the same time reminded his audience that the policy of debt reduction followed during the last decade has reduced the annual interest charges by nearly half a billion dollars, "the effect of which is now felt at a time when such saving is most welcome."

Secretary Mellon said the treasury would continue applying sinking funds to debt reduction, adding that, "like the man who tightens his belt and keeps up payments on the mortgage in bad times, we shall continue to make the payments provided by the sinking fund as authorized by law." For the current fiscal year the expenditure for debt payments was 391 million.

Reviews Money Problems.

"During the last two years the treasury has faced a variety of problems," Mr. Mellon said in beginning his review of the governmental financial situation. "The government's financial position has changed from one of great ease to one of increasing difficulty, due to the widespread business depression which has afflicted the world.

"Revenues, particularly those derived from income taxes, have abruptly declined, and at the same time expenditures have increased, owing largely to measures undertaken to alleviate the depression in agriculture and industry. As a result we shall close the current fiscal year with a large deficit. We face the prospect of a deficit again next year, although we do not yet know just how great that deficit may be.

"When the time comes, we shall be able better to assess the situation and to determine what may be necessary for meeting our immediate needs.

Parepared for Rainy Day.

"Meanwhile it is well to remember that the financial position in which the government now finds itself is not unfavorable for dealing with the present emergency, and that it is due largely to the fact that since the war, and particularly in the two years since the present administration began, the government has overlooked no opportunity to set its financial house in order, and in a manner of speaking to prepare for the rainy day that was sure to come."

Mr. Mellon reviewed the tax reduction followed by the government during periods of prosperity, remarking that "the burden of federal taxes has been reduced to a minimum."

"We have at the present time," he continued, "an internal revenue system of few and relatively light taxes. Lower rates have been substituted for excessive ones, and true to sound tax principles, have proved more productive in revenue than were the higher rates.

"Little Fellow" Helped.

"By raising exemptions and credits and allowing credit for earned income, the small taxpayer has been almost entirely relieved of the burden of federal taxes. Both normal rates and surtaxes have been reduced; the war and excess profits tax on corporations has been removed; the estate tax has been lowered and excise taxes on the sale prices of many articles have been eliminated.

"In the successive revisions of the revenue law, the federal government has not only relieved the taxpayers of a very large part of the burden of taxation but has eliminated some of the most inequitable and unscientific taxes inherited from the war."

Secretary Mellon emphasized that present conditions, coupled with the failure of the present taxing system to supply needed revenue, made it imperative that the tax system come under careful scrutiny. He also asserted that he did not wish the country to think that the "treasury views with complacence the present situation in which we find ourselves, either as regards the lack of balance in our tax structure or the inadequate amount of revenue which it produces under adverse conditions."

Points to Tax Defects.

In his discussion of sources of revenue, Mr. Mellon pointed out that under existing conditions some 380,000 individuals and corporations pay about 97 per cent of the total amount received from individual income taxes.

"The situation in which we find ourselves at present," he said, "with a serious deficit facing us at the end of the year, raises the question as to whether we have developed a well balanced system to provide the revenues. We depend largely upon internal revenue taxes, including individual and corporation income taxes, and such other taxes as those on tobacco and estate taxes; and, second, customs duties.

"Customs duties are fairly stable and, in spite of all we hear to the contrary, may be relied on to produce an even flow of revenue excepting in the most abnormal years. Taxes on tobacco are also a very dependable and important source of government revenue. The individual income tax, however, has become so restricted in its application that it has become a class rather than a general tax, with its incidence limited to a comparatively small number of taxpayers.

Only 2,500,000 Taxpayers.

Out of a total population of 120,000,000 there are only 2,500,000 individuals and about a quarter of a million corporations who pay an income tax. Furthermore, some 380,000 individuals pay about 97 per cent of the total amount received from individual income taxes. Yet we depend on this limited number of taxpayers for so large a part of the revenue needed for the support of the government.

"In times like the present, when incomes have fallen off, such a system inevitably results in a severe shrinkage in the government's revenues; and this fluctuation in the revenues is further increased by our treatment of capital gains and losses, which tends to increase abnormally current income in times of rising prices and business expansion and to depress it in periods of falling prices and business contraction."

TAX BILLS RUN BUSILY AROUND IN IDLE CIRCLE

And an Extra Session Looms Nearer.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., May 23.—[Special.]—On the revenue problem, for 20 weeks it's been a "King's Horses" session, the legislature marching up the hill and marching down again, and Gov. Emmerson now intimates if the remaining four weeks are not productive, the law makers will be marching back in special session in the broiling dog days.

Two proposals, income tax and smokers' tax, come up next week, both being regarded by assembly leaders as political coffin nail measures. Amendments to the Lantz income tax bill, which was passed by the senate are to be considered in the house which voted down an unfavorable committee report last week, 88 to 60. The chief change proposed is for a property tax offset, allowing those who pay property tax to deduct the amount from income tax.

Fierce Fight Ahead.

Hot battling is looked for. It is pointed out that Wisconsin had a personal property offset, but this cut down income tax revenues so materially that the Wisconsin legislature repealed the offset. Meanwhile, the politically minded are talking of the possibility of an uprising at the polls of white collar men, renters, and industrial workers, who now carry taxes indirectly in rents and the price of food, against any new tax.

Opponents of the measure are talking of past performances by the voters, who four years ago beat a constitutional amendment which would have allowed income tax. Last November they repeated by defeating another income tax amendment. In 1922, also, the proposed new constitution was defeated five to one, one reason for its failure being an income tax provision.

Viewing this record, many Republican leaders take the view that enactment of an income tax law would be another step away from the people. They tie it up with the governor's veto of the prohibition repealer despite the November referendum, and with the senate's passage of the bill to knock out presidential primaries and to pick the delegates to national conventions by the bosses instead of by direct vote.

Tobacco Tax a Jest.

The one uproarious guffaw of the session has greeted the proposed tax on cigarets, cigars, manufactured tobacco, including chewing, or eating, tobacco.

Senators Earl B. Searcy [Rep., Springfield], Harold Kessinger [Rep., Aurora], Victor Michel [Rep., Peoria] and Roy C. Woods [Rep., Chicago] have been ridiculing the idea of a smokers' tax with counter proposals that the state tax all the poor man's joys, such as laughter, sunshine, fresh air, and proposing a tax on the jokers of a dime for every new joke, with half rates for whiskered ones; licensing the citizens to laugh at a nickel per cachinnation and to cuss at a dime an oath.

Tax Estimate Questioned.

One compilation by the Tobacco Merchants' Association of the United States is evoking interest. It sets forth that in 9 of the 11 states which have tobacco taxes, where the year's full figures are available [Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Iowa, Kansas, North Dakota, South Dakota, Tennessee and Utah] the total tobacco tax collections in 1930 were $8,543,000. The population of these 9 states is 16,259,000, making an average per capita of somewhat over 52 cents.

On this basis, it is estimated the maximum amount which would be collected from a tobacco tax in Illinois, with its 7,630,000 population would be about $3,968,000 instead of the 20 millions figured on by the so-called experts.

DIAGNOSTIC CENTER IS ORGANIZED AT VETERANS' HOSPITAL

There will be bed space for 155 men with an emergency capacity for 168. Problem cases from thirteen states will be treated there. The clinic will be in charge of Dr. O. B. Mallow and include a staff of fourteen full time physicians and twenty-five consultants on part time. Dr. Charles A. Elliott, professor of medicine at Northwestern university, a staff member of the Passavant hospital, has been named dean of the consultants.

According to Dr. Scott, the staff of consultants matches the best in the country. The diagnostic center itself, he says, is in a position to test the supremacy of the Mayo clinic in the civilian world and the Walter Reed hospital in the military world.

OWNER OF CANDY STORE SHOT TO DEATH IN FIGHT

Joseph Sobotka, 44 years old, was shot in the heart and instantly killed early this morning in the rear living rooms of his candy store at 1510 West North avenue. North Racine avenue police took into custody Stanley Wrona, who lives over the store, and Paul Musial, 519 North avenue, who, it is charged, were in the confectionery. At first it was believed Sobotka had been slain in a holdup, but detectives said there were indications that a fight preceded the shooting. Three empty glasses were found near Sobotka's body. At the time Sobotka was shot his wife, Sophia, and their daughter, Cecilia, 14 years old, were asleep in another room.

Overrules Preston's Plea for a New Sanity Trial

Judge Frank W. Sheperd at Wheaton yesterday overruled a motion for a new sanity trial of John E. Preston, who was adjudged sane by a jury in the Circuit court on Thursday. Preston, who was sentenced to death for the murder of Agnes Johnson, a stenographer, was ordered to the Joliet penitentiary to await electrocution on June 19. Two previous sanity trials, in one of which Preston was declared sane and the other insane, were thrown out by the courts.

Leap on Bandits

Two youths, who attempted to battle with robbers yesterday afternoon in the dry goods store of Joseph Rubin at 4054 West 26th street, were shot and wounded.

They are Albert Rubin, 18 years old, son of the owner, and Mannie Nadler, 18 years old, a first cousin of Albert. They were acting as clerks when the two robbers, who had pistols concealed in their pockets, appeared. Forcing the elder Rubin into the rear of the store, the bandits took $140 from him and started out.

Albert and Mannie, believing the robbers had no weapons, leaped on them. One of the gunmen fired several times. Young Rubin was struck in the right leg and Nadler in the left arm. The robbers escaped.

A crew from the Evanston coast guard station yesterday rescued three men and a woman in a boat off the Wilson avenue shore. The four were on a 40 foot cruiser listed to D. H. Smith of 804 Judson avenue, Evanston, as the owner. According to First Mate Paul B. Hellman of the coast guard the cruiser had developed engine trouble but was in no danger. The boat was towed to the Sheridan Shore Yacht club in Wilmette harbor. The names of the men and woman were not learned.

U. S. REQUESTED TO PAY LOSSES ON BOND ISSUES

Ten Southern States Are in Default.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 23.—Two recent events have served to direct public attention again to the repudiated bond issues of ten southern states. Investors in these issues, at home and abroad, have asked the federal government to liquidate them.

The state of Mississippi, a defaulter of 100 years standing, is again in financial straits. The bankers of the state have come to its rescue for the time being, having advanced funds to prevent default of payment of $600,000 of short term state obligations on May 1. By December 31 the state will owe an additional 6 million dollars. The credit of the state is in such low repute that in numerous states savings banks are forbidden by law to invest their funds in the bonds of Mississippi.

The other development was the default by the Australian state of New South Wales of payment of interest on its bonds. The federal government of Australia announced that it would meet the interest payments on behalf of its subsidiary government.

Americans Among Holders.

Among the Australian bondholders are several thousand American citizens who thus are indebted for payment of the interest due them to the recognition by the Australian federal government of an obligation respecting payment of the debts of a subsidiary state which the American federal government has refused to recognize up to date with respect to the repudiated debts of individual American states.

Incidentally one of the aspects of the rise of the United States to the front rank of creditor nations is the banding together of American investors in foreign securities to protect themselves from loss by default and repudiation. There is in process of formation for this purpose an American organization similar to the British corporation of foreign bondholders which for 57 years has protected the interests of British investors in foreign securities, effecting the payment of five billions of dollars in principal and interest that otherwise would have been lost.

Exclusive of civil war bond issues by confederate states the repudiated debts of the ten southern states aggregate $155,525,856. With accrued interest the total nonconfederate repudiated debt now exceeds 600 millions of dollars. The oldest debt date from the early years of the 19th century, the most recent from the reconstruction era. The ten states with the amounts of their repudiated bond issues outstanding follow:

State.	Amount.
[illegible]	26,270,534
[illegible]	20,338,330
[illegible]	18,045,613
[illegible]	17,607,452
Tennessee	16,177,584
Arkansas	12,473,646
Georgia	9,863,500
[illegible]	2,847,362

A good many of these debts were incurred by these states during their administration by "carpetbag" governments in the reconstruction period following the civil war. As the carpetbag governments were composed preponderantly of northerners and Negroes and frequently dominated by federal troops and as these governments were characterized by much profligacy of public expenditure the southern whites, upon regaining control of their states, repudiated the debts of the carpetbag régime as unauthorized promises to pay emitted by usurpers.

Repudiation Defended.

That the repudiation of the debts of the reconstruction era was justified is still the attitude of the southerners who contend that if these obligations are discharged at all it should be by the federal government under the auspices of which they were incurred. In the cases of two arbitration treaties the senate at the instance of southern senators voted amendments excluding from arbitration claims of indebtedness against individual American states.

A large portion of the repudiated indebtedness is held by British subjects who are represented by the council of foreign bondholders. The council annually reports on various plans for forcing the American states to pay up or of inducing the American federal government to assume the debts. So far it has got nowhere, having failed even to interest the British government in making any aggressive move in the matter.

Question Not Raised.

When the British government obtained its world war debt settlement with the United States it did not ask a deduction to the amount of the repudiated bonds of American states held by British subjects. Only last year when Lord Redesdale asked in the house of lords whether the government was disposed to seek an adjustment by set off against the war debt to the amount of the British holdings of repudiated American bonds Lord Ponsonby, replying for the government, said that "although the question of these debts had been considered at different times since 1843 it had never been found possible to take it up with the United States government."

Lord Ponsonby explained that the United States government had no concern with the obligations assumed by individual states and that it had no power to compel the defaulting states to pay.

The council is now pinning its hopes to the next international conference on the codification of international law from which it expects a declaration that will impel the United States to assume the repudiated debts. At the conference last year a committee considering the responsibility of governments for the actions of subsidiary states reported its study incomplete but is expected to report at the next conference.

Council Has Hope.

The hopes of the council are inspired by the replies made by the United States government to a questionnaire of the conference which disclosed that the American government had on occasion recognized the principle of such responsibility.

In illustrating its attitude on the question of federal responsibility for the acts of component states the United States cited the following quotation from a note addressed to Brazil by Secretary of State Fish in 1875:

"It is the imperial government at Rio de Janeiro only, which is accountable to this government for any injury to the person or property of a citizen of the United States committed by the authorities of a province. It is with that government alone that we hold diplomatic intercourse. The same rule would be applicable to the case of a Brazilian subject who in this country might be wronged by the authorities of a state."

Government Stand Cited.

In its reply to the questionnaire the United States also cited the stern action taken by our government when American citizens were threatened with a repudiation of obligations similar to that of our southern states.

In 1897 a bill was introduced in the legislature of Haiti to convert Haitian bonds at a rate greatly depreciatory of their value. Secretary of State Sherman promptly warned Haiti that the United States would be "constrained to consideration and action if it be established that the arbitrary reduction of one-third from sums which the Haitian government has contracted to pay to citizens of the United States is enforced."

Model Killed When Auto Crashes Into Motorbus

One model was killed and another injured late last night when the automobile in which they were riding with a married man crashed into the rear of a motor bus in Lincoln park. The woman killed was Miss Viola Carlstedt, 27 years old, 6761 Sheridan road, and the injured girl was Miss Edith Hayes, 25 years old, Miss Carlstedt's roommate. The accident brought about a clash between a lieutenant of the city police and the Lincoln park force.

In a second automobile crash one man was killed and two others probably fatally injured when their machine collided headon with a street car at Ashland avenue and Irving Park boulevard.

Crashes Into Rear of Bus.

Miss Carlstedt and Miss Hayes were riding in a machine driven by George J. Daley, who, police said, is salesmanager for the Jewel Tea company. In undertaking to pass the bus Daley was about to collide with another automobile and veered back behind the bus. He lost control of the car and it struck the bus with a terrific impact.

The machine overturned and was badly wrecked. The women were buried beneath the wreckage. They were dragged out and taken to the Columbus hospital, where it was found Miss Carlstedt was dead. Miss Hayes' injuries were dressed and she was questioned by the police. In the car police said they found a pint of liquor.

Driver of Car Disappears.

Meantime Daley disappeared and the Lincoln park police sought him at his home. There they found William H. Byrnes, a retired sergeant of police, and his wife, parents of Mrs. Daley. They said Daley had not returned. A few minutes later Lieut. Sylvester Cotter of the Des Plaines street police went to the Lincoln park station to negotiate for Daley's surrender. He told the park police, however, the man would not be surrendered if he were to be held without bond for the inquest. About that time Sergt. Conlon of the park police saw Daley sitting in Cotter's car a short distance from the station, and arrested him. He was sent to the Hudson station and locked up.

Shortly afterward Lieut. Pincus of Hudson avenue was ordered by Judge James J. Kelly of the Superior court to book Daley on a manslaughter manslaughter charge and release him on a bond of $5,000. Judge Kelly threatened that if this were not done he would issue a writ of habeas corpus. Daley was accordingly booked and released on a bond signed by Mrs. Mary A. Cotter, despite the fact that he was a prisoner of the park police.

In explaining his action Judge Kelly said he was called on the telephone by Mrs. Daley, whom he had long known, and by Lieut. Cotter, and that both had requested that bond be fixed immediately. The judge said he knew nothing of Daley leaving the scene of an accident or of liquor in the car.

Hits Street Car Head-on.

The automobile-street car victim was Henry Schmittel, 23 years old, of 3351 North Whipple street. His companions, both of whom were taken to the American hospital, are Hans Du Maire, 25 years old, of 3355 North Whipple street, the driver, and Jack Bessner, about 24 years old.

The collision occurred when Du Maire, driving east in Irving Park boulevard, attempted to cut off the westbound trolley by making a left hand turn. The machine crashed almost squarely into the car, wrecking the automobile and crushing in the left half of the front platform of the street car. Motorman Oscar Brietenbach hurriedly stopped his car and about twenty-five passengers were jolted. Those in the auto were extricated from the wreckage by crews of three police and one fire ambulance and taken to the American hospital.

These deaths and one other increased the Cook county motor toll for the year to 451. The other victim:

Patrick W. McDonough, 67 years old, of 7023 East End avenue. Died last night in the Jackson Park hospital of a complication of illnesses that followed injuries suffered in a collision of his car Feb. 16 with that of William Kaufman, 5005 Rhodes avenue. While recovering, McDonough's wife died. The shock of this and his injuries resulted in his death.

Raymond Takulla, 31 years old, 1415 West Austin avenue, a railroad fireman, died in a hospital at Woodstock yesterday of injuries incurred on Friday when his automobile was struck by a Chicago and North Western train at a crossing two miles north of Crystal Lake.

Shopkeeper Wounded in Dispute Over Money Dies

William A. Johnston, 60 years old, 1235 Early street, died last night in the county hospital of a bullet wound suffered when he was shot by a George Scott during a quarrel over money matters on Thursday. The shooting occurred in Johnston's furniture repair shop at 406 South Dearborn street. Johnston told police his assailant was Scott.

AIR FLEET SAVES NEW YORK FROM IMAGINARY FOES

Gotham Sees Army Planes in Windswept Sky.

BY TOM PETTEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 23.— [Special.] — Flying under a slate gray, windswept sky, the army's fighting air fleet swept down the Hudson late today and saved New York City from a mythical enemy armada attacking from the clouds and sea. It was the air corps' second big town show, Chicago having seen the premiere under sparkling skies two days ago.

Five hundred and ninety-seven yellow winged destroyers swarmed over the city, past the Statue of Liberty, across Floyd Bennet airport, the city's newest and largest field, and home to their "war" nests on Long Island. Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, flying a Missouri ship, led the National Guard unit through gusty air lanes and tonight every plane except one was safely berthed awaiting the call to arms tomorrow morning when the fleet moves into New England territory.

Plane Forced Into Bay.

The ship that failed to get home was an observation plane carrying a pilot and a newspaper photographer. It dropped abruptly out of formation over Brooklyn, fought to right itself, and fell into the waters of the upper bay. The pilot had deliberately chosen the bath rather than run the risk of injuring spectators thronging the sandy beach where a safe landing might have been made. A coast guard launch picked up the two men uninjured. The dive into the bay was the only casualty of the day.

Crowds that had waited since noon were apathetic as the ships finally slipped past. Most of the spectators were disappointed. They had expected to see diving, darting, and wheeling maneuvers just above their heads, but the planes kept safely over the water and sailed sedately along, for this is war practice and not an aerobatic show.

Col. Lindbergh in Flight.

Few on the housetops or in the parks knew Col. Lindbergh was flying at the head of his old comrades of the Missouri National Guard. Lindbergh went to Mitchel field as a luncheon guest and left soon afterward to take Maj. Gen. Hanson Ely, commander of the 2d corps area on a flight over the city. When he landed Capt. Armin Herold, the Missouri squadron commander, offered the colonel his plane and went along in the parade as a back seat rider.

While the planes were droning through the leaden skies more than 500 "shock troops" from pacifist ranks led by a band were pitting their oratory against the air demonstrations. At some congregation points they were heckled, but for the most part the crowds took their speeches with the same quietness that they took the air show.

All in all, the New York war game was a ragged show, executed in spanking rain-in-the-face weather, but the city was lucky to see any flying.

Tomorrow the army air corps will move toward New England, where the commanding officers will meet Maj. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff of the army, and work out a new "war" problem. Boston, Hartford, and Springfield will be concentration points.

U. S. Mayors Want Pictures Taken; Protest French Rush

BY EGBERT SWENSON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROUEN, France, May 23.—The 21 American mayors, presumably used to doing things in that dashing, speedy American manner, today found the French a bit too fast for them, and they pantingly pleaded for less haste and considerably more leisure. For a time it appeared as though some of the mayors, who are in France as the guests of the Paris government, would walk out on the party because "they objected to being rushed about like tourists."

The trouble started before the famous 13th century cathedral, the pride of Rouen. The church chimes were pealing "The Star Spangled Banner" with the mayors posing for American sound films. "Dixie" was about to be chimed for the benefit of the mayors from south of the Mason-Dixon line.

The sound film photographers had grouped the southern executives when Francis Orlandi, a representative of the government's tourist office and in charge of the junket, strode up impatiently and interrupted the process, insisting that the mayors would have to halt the "Dixie" part of the program or else they would miss the monuments.

Loud Debate in City Square.

This interruption precipitated a loud objection from the municipal executives in the public square. Some of the more rebellious assembled for a vociferous caucus up a side street, while blue-smocked, red-faced, brandy drinking Normans gathered and gaped, scratching their pates under their Phrygian bonnets in gestures of astonishment and perplexity.

The obstreperous mayors pleaded for more time to obtain publicity for home consumption, for more time for the small army of photographers and for more time for the sound films. Orlandi pleaded for greater speed and precision.

Mayor George L. Baker of Portland, Ore., leader of the visiting mayors, finally persuaded his colleagues to go to luncheon, where the argument continued until after 4 p. m. Mayor Baker's arguments finally saved the day, and the delegation decided, since they were the guests of France, that they would abide by Orlandi's rulings.

Mayor Porter Lifts Glass.

Another highlight today was provided by Mayor John C. Porter of Los Angeles, Cal., who yesterday gave the party a Volsteadian shock at Havre by refusing to let champagne pass his lips, even in a toast to the Presidents of the United States and France. After a night's kidding by his colleagues he demanded the privilege to respond to the toast of Mayor Metellier of Rouen. He extolled Franco-American amity in a brief talk and then raised a glass of port to the glory of France, flourished it, and then put it down untouched, but at least he had toasted. The Americans sighed with relief and some cheered.

One concession was won by the mayors as a result of the day's arguments. Speechmaking, which heretofore had been abundant and doubled by the necessity of translating the address each time, and upon which the efficient M. Orlandi failed to frown, will henceforth be limited to five minutes per person.

AWARD CHICAGO GIRL SECOND IN ORATORY FINALS

Lengthy Speech May Have Cost First Place.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 23.—[Special.]—Robert Gibson Rayburn, 16 year old senior in the Newton, Kas., High school, tonight became the champion high school orator of the United States. He was declared winner of the eighth national oratorical contest, finals of which were held here this evening in Constitution hall.

Second place was awarded to Ever Louise Conner, 16 year old sophomore, of the Aquinas Dominican school of Chicago, while third honors went to William J. Codd of Gonzaga High school, Spokane, Wash. Miss Conner's oration was cut short by the signal of a timer, which, many believed, deprived her of the first award.

Young Rayburn delivered a six minute prepared speech on "The Tests of the Constitution" and then spoke extemporaneously for four minutes on the "Conflict between Jefferson and Hamilton."

Miss Conner failed to reach the end of her prepared speech on "The Constitution, a Living Document," within the allotted six minutes.

Contestants to See Europe.

Rayburn by virtue of his victory tonight clinches the right to represent this country in the international contest to be held here next October. All of tonight's contestants, however, are scheduled to leave on July 16 for a two and a half months' tour of Europe, which they were awarded as winners of their respective divisions.

All of the orators adopted virtually the same style of delivery, a modified tone of voice with few gestures. Rayburn, the winner, delivered his oration in a low pitched, convincing voice.

The contestants were so evenly matched that four secret ballots were cast by the judges before a winner was decided upon.

Ballots Cast Independently.

The judges, seated in different sections of the hall during the affair, were Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, Dr Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Pan-American union; Dr. Lucius Charles Clark, chancellor of American university; Dr. W. Coleman Nevils, president of Georgetown university, and Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington university. Their ballots were cast without consultation.

About five thousand persons jammed Constitution hall for the contest, which has become one of Washington's most popular annual events.

Chicago Girl Orator Wins Place

WAR WORKERS ARE REBUKED BY MME. HEINK

Sacramento, Cal., May 23.—(AP)—Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, world famed singer, last night rebuked war mothers at a recital marking dedication of a memorial auditorium. Some of the mothers had protested the scheduled appearance of Chinese, Japanese, Negro, Portuguese and Italian children on the stage.

So the singer turned her back upon her adult audience and, facing the foreign blooded children, crooned a lullaby especially for them. Then she stepped to the footlights and said;

"As a war mother I know what it means to suffer. I gave five sons, four to Uncle Sam and one to his old fatherland.

"It is up to the war mothers to teach their children the law of love —and not make a difference between black, yellow, or brown or white skins."

Gunmen Rob Girl Cashier of $700; Steal Company Car

Two gunmen in an automobile forced to the curb a car in which Miss Dorothy Hirsch, cashier of the Superior Tea and Coffee company at 3637 Ogden avenue, was riding at 15th street and Spaulding avenue yesterday and made her surrender to them $550 and checks for $169. The pair then took the keys of the tea company car and drove away, leaving Miss Hirsch and her chauffeur, Elmer Carta, unable to pursue them. Miss Hirsch was on her way to a bank when the robbery occurred.

tecler, which was closed last week following the shooting of a policeman and the manager by a guest, is 'under the table." The management insists that flasks be kept off the top of the tables. Chantecler is the most exclusive Washington night club, catering to the most representative of Washington's official, diplomatic, and social life.

"Le Paradis, located in the same building with Chantecler and operated by the same management, is still under the padlock placed there nearly a year ago by prohibition officials for serving setups. Le Paradis roof, however, operated all last summer and is expected to open up shortly."

Fewer of Saloon Type.

Nothing out of the ordinary in the supper clubs, therefore, our investigator concluded. Nor did a prowl about the speakeasies disclose anything unusual except that there are perhaps fewer of the converted saloon type than in other cities, and an unusual proportion of apartments with a few tables in front rooms where drinks may be bought and consumed. It is a more ticklish legal proposition to raid an apartment dwelling than it is to raid a place of business.

But—here, perhaps, THE TRIBUNE investigator put his finger on what the Chicago woman meant by calling Washington a wide open town—Washington is a "party drinking" city. It is a city of social affairs, of groups, of entertainment, where calling and teaing and going to parties is an accepted function, not only among society with a capital "S" but among a large proportion of the population.

And a tea or a party, or even an afternoon call, usually means something to drink—from one or two cocktails, abstemiously sipped, to an oft replenished punch bowl flanked by battalions of Scotch and rye bottles, ginger ale, and White Rock.

The socially minded individual has his private stock, which he gets out whenever he has callers, and he looks for the compliment to be returned. It is not what goes on in the hotel supper room that counts so much as it is in the apartments on the floors above. A hotel recently in cleaning up after the departure of a sociable visitor found in the closet, for example, two ten gallon kegs, a five gallon keg, nineteen half gallon jars, and an assortment of empty quarts and fifths.

Gambling Resorts Outside.

There is one other factor to be taken into account, and that is that much of Washington's less temperate recreation takes place outside the district borders.

Perhaps the largest gambling resort in the community is just across the line in Maryland. And whenever the younger society set feels like letting out a notch or two, it frequently foregathers at a club in Alexandria, across the river in Virginia, or at another club outside of Alexandria, which is also a rendezvous for the set that lives in the Virginia countryside, that is Washington's equivalent of Chicago's Lake Forest and Fox river territory.

Shoots Wrong Man.

Washington, D. C., May 23.—(AP)—James Zirkle, 27, was in a critical condition with a bullet wound in his stomach and Emmett Martz, alias Riley, 29, was being held for investigation tonight as the result of the capital's latest shooting.

Martz was quoted by police as having admitted the shooting, but "didn't know why" he did it. Officers said Martz entered a poolroom and pointed a gun at Vernon Hawks, who was questioned a few days ago in connection with the fatal shooting of John Cunningham, a police informer, whose death remains unsolved. In the confusion, Zirkle, an employé of the poolroom, was wounded.

Martz described himself as a commercial photographer.

TWO PROMOTED TO BRIGADIER GENERAL TO FILL VACANCIES

Washington, D. C., May 23.—[Special.]—Col. Joseph P. Travy and Col. Edward L. Munson were today appointed brigadier generals by President Hoover to fill vacancies caused by the death of Brig. Gen. Leroy Eltinge, and the retirement by operation of law of Brig. Gen. Henry C. Fisher.

TWO IN CAR KILLED BY TRAIN IN IOWA.

Talmadge, Ia., May 23.—(AP)—Two persons were killed near here today when the automobile in which they were riding was struck at a grade crossing by a Chicago Great Western passenger train. The dead are Clark Babb, 24, and Mrs. Dora Shipley, 53, his aunt. Both lived at Murray, Ia.

ROBBER CAUGHT WHEN GIRL PUTS POLICE ON TRAIL

A robber entered the Charm [illegible] shop at 4731 Broadway last evening and compelled the manager, Miss Ruby Neff, to surrender $90 to him. Then warning Miss Neff, a customer, and a clerk, Miss Mossy Walker of 4817 [illegible]more avenue, to remain quietly in a rear room, he sauntered out into the crowds on the sidewalk and over to Lawrence avenue, where he entered a cab.

Miss Walker disobeyed orders and followed him. She met a police motor squad led by Sergts. John O'Brien and August Kroat and pointed out the cab, which was being driven north. The police followed and at Argyle street and Broadway captured the robber. He had a pistol and the $90 in his pockets. At the Summerdale police station he said he was Eugene Heffeman, 23 years old, 6117 Woodlawn avenue.

Two armed men held up Philip J. Gale, 5465 Everett avenue, night manager of the Waggoner service station at 45 East 71st street and robbed him of $450. They locked him in a wash room before escaping.

JURY DUE TO GET KIRKLAND'S CASE LATE ON TUESDAY

Girl Chum Denies Strip Poker Story.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Valparaiso, Ind., May 23.—[Special.]—Testimony in the Virgil Kirkland murder trial was completed today. Attorneys for the state and defense will take all Monday and Tuesday for their final arguments, they said, and the case will be given to the jury Tuesday evening.

Chief among the rebuttal witnesses placed on the stand by the state this morning was Dorothy Holmes, a little blonde girl, who said she was a lifelong friend of Arlene Draves, the 17 year old girl for whose rape and murder Kirkland is on trial.

Miss Holmes flatly contradicted Kirkland's testimony that he, Arlene, John Churchill, and Miss Holmes attended a strip poker party at Arlene's home about six weeks before the murder.

Denies Playing Strip Poker.

"I remember that party," she testified. "Arlene and I were at her home and the boys came over. Virgil had a pint of gin."

Q.—Did you play strip poker? A.—Absolutely no.

Q.—Did Arlene and you play until you had only stepins on? A.—Positively no.

Q.—Did you see Virgil and Arlene together in an automobile and beg to be taken home because advances had been made to you by Churchill? A.—No, sir.

Under cross examination, Miss Holmes said she had never taken a drink in her life. There was an audible snicker from a girl sitting on a spectators' bench. This girl was identified as Jean Stropke, 18, of Gary, who came forward and offered to testify that she had seen Miss Holmes drunk at a party with Kirkland.

Testimony Ruled Out.

After the state had interposed objections, Judge Grant Crumpacker ruled that Miss Stropke might not testify.

Another rebuttal witness was Elsie Draves, sister of Arlene, and Edward Draves, a brother. They testified that they had given Arlene $10 to buy a new dress a few days before the murder. The defense had introduced evidence that Kirkland gave Arlene the $10. The new evidence indicated that Kirkland had merely held the money for Arlene and given it to her when she asked for it.

Judge Crumpacker has decided to submit to the jury six forms of verdict, instead of only the three he previously announced: Guilty of murder, guilty of criminal attack, guilty of involuntary manslaughter, guilty of assault and battery with intention to criminally attack, guilty of assault and battery, and not guilty.

The only forms the judge previously indicated he would submit were those of murder, criminal attack and not guilty.

Jury Won't Visit Scenes.

A defense motion that the jury be taken to the home where the party was held and to several other places mentioned in evidence was overruled.

There was no further mention made by the defense of a letter written by one R. A. Manning of Davenport, Ia., which offered evidence indicating that Arlene fell from an automobile the night she was killed. It was revealed today that "Manning" in his letter requested money for his testimony.

When ordering the jurors into custody over the week-end, Judge Crumpacker told them that he had been informed of attempts by outsiders to talk to them.

"If any one approaches you, have the bailiff arrest him and bring him into court," he said. "He will be dealt with severely."

FISHBEIN TO TALK AT LUNCHEON OF NURSING SERVICE

A group of club women, civic leaders and business men will be guests of the Hourly Nursing Service at a luncheon next Tuesday in the Palmer house, at which Dr. Morris Fishbein will speak on lowering the cost of medical care. The Hourly Nursing Service, whose chairman is Mrs. Arthur H. Spiegel, is a not-for-profit organization designed to supply competent graduate nurses at moderate cost for an hour or two a day on cases where a full time nurse is not needed.

MRS. FREDERIC UPHAM.

For the present the service is operating under a temporary grant from the Julius Rosenwald fund. Among its sponsors are Mrs. Frederic W. Upham, Mrs. John W. Gary, Mrs. David Wilson Graham, Mrs. Stanton Friedberg, and Mrs. Spiegel. Headquarters is at 8 South Michigan avenue.

Plans for raising the standard of all nursing service were discussed yesterday at a meeting of directors of the midwest division of the American Nurses association, at the Palmer house. A placement and vocational service bureau is to be opened in Chicago to maintain contact with various communities of the middle west and to conduct surveys showing where improvement is needed, then supply it. Miss Helena L. MacMillan, director of the school of nursing at the Presbyterian hospital, was chosen president to succeed Miss Mabel Dunlap of Moline, Ill.

JOBLESS RIOTERS FORCE ILL MAYOR TO O. K. DOLE BILL

BITTERFELD, Germany, May 23.—(AP)—A mob of unemployed men today stormed the town hall at Graefenhainichen, near here, demanding restoration of the emergency dole. From there they went to the home of the mayor, surrounding his sickbed and forcing him to sign an authorization for more unemployed relief.

Meanwhile another crowd raided a store operated by the welfare commissioner, to whom they administered a beating. This evening all the homes of municipal officials were under guard.

There were less serious demonstrations in other parts of the country. At Berlin a mob raided two stores, looting them of provisions. At Essen last night one man was killed in riots which developed at a mass meeting of a workers' association.

INDIGENT ALIENS LEAVE ON TRAIN WITH DEPORTEES

Record Group Started on Way to Homelands.

A trainload of 210 aliens, including 150 from the Chicago district, left the La Salle street station last night for Jersey City, whence they will be taken to Ellis island and loaded on deportation boats.

The Chicago contingent was the largest so far in the campaign of federal authorities, but this was due to the number of indigent aliens who availed themselves of free transportation to their home lands provided by the labor department as an unemployment relief measure. The shipment included 86 of these.

Two carloads from the west and another from Milwaukee joined the five coaches carrying the Chicago deportees. The train was to be joined by more coaches at Detroit and at Cleveland and Buffalo, making a total of twenty-two cars and some 650 aliens for the regular transcontinental movement.

Three criminals were included in the Chicago group. They were Heinz Koenigsfeld, forgery; Albert Sukdol, indecent liberties with a minor; Magnus Nielson, burglary. Most of the others who went involuntarily had been smuggled into the country, according to Shirley D. Smith, district director of immigration.

Yesterday's shipment brought the total number of deported from the Chicago district since last July 1 to more than 1,000, and Mr. Smith said the present fiscal year, which will include one more shipment, would show an increase of almost 100 per cent over last year.

JOHN GARFIELD, 39, JAMES A.'S GRANDSON, ENDS LIFE WITH GUN

Mentor, O., May 23.—[U.P.]—John N. Garfield, 39, grandson of the assassinated former President, James A. Garfield, died at his home here early today of gunshot wounds, described as self-inflicted.

Garfield attended a dinner at a neighbor's house last night with his family, but left early to walk home. His family, following in a car, found him fatally wounded in the bathroom, his head pierced with a bullet. He died several hours later.

It was said the victim had been morose since undergoing an operation from which he did not recover rapidly.

The victim, who was born in Chicago, was the son of James Rudolph Garfield, former secretary of the interior and commissioner of the bureau of corporations. In 1929 Garfield Sr. was selected by President Hoover as chairman of the public lands committee.

VOTERS DEFEAT PROPOSAL FOR BERWYN SCHOOL

Voters of the west suburbs yesterday defeated the propositions to build a new high school in Berwyn. The unofficial returns showed 7,751 votes for the school and 8,035 against it.

The proposition asked that the voters of school district 201 authorize the school building at 29th and Home avenues, and to approve a $600,000 bond issue for financing. It was pointed out that the Morton High school in Cicero, built for the accommodation of 3,000 students, is now handling 8,000.

Cicero cast the deciding dissenting votes, mainly, it was said, because of the fear of increased taxation and because of the belief the school should be in Cicero. The vote in Cicero was 6,381 against and 870 for. Berwyn voted 1,578 against and 6,238 for. Stickney voted 46 against and 236 for. Lyons voted 3 against and 257 for.

Greenwich, Conn., May 23.—[Special.]—A mob of 1,000 striking laborers and their wives, some of the latter with babies in their arms, stormed the town hall today, smashed doors and windows, and for four hours resisted efforts of police to disperse them. They left voluntarily when informed that the labor disagreement which led to the riot had been settled for the time being.

The trouble grew out of disputes between laborers and contractors on town highway jobs. Under an agreement which expired May 1, the men, members of the Hod Carriers' and Laborers' union, had been getting $6.50 for an eight hour day, but after the agreement ended the rate was cut to $4.25 a day.

A strike followed. The contractors hired outside labor. After a meeting of the board of estimate and taxation, which also got nowhere, the strikers declared that they were starving and planned the "demonstration" at the town hall today. Policemen guarding the hall were brushed aside by the crowd, which forced its way into the building and smashed windows.

Meanwhile a hasty meeting had been called in the offices of the contracting firm, and it was agreed temporarily that 200 men were to go back to work Monday at the old rate.

Three Croats Get Death for Plot at King's Fete

BELGRADE, Jugo-Slavia, May 23.—(AP)—Three death sentences, one of them invoked against an accused person who was absent, were passed today after the trial of fourteen Croats charged with an outrage against a train bearing a delegation of alleged "turncoat" Croats to Belgrade to honor King Alexander on his birthday last year. Ten of the prisoners received sentences of two to twenty years at hard labor and one was acquitted.

ASSAILS EXPERT'S HARBOR REPORT AS WORTHLESS

In a thirteen page report submitted yesterday to the city council committee on harbors, wharves, and bridges, Benton F. Kleeman, legal adviser to the committee, who also has been on the city pay roll as a real estate expert, reviewed the progress of legislation in relation to the Lake Calumet harbor project.

Ald. William A. Rowan [10th], new chairman of the committee, said the report cost the city $9,000, but is worthless. He said it was not authorized by him.

"I went through it," Ald. Rowan said, "but I couldn't find anything in it. It is of no value to the committee. I have tried to find out what Kleeman is supposed to do for the committee but I have not been able to do so. I have notified him that I won't approve any vouchers that he may send in for his services."

CHICAGO WOMAN TELLS OF SEIZURE BY CHINESE BAND

Missionaries Freed After Trip to Mountains.

In a letter to her father, the Rev. V. L. Nordlund of 5255 North Sawyer avenue, Miss Esther Nordlund, a Swedish Lutheran missionary to China, has described the negotiations which resulted in her release on April 22 by bandits who had captured her and seventy-five others and carried them from their mission into the impenetrable mountains of Hupeh province.

The seizure of Miss Nordlund, two other Chicagoans, Miss Augusta Nelson and the Rev. Oscar Anderson, and a number of students and wealthy Chinese citizens occurred after the bandit army had taken the mission city of Kingmen on April 17. As Miss Nordlund expressed it:

"The Reds came here and carried us into the mountains of Nanchang. The first day we were taken to Kwang In Si, the next day to Dong Kong, and then on up into the mountains sixty li [about 24 miles] above Dong Kong. The whole city of Kingmen was taken by surprise by the bandit army.

Bandits Threaten to Shoot.

"Of course, all our things were taken from us. Augusta, Oscar and I were told that if we did not go they would shoot us. There was no other way but to obey. They treated us fairly well under the circumstances.

"On the fourth day they began to talk of our release. The whol.. ..ne we assured them that we would like to come to some agreement. First they wanted $30,000—that was on the second day. The third day they want- $400,000. Then finally they said they didn't want money, but asked us to work for them. We would not consent to that, but suggested that we would get them medical supplies.

"They agreed to that and they set Augusta and me free to get this medicine over from Hankow. They released us on the 22d of April and we arrived here in Kingmen on the 24th. Oscar and Dr. Yoo [a Chinese physician] are still in the bandits' hands."

Mr. Anderson has since been released.

Father Also a Missionary.

The Rev. Mr. Nordlund, who had been a missionary himself for forty years in China, said that he had not believed his daughter would be harmed, as it was contrary to Chinese custom to kill missionaries of his faith. Miss Nordlund, who is 34 years old, was educated in Chicago and at Wheaton college, and is serving her second term as a Chinese missionary.

COLLEGE FRATS STAGE RUSHING RACE BY PLANE

Denver, Colo., May 23.—[Special.]—Two fraternities at the University of Colorado—Phi Gamma Delta and Phi Kappa Psi—staged an airplane race today to obtain choice rush week dates with prospective members.

The race ended here, thirty-five miles from the university in Boulder, with the Phi Gams a shade to the good. They rode in the plane of Eddie Brooks, pilot for A. E. Humphries, millionaire oil man.

The Phi Kappa Psi group chartered a Curtiss-Wright plane and had Capt. Ralph Hall, member of the fraternity, for a pilot.

Several years ago university officials ruled that dates for rush week at the opening of school each September could not be made until May 23.

The Phi Gams planned a coup on seventeen other fraternities. Then the Phi Kappa Psi boys got wise, and they, too, chartered a plane.

A bit of strategy enabled the Phi Gams to come through winners. They had members waiting at City park in Denver and there dropped the cards to be distributed to the rushees. The Phi Kappa Psi plane had to continue with the cards to an airport several miles further on.

LEAGUE ADOPTS "HIDE GO SEEK" DISARM POLICY

Not Compelled to Bare Reserve Strength.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GENEVA, May 23.—The principle that the forthcoming world armaments strip poker session should hold itself within the limits of propriety and avoid anything like indecent exposure was affirmed at the closing seance of the league of nations council this morning when the British questionnaire was accepted without a dissenting vote.

In return for Germany's abstention from voting, the British foreign secretry, Arthur Henderson, laid down the principle that while the questionnaire, which is to be sent to the powers before the conference, should ask no embarrassing questions regarding trained reserves or war stocks in reserve, there is nothing to keep the disarmament conference from taking up these matters if it saw fit. A deadline for answering the questionnaires was set for Sept. 15.

Curtius Slaps France.

Although Dr. Julius Curtius, German foreign minister, did not vote against the proposal in return for Mr. Henderson's concession, he expressed himself strongly on the subject. He said:

"Every one will ask what are the motives leading a country willing to declare only a small part of its armaments which would be at its disposal at the beginning of a war, not mentioning stocks relating to heavy artillery and tanks."

This shaft was aimed at France, which has tremendous reserve stores of heavy artillery and tanks.

The Polish delegates got it in the neck this morning when the report whitewashing the atrocities against the German minority in Upper Silesia was refused and the Polish government was pilloried for trying to obstruct the investigation.

The fireworks started when Dr. Curtius, who had yielded the chair to Mr. Henderson for the debate, attacked the Poles for only circulating the report this morning and calling for its immediate acceptance before the council had proper time to consider it. He pointed out that the Poles had been asked last January to prepare a clear and detailed statement of measures taken to remedy conditions, while the document submitted contained only vague generalities.

Under the circumstances, Dr. Curtius asked the council to postpone action on the report until the fall session so as to enable the Berlin government to give it a thorough study and submit the conclusions of the Silesian minority leaders for the council's opinion.

Postponement Is Attacked.

F. Sokal, the Polish delegate, who replaced Foreign Minister August Zaleski when the latter developed tonsillitis, said he could not accept the postponement and declared that if the matter were allowed to drag on any longer the Polish government would refuse to accept any responsibility for any troubles that might occur in the district. Francois Poncet of France and Voyislav Marinkovitch of Jugo-Slavia supported his contention.

Dr. Curtius accused Warsaw of trying to conceal the fact that they had not fulfilled the order of the council to take action against the instigators of the riots.

Mr. Henderson then took the floor and attacked the Polish delegate.

"The Polish representative says that his government cannot take responsibility for what may happen if judgment is postponed," he said. "I would like to tell him that Poland cannot rid herself of the responsibility." He added that the Polish reply did not satisfy him and the case was ready to be lifted from the league's agenda.

'JAKE THE BARBER' IS QUESTIONED BY IMMIGRATION MEN

John (Jake the Barber) Factor, who is accused of swindling Englishmen out of $5,000,000, was questioned by immigration authorities under Director Shirley D. Smith yesterday. The immigration authorities, it was reported, believe that Factor is in this country illegally. After the conference Mr. Smith said he would have to investigate the former shampooer's statements before passing on their authenticity.

Factor says he was born in Hull, England, 39 years ago, and that he came to this country as a nonquota immigrant at the age of 11. He says he doesn't know whether he is a British subject, an American citizen or a man without a country. In recent years he has made frequent trips back and forth, and it is believed that he used a fraudulent passport.

If the British government is successful in its extradition case against Factor, which is to be resumed tomorrow before United States Commissioner Walker, deportation proceedings against him would be unnecessary, but the immigration authorities want to be prepared anyway. Factor is in custody of the federal marshal.

What this Country Needs is WISE BUYING

WHAT this country needs is more intelligent buying, says a Government official. How can you become an intelligent buyer? One way, he says, is by reading labels to make sure quality and weight are right. He would organize the housewives of every community into leagues of intelligent buyers, meeting regularly for exchange of buying information.

He imagines a meeting of such a club in which it is reported that store after store is asking a high price for various-sized packages of food, while one store is selling a larger package for less. Since it compares favorably with the more expensive food, the buyers' club decides to buy that brand and so teach other food dealers a lesson . . .

It is just such intelligent buying that has won for A & P so many millions of regular customers. To them, "A & P" has become a hall mark of reliability. They know that foods in A & P stores are as sound as to quality, quantity, and low prices as is humanly possible to long experience and great resources.

AUDIT PICTURES TRIBUNE CHARITY WORK FOR NEEDY

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

[illegible] in terms of dollars and [illegible] without regard for the number [illegible] and the hours of labor [illegible] the totals for the year ind[icate] a wide range of interest and [illegible]. Due to the venture in family [illegible] work undertaken by the paper [illegible] the unemployment situation [illegible] acute last fall, the high spot [illegible] the report is incorporated in the [illegible] as "Good Fellows, Jr." [illegible] most of that work was [illegible] during the first three months [illegible] 1931, a period not covered in the [illegible].

Care for 289 Families.

[illegible], although a total of 289 [families] were taken over from the [illegible] charitable agencies and [illegible] by THE TRIBUNE and its [illegible] during the worst of the de[pression], at a total cost of $113,558 up [to] May 1, only 191 families, and [illegible] in funds received and $10,633 [illegible] are designated in the report [illegible] the Good Fellows fund. [illegible] no mention is made in [the aud]itor's report of the emergency [illegible] done by the Sally Joy Brown [department] to ease the unemployment [situation] last fall and winter. On [illegible] 1930, a drive for jobs for the [jobless] was inaugurated by Miss [Brown] and continued to March 15, [1931]. During that time 7,364 jobs [were] obtained, of which 4,670 were [for] women and 2,471 for men, while [the remaining] 223 required the serv[ices] of couples.

Throughout each year the "Friend [in Need]" department, under the di[rection] of Sally Joy Brown, supplies [illegible] poor families with clothing, [bedding], stoves, and furniture for the [illegible]. Invalids have been provided [with] wheel chairs, crutches, radio sets, [phonographs], books, playing cards, [illegible]. Care and hospitaliza[tion] of needy expectant mothers were [provided], and homes found for elderly [men and] old women.

Charity Receipts in 1930.

[In] all, according to the auditor's re[port], $74,966 was obtained by this [newspaper] for philanthropic purposes [during] 1930, of which $15,000 was [given] from its own treasury to start [the Good] Fellow Jr. fund. The bal[ance] of $51,911 was donated by read[ers] for that particular fund.

The remaining receipts, totaling [illegible], were credited as follows: Camp [Algon]quin fund, $3,495; ice fund, [illegible] milk fund, $103; Camp Algon[quin] prize fund, $100; interest on Har[riet Sayers] trust fund, $47.50, on Ab[bie] Tyrell fund, $355, and bank inter[est] [illegible]; Mrs. Mary Markowski fund, [illegible] Sally Joy Brown unemployment [fund], $207. There also was a $2.50 [contri]bution for Good Fellow Sr., [illegible] activities are not represented in [illegible] but in actual gifts at Christmas [time].

[Balances] on hand on Jan. 1, 1930, [were] listed as follows: Camp Algon[quin] fund, $832; ice fund, $5,336; Good [Fel]low Sr. fund, $11,805; Mrs. Ottilie [Posak] fund, $6; Zero Weather fund, [$19]; Florida Relief fund, $153; Am[brose] family fund, $93, and the Harriet Sayers Trust fund, a $1,000 bond. Of the Good Fellow Sr. fund, swelled by a boxing show staged at the Coliseum, $10,000 was transferred to the Camp Algonquin account to help defray expenses there.

Interest amounting to $351 was divided between the Camp Algonquin and ice funds, according to directions of donors of endowments.

During 1930 contributions for the three families mentioned, Marskowski, Ambrose and Pozak, were turned over to the beneficiaries. Demands on the Sally Joy Brown fund reduced it to $74 on Jan. 1, 1931. It has been virtually exhausted since, as has the milk fund of $103.

Disbursements for Charities.

Disbursements during 1930 totaled $10,352 for Camp Algonquin, leaving a balance of $3,694; $3,000 for the ice fund, leaving $5,914, and $10,633 for the Good Fellow Jr. fund, leaving $56,278 on the first day of the new year. That figure was augmented by donations of $45,647 during the first four months of 1931, but because of added disbursements of $87,309 the fund shows a balance for May 1 of this year of only $14,616.

Where the $10,633 was expended between the time the first collections were made late in October and the last day of that year is detailed in a few of the major items taken from the records covering the expenditures. A survey revealed that by the latter part of December, 191 families were being supported and regular donations for their budgets were coming to THE TRIBUNE.

One item of rent alone for the period between October and January totals $3,653, while the period from the first of the new year to May 1 shows it multiplied many times. Gas and light bills paid previous to Jan. 1 amounted to $508, it was found. Of the families then on the books, six were those of war veterans, five being Americans and one Canadian.

18 Families "Come Back."

Perhaps the brightest part of the story the figures tell is the fact that by Jan. 1, 1931, a total of eighteen families had been reported as safely past their emergency period, and able to take up again the burden of their own livelihood. In one or two cases, veterans' compensation paid by the government eased the need of these families. But the majority were removed from the books, and others taken on in their places, due to the return to employment of the breadwinner.

The fund designated as "Goodfellow Sr." embraces the Christmas cheer activities traditional with THE TRIBUNE. Donations to this fund in past years were expended for toys and Christmas dinners. The $10,000 transferred from those receipts to the Camp Algonquin fund left a balance of $1,808 on Dec. 31, the families customarily cared for being provided with holiday dinners by those temporarily providing for them.

Care for 1,000 Families.

One thousand families were cared for through this newspaper at the holiday season, the Good Fellow bureau assigning them to various of its readers who requested names, and supplying the balance with well filled dinner baskets.

Not all of the story is told, however, in the foregoing items. For the proceeds of the Golden Gloves boxing tournaments held prior to 1931 have been distributed through several channels for philanthropy. Among the main beneficiaries of these funds were the former service men and their families, the funds administered through the veterans' relief department of the county bureau of public welfare.

Records reveal that prior to Jan. 1 last a total of 116 families of soldiers were being aided. The rent paid during three months to Jan. 1 for these families amounted to $3,295. Gas bills totaling $310 were paid for 69 families, and electric light for 60 others reached $309. This help has continued through the last four months.

From the Golden Gloves receipts of 1931 a check for $25,000 has already been advanced to the Boy Scouts, thus enabling many lads to attend the boys' camps.

VATICAN ENVOY READY TO QUIT SPAIN IN DISPUTE

Rupture of Diplomatic Relations Near.

MADRID, May 23.—(AP)—The Spanish religious situation became more unsettled tonight when it was reported in authoritative circles that Papal Nuncio Frederico Tedeshini might leave Madrid in a few days. During the past week Msgr. Tedeschini has been holding frequent secret conferences with President Alcala Zamora concerning Pope Pius' note of protest against recent anti riots and destruction of church property.

In the past such departures of papal nuncios have been regarded as a prologue to a rupture of diplomatic relations. It was said a secretary probably will be left in charge of the nunciatura here.

This latest development follows upon last night's cabinet decree guaranteeing equal freedom of worship for all creeds in Spain, generally regarded as the first step toward separating the state and church. Many Catholics consider this decree as a direct violation of the concordat signed with the Vatican in 1851.

It was said the government here did not intend to appoint a successor to Luis Zulueta, designated as ambassador to the Vatican city, but reported as persona non grata there, under the present circumstances. He probably will remain in Madrid with the title of ambassador to the Vatican.

It is recalled that in the past Spain has defied the authority of Rome. The last break between the Vatican and Spain was during the period of 1868-1870. This led to expulsion of Jesuits and establishment of the first republic in 1873. Two years later Alfonso XII. was restored to the throne. Close relations were reëstablished with the Vatican and these continued until recently after the new régime came into power.

In addition to the religious situation the government is faced with financial and political problems. The value of the peseta continued to sag on the exchange today. Border guards increased their efforts to prevent smuggling of currency out of Spain.

Catalonia Elections Today.

The province of Catalonia will hold elections for its own free state assembly tomorrow. The forty-six elected assemblymen will formulate a basis for future relationship between Spain and Catalonia. Monarchists, communists, and labor syndicalists have indicated they will abstain from voting. The Republicans want a federal state under the federal Spanish republic, while others have advocated complete autonomy.

Spanish Primate Reaches Rome.

ROME, May 23.—(AP)—Cardinal Pietro Segura, archbishop of Toledo, Spain, and the first Spanish bishop to come to Rome since the anti-religious riots in his country, arrived this afternoon. He was greeted by Msgr. Ottaviani of the office of the papal secretary of state and other clergymen, who inquired anxiously about the state of affairs of the church in Spain.

"Pray for Spain!" was his only comment. He will see Pope Pius tomorrow afternoon and give the pontiff a full report of the recent happenings in his country.

POPE DENOUNCES BUSINESS WORLD AS HARD, CRUEL

Modern System Corrupts Men, He Says.

of man's right to earn enough to keep his family happy.

Distribution of wealth, he said, must be such that "the common good of all, of which Pope Leo XIII. spoke, will be promoted. In other words, the good of whole communities must be safeguarded. By these principles of social justice, one class is forbidden to exclude another from a share in the profits.

"This sacred law is violated by the irresponsible wealthy class, which, in the excess of its good fortune, deems it a just state of things that it should receive everything and the laborer nothing. It is violated also by the unpropertied wage earning class, which demands for itself all the fruits of production as being the work of its hands."

Riches Must Be Divided.

"Each class, then, must receive its due share, and the distribution of created goods must be brought into conformity with the demands of the common good and social justice.

"For every sincere observer is conscious that there are vast differences between the few who hold excessive wealth, and the many who live in destitution. These constitute a grave evil in modern society."

The condition of the working man has been improved in many respects, he said, but there is an immense army of rural laborers whose condition is depressed in the extreme and who have no hope of ever obtaining a share in the land.

"Man Is Born to Labor."

"These, unless efficacious remedies are applied, will remain perpetually sunk in their proletarian condition," he said. "It is true that there are formal differences betwene pauperism and proletarianism, but nevertheless the immense number of unpropertied wage earners on the one hand and the superaboundant riches of the fortunate few on the other is an unanswerable argument that the earthly goods so abundantly produced in this age of industrialism are far from rightly distributed and equitably shared among the various classes of men.

"The purpose is not that the working men become slack at their work, for man is born to labor as the bird to fly, but that by thrift they may increase their possessions and by prudent management may be enabled to bear the family burden with greater ease and security, being freed from that hand-to-mouth uncertainty which is the lot of the proletarian.

Woman's Place Is in Home.

"The working man must have sufficient wages to support himself and his family. It is right, indeed, that the rest of the family contribute according to their power toward the common maintenance, as in rural homes or in the families of many artisans and small shopkeepers.

"But it is wrong to abuse the tender years of children or the weakness of woman. Mothers will, above all, devote their work to their homes and the things connected with them.

"Intolerable and to be opposed with all our strength is the abuse whereby mothers of families, because of the insufficiency of the father's salary, are forced to engage in gainful occupations outside the domestic walls to the neglect of their own proper cares and duties, particularly the education of their children.

"Every effort must be made, therefore, that the fathers of families receive a wage sufficient to meet adequately the ordinary domestic needs.

Reform May Be Necessary.

"If, in the present state of society, this is not always feasible, social justice demands that reforms be introduced without delay which will guarantee every adult working man just such a wage.

"In this connection we might utter a word of praise for the various systems devised and attempted in practice by which an increased wage is paid in view of increased family burdens, and special provision is made for special needs.

"However, it would be unjust to demand wages so high that the employer cannot pay them without ruin and consequent distress among the working people themselves.

"If a business makes smaller profits on account of bad management, want of enterprise, or out of date methods, this is not a just reason for reducing wages. If, however, a business does not make enough money to pay a just wage either because it is overwhelmed with unjust burdens or because it is compelled to sell its products at unjustly low prices, those who injure it are guilty of a grievous wrong, for it is they who deprive the working man of his just wage and force him to accept lower terms.

"The condition of the economic world today lays more snares than ever before for human frailty, because the uncertainty of economic conditions and of the whole economic régime demand the keenest straining of every energy on the part of those engaged therein.

"As a result, some have become so hardened against conscience as to hold all means good which enable them to increase their profits and to safeguard against sudden changes of fortune the wealth amassed by unremitting toil."

The pope inveighed against speculation which raises and lowers prices out of mere greed for gain.

"The worst injustices and frauds take place beneath the obscurity of the common name of the corporate firm," he said.

"With the leaders of business abandoning the true path, it is not surprising that in every country multitudes of working men also sank in the same morass, all the more so because very many employers treated their workmen as mere tools without any concern for the welfare of their souls, indeed without the slightest thought of higher interests."

The mind shudders, he said, considering the frightful perils to which the morals of boys and young men and the virtue of girls and women are exposed in modern factories.

"And so bodily labor which was decreed by providence for the good of man's body and soul, even after the original sin, has everywhere been changed into an instrument of strange perversion, for dead matter leaves the factory enlivened and transformed, where men are corrupted and degraded."

Communism Is Condemned.

Nevertheless, he said, "those engaged in production are not forbidden to increase their fortunes in lawful and just manner. Indeed, it is just that he who renders service to society and develops its wealth should himself have his proportionate share of the increased public riches, provided always that he respects the laws of God and the rights of his neighbor and uses his property in accord with faith and right reason."

The pope condemned socialism and communism. The Communists, he said, "shrink from nothing and fear nothing; and when they have attained to power it is unbelievable, indeed, it seems portentous, how cruel and inhuman they show themselves to be."

Cardinal Mundelein Home After Trip to Rome

CARDINAL HOME AFTER HIS FIVE WEEKS IN ROME

Invigorated by his five weeks in Rome, during which he dedicated the new college for the propagation of the faith, Cardinal Mundelein returned home to Chicago yesterday, arriving at 3:05 p. m. on the Manhattan limited of the Pennsylvania railroad.

Nearly forty Catholic priests, laymen, and students from the seminary at Mundelein greeted the cardinal as he alighted with his party in the Union station, kneeling in turn to kiss his episcopal ring.

He had been met in New York by the Rt. Rev. Bernard J. Sheil, auxiliary bishop of Chicago; Joseph McCarthy, Chicago architect and knight commander of the papal order of St. Gregory, and Anthony Czarnecki, collector of the port at Chicago.

In token of gratitude for the assistance given by the Chicago archdiocese in erecting the new building for the college of the faith, the pope had presented the cardinal with a 15th century jeweled monstrance for use in services at Holy Name cathedral, the cardinal said.

As a further mark of favor, the cardinal said, Pope Pius had conferred knighthood upon a number of Catholic laymen here and elevated several of the clergy to the rank of monsignori. The recipients of these honors will be made known early in the week, according to the cardinal.

"His holiness, the pope, displayed the keenest interest in Chicago's problems during my visit with him," said Cardinal Mundelein. "He was gratified to learn that, despite the hardships last year, Chicago Catholics had contributed a greater sum to charity than in any preceding year."

CANCEL 69 CIVIL SERVICE EXAMS OF OLD REGIME

Thousands of Jobseekers Affected.

After a meeting of the civil service commission yesterday Richard J. Collins, president, announced that sixty-nine original and promotional examinations which were held under the previous administration have been cancelled. The examinations were only partly completed, the lists of eligible candidates not having been posted.

"There has been so much criticism of the conditions under which some of these examinations were given that the commission decided to cancel the whole list," said Mr. Collins. "In many cases the examinations seem to have been carefully prepared, but the commission was unable to ascertain definitely which examinations could be approved and which it could not approve."

Affects Thousands of Persons.

The action of the commission affects many thousands of persons who have taken the examination. Forty thousand persons have either taken the examinations or filed their applications. Among these are 17,000 applicants for membership on the police force, some of whom already have taken their physical examinations. These men, however, will not be required to file again for the new examination, which will be held soon.

Another large group affected was the 1,000 men and women who had taken the examination for the position of truant officers. This examination had been held, but the eligible list was never posted by the old commission, which gave rise to many complaints from those who had taken it.

Lists May Be Cancelled.

Eligible lists that have been posted less than two years are subject to cancellation by the commission. Mr. Collins said that the commission will not cancel any lists until new ones are prepared.

No statement was made by the commission as to its attitude toward the police sergeants' list, the posting of which aroused many protests during the last days of the old commission. This and other lists less than two years old can be cancelled, according to attorneys, only after a showing of fraud or error in the examinations.

Opens Vice President's Letter to Norris; Fined

Lincoln, Neb., May 23.—(AP)—Stanley Swanson, 23, former postal clerk, today pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with opening a letter from Vice President Curtis to Senator George W. Norris. After a stern admonition to Swanson on his future conduct, Federal Judge T. C. Munger fined him $150. The young man said curiosity prompted him to open the letter.

DEMOCRATS SEE PERIL IN CHANGE IN TAXING BODIES

Give Views on Bill to Kill Elective Boards.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

While the Democratic county central committee will meet tomorrow morning to urge upon the Chicago legislators the passage of house bill No. 28, several of the party leaders doubt the political prudence of that action alone. Conversations with several leaders yesterday brought forth the following comment:

"House bill No. 28 abolishes the elective boards of assessors and review and substitutes an appointive board of assessment and revision. In the first place that will abolish four offices and make the Democrats responsible for taxes, because that party controls the county commissioners, who will appoint the new assessing board. Local taxes will probably be troublesome for several years and the Democrats will be held responsible, whether justly or not.

See Help to Warrant Buyers.

"House bill No. 28 will help the bankers and other buyers of tax anticipation warrants. It will probably promote more fair assessments, but the public will probably not appreciate fair taxes when they remain so high they cannot pay them. This bill will aid the pay roll brigade because it will help the sale of tax warrants to get money with which to pay. Those are the benefits of the bill as certain Democrats see them.

"The bill will not cut expenses, nor reduce taxes. It does not do anything to relieve the business depression. It removes the assessor one step farther from the people. It does not make taxes easier or more convenient to pay. The bill does nothing which will enhance the popularity of the party in control of the tax machinery."

A Democrat's Opinion.

"In a nutshell, this is my view," said one prominent Democrat. "I believe that Chicago will not regain its prosperity until real estate comes back and there is a large amount of building. In that direction this bill does not help. What we are trying to do is to collect the two largest tax bills in the city's history in the year of extreme depression when the people haven't the money to pay one tax bill. The Democrats are foolishly jumping in to help the bankers out and not doing anything worth while for the people."

It is now known that some of these views were expressed on Friday at the conference in the mayor's office when the revenue situation was discussed. Accordingly a conference was held yesterday morning in Corporation Counsel Busch's office, which was attended by First Assistant Leon Hornstein, Sewell L. Avery, head of the mayor's advisory commission; Montgomery S. Winning, assistant attorney general; Max Murdock of the Association of Commerce; Hayden Bell, county tax attorney; William Wilharts, attorney for the Chicago Real Estate board; J. Louis Jacobs, efficiency expert for the mayor, and Attorney Henry Cutler, a specialist on municipal securities.

Discuss Taxation Bills.

The purpose of this meeting was to discuss all tax and revenue measures before the legislature with the ultimate object of getting united support for one program. There was considerable talk about cutting expenses, but no concrete proposals were made.

It was suggested that all could support tax payments in two annual installments. No one dissented from that view.

It was also the unanimous view that Cook county should have one unified tax assessment machine, with only one office staff. Several said that this plan held out the only hope of immediate relief to the local government spenders. This discussion related to house bill No. 28, or a substitute for it.

Busch Plan Is Favored.

A more stringent personal property tax law was discussed. The conferees appeared to favor such a plan as was presented by Corporation Counsel Busch, but they did not seem to be enthusiastic over the prospect of getting an effective law.

The plan of Attorney General Carlstrom and the Chicago Real Estate board to have a bond issue to take the place of the 1930 taxes received some attention, but it was decided to let this matter wait until the bills are prepared and presented to the legislature next Tuesday.

The plan to increase the city's power to license business was not discussed.

Gottlieb Home to Face Charges

Refuses to Talk

Attorney Louis I. Gottlieb, who has been a fugitive since 1929, when he was indicted on charges of conspiracy, larceny, and confidence game in connection with an alleged $500,000 real estate mortgage fraud, was returned to Chicago from Indianapolis yesterday by Detectives Louis Capparelli and Michael Casey of the state's attorney's office. He was arrested several days ago in Indianapolis, where he was practicing law under an assumed name.

For many years Gottlieb was a respected real estate broker with offices at 1572 North Halsted street. He lived at 5520 Sheridan road. After he fled the state's attorney's office discovered that stock market operations had made him virtually penniless.

"I'm a lawyer, you know, and I realize that this is not the time to make any statements," said Gottlieb when he was questioned. "If I have any talking to do it will be when I get into court."

Cargo of "Hops" Nears U. S.; They're Live Toads

VANCOUVER, B. C., May 23.—(AP)—A cargo of "hops" will arrive here Monday en route to the United States, but it's nothing for the prohibition department to worry about. The Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Russia is bringing several thousand live toads from China and Japan to be distributed from Indianapolis to medical schools and laboratories through the continent for biological purposes.

SOLDIER GRAVES TO BE DECORATED AT RITES TODAY

Veterans to Pay Tribute to Hero Dead.

So far as they are known and marked the graves of soldier dead in all wars will be decorated with flowers and flags today in cemeteries in and around Chicago. This ritual is held annually on the Sunday preceding Memorial day. All veteran organizations will participate, each group assuming the responsibility for the graves of those service men in whom they are especially interested.

Drum corps, firing squads, and buglers will accompany the groups of volunteers delegated to several of the cemeteries. Following the placing of small American flags in the bronze markers and the arrangement of floral wreaths and other tributes, prayers will be said, a salute fired, and "Taps" sounded.

Special Rites at Stuart Grave.

Special services have been arranged by the Chicago camp of the United Spanish American war veterans, to be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the grave of Gen. James E. Stuart in Forest Home cemetery. An invitation is extended to the public to be present.

Gen. Stuart, who died last March, was a veteran of three wars, having served in the civil, Spanish American, and world wars. For more than twenty years he had led each annual Memorial day parade down Michigan boulevard as grand marshal. For many years before his retirement in 1920 he served as chief postal inspector of Chicago. In 1898 he went out to the Philippines as a major in the Second Illinois infantry, and while in service organized the postal system of Porto Rico.

Ask Autos for Disabled Vets.

Harold H. Higgie, Legion transportation chairman, yesterday issued a call for volunteer motorists to aid in transporting the disabled war veterans from the Chicago area bureau hospitals for the Memorial day parade next Saturday.

Those who can and will provide cars for the purpose are asked to communicate with the Veterans' Volunteer Aid, 408 Burnham building, in the American Legion office, or to call Central 2611 and report the capacity of the car, and their name, address, and telephone number.

SLOT MACHINE GYPS JOE GREIN OUT OF 2 CENTS

City Sealer Grein yesterday wrote a letter to the Universal Vending company informing its officials that he had dropped two pennies in a vending machine but did not receive any gum. He requested the company to put stickers on the machines stating that a person losing his pennies could go to the cashier and obtain his money's worth. Grein reminded the officials that when he was city sealer 25 years ago he had to chop down some of the machines before the vending companies acquiesced in a similar request. "If you will agree to immediately correct this evil," he wrote, "I shall have patience for a few days."

NASH

Aviation demands Twin-Ignition

Nash Owners call it indispensable!

Air Commerce Regulations, issued by the United States Department of Commerce, absolutely require two spark plugs per cylinder on all commercial aircraft motors of over 40 horsepower.

Aviation demands perfection in power. And so two spark plugs, twin sparks, are employed in aircraft motors—to burn the gasoline more completely and efficiently—to provide power, speed, safety and economy beyond the reach of motors with single ignition.

For the same reasons, Nash engineers, in Nash Eight-90 and Eight-80 motors, also provide Twin Ignition (16 spark plugs, 16 firing points, instead of 8).

Of course, you can get along without Twin Ignition in your car. But here, in cold, hard engineering figures, is what you are missing:

In engineering test, the same motor with Twin Ignition, instead of single ignition, produces 22% more power, 5 miles an hour more top speed, and 2 extra miles of travel from every gallon of gasoline.

And, the prices of these Twin-Ignition-motored Nash Straight Eights are no higher than the prices of other cars without this important improvement!

Come in and have a demonstration of Twin Ignition before you seriously think of buying your new car.

COUNTY HOSPITAL STAFF PROTESTS SHIFT IN CONTROL

Plan of Medical Society Arouses Opposition.

[illegible] criticizing the plan [illegible] by the Chicago Medical society for reorganization of the county hospital, members of the hospital staff yesterday announced a reorganization plan of their own. The rival plan will be submitted to the county board at its meeting on Tuesday.

DR. KARL MEYER.

The medical society's plan, as announced six weeks ago by Dr. John H. Harger, president elect of the society, embodied fourteen points, the most important of which provided for the transfer of the hospital management from the sole jurisdiction of the county board to an executive committee representing not only the county board but also the medical society, the hospital staff, and the four medical schools of Northwestern and Loyola universities, the Universitiy of Chicago and the University of Illinois.

Dr. Meyer Assails Plan.

This provision was attacked by Dr. Karl Meyer, medical superintendent of the county hospital. As spokesman for the hospital staff, he declared the best interests of the institution require the retention of the present system of management.

"The hospital is now conducting under direction of the county commissioners who, in turn, are directly responsible to the electorate of Cook county for its proper economic, scientific, and political management," Dr. Meyer pointed out.

"It becomes necessary, therefore, to recognize at once that whatever plan is contemplated, it must in no way assume that the responsibility for proper conduct of the institution can be delegated to any other body than the county board."

Denies Board Indorsement.

In announcing the medical society's reorganization plan, Dr. Harger had asserted it bore not only the indorsement of the medical schools but had the indicated acceptance of the county board. This was denied by Dr. Meyer.

"No plan has as yet been presented to the county board," Dr. Meyer declared. "There has been no discussion of reorganization plans by the board. When any plan or plans are discussed or accepted, we hope the county board will act, knowing there is the responsibility to see that that plan serves the purpose for which the hospital was founded and is being maintained by the taxpayers."

The medical society's plan also calls for establishment of separate clinical [illegible] for each medical school represented, with the county board guaranteeing a minimum of 250 beds for the use of each school for a minimum of [illegible] years. This provision, Dr. Meyer maintains, is unnecessary.

[illegible] Flaws in Program.

"There is no objection to the universities providing themselves with [illegible] teaching units made up of the staff of the hospital," Dr. Meyer said. "The staff has always had access to every bed in the hospital for teaching purposes."

It is neither consistent nor feasible, however, he declared, to divide the patients into closed groups, limiting each group to the ministrations of a single unit of physicians.

"Such a division," he asserted, "would seriously embarrass the efficient care of the patients. It might well happen that under this system a patient might be denied the treatment of an outstanding specialist, simply because the patient was in a division to which the specialist was [illegible]."

Cermak Invites People of France to World's Fair

PARIS, May 23.—(AP)—The Parisian press today published messages from Judge Frank M. Padden, spokesman for Mayor Cermak of Chicago, inviting the people of France to visit the World's Fair in 1933. Mayor Cermak is determined to clean up Chicago [illegible] and beautify the city physically, Judge Padden said.

MINISTER WARNS AGAINST CUTS IN DEFENSE FORCES

Speaking before 300 members of the Daughters of the British Empire in the Stevens hotel yesterday the Rev. Charles E. McAllister, rector of St. Luke's Episcopal church in Evanston, voiced a warning against disarmament or further reduction of naval and land forces.

"Wholesale disarmament by so-called pacifists," the minister said, "is a remnant of the hypocrisy of the Victorian era. So is prohibition."

He suggested that preparedness, provided it falls short of militarism, is a surer way to prevent wars. He also urged that closer attention be paid to facts in considering the social and economic problems of the present day.

RIDGWAY DROPPED AS ADVISER TO SUBWAY BOARD

Robert Ridgway, chief engineer of the New York transit commission and an authority on subway construction, was notified yesterday by Benjamin F. Lindheimer, president of the board of local improvements, that his services as consulting engineer on Chicago's State street subway are no longer needed.

At the same time the three members of the advisory subway engineering commission were notified that their employment by the City has been terminated. These men are George M. Wisner, who was chairman of the commission; David A. Wallace, and George C. D. Lenth.

Appointed Last July.

The four engineers were appointed by resolution of the city council last July. Ridgway, who is considered one of the most experienced men on subway construction in the United States, was paid at the rate of $2,500 a month while he was working on the Chicago project, and the others were paid $1,500 a month each.

In a letter to the engineers Mr. Lindheimer wrote:

"I find that very little additional work is required to complete the [subway] plan. Under such conditions I can no longer avail myself of the services of the advisory subway engineering commission, of which you are a member."

Before taking this action Mr. Lindheimer caused a survey of the subway bureau to be made by Ernst Lieberman, an engineer. He said that there remains in the bureau a staff sufficient to complete the contract drawings and around which another staff can be built when work is started on plans for the west side subway.

May Be Employed Later.

Mr. Ridgway and the members of the advisory commission, Mr. Lindheimer said, may be employed again on the State street project as occasions arise. If so they will be paid, he said, on a daily basis.

Besides the four engineers, Mr. Lindheimer eliminated 39 minor employés from the subway bureau, making a saving in salaries of $15,675 a month. In addition to this he said there has been a saving of $12,600 a month due to earlier discharges.

Thieves Steal Poisoned Potatoes from a Truck

Duluth, Minn., May 24.—(AP)—Thieves who stole three bushels of potatoes from the parked truck of Claude Lathrop, farmer, today were warned not to eat them—they are poisoned. Lathrop had treated the potatoes with chemicals, as they were to be used for seeding.

LOOP MERCHANT FIGHTS GUNMEN; FOILS ROBBERY

The courage of John F. Denvir, owner of a clothing store bearing his name at 67 West Jackson boulevard, yesterday frustrated the attempt of five gunmen to rob his store.

The proprietor, a Negro porter, and a clerk, Lyle Lawrence, 5461 Everett avenue, were in the store. Three men entered the store, leaving two companions outside as lookouts.

Drawing a gun, one of the men started for the rear of the store. When Denvir refused to move, the bandit threatened to kill him. The gunman and the proprietor grappled. At this point a bellboy from the Union League club passed in front of the store, and seeing that a holdup was in progress, called the central police. Warned by the lookout men, the bandits fled, with Denvir in pursuit. The bandits escaped.

SISTER SHIP OF DO-X TAKES AIR IN TEST FLIGHT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, May 23.—"The biggest heavier than air craft in the world" is now twins. From the wharf of the Dornier company in Altenrhein, Switzerland, DO-X2, with its twelve 3,600 horsepower motors, went through its first tests today over the waters of Bodensee.

The DO-X's sister ship was built for an Italian air travel concern. Excepting for the motors, it is identical with its predecessor.

The DO-X2 was piloted in its tests today by Herr Wagner. A group of Italians, headed by Commandant Agnesi, participated in the test flight. The Italians have ordered still another DO-X.

DEBATE ON BILL TO END RETAILING BY THE UTILITIES

Legislators Hear Foes of Proposal.

Strong opposition to the Barnes bill, which would force public utilities to abandon the selling of electrical appliances on the retail market, was voiced yesterday before a house subcommittee meeting at the Sherman hotel. Representative Roy Barnes [Rep., Bushnell] is sponsor of the bill.

At previous hearings in Springfield, some of the proponents of the measure have been heard, and yesterday the manufacturers and advocates of the utilities' cause had their say.

Questioned by Legislator.

One incident in the hearing which interested the subcommittee but which was left more or less unexplained came in the questioning of William McGuiness, president of the Electrical Contractors' association, by Representative R. V. Libonati [Rep., Chicago]. Mr. McGuiness was speaking against the bill when Libonati interrupted with this question:

"Do you know what coal companies supply the Insull companies with their fuel?"

"No, sir, I do not," McGuiness replied.

"Well, do you know, Mr. McGuiness, if the prices paid by the Insull companies are in conformity with those set by the Illinois commerce commission as to minimum and maximum prices."

Mr. McGuiness said he did not know.

"If we can get at the basic price paid for coal by the utilities," Libonati continued, "we wil learn how they can compete with private dealers on these commodities."

At this point the chairman, Carl J. Jobst [Rep., Peoria], stopped the line of questioning by saying that the subcommittee "is not making an investigation of utilities." After the meeting Libonati refused to explain what lay behind the inquiries.

Foes of Measure Heard.

Reasons why the manufacturers of electrical appliances are against the Barnes bill were presented by George A. Hughes of the Hughes Hotpoint Electric company, makers of electric irons, and by Herbert E. Fleming, vice president of the Conover company, manufacturers of electric dishwashers.

"There are many ways to eliminate competition," Mr. Hughes said. "One way is that practiced by Capone; another, and the next best, is to have a law passed by the legislature."

Dr. Fleming said that to force the utilities out of retail selling would be harmuful to business, because it would remove the vast promotional system which has pushed the sale of electrical goods.

It was agreed that the subcommittee would hold another hearing at Springfield on Wednesday night to hear the Springfield commissioner of electricity, Willis J. Spaulding, an advocate of municipal ownership.

Poisoning Suspect

Mrs. Margaret Summers, 45 years old, 632 West North avenue, who was arrested Friday in connection with the death of her 17 year old nephew, Thomas Meyers, who may have been poisoned, will be held in the Racine avenue police station until tomorrow. Coroner's Chemist Clarence H. Muehlberger expects to have an analysis of the youth's vital organs completed by that time.

Mrs. Summers readily admitted being the beneficiary of insurance policies on the lives of young Meyers; her husband, Thomas Summers, and three other residents of her home who died within the last three years. She has maintained, however, that all the deaths were natural and that she had a deep affection for her husband and for the nephew, whom she reared from the age of six weeks.

The body of Summers was exhumed and is also being examined for poison. Assistant State's Attorney E. A. Ferrari and Capt. Thomas Condon of the Hudson avenue police said that no charge would be placed against the woman unless the chemist's report warrants, and that she would be released if the tests were negative. Relatives of Thomas Summers and young Meyers have insisted on the investigation being carried out.

SUNDAY TOURISTS CROWD CITY HALL TO GET AUTO TAGS

With the city license drive threatening to break into the pleasure of Sunday jaunts, hundreds of automobile owners jammed the city hall yesterday to buy 1931 vehicle tags. Officials estimated that in four hours the collections would equal those of all day Friday.

The collections on Friday, which was was the day following the first activity of the police against delinquent motorists, totaled $25,553 for vehicle tags. Before the drive started these daily collections were in the neighborhood of $20,000.

Since every form of city license is involved in the drive, the collections for general licenses rose on Friday to $31,588, as business owners and merchants who had failed to license themselves or their businesses paid their fees. Slighting no one, the police and license investigators even included dog licenses in the drive.

In the traffic and other branches of the municipal court, which were thronged again with those whom the police had arrested, the judges followed their rulings of the previous day and discharged those who could show a tag or a receipt for one. Those who had no tags had their cases continued to various dates to give them an opportunity to get their licenses.

Judge Samuel H. Trude declared, however, in the Wabash avenue court, that his lenient attitude would change unless those who were granted continuances could produce a tag on their next appearance in court. He said he would assess fines on all who could not show license fee receipts.

The largest crowd of the day filled the Shakespeare avenue court to overflowing. Many had to stand on the stairway leading from the street to the second floor court room.

ALL LOOP TRAFFIC WILL BE COUNTED ON NEXT TUESDAY

Leslie J. Sorenson, city traffic engineer, announced yesterday that a count will be made next Tuesday of all vehicles and pedestrians who enter the central business district. If the day is rainy, the count will be made on the following day.

About 565 persons, including 90 policemen, will make the tally. They will hand every motorist entering the business section a card on which will be marked the minute of arrival and the number of persons in the car. The tickets will be taken up as the driver leaves the district and will show the time of departure.

All transportation agencies have agreed to cöoperate, he said, by making a count of those carried by them into the district. The results when tabulated will be compared with the 1929 count and will be used in rerouting street car and bus lines and making other traffic changes to fit loop conditions.

WHAT AMERICAN BUSINESS NEEDS TODAY IS FAITH IN ITSELF.

Yes, there are six million Americans without work. Yes, commodity prices are down and many business enterprises are having a hard time to make both ends meet. The banks are holding securities that look like a man after 31 days of typhoid fever. The farmers are hard up and think they are worse off than they are. The railroads are close hauled in a head gale and calling for help. Real estate is in the doldrums and building is paralyzed. Our great industrial plant is half idle. Our export trade has taken a nose dive. China, the world's greatest potential market, is in something like chaos. Hindu patriots say there are forty million unemployed in India. The bottom has dropped out of silver. Russia is withdrawn from the civilized world and doing what it can to demoralize it. Great Britain is staggering under a mountainous public debt and losing trade. Germany is struggling with reparations and political disturbance. South America is in political ferment. Pollyanna is in tears and Pollyanna should be spanked.

We are not going to remind you that we have been worse off in past times, though that is true. We are not going to say our troubles are unreal, for that is not true. But there is one thing that ought to be said and said again: that looking all our troubles in the face and not shirking one of them, the chief thing that is the matter with us, and the first thing that stands in the way of the march back to prosperity, is just plain funk. The means of our recovery are in our hands. The accumulated wealth of the country has not been destroyed. False values and false expectations have been. But the United States is at this moment the richest country in the world, rich in capital and natural resources, rich in productive equipment, in organization and practical efficiency, rich in the character of its people. The wheel of material progress and prosperity is on a dead center, but the wheel is there and the power to send it whirling again.

Are these just glittering generalities of no practical use at this time? We don't think so. They are the facts that are going to control and they can be set to working again. The chief difference between 1929 and 1931 is the difference of our morale and the difference in our faith in the material wealth and power of this country. Two years ago manufacturers and merchants were confident they could dispose of their products in ever increasing quantities. The horizon was no limit. The possibilities of our own vast home market and the world markets were illimitable to American invention and exploitation. No question that our confidence became overconfidence, but now the pendulum has swung to the other extreme. Too many manufacturers and too many merchants have lost faith in themselves and their commodities. Too many of us have lost faith in our ability to make the American people and the world want American products.

This is defeatism. It is not justified by the realities. The American market is here. The American people are here. They are not broke; they are the same people they were in 1929. Millions are out of work and unable to obtain what they need and want, but many more millions have the means to buy and may be brought to buy by the same effective salesmanship that was the pride of American business yesterday.

We are not ignoring the difficulties, the frozen credits, the reduced incomes, the fears and discouragements that paralyze demand. We are not ignoring the difficulties. But when was the path of the makers of America free from difficulties? American prosperity was built on difficulties. American progress and prosperity were made by conquering difficulties. Take the career of any of the great builders of America and take the lives of the marching army of the American people, the frontiersman and the farmer, the mechanic and the merchant, they are an epic of faith and courage, of dangers defied and difficulties conquered. When James J. Hill laid his railroad into the vast spaces of the northwest, success was not waiting on the threshold with a kiss of welcome and a bouquet of roses. There was little but frowning wilderness before him. But that never stayed him. He had faith in his idea and in his will to conquer. He had vision and it was founded on reality. He built his road on faith, a carrier without traffic, and he created the traffic. He did not wait for the people he was to serve. He brought them to his service. And Hill was not a freak of human nature. He was only one of the builders of our country and as he built our people built in the same faith, in the same fighting and conquering spirit. They overcame far greater difficulties than American business has to meet today, with far less means than it possesses.

How is it we are pulling long faces and shying at every shadow? What has become of the American fighting man? Have we got so shamefully soft in a generation of prosperity? Have we developed the yellow streak?

America is the giant of the world. It is not bankrupt unless it is bankrupt of courage and common sense. The way is wide open to economic recovery in this country. Faith in ourselves, faith that gives courage and moves mountains, is the sole key to our problem. Once this nation, small and weak among the great powers of the old world, met the threat of war with the song,

> We don't want to fight, but by jingo if we do,
> We've got the men, we've got the ships,
> We've got the money, too.

Well we've got all that today and infinitely more, except the fighting will. Have we lost that? The defeat of depression is in our own power, not merely with the great captains of industry and finance, but with us of the rank and file, with every director of industry or commerce or transportation, with every worker still at work. The reconquest of prosperity in this country is a question of guts and brains the fighting will, initiative, enterprise, hard work.

We don't believe the qualities which have accomplished the miracle of America have now miraculously evaporated. But they are in abeyance. The time has come to wake them up. They are the realities of American strength. They are the dictators of American destiny. They are our heritage and the assurance of our restored progress.

Faith in ourselves, courage, enterprise are all that are needed to put the vast powers of the American people in operation again, not in the future but now in this present moment. To doubt them, to hesitate and wait is treason to ourselves, is folly without any adequate excuse.

THE ORDEAL OF LIBERTY.

The first grave crisis in the life of the new Spanish republic seems at this writing to have been weathered. Sporadic violence remains, but order has been restored in the capital and other important centers. In this first trial decisive events have been controlled by the republican government and neither the bolshevik organization nor the monarchists have been able to put themselves at the head of the mob, in the bolshevik terminology, the masses, to wipe out as in Russia the republican leadership.

No doubt the situation remains very grave. The course of most revolutions runs from moderation to excess. In the first phase the men who have been working for a rational evolution from the old order to a responsible new order, a process called constitutional reform, take over authority. But revolutionary emotion once freed from the harsh restraints of the past tends to feed upon itself, to sweep onward over any obstruction to vent its hatred and indulge its full sense of power in triumph over oppression. This is the opportunity of the fanatic extremists, and under their incitement revolution enters the stage of destroying violence, of mass execution and mob despotism. After that comes a period of reaction from all liberal ideas and principles, the appearance of a force which can command order and obedience, whether a Napoleon or a Lenin, a restoration of the old tyranny or of a new.

It is to be devoutly hoped that the Spanish revolution will not follow this cycle. It is not necessary that it should. The American revolution did not. The English revolution, while it had its extreme phase, kept pretty well within the lines of evolutionary change. England emerged from its revolutionary experiments to resume a constitutional evolution implicit in the historic character of the English people. It did not pass from revolutionary extremes to despotic reaction. The restoration in the end proved to be a restoration not of Stuart autocracy but of constitutional progress.

In Spain evolution has no such strong and ancient tendencies to support it, and the forces of reaction and of revolutionary transformation hang like a storm cloud over the republic. But they may offset each other and give republicanism a chance of entrenching itself. The possibilities of a bolshevik control may be sufficiently realized by the conservatives to bring them to the loyal support of the evolutionary régime. This will be the hope of friends of freedom everywhere, but it is far from certain. Reaction is as blind as destructive radicalism.

Meanwhile the Spanish people in their new liberty are face to face with the age-old problem described by the American political philosopher, Burgess, when he wrote: "It is the search of the ages to find a political system, the travail of the ages to construct one, in which government and liberty shall be reconciled, in which each of these all-comprehending means of civilization shall strengthen the other and in which finally each shall be the fulfillment of the other. Down to the present moment this millennial equilibrium has not been fully attained and mankind always has been and still is in danger of diverting from the true path which leads to it—towards despotism on one side or anarchy on the other."

THE LAST OF THE KNIGHTS.

A cavalry officer recently wrote to THE TRIBUNE quoting a number of the leaders of the principal armies in the world war in praise of cavalry. If we are to believe the German generals, the only reason they did not win the war was the lack of horsemen; and if we are to believe the allied generals, the reason they did not win the war sooner was a corresponding lack.

This must be very nearly the only matter on which the generals stand together. And the reason is not hard to find. Many of them, including Pershing, were cavalrymen. The rest no doubt wished they had been, for the cavalry has been the fashionable arm since the days of knighthood. More than that, the back of a horse today, as always, is among the pleasanter places from which to survey the world. Riding is to most men familiar with it a sport which has no equal. It is a particularly welcome interlude in the routine of army life in peace time. Naturally, then, the soldier rebels at the thought of the cavalry becoming obsolete.

However, the facts are inexorable. Military critics say that the rôle of the cavalry even as long ago as our civil war was not nearly as important as the cavalrymen thought it was. They rode and fought gallantly, but when the final reckoning is made it is doubtful if all the effort and expense yielded a fair return in results achieved. A disproportionate share of the man power and material resources of both contestants went into the cavalry and there was dissipated in spectacular but for the most part indecisive conflicts.

Cavalry may still have its uses in guerrilla fighting and on the frontiers of civilization, but otherwise it must be regarded as an interesting survival of medieval warfare. The cavalry horse can cover fifty or sixty miles a day for a day or two at most, and then he must take time out to recuperate. The modern transport vehicle can go wherever the horse can go, can get there in far less time, consume less weight of fuel per man carried, and continue on the move for days on end. More than that, for every American youth who is accustomed to the saddle and knows anything about the care of a horse there are a hundred who are familiar with motor vehicles.

It would take several years to train an effective cavalry force in the United States today. And when it was trained it is doubtful if enough suitable mounts could be found to keep it fit for action for more than a few months. We could far more quickly improvise a mobile motor force and we would have much less difficulty equipping it for service.

The generals may think the cavalry is indispensable; but any one who has seen cavalry officers ride to the drill field in their automobiles will be disposed to wonder how they get that way.

GOOD TIME CHARLIE.

Good Time Charlie Dawson, who created an interest in his identity by sending Mayor Cermak five thousand dollars in hundred dollar bills for worthy uses, is explained in a TRIBUNE advertisement today. He was a Mark Twain nabob of the west, a likable old fellow whose author was Don Maxwell, THE TRIBUNE'S news editor and whose alter ego and biographer was Philip Kinsley. He had a generous fling in the big city and has gone back to the mountains, to his burro and his cat. He is the kind of a man who would be happiest by himself and probably will not be heard of again.

The other newspapers of Chicago treated the old fellow handsomely and for a time were eager to know more about him. As a creature of fiction it must be said of him that his benevolence was real. Mayor Cermak got his five thousand dollars. It will be difficult to convince any of the people who benefit from the kindness of the old fellow that he was a hoax. Neither Don Quixote nor Mr. Pickwick was ever real in such fashion.

Good Time Charlie was fiction, but the people among whom his money will move are real. He was also an unusual chap in that he got so much space in the other newspapers in promotion of THE TRIBUNE prize contest. Such things are not expected in the newspaper business and are most extraordinary when they happen. The prize contest will be interesting to all readers in Chicago. It has made a good start and THE TRIBUNE is much obliged to everybody.

Mayor Cermak may stick to the story just as it stood Saturday morning. Good Time Charlie is true, the money is good, and the burro and the cat will be glad to see Charlie back even if nothing else ever sees him again. There's a Santa Claus, isn't there? Sure, there was a Good Time Charlie.

AS THE OLD WORLD SEES THE NEW.

Arthur Henderson, British foreign secretary, had a few suggestions for the Pan-European commission meeting in Geneva. They were so familiar to the place and the nature of the assemblage that they could have been taken for echoes. Mr. Henderson could not increase his reputation for originality or imagination by them. The trouble with the world, Mr. Henderson said, was tariff and debts, meaning the tariff in the United States and the debts owed the United States.

European statesmanship will not confess bankruptcy so long as America can be held responsible for whatever ills vex the nations. It is an ancient habit which grows with usage. Beginning with the Spanish exploiting of the great discovery, the new land was regarded as a reservoir of wealth for whatever people could reach it. Its manifest destiny, as Europe saw it, was to provide resources for the old world—gold, tobacco, lumber, fibers, precious metals and raw materials. Its trade was restricted and its wealth directed into the coffers of the masters who exploited it, whether Spanish, French or British. Its economic system was to be supplementary to the European, not competitive. The logic of the doctrine was obvious. The old world had discovered, conquered and planted the new. Religious dissenters, vagabonds and paupers had been driven or shipped to dig out the materials needed for European welfare, and European thought has never dismissed the idea that America's place in the scheme of civilization was just this.

Possession might change with the fortunes of war, but the destiny of the new land never. It should remain as a resource of the older peoples. It should be open to settlement when it was desirable to send labor to it. It should be open to receive manufactured goods. It should supply raw materials and its accounts should be kept abroad. A moral sanction is attached to this idea, and whatever acts of the United States oppose it are regarded as prejudicial to the well-being of Europe.

The Other Side

WRAPPED IN THE FLAG.
(The Baltimore Sun.)

There is an ancient wheeze to the effect that when a man wraps himself in the flag he usually has a hole in the seat of his trousers.

There is wisdom in the wheeze, and it fits the latest patriotic "discovery" of the Republican national committee that those Democrats who favor downward revision of the Smoot-Hawley law are in league with foreign manufacturers and the international bankers. Having on its hands a tariff law which enlightened opinion condemns overwhelmingly, the G. O. P. drags out the flag in which to entwine its battered carcass, and hopes that people will be so busy saluting that they will forget to use their heads. Why didn't they really do a thorough job in their 1928 manner and say the pope is for revision?

To this tawdry performance, which the literate element of the population should resent as an affront to intelligence, there was added a singularly unfortunate note, in that Representative Ramseyer of Iowa was the G. O. P. statesman who underwrote the balderdash for the Republican national committee. In matters of this general type he has in the past given considerable evidence of using his head rather well. Now, perhaps gulled by the prospect of obtaining the party's designation for the speakership, he resorts to this cheapest of emotional appeals to defend the Republican tariff policy.

Those intelligently interested in a sensible adjustment of our tariff, which lies at the very root of national prosperity, will pay no attention to fatuous charges that they "have allied themselves with foreign manufacturers." The charges are as irrelevant to main points at issue as would be an argument that desire to find jobs for 6,000,000 unemployed is unpatriotic because if they had jobs it might increase the prosperity of "foreigners" by giving them a chance to sell more goods.

PUBLIC BATHS IN NORWAY.

THE steam bath was the national bath in Norway from the beginning until the middle of the last century. The climate was so rigorous and the household conveniences so few that some form of a group convenience for bathing was a necessity.

This bath consisted of a closed room in which there was a pile of hot stones. When water was thrown on these the room was filled with steam. In the course of time modern conveniences in the cities displaced these old stone steam baths, but here and there in the back rural districts the old style institutions are still in use.

Building on this substructure the Norwegians have organized to restore the public bath as an institution and public bathing as a custom. The plan is to organize community steam baths wherever there is a chance to make them self-sustaining. The royal family contribute to a fund which the people have raised, this fund to be used in organizing locals and in building public baths. The local organization borrows from this fund as a nucleus for local funds used for installation.

The baths are run on a business basis. The receipts pay running expenses and extinguish the loans. The central committee supplies the building plans and lays down a plan of operation.

The bath is an old fashioned Norwegian steam bath, though the steam is not generated by hot rocks. In the smaller places the bath is built in connection with some public enterprise, or semi-public such as railway stations, libraries, dairies, ice plants, water plants, and industrial establishments. In many instances the bath houses, in addition to dressing rooms, are equipped with laundries, barber shops, shoe shining establishments, gymnasiums, and reading and writing rooms.

The standard plans are drawn for towns of different sizes, including small villages. To meet special needs there are special plans. For instance, the fishing towns must have something adapted to their peculiar needs if the proposition is to succeed. The industry is highly seasonal. When the catch is on the fishing villages are greatly overcrowded. When the boats come in the wheels must turn very rapidly. The entire population must lend a hand regardless of what is being interfered with. The aim of the Norwegian national committee on public baths is to get everybody into the bath habit and to make bathing available for everybody.

CAUSE OF PINWORMS.

Mrs. J. N. writes: Please tell me what causes pinworms. They bother me very much. What will cure them?

REPLY:

They hatch eggs. The adult usually lives in the rectum, though they sometimes migrate.

Enemas of quassia tea, or even of salt solution, if properly given, will remove the adults. The injections should be repeated at intervals of one week. Removal of the adult females will effect a cure if there is great bodily cleanliness. In some cases, dieting and the use of worm medicines internally helps.

TUBERCULAR GLANDS.

J. C. W. writes:

1. What are tubercular lymph glands?
2. Can they be cured by treatment, or is an operation necessary?
3. If operated, will they reappear?
4. Are they contagious?

REPLY:

1. The knots or kernels, for instance, in the neck, in which the enlargement is the result of infection with the tubercle bacillus.
2. They are generally cured by exposure to light and other physical treatment. Medical treatment helps.
3. They may, unless the focus of absorption is removed.
4. Not in the ordinary sense. It is possible for pus from a discharging gland to infect.

HEIGHT AND EYES.

C. R. writes:

1. Is there any possible means of increasing one's stature after the age of twenty-one?
2. Will systematic eye exercise obviate the necessity for eyeglasses by correcting the refractive errors?
3. Is meat really a strengthening food, or is it no more so than other foods?

REPLY:

1. No.
2. Yes, to a limited extent.
3. Meat is especially valuable as a repair food. Those who wear out much tissue need considerable of it. Those who do not need but little of it.

NO CHOICE NECESSARY.

L. A. C. writes:

Shall one who is blind in his left eye disregard the theory that it is better to have the light shine over the left shoulder when reading?

REPLY.

Whether the light should come over the left shoulder or the right is a matter of minor concern in any event. It should come from behind and it should not fall so as to throw shadows from the hand, arm, or nose in positions that interfere with vision. These remain the main objectives when vision in one eye is lost. That being the case, there need not be choice between shoulders.

PROMISSORY NOTE.

Chicago, May 10.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Will you kindly tell me through your column how I can collect a promissory note which became due last June? The man doesn't live here any more, but I know his address. E. M.

The ordinary course is to place such a claim in the hands of an attorney for collection. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

BROKEN GLASS A MENACE.

Chicago, May 7.—[Friend of the People.]—Just north of the intersection of Clark and Ridge on Clark is an old school building. The glass is broken in the windows and when the wind blows pieces of glass fall to the street. Some one will be hit by one of these pieces and I don't want to be it. S. J. W.

An inspection was made of the two story building at 6014-26 North Clark street [old Rosehill Parental school]. A notice was sent to the board of education, city of Chicago, to either board up all remaining windows so shattered glass blown by the wind will not injure pedestrians passing by, or remove all loose glass, also close up permanently all openings so no one can enter building, or have building wrecked.

Acting Commissioner of Buildings.

SECURE A DEED.

Chicago, May 15.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—My father has a home in the southern part of the state and he wants me to have it. How should we go about putting the property in my name? I have the deeds and bill of sale. R. S.

Have him sign a deed conveying the property to you and record the deed. If your mother is living she should also sign.

CANNOT LEGALLY COLLECT.

Chicago, May 13.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. We children had a stepfather. After twenty years has passed he is trying to collect board for the time we stayed at home, all being under age while we stayed there. A collector from a local agency called and asked for payment on board bill. This I refused to do. 2. Is it possible for the agency to cause trouble? 3. Can they collect this by holding my pay check? 16 YEARS AGO TODAY

MAY 24, 1915.

ROME.—Italy, in a decree signed by King Victor Emmanuel, formally declared war on Austria-Hungary. The duke of Avarina, Italian ambassador at Vienna, presented the declaration to Baron Burian, the Austro-Hungarian foreign minister, and immediately left for Rome. Simultaneously the declaration was handed to Baron Macchio, the Austro-Hungarian ambassador here, who demanded and received his passports. The break with Austria-Hungary also calls for a break with Germany. Prince von Buelow, its ambassador, has been recalled. This is considered here as a warlike act, and a formal declaration from Berlin may be received at any moment. The opening gun of the war was fired when an Austrian frontier patrol crossed the border four miles north of Tonale pass on the western frontier of Tyrol. The Austrians were met by Italian troops who forced them to retreat after a stiff fight.

PARIS.—Austrian troops have torn up a section of the track of a railroad running between Bosino and Borghetto, dynamiting one bridge and destroying another by shell fire, a Verona dispatch says. The Austrians have retired behind their fortifications on the frontier of Trent. Forty thousand Tyrolian, Ruthenian, and Bohemian troops have arrived at Trent.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—American military experts connected with the war department appear to be unanimous in the opinion that Italy's entry into the war changes the German chances of winning the conflict to 25 per cent less than they were before.

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

MAY 24, 1901.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—John Riley Tanner, late governor of Illinois and for many years one of the leading politicians of the state, died suddenly in his rooms in the Leland hotel after a week's illness with rheumatism of the heart. Mrs. Tanner and her sister, Mrs. Colburn Fields Buck, were with the governor when the end came. To his son, Col. J. Mack Tanner, a short time before death, the former governor had expressed himself as hopeful of a speedy recovery. Mr. Tanner, the 31st governor of Illinois, was born on a farm in Warrick county, Indiana, in 1844. Later his family moved to the vicinity of Carbondale. There he enlisted in the Union army and he served throughout the war. When it was over he farmed in Clay county until 1870, when he was elected sheriff. From that time his political rise was rapid until he became governor and the head of one of the most powerful political machines the state has ever known. His death destroys all that was left of the "Tanner machine."

CHICAGO.—Dowieism must answer to the law for the death of Mrs. Emma Lucy Judd. A coroner's jury held John Alexander Dowie, H. Worthington Judd, husband of the victim, and two deaconnesses of Zion to the grand jury on the charge that they were criminally responsible for the death of the woman whose life, with that of her infant, went out after sixteen hours of suffering without medical relief.

CHICAGO.—Alfred T. Hayward, familiarly known as "Little Homer," one of the oldest and best known members of the local sporting gentry, died from paralysis at his home, 380 North Clark street.

CHICAGO.—Miss Elizabeth Pratt and John Cowden Harding were married at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. George R. Jenkins, 1632 Wesley avenue, by the Rev. Charles H. Bixby, pastor of St. Paul's church, Kenwood.

MAY 24, 1881.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Politicians are making a movement to remove Gen. Green B. Raum, commissioner of internal revenue. The movement is led by Indiana men who desire to have Will Cumback, present internal revenue collector for Indiana, appointed commissioner. Senator Ben Harrison is said to be active in the matter.

LONDON.—Joseph Barnard Davis, M. D., F. R. S., F. S. A., author of "Crania Britannica" and "Thesaurus Craniorum," and a member of learned societies of many countries, is dead.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—The Hon. Anthony L. Knapp died of dropsy of the heart at the age of 53. He was elected to congress in 1861 to succeed Gen. John A. McClernand, resigned, and was reëlected in 1862. As a jurist Mr. Knapp had few superiors. He was a lawyer, not a pettifogger. His wife was Miss Henrietta Smith of Chicago.

CHICAGO.—At the invitation of George M. Pullman, Esq., president of the Pullman Palace Car company, the duke of Sutherland and his party, who are touring the United States, visited the town of Pullman and inspected the new works of the company.

THE FARMERS' FRIENDS.

Chicago, May 13.—On May 7 there appeared in THE TRIBUNE an editorial under the heading, "Mr. Traylor on the Depression." The editorial contained the following paragraph. "We all contributed to our own punishment, the farmers who have been charging everything except their own methods with their condition; the wage earner and salaried man who forgot thrift and lived beyond his means; business managers and directors, bankers, and even economic prophets and the press all share responsibility, but certainly wise leadership has been sadly lacking."

Here is a sweeping and, in most instances, a deserving indictment against the major business factors of the country. I want to move to dismiss the charge in the indictment, however, as it relates to the American farmer for the reason he has very little to do with the methods employed in his business. Farming consists of producing agricultural products and then disposing of those products. Marketing the things produced on the farm has been turned over to outside groups, men composing grain, live stock and produce exchanges. The methods employed by these agencies and the compensations paid are fixed without even a suggestion from the farmer. In matters of marketing he is as voiceless as the Sphinx. He is fast becoming so in the field of production.

The agricultural departments of the nation and various states, the colleges and vast army of extension workers, county agents, home makers and club workers are undertaking to supervise and direct every move on the farm. Chambers of commerce, railroads, many large banking interests and manufacturing enterprises maintain their agricultural development departments. These interests, without system or order, are attempting to tell the farmer what to plant, when to plant, and how to plant. They tell him to water his cows, feed and exercise his brood sows, when to select seed corn, and how many grains to plant in a hill. How to kill rats and cockroaches and a hundred other fundamentals that farmers knew a century before these agencies existed.

The latest is a suggestion they take charge of the farmer's purse, budget his expenses and train him to spend wisely. A stupendous campaign is being inaugurated to induce farmers to remodel and rehabilitate their homes. This is being done in the name of a farm organization, but of course in conjunction with the manufacturers of lumber, paints and plumbing supplies. There is not a hint regarding where the finances are to come from to do this chore. When the farmer finds his business sufficiently profitable to justify this expenditure he will do this without a suggestion from the butcher, the baker, or the candlestick maker.

A few years ago these interests made a survey, scanned the horizon and discovered one bright spot in the field of agriculture, the dairy business. Immediately the chambers of commerce, the colleges, the extension workers, railroads and credit corporations got busy in an effort to put every farmer in America into the dairy business. The result was thousands of farmers bought cows at prices ranging from $100 to $150 each, that, since the slump caused by overproduction, have sold in the public markets as canners from $15 to $25 per head. The farmer has been practically reduced to the status of a ward. About the only privilege left is to wield the hoe and plow, and pay the bills.

I therefore move to strike out the charge against the farmer and insert an additional count against the remaining interests, that of pernicious interference in matters that are none of their business.

CHURCH AND NEWSPAPER.

Chicago, May 12.—Dean Shailer Mathews of the University of Chicago is quoted in today's TRIBUNE as addressing students of the divinity school of that institution to the effect that "churches must shun first page publicity" and "when churches find their activities front page copy it will be when something is wrong." Further, "there is no reason for newspapers to become pulpits and discuss theological principles."

He added that he took comfort in reading crime news from the front page of the daily press, saying: "Crime is still news—religious discussion is too common to be news." If the intention was to say that crime should be given the greatest publicity to arouse public sentiment and so help to stop it, such meaning is obscure.

The other statements quoted, in my judgment, do injustice to newspapers, churches, pulpits, and those who occupy them. I believe that newspapers prefer good news to bad on front pages or others and, if churches produce what is now technically called "news," prominent publicity will be given it.

Christian churches are not ashamed of the religion they profess and are doing things every day which make good "news" for front pages, which is so published. Church news is more sought for and read than ever before. Newspapers are thus becoming pulpits from which Christianity is most widely preached and in this service they are increasingly appreciated.

Churches and pulpits have great responsibility to make their accomplishments worthy of the cause they represent. Christian faith, hope, and charity are the light of the world. They seek no dark corners nor suppressed publicity and Christian people, increasing in numbers and good works, will make good "news" sought after on "front pages" throughout the world. This I believe.

CITY NOISES.

Chicago, May 14.—Dr. Evans' article, "Studies on Noise," which appeared in the May 12 issue is very interesting.

May Chicago be among the first to participate in this anti-noise crusade; and fortunately no legislation is necessary to make a start. There are our trains of garbage trucks with their antiquated, jangling, banging, smashing trailers; loud speakers in streets and stores, unnecessary tooting of automobile horns and clashing of street car bells, open automobile cutouts, noisy parties, entertainments, etc.

As for construction noises it is interesting to note that of the 11,068 complaints tabulated by the noise abatement commission of the department of health, City of New York, March 1, 1930, they constituted only 7.4 per cent and the one commonly imagined to be the arch devil of them all—the riveting hammer—was responsible for but 3.37 per cent. To inject a bit of humor we might mention that noisy parties and entertainments were a bit more irritating, as evidenced by their 4.1 per cent.

The riveting hammer is a harbinger of progress and activity and we believe nothing would contribute more to minimizing the mental and physical ills of our community than for the sound of the riveting hammer to reach a crescendo rather than resembling a locust which had wandered into the loop.

A HIT! A HIT!

Oak Park, Ill., May 14.—Since you are getting all worked up over removing ex-Mayor Thompson's name from the Western avenue pumping station and Navy pier, how do you account for Mayor Cermak's name being on the model of the State street subway now on exhibition at Marshall Field & Co.'s store? Also, when are they going to start taking his name off the signs in the forest preserves, since he is no longer president of the county board?

This is the third time that I've written to your column, and if this is printed my batting average will be raised to .333.

SEE HOW FRIGIDAIRE'S PORCELAIN INTERIOR WITHSTANDS THIS

acid-lemon test!

Do you know that the interior of a refrigerator is so constructed that it can never be replaced? And do you know that spilled fruit juices can actually ruin ordinary refrigerator finishes? These are facts. But not even the acid of lemon juice can stain the Porcelain-on-steel interior of Frigidaire!

Ask the salesman to prove that the Frigidaire Porcelain interior is acid and stain-resisting—watch him rub half a lemon over the white surface—watch him squeeze the biting juice over the gleaming porcelain—and note that the acid-bath leaves no trace whatever of tell-tale stain!

And with the greater beauty and greater utility of Porcelain-on-steel inside and out, the advanced Frigidaire also provides many other unusual advantages. It is powered to maintain lower temperatures in the food compartment. It freezes quantities of ice. It has the Hydrator, the Cold Control and the Quickube Ice Tray. It has conveniently elevated food shelves, a smooth, flat top and many other features that add immeasurably to the convenience of Frigidaire.

We suggest that you call at our showroom and see the beautiful new models now on display.

Frigidaire is finished in Porcelain because Porcelain is:

- rust-proof
- heat-proof
- blister-proof
- scratch-proof
- dirt-proof
- moisture-proof
- wear-proof
- odor-proof
- time-proof

It is easy to keep clean, everlastingly beautiful, and never needs refinishing.

IRENE CLEAVES, TEACHER HERE 31 YEARS, DIES

Served at Parker School for 27 Years.

Miss Irene Ingalls Cleaves, eighth grade teacher for the last twenty-seven years at the Francis W. Parker school, 330 Webster avenue, died yesterday in the Ravenswood hospital as the result of a cerebral hemorrhage. She was 56 years old and widely known in educational circles.

Miss Cleaves was driving on the north side in her car last Thursday evening when the illness overtook her. She retained consciousness long enough to park the car at Lincoln avenue and Diversey parkway and give her name to a pedestrian who came to her assistance.

The stranger drove her to her apartment at 4926 North Troy street, whence she was removed the following morning to the hospital. She did not definitely regain consciousness. Several relatives and close friends were at the deathbed.

Daughter of Pioneer.

Born on Aug. 12, 1874, Miss Cleaves was a daughter of Benjamin L. Cleaves, a pioneer Chicagoan who had held office as sheriff of Cook county. She was educated in the public schools and at the University of Chicago.

Upon taking her university degree Miss Cleaves was for four years Latin instructor at Hyde Park High school before joining the faculty of Parker, which is under the direction of Miss Flora Cook, principal.

During the last four summers she had also conducted, in conjunction with a woman friend, a school for girls at Kerelsheol, a chateau in Brittany, France. She was making preparations for the fifth term there when stricken.

Funeral Rites Tomorrow.

Miss Cleaves is survived by a sister, Ellen F. Cleaves of Chicago, and three brothers—Dr. Prentiss B. Cleaves, Cherokee, Ia.; Lincoln L. Cleaves, New York City, and Arthur M. Cleaves, Portland, Ore. The funeral will be held tomorrow at 3 p. m. in the chapel at 2701 North Clark street. Burial will be private.

HIGHLAND PARK GIRL CROWNED QUEEN OF MAY

Given Highest Honor at Rockford College.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Rockford, Ill., May 23.—[Special.]—The crown of purple violets, the possession of which is the ambition of every young woman who enters Rockford college, was placed upon the head of Miss Helen Carr of Highland Park this afternoon.

Until the procession came its traditional way down the green campus slope west of Linden and Middle halls, no one except the election committee knew the name of the young woman who had been voted May Queen by the student body. The crowd of 2,000 that lined the natural amphitheater declared their approval by clapping long and loudly. Then followed the crowning of the queen and the dance drama of Homer's Odyssey, in which 150 students took part.

The fair weather brought crowds of alumnae from surrounding states. The court upon which the old ivy covered halls of John Barnes, Linden, Middle, Chapel and Lathrop look out was filled with fathers and mothers and brothers and sisters.

Queens Guests at Lunch.

The chief event preceding the festival was the luncheon for returning May Queens and the three students ranking highest for the 1931 queen, this was given by Miss Mary L. Mutschler, dean of women. The previous queens present were Mrs. Ruth Houghton Joselyn, class of '21, Rockford; Florence Hooker, '29, Menominee, Mich.; Natalie Wilkinson, '19, Chicago, and Elizabeth Townsend, '30, Stoughton, Wis. The students were Ruth Olson, Kenilworth; Helen Carr, and Ruth Felser, Rockford.

As was the custom in all the previous festivals, the outgoing queen crowned the new one, who in return placed upon the head of the other queen a crown of forget-me-nots. Miss Elizabeth Townsend was the 1930 queen. The whole procession was preceded by the winding of the maypole with its streamers of purple and white, the college colors.

A Popular Student.

Miss Carr is a member of the senior class, and by her election as May Queen is Rockford college's most representative young woman. She has been a member of the college governing board and was student president in her senior year. She has held offices in the athletic association, dramatic club, mathematics club, and is an associate member of Socratic Honorary society. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Carr of 916 Lincoln avenue, Highland Park.

Rockford college is anticipating one of its most important occasions in many years during commencement week which opens June 13. It will mark the fiftieth anniversary of the graduation of Miss Jane Addams, head of Hull house, Chicago.

Miss Addams will deliver the commencement address, which will be held on the east campus June 15.

Ludlow, Cal., Reported Destroyed by Flames

Los Angeles, Cal., May 23.—(AP)—The entire town of Ludlow, Cal., with the exception of two railway stations and a roundhouse, was reported destroyed today by a fire fanned by a hot desert wind. Ludlow, with a population of 670, is without a water system. Water for all uses is hauled to the city. First word of the fire was received from O. W. Coyle, pilot of a Transcontinental and Western Air Mail plane, who sighted the column of smoke. Attempts to communicate with Ludlow, Barstow, and other towns of the desert district by long distance telephone brought a report of "wire trouble."

FIRE CAUSES LOOP TRAFFIC JAM.

Traffic was jammed in nearby loop streets yesterday when smoke from a small fire in the American Shoe Repair shop at 115 North Clark street, poured out of the windows. Firemen extinguished the blaze with small loss.

DE PAUW FACULTY MEMBER TO HAVE GOLDEN JUBILEE

Greencastle, Ind., May 23.—Commencement at De Pauw university next month will have an unusual significance for hundreds of De Pauw alumni and friends of the university. It will mark the culmination of fifty years of service on the De Pauw faculty for Dr. Henry B. Longden.

Dr. Longden was graduated from De Pauw in 1881 and the following September became a member of the faculty. Today he is vice president of the university, director of the Edward Rector Scholarship foundation and head of the department of German language and literature.

As an honor to him, Alumni day, June 6, has been named Longden day and a special alumni chapel has been arranged to honor him on this occasion. David E. Lilienthal of Chicago, a graduate of the class of 1920, is chairman of a committee that is making plans for this occasion.

Following Longden day, De Pauw will hold baccalaureate services for its senior class on Sunday, June 7. Dr. G. Bromley Oxnam, president of the university, will confer degrees upon nearly 300 seniors on commencement day, Monday, June 8.

PRESIDENT PAYS TRIBUTE TO WAR DEAD OF CORNELL

University Memorial Is Dedicated.

Orange, Va., May 23.—(AP)—President Hoover today converted his cabin at the Rapidan camp into a broadcasting studio to deliver a radio eulogy of American war dead as part of the dedication of the Cornell university war memorial.

In erecting such memorials, he said, the country does not seek to glorify war or perpetuate hatreds, but seeks instead to commemorate the courage, devotion, and sacrifice of those who gave their lives for their fellows and their country.

"We do not condemn our own action or belittle the high motives and ideals which based our efforts when we acknowledge that the war was a catastrophe."

There is no way of adding to the glory of those who died, he said, but the people of the country and their descendents "will be the better for remembering them." His speech follows in part:

In Battle 14 Years Ago.

"Fourteen years ago this morning a group of American boys carried an American flag into the fighting on the Aisne front, and thereby made a splendid gesture symbolic of the might of the new world mustering for the decisive issue.

"This unit was composed of undergraduates of Cornell university and was under the leadership of Capt. Edward Tinkham, a Cornell student in the class of 1916. It was a vanguard of a mighty army of American youth that flowed across the Atlantic in the months that followed. In this army were 9,000 other Cornellians who followed Tinkham's unit in the nation's service.

"Two hundred and sixty-four of them did not return. I am happy today to take part in the dedication of a permanent memorial to those men of Cornell university who lost their lives in the world war. Significant in itself, this memorial takes on a broader aspect. While we pay tribute specifically to the service of the 264 Cornell men whose names are carved in this beautiful shrine, the occasion recalls the great part in our war effort played by the men of all our universities and colleges.

"The towers and cloister in which the memory of Cornell's heroic dead is enshrined—distinctive, beautiful, and useful though they are—are not mere buildings. They are symbols, fitting and lasting symbols, of the colleges of our whole country. They commemorate the contribution of youth to the cause of America, a free gift of devoted young lives to an ideal they deemed worth cherishing and defending.

Typical of U. S. Youth.

"These young men of the Tinkham unit were typical American boys. Their experiences and their reactions typify the response of American youth everywhere in the hour of crisis.

"Their patriotism never wavered but rather their devotion grew and found its way back to the quiet campuses which they had left in the full flush of their youthful enthusiasm.

"To them and to all those from Cornell who followed them we dedicate this memorial. In speaking for the Cornell dead I am drawing the attention of this nation to all of its university war dead, indeed, to all our youth who went over, never to come back."

Ithaca, N. Y., May 23.—(AP)—Cornell university's memorial to its world war dead was dedicated here in a cold rain today. President Hoover, from his Virginia camp, delivered the dedicatory address by radio.

The memorial consists of army and navy towers with connecting cloister and a hall adjoining each tower. Massed before the structure were the throngs who came to honor the 264 men who offered to die for their country in France, Italy, and Belgium.

Many townsfolk attended the exercises and scattered through the dense throng were hundreds of school children together with the university student body.

REDUCE YOUR COST OF FINE-CAR OWNERSHIP WITH OAKLAND EIGHT

an outstanding General Motors value . .

Naturally we are interested to know why people like the new Oakland Eight. And so, recently we asked a young couple what pleased them so much. Their answers were different in some ways—as men and women are supposed to be—yet pretty much the same when you analyze them!

The woman said:

"Well, for one thing, I can feel the quality of the upholstery. I know it is genuine mohair—and that convinces me that the car is well made all the way through.

"Then, I think, the Oakland is just as good-looking and smart as can be—and in such good taste. The seats are splendid, too, with their deep cushions—and I can easily move the driver's seat forward or back to suit me exactly.

"It's no effort at all for me to steer the Oakland—and in traffic it's just fine how quickly it gets away. Of course, I don't pretend to know mechanical things, but the gears surely do shift easily." (Yes, indeed, they do—they're Synchro-Mesh!)

The man said:

"Oakland struck me as an exceptionally good buy. It has real size . . . a full-grown, man's car. And I like the solid construction. When I slammed the doors the car felt sound and well-built.

"I'm all for the new Oakland's motor. To me, a car that hasn't got plenty of speed and power simply won't do. I surely like the pick-up and smoothness I get with this powerful big eight. It just eats up hills."

Of course, what they both really liked was the all-around value Oakland offers for the money. A man may not understand fabrics as a woman does—but he wants quality and durability there. A woman can't be expected to know motors—but she wants reliability and fine performance. Oakland has the qualities everyone wants, and it saves owners money on these qualities. Naturally, our owners are pleased, and are talking about Oakland to their friends.

Needless to say, the best way to get a true picture is to drive the car, or ride in it. That you can do by arranging with any Oakland-Pontiac dealer for a demonstration—at your convenience and free of obligation.

One important step in reducing your cost of car ownership is Oakland-Pontiac's policy of equipping its cars ready for the road. Prices you see advertised for Oakland and Pontiac cars are the prices you actually pay, with no equipment or delivery charges to be added.

Cars are equipped with front and rear bumpers, four hydraulic shock absorbers, five wire wheels, and extra tire, tube and tire lock. Wood wheels optional at no extra cost

SCHOOL BOARD CALLS HALT ON LAND PURCHASES

Sale of Unused Sites Is Urged by Trustees.

The board of education has called a halt on the purchase of land for school purposes until the board's [illegible] situation can be surveyed. This was announced yesterday by Lewis E. Myers, president of the board.

[illegible] C. Rogers, director of the department of building survey, and William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools, were asked in a recent meeting of the buildings and grounds committee to compile a complete list of [illegible] owned by the board. The trustees also asked that a report be drawn up [illegible] the properties which may be [illegible] or sold for much needed [illegible].

President Myers and Trustees Joseph P. Savage, James A. Hemingway, and E. Wallace Caldwell have [illegible] the importance of "getting rid of all the land we can at the [illegible] possible profit."

Explains Land Purchases.

Rogers explained that the acquisition of "onion patch" sites in isolated parts of the city where school buildings are not now needed because of population shifts, took place when the board's policy was "to invest with a view to saving in the future."

In defense of his department, Rogers declared that out of fifteen sites acquired last year, ten were purchased [illegible] emergencies. He asserted that the average cost for each of these [illegible] was $63,797, while the average cost for the five that were acquired to be held for possible future use was only $11,289 apiece. He cited [illegible] cases of land purchased several years ago which have so increased in [illegible] value since then as to more than cover the original cost and loss of interest.

Myers Want to Sell Land.

[illegible], President Myers insisted it would be good policy to get rid of as much as possible of the board's [illegible] acres of unused land purchased in the last eleven years at a cost of [illegible]. Of this, there are sites [illegible] at $3,118,445 for which no [illegible] are now projected. Trustee [illegible] pointed out that this land, which is now tax free as school land, would yield in the neighborhood of [illegible] in taxes if it were sold.

According to records in the real estate department of the board, the total [illegible] of land owned is 2,640 acres. Of this land, 1,236 acres is classified as "school fund" or government land which is deeded for educational purposes. The rest has been acquired either by direct purchase or by condemnation.

37 Unused Sites Listed.

There are thirty-seven sites which cost the board $3,118,445 on which no buildings have been ordered and which [illegible] hope to sell or rent. The sites, with their location, square foot area, and cost to the fund, are:

HELD AS FORGER

MORRIS STEIN.

Morris Stein, 32 years old, was held at the detective bureau yesterday following his arrest Friday night on a charge of passing a bogus check in payment for a $350 diamond ring at the Barnett jewelry shop in the Edgewater Beach hotel. Stein admitted that he is wanted in cities from coast to coast for forgery.

In his room at the hotel police found the paraphernalia through which he worked his way into the confidences of his victims. They collected a pile of blank checks on banks in a dozen cities, lodge and fraternity pins and emblems of various societies. Stein told Chief of Detectives John Norton that he served a term in Sing Sing prison in 1925.

NORTH WESTERN SPENDS MILLIONS TO SAVE HOURS

Five Year Building Plan Near Completion.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The Chicago and North Western railway has decided to clip minutes from its suburban schedules, hours from its through passenger trains, and a day in getting freight in and out of the city.

The road is nearing completion of its five year improvement program. It has spent millions for new rails, added tracks, new yards, enlarged freight houses, elevating right of way, longer team tracks, purchase of faster locomotives, new express facilities, and still other equipment.

It is reckoned by the North Western officials that the saving in time is of primary interest to the road itself. Reducing the period of time consumed in operations cuts the road's expense. They reason that it adds to the leisure and convenience of the commuters and travelers. For the shippers and receivers of freight, the road believes that a saving in time reduces their expenses and promotes their profits.

Hope for Public Appeal.

When business revives, President Sargent says he hopes that the saving in time will appeal to the public, and consequently will attract more traffic to the North Western. Therefore the millions have been invested.

Incidentally, all of these improvements fit into electrification, although the railroad has made no decision to electrify.

From the railroad's viewpoint the largest of the improvements was the construction of the Proviso yards, which are practically complete, except for the "west-bound hump." These yards have been constructed on 1,250 acres of land in the vicinity of Bellwood. They are among the largest in the world, having a capacity of 26,000 cars a day, with 15,000 through cars.

Freight Out of City.

This improvement, three years in building, has moved all of the freight trains out of Chicago and almost out of Cook county. Its electrically operated humps and classification yards speed up the shipment or delivery of cars to a considerable extent, and no cars from points outside of the city destined to places outside of Chicago ever come within the city.

A railroad obtains the major portion of its income from freight and improvements in that department are planned to increase its earnings. For some years it has been recognized that the operation of the old Wood street yard of the North Western was expensive and slow. It was necessary, however, to create the Proviso yard before the Wood street yard could be abandoned as the principal freight yard of the line.

Vegetable Yard Is Made.

The old Wood street yard has been redesigned and rebuilt as a vegetable, potato and fruit terminal. Warehouses, paved tracks and other facilities for handling those products have been provided.

With these two improvements completed, the old yards at State street, Wells street and the two at Grand avenue were consolidated into the new terminal at Wells street under the Merchandise Mart. It is claimed this is the largest freight terminal of its kind in the world, and over it stands the largest building.

This station, opened for traffic a few days ago, covers the area bounded by Wells and Kinzie streets, the Chicago river, and the north branch. The 1,450 foot outfreight platform and the 1,250 foot infreight platform add about 40 per cent to the capacity of the old terminal at this location in track space, but the facilities for handling freight so speed up operations that the capacity is increased to a much greater extent.

New Express Building.

The new express building and equipment, opened for business last month at Milwaukee and Halsted streets, is said to be the largest of its kind in the United States.

The length of tracks in the base yards has been doubled in most instances. These are the yards where trains are broken up to set cars for industries. The Mayfair yards and the Weber yards in Evanston have been enlarged and the track elevation through the Mayfair district, together with elevated yards has been completed. In fact all yards and team tracks between Chicago and Waukegan have been enlarged and most of them paved. All tracks through Kenosha are being raised. This task will probably be completed next year.

A third track to Barrington has been laid. This not only aids suburban traffic, but also supplies facilities for the Arlington race track in its season.

Thirty-five of the dual service locomotives were purchased and placed in service. These have a speed of 85 miles an hour, have 50 per cent more pulling power than any North Western engines previously used, and are utilized on both fast through passenger trains and fast freights. The use of these engines required the raising of all of the train sheds in the Chicago terminal 14 inches and the strengthening of all of the bridges and viaducts between Chicago and Omaha.

The stretch of track to Omaha has been equipped with an automatic train control. President Sargent says that this not only promotes safety but expedites the train movement—and saved more time.

Only Part of Program.

This enumeration touches only some of the high spots in the five-year construction program. A bridge across Canal street between the Daily News building and the North Western station has added to the convenience of several million of the 25,800,000 who pass through the North Western station annually. The trucking service by which the North Western picks up and delivers freight to the door of its patrons is intended to save more time and recapture part of the 3.4 per cent of the less than carload freight which the railroads have lost to the highway trucks.

Still another feature has been added to the service, which is not in the interest of time saving. The North Western operates a bus system between Chicago and St. Paul and Minneapolis for those who prefer the highways to the steel rails.

Miss Carol Jane Anger of 1256 Judson avenue, Evanston, who is studying at the Harvard observatory on a fellowship from Radcliffe college, is credited with important astronomical discoveries. Results of her researches have been published by the observatory in a pamphlet entitled: "A Study of Ultraviolet, Blue, and Yellow Magnitudes in the Galactic Cluster."

By working on plates made by Dr. Cecelia Payne, research fellow of Radcliffe college, Miss Anger has established that some of the farther stars which appear yellow are strong in ultraviolet rays. This discovery will have the effect, it is said, of making possible more accurate measurement of magnitudes and distances of the stars.

Miss Anger received her A. B. degree from Northwestern university in 1928 and her A. M. degree the following year, majoring in mathematics and astronomy.

FALL SIDESTEPS JAIL AT LEAST UNTIL AUTUMN

Washington, D. C., May 23.—[U.P.]—Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, has won at least a summer's respite from serving his one year jail sentence on charges of accepting a bribe.

His attorneys, with several days yet in which to ask for a Supreme court review of the recently sustained conviction on charges of taking a bribe from Edward L. Doheny, millionaire oil man in return for Elk Hills oil rights, did not file his application today. And today was the last day for filing such application if action were desired before the fall term of court Oct. 5, under a notice given several weeks ago by the court.

Similarly the court will not be able to act on the review of the case of Henry M. Blackmer, Denver, fined $60,000 for contempt of court for his refusal to appear for examination in the Teapot Dome cases.

Fall originally planned to rely on presidential clemency to stay his sentence, but more recently decided to fight the case in the Supreme court.

MUSIC FESTIVAL CLOSES ON HIGH NOTE OF SUCCESS

Two Final Programs of Fete Acclaimed.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Two concerts, one in the afternoon and the other one in the evening, and the twenty-third North Shore music festival last night had become a matter of historical record, with much fine music, several sensational solo appearances, and an improved financial statement to spread upon the archives.

The afternoon program was, in accordance with festival customs, devoted to the children, with some 1,500 youthful choristers of north shore schools appearing on the stage of Northwestern university gymnasium, the Chicago Symphony orchestra playing, Miss Jeanette Vreeland, soprano, as soloist, Dr. Stock and John W. Beattie as conductors.

Another Program in Evening.

In the evening the program returned to the adults, with the festival chorus to sing, again the Chicago orchestra to play, Eleanor Reynolds, contralto, and Walter Widdop, tenor, as soloists, and Dr. Stock, Peter C. Lutkin and Horace Whitehouse in the conductors' department.

In these two events there were a number of high spots. It was something to hear the delightful young voices in the afternoon singing excerpts from Gilbert and Sullivan, again a group of English and Irish songs with specially written descants or extra contrapuntal parts, and finally Fletcher's cantata, "The Walrus and the Carpenter."

It was something again to hear the carefree ease with which Mr. Widdop trumpeted out Handel's "Sound an Alarm," or the fine voice of Miss Reynolds in another Handel aria, both of which were encored. It was a great deal to hear the orchestra play Bach's "St. Anne" Fugue in the magnificent transcription made by Dr. Stock.

Sing Wagner for Finale.

And then Mr. Lutkin took the baton and conducted the chorus in "Gloria in Excelsis Deo," a dramatic and impressive excerpt from Horatio Parker's oratorio, "The Legend of St. Christopher." Likewise Mr. Widdop, Miss Reynolds and the chorus turned to Wagner for an earfilling finale to the festival. Also Miss Vreeland had delighted both the young and old in the afternoon with her excellent voice and impeccable accuracy in a Mozart aria and two groups of modern songs.

Taking one consideration with another, this festival set new standards for festival accomplishments. The participators admit much hard work in preparation. It was justified and more by what resulted during the performances.

Seldom does one hear such great groups of singers under such excellent discipline and with such spirit. As an unfailing reaction, seldom, too, does one hear such appreciative applause as has resounded under the roof of the vast gymnasium this week. All of which may serve as a standard for the twenty-fourth festival which will take place next year.

OLDSMOBILE'S NEW quiet SECOND GEAR GIVES A new KIND OF ACCELERATION

Four-Door Sedan

SWIFT · SMOOTH · QUIET

You can't appreciate how much a really quiet second gear adds to driving enjoyment until you try the new Oldsmobile.

For this feature, one of many important new ones now offered in Oldsmobile, gives a new kind of acceleration. It is unusually swift, to give you the lead in traffic. It is remarkably smooth, to give added zest to fast getaway. And it is almost unbelievably noise-free—actually rivaling high-gear performance in quietness.

These unusual advantages of Oldsmobile's new Quiet Second Gear are given the highest possible degree of utility by the famous Syncro-Mesh transmission. This feature enables you to shift smoothly and easily through all gears without clashing. And this applies not only to the shifts from low into second and from second to high, but also to the change from high back to second. This shift . . . so difficult with the ordinary transmission, and so useful for a quick burst of speed in traffic . . . can be made easily and silently, without reducing car speed.

The new Oldsmobile is a great car to drive for many reasons. And not the least of these is its new Quiet Second Gear—transforming Oldsmobile's smooth, increased power into keen, fast, quiet acceleration . . . and contributing new pleasure—new satisfaction—to driving.

CONSIDER THE DELIVERED PRICE AS WELL AS THE LIST PRICE WHEN COMPARING VALUES. DELIVERED PRICES INCLUDE ONLY REASONABLE CHARGES FOR DELIVERY AND G.M.A.C. FINANCING . . . WHICH WE WILL BE GLAD TO DETAIL FOR YOU.

Something New in TREASURE HUNTS!

The Chicago Tribune Will Pay

$1,000.00

a Week in CASH PRIZES

For the Best Solutions to

GOOD TIME CHARLIEGRAMS

"GOOD TIME CHARLIE" started it! The press for two days has told the bizarre story of a mythical person who sent $5,000.00 to Mayor Cermak to help bring back good times. What Good Time Charlie started the Chicago Tribune will carry on.

The Chicago Tribune is matching Good Time Charlie's offer! Today the Chicago Tribune puts up $5,000.00 in cash to be distributed in an effort to speed the return of better times. $1,000.00 in cash prizes will be awarded each week for the next five weeks.

Good Time Charlie Dawson told how he had to hunt for his gold in the deserts of the West. Starting today, Chicago Tribune readers are offered a chance to hunt for gold in the display advertising columns of this newspaper!

JUST FOLLOW THESE SIMPLE RULES:

1. Each day, beginning today and continuing for the next six consecutive days, daily and Sunday, various words in display advertisements which appear in the Chicago Tribune will be identified by an asterisk (*) after the word. When these words are arranged in the proper manner they will form a "Good Time Charliegram"—a message of good cheer or sound advice of interest during the present period of reconstruction. You are invited to look for these words and find the Good Time Charliegram. No words will be hidden in the Want Ads. You do NOT have to look through the Classified advertisements.

2. The Chicago Tribune will pay $1,000.00 in cash prizes to the persons who send in the most nearly correctly arranged and the neatest complete sets of Good Time Charliegrams in accordance with these rules.

3. The prizes for each week are as follows:

1st Prize	$250.00
2nd Prize	100.00
Next 2 Prizes $50.00 each	100.00
Next 4 Prizes $25.00 each	100.00
Next 25 Prizes $10.00 each	250.00
Next 40 Prizes $ 5.00 each	200.00
74 weekly prizes totaling	$1,000.00

4. This offer is open to every one—men and women, boys and girls—except employes of the Chicago Tribune and their families. You pay nothing. Just prove your skill.

5. Good Time Charliegrams are to be submitted in complete sets only. DO NOT send in each day's solution separately. Hold all Good Time Charliegrams until you have the complete set of seven (7). Then send them to "GOOD TIME CHARLIEGRAMS," the Chicago Tribune, Tribune Tower, Chicago, Illinois. All entries must be received in the Tribune office before 6 P. M. on Wednesday, June 3, 1931.

6. Contestants may submit as many sets of Good Time Charliegrams as they wish, but no contestant will be entitled to more than one prize.

7. You need NOT buy the Chicago Tribune. You may use the handy blank or you may copy your entry on a separate sheet of paper. The Tribune may be examined at any of its offices or at public libraries free of charge.

8. The judges will be appointed by the Chicago Tribune. Their decision will be final. In case of ties, a duplicate award will be paid to each tying contestant.

RUSSIA SPENDS $36,000 TO BUILD SINGLE TRACTOR

And Then Sells It for a Mere $6,000.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

STALINGRAD, U. S. S. R., April 27.—[By mail.]—Tractorstroi, near here, is one of the biggest pachyderms in the soviet government's costly herd of white elephants.

Built as a self-contained factory to produce 50,000 tractors a year the plant is turning out anywhere from one to a peak output of 30 machines a day with its huge personnel of 11,000 employés.

Shortage of raw materials, paralysis of transport and the general inability of the help to run the show properly are responsible for the debacle. The gravest aspect of the situation is that no one in a responsible position and able to estimate dares to forecast when the plant will really start functioning.

May Import Labor.

Maybe by next year, perhaps not for several years, even maybe never. And the only solution any one has dared to formulate is the heroic remedy of operating the entire plant with imported skilled labor. One thousand men is the minimum number envisaged.

Frank Chase of Chicago, who built the new Putiloff plant at Leningrad and is enlarging the former Singer Sewing Machine works at Podolsk, constructed this one. The construction was fabricated in the United States and the steel shipped over, being riveted together here. Jack Calder was construction chief and he is now engaged in superintending the erection of the Chelyabinsk tractor and combine factory.

At Chelyabinsk they are trying a different system. They are fabricating the steel bought in Germany with the recently acquired credits in Russian factories for eventual shipment and assembly. Number 1 plant at Chelyabinsk is being fabricated at Moscow, and No. 2 plant at Odessa.

"Only" One Trouble.

The only trouble is that steel meant for Moscow has been shipped to Odessa, and steel meant for Odessa has been shipped to Murmansk and is tied up there in the glut of imported material which chokes that ice free port on the White Sea.

Most of the tractors thus far produced at Tractorstroi are partically hand made. Unable to operate the delicate, expensive machinery and maintain the rhythm necessary for mass machine production, the Russians are slowly making them, chiefly from tool steel they have as supplies for repairs and extra parts. This steel is worth, even in America, from 22 to 32 cents a pound and a good deal more, owing to its scarcity, in Russia. Yet in the United States a tractor is figured to sell on a basis of 25 cents a pound weight.

American engineers here estimate that some of the tractors turned out represent a valuation of about $36,000 and have been sold for $6,000. Three hundred tractors were produced in January and 340 in February and 154 in the first half of April.

Even Use Bronze.

One of the principal difficulties encountered is the impossibility of Russians being taught to make malleable iron. In some cases they resort to gray iron, but in many circumstances it is impossible to utilize this as a substitute. Then they calmly use bronze, costing 33 cents a pound instead of 12 cents which malleable iron should fetch.

A shipment of tractors hauled aboard flat cars by horses and dispatched to Turkey broke down, and the Ankara government filed a bitter complaint to Moscow. The soviet organization has sent a group of American experts to Anatolia to assemble the tractors and teach the Turks to operate them, if they will run.

The domestic help finds it almost impossible to take quick chemical tests of molten malleable iron and obtain the results in fifteen minutes to see if the metal is "right" for annealing. So they resort to the expedient of dumping quantities of ferro-silicon into the molten mass as a special alloy to correct the heat so it will anneal.

Great Amounts Wasted.

This is bad business in principle, and besides that ferro-silicon is extremely expensive. It is almost priceless here and extremely difficult to obtain. All of it on hand is urgently required for necessary work, where it is an essential ingredient. But large amounts of it are being wasted.

Conveyors are other bugbears at Tractorstroi. Despite all their propaganda about rhythm and their adoption of the word "tempo" to illustrate their ideas on keeping production up to a certain speed the Russians have never yet learned to love a conveyor.

The big machines are laid out gracefully in the huge units of the plant, but are not utilized. The workmen drag their bit off to a corner, where they can sit down or lie down on the floor with their tools and harry it and pick at it, like a cat worrying a rat. When the superintendent attempts to enforce usage of the conveyors he is snowed under with complaints and the men get sulky and knock off work.

Stalin Refuses to Visit Plant.

The director of Tractorstroi invited Uncle Joe Stalin, dictator of the soviet union, to come down and visit the giant plant. Stalin refused to come until the plant gets on a real productive basis, and even then he won't promise.

Down the river, on the lower Volga, between here and Astrakhan on the Caspian, nearly all of the farming land has been collectivized. Here last winter, the expropriated kulaks fought pitched battles with the militia sent out to enforce the collectivization. The "rich" peasants, dragged ancient muskets and bird guns out of hiding. But none of them had any bullets or cartridges to speak of, and the battles were soon over.

These farms have been promised Red tractors from Stalingrad this spring to do their ploughing and seeding. With their shortage of horses, due to the slaughter of animals last autumn by the kulaks when they learned they were to be expropriated, there is insufficient means to farm the land. A short crop is expected from the lower Volga as a result of these complications.

Stalingrad railroad station wins the first prize as the dirtiest, smellingest, and most crowded in the entire country. It is jammed full of peasants, bums, and waifs, many of whom have apparently lived in and around the building for weeks, waiting for trains, for money to buy tickets, and for permission to travel. They jam every inch of the waiting rooms and corridors, cooking and eating and sleeping on the floor or sprawled out on the benches, surrounded by heaps of baggage, boxes and bags and wooden trunks and every form of impedimenta that could be imagined.

Over in the freight yards Red guards with fixed bayonets stand watch over the tractors that trickle in for shipment, nicely painted and bright and shiny unless they have been standing outside the plant at Tractorstroi, twelve miles away, and been rained and snowed on for a few weeks. Then they are not so bright and spick and span.

Washington, D. C., May 23.—(AP)—The issue between the senate and President Hoover over the right of George Otis Smith to occupy the chairmanship of the federal power commission today advanced another step in court.

George Wharton Pepper, counsel for Smith, filed answer to the senate petition, drawn by John W. Davis, for ouster of the President's appointee.

Pepper held that the action of the senate in reconsidering and rejecting Smith's nomination, after once having confirmed it, was an empty and valueless gesture. The nomination, he contended, was no longer before the senate.

The next step will be for the District of Columbia Supreme court to set a time for the hearing.

DEMANDS $100,000 FOR STOLEN LOVE OF SUICIDE WIFE

The declaration in the $100,000 alienation of affections suit brought by W. G. Schultz, building contractor of Oak Park, against Harry J. Burke, was filed yesterday in Superior court. The suit charges that Burke stole Schultz's wife, Helen, away from him in September of 1930.

Mrs. Schultz committed suicide in a west side hotel a month ago, leaving a note addressed to Burke, who is married and the father of a 14 year old boy.

Burke, according to the suit, installed Mrs. Schultz in an apartment at 125 North Cicero avenue, supplied her with money and took her on trips to Michigan, Indiana, and Canada. Burke is 42 years old and lives at 5919 Fulton street.

MEXICO CITY, May 23.—(AP)—Three of Mexico City's morning newspapers, El Universal, El Universal Grafico and La Prensa, were closed by strikes tonight. Excelsior was the only one of the leading newspapers left operating. The strike arose from differences in regard to renewal of collective labor contracts.

The feeling of security you get when you drive the new Dodge Six and Eight is due to Mono-Piece Steel Bodies, Low Center of Gravity and Dodge Hydraulic Brakes . . . and the way these factors are engineered in harmony with the tremendous power of the new Dodge engines.

He had just cleared a high hedge without mishap, but when the steed's front feet hit the ground its knees buckled and Mussolini went over its head and landed in a patch of grass. A few scratches about the face were the result.

WATCH YOUR CHILD'S LIFE LINE

At Last! Above Average! Is Your Boy, Too?

Charlie Safford wasn't always so healthy. But his mother didn't realize how much below average he was until she compared him with Thompson's Life Line Chart (see offer below.) In three months she built him up and has kept him above average ever since. Read the secret here—

Perfect digestion is vital to children; they must eat and digest more than grown folks in order to grow. The greatest helpers for little stomachs are enzymes. Thompson's "Double Malted" (double enzymes) digests five times its own weight of other foods. Helps young, growing bodies get full benefit from the food they eat. Then they eat more—hence gain in height, weight, energy. Thompson's practically doubles the food value of milk and is rich in the food elements that develop strong bones and teeth, firm flesh and sturdy muscles.

Resolve that your boy or girl shall have the tremendous advantage in life that a vigorous body gives. Order Thompson's "Double Malted" from your druggist or grocer now.

WINTER HEATING
SUMMER COOLING

TWO YEARS TO PAY

NOW is the time to install your electrically controlled Holland Vaporaire heating, cooling and air-conditioning system. Do not wait for the autumn when installers are rushed with work. You will save money by having the installation made now.

The modern Holland is surprisingly easy to own. Lower prices and two years to pay make it possible for everyone to enjoy its healthful comfort, its convenience, its unusually economical operation.

Here is a heating system that does not loaf in the summer. When days and nights are oppressively hot and sultry, Holland's airplane-type propeller sends cool currents of comfort coursing through every room. Install now and keep cool this summer.

During the winter months Holland spells permanent relief from all heating worries. Holland burns oil, gas or coal equally well. Automatic regulation keeps comfort constant.

Heat alone is not comfort. Stagnant, baked-dry air—the result of obsolete heating systems—is injurious to health; causes coughs, colds and other respiratory disorders; dries and irritates the skin. The Holland Vaporaire System does more than heat your home. The air you breathe is humidified for health, warmed for comfort, completely changed every few minutes. The atmosphere in Holland heated homes is stimulating, invigorating.

Every Holland installation—no matter how small—is individually planned by Holland Certified Heating Engineers under direct factory supervision. Holland assumes undivided responsibility. Satisfaction is guaranteed by written bond.

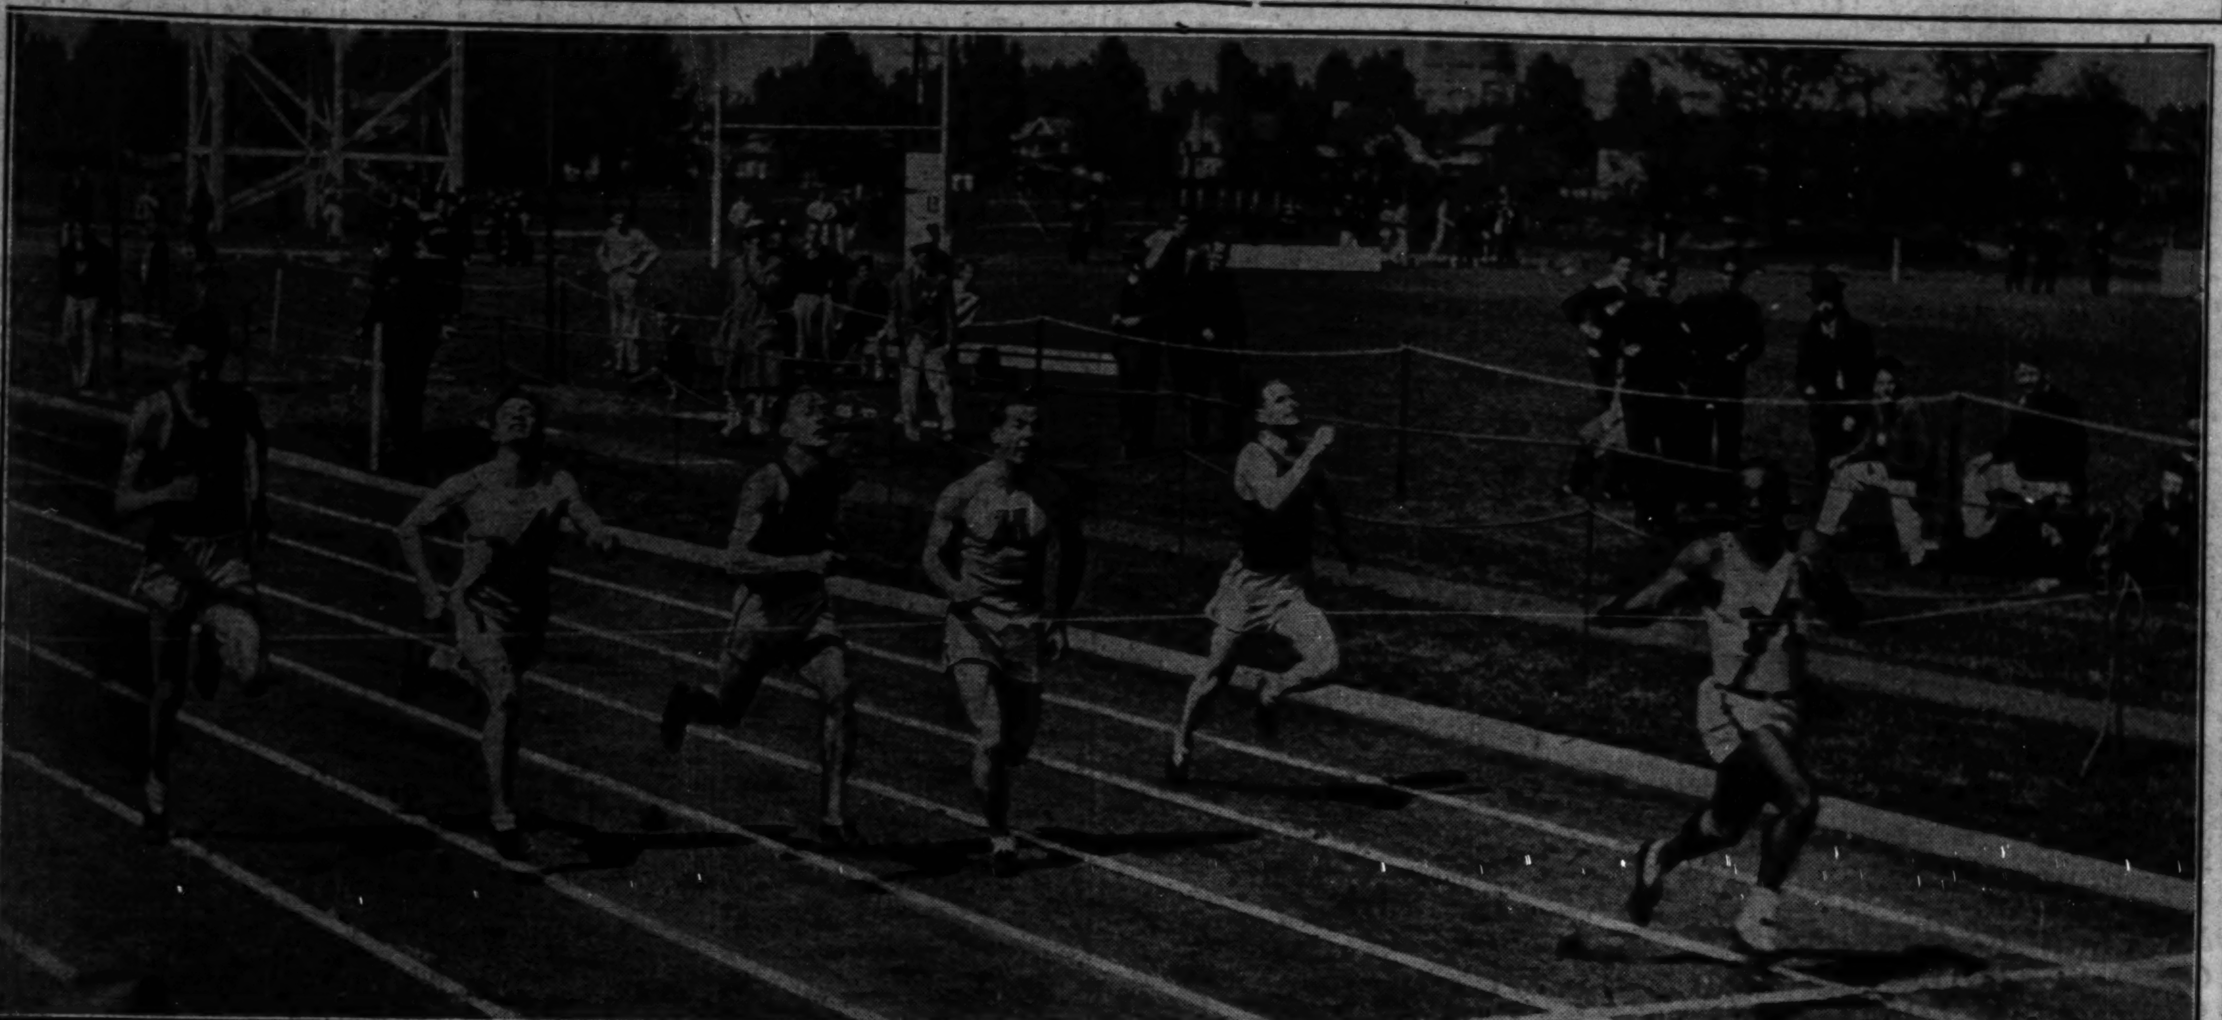
WISCONSIN WINS CONFERENCE TRACK TITLE

PITTSBURGH SCORES 4 IN 7TH, DEFEATS CUBS, 4 TO 3

WHEN BIG 10 STARS STEPPED ALONG



Eddie Tolan of Michigan comes home an easy winner in the 100 yard dash in the Western conference track and field championships held yesterday at Dyche stadium, Evanston. Tolan was timed in 9.6 seconds, one-tenth of a second slower than the world's record, which he now holds. Tolan also won the 220 yard dash and gave his team an early lead, which was overcome by Wisconsin when the Badgers forged ahead in the field events. Wisconsin won the title with 46 points, while Illinois nosed Michigan out for second place by one and one-third points. Haas of Minnesota, third from the right, finished second, and Fazekas of Ohio State, second from the right, was third.

[illegible] Malone was a great pitcher against the Pirates yesterday—for six [illegible] innings. For five and two-thirds innings he allowed the Pirates [illegible] a hit. When the seventh opened [illegible] was one hit. Then Pat blew [illegible] in a great big way.

The Cubs were leading, 3 to 0, when [illegible] parachute failed to open. When the Pirates were finished with our [illegible], the score was 4 to 3 in favor of the enemy, a tabulation that prevailed until the bitter end.

The Pirates made only four hits in the entire contest, but three of them came in that seventh inning blast. The one that did the damage was a [illegible] looper which George Grantham dropped in short left for a double that [illegible] in the tying and winning runs. [illegible], [illegible], but legal, and, after all, a man has to live right to bunt a game-deciding double with the ball [illegible] and everything.

[illegible] way things are going this [illegible] many 13's to contend with, but [illegible] Root will do his best this afternoon against Ervin Brame.

The pyrotechnics which were touched off in the seventh included two passes, a single by Meneif, a full blown double by L. Waner and the aforementioned [illegible] double credited to Mr. Grantham.

Baecht finished the game and held the Pirates hitless. Spencer pitched the last three innings for the Pirates and confined the Cubs to a double with which Hartnett caused great excitement in the ninth.

Cubs Busy in Third.

The manner in which the Cubs [illegible] loose in the third is herewith [illegible]. After Bell flied to L. Waner, Grimm knocked the first hit off Meine, a single to left center. Malone walked and then was forced by Moore, Grimm stopping at third. English doubled along the right foul line, Grimm scoring and Moore stopping at third. Hornsby cracked a double off the top of the left field wall, Moore and English scoring. Wilson and Cuyler walked and the bases were full, but the inning ended when Hartnett popped to Suhr.

Grimm tried to start a similar rally in the next inning when he again singled with one out, but this time he

INDIANS BREAK PROLONGED LOSING STREAK BY BEATING SOX, 10 TO 5

Cleveland Batters Take Turns Pounding Four Hose Hurlers.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cleveland, O., May 23.—After a losing streak of twelve straight, the Indians finally found a team they could whip. The team happened to be the charitable White Sox, who were short changed today in the delayed opener of the series, 10 to 5. However, the Indians deserve no credit for their triumph because they kicked the ball around in real minor league fashion and made many of their runs merely because the visiting outfielders were remiss in their duties.

The whole show, staged in a frigid atmosphere before about 1,500 pneumonia proof addicts, was settled by just one mistake. For three innings Vic Frasier turned out an excellent job of pitching and appeared to have a safe edge over the skilled Wes Ferrell, who had been blasted from the scene in three successive starts.

Indians Take Lead.

But in the fourth the portly Bob Fothergill got all tangled up with himself on a line drive while three Indians were on the bases. The blunder put the Tribe out in front and once they got into the lead they stayed there through the simple process of pounding, in turn, Messrs. Faber, Braxton, and McKain.

Kamm aided the Sox considerably in the production of two first inning runs. Blue led off with a grounder straight at Willie but it caromed off his glove and a kindly scorer allowed a hit. Cissell survived when his bounder was kicked by Detore. Reynolds remained in his slump by fouling to Morgan. Fonseca stepped up against his old gang for the first time and whacked a single through short on a hit and run play, Blue scoring and Cissell dashing to third. Fothergill singled to left, driving Cissell home and Fonseca to third. Then the fun subsided on Eichrodt's popup and Kamm's neat stop of a wicked drive by Jeffries.

Fonseca Hits Triple.

Fonseca made it 3 to 0 for the Sox with his hit for distance in the third. He leaned into Ferrell's first pitch and sent it to the bleacher in left center for a triple. Fothergill bounced one to Detore and the young man fumbled. Fonseca used the error as an excuse for sneaking home from third. One hit let the Indians have their first run in this same session. Averill opened with a double and went the rest of the distance on fly balls by Morgan and Hodapp.

Frasier's complete foldup in the fourth when three Clevelanders scored began with a pass to Sewell with one out. Ferrell also walked. Porter fouled to Jeffries but Kamm exercised a little patience and was rewarded with a pass, filling the bases.

Fothergill Misjudges Drive.

Averill lined to right and if Fothergill had stood still the ball would have plunked him squarely in the chest. But he ran in and when he realized his mistake it was too late. The drive went over him for a double, the three waiting runners streaking for the plate. Faber was called in to finish the inning.

The Sox got in on a bargain in the sixth and scored once to make the count 5 to 4. Jeffries was the first man up and aimed a bunt at Kamm. Willie's throw to first pulled Morgan off the bag. Tate scratched a single to deep short. Watwood batted for Faber and forced Tate when Hodapp made a first class stop of a nasty bounder. On Blue's third strike Watwood stole second and Sewell threw the ball into center field. This let Jeffries score. Watwood took third on the error and died when Cissell fanned.

Indians Pound Hodapp.

Braxton retired one man in the sixth before the Indians started to pin back his ears. Averill doubled down the first base line, Morgan flied out, and Hodapp uncorked a single on which Averill scored. Hodapp rode to third on a two bagger by Vosmik and Braxton was dismissed from the party. As soon as McKain appeared he perpetrated a wild pitch on which Hodapp registered. This put the Indians in front by 7 to 4, but the Sox grabbed back one run in the seventh on Reynold's single and Eichrodt's double.

For good measure the Tribe clubbed across three more in the eighth. One of these was a home run over the right field wall by Averill. Morgan then double, and Hodapp, Vosmik, and Ferrell singled for the two other tallies.

In the bargain bill slated for tomorrow Caraway and Lyons will operate against Brown and Fay Thomas.

The field goes over the second barrier in the 120 yard high hurdle race during the Big Ten meet at Evanston. Lee Sentman, Illinois star (second from the right), won the event by three feet from Jack Keller, his sophomore rival from Ohio State, who is at the extreme left. In winning the event, Sentman established a new conference record and tied the world's record of 14.4 seconds made by Earl Thomson of Dartmouth in 1920. Keller evened the score for the day by defeating Sentman in the 220 yard low hurdles.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

RACING AS SPORT.

CAMPAIGNING of a high class thoroughbred string is a rich man's sport. Gone are the days when turf writers had the opportunity to weave a great "human interest" story from the important stake victory of the lone horse possessed by some poor owner. Gone likewise are basis for the old time melodramas of how the generally disregarded steed of a poor owner won a great victory and paid off the mortgage on the old farm about to pass to Elder So-and-So, the village Shylock.

Reasons for this condition are logical. Poor owners often possess a promising juvenile racer, one with Derby or stake possibilities. In the market, such a colt commands a fancy price, anywhere from $25,000 to $100,000, according to his engagements. Because of the colt's promise, some wealthy man who desires to see his colors carried to victory and can afford the chance, wishes to buy him.

What is the position of the poor owner? He may keep his colt, possibly his only asset, and win more than the amount offered. But the chances are too great. Injury, failure to live up to promises, all the hazards of racing enter. Business sense and prudence suggest he accept the good offer and let some one else better able to afford it take the final chance. Usually he sells the colt.

How difficult it is to make money in racing was brought out by a chap with whom we talked in Louisville. He has some money, although not classed as wealthy. He is by profession a horseman. He campaigns a small string, rather better than selling platers, but not great stake horses. In 1930 he raced three horses with an investment of $20,000.

When he came to make out his income tax his purse and stake winnings for the trio were $15,600. They had started 94 times. That involved losing mount fees to the jockeys of $10 each race. In victories, the fee is $25, plus a customary gift and usually a five spot around to the stable hands. Thus he figured his riding expenses had approximated about $4,000, or nearly one-fourth the winnings. There was also stable help, feed and shipping expenses. He deducted $4,500 for his own hotel and traveling expenses. Final total of expense was $13,000, which left $2,600 on a capital investment of $20,000, without salary to himself or "obsolescence," if that term may be applied to race horses.

Now this chap is conservative, shrewd in a turf way, and knows the game from boyhood. He offers an example of why big stables are owned by men who do not have to worry at the end of the year whether the balance sheet figures are in red or in black.

Big Bill Lange.

Remember Big Bill Lange, one of the greatest outfielders and base runners of all time who performed those sensational diving catches for the Chicago Nationals back in the '90s? We have just received a letter from Bill, now a prosperous real estate and insurance broker in San Francisco, in which he states he will visit the Century of Progress exposition in 1933, in commemoration of the fortieth anniversary of his joining the Cubs. He adds, "Of course, you must remember, Harvey, that I went there and played when I was ONLY ELEVEN YEARS OLD."

Wisconsin is the track and field champion of the Western conference. The Badgers, rated no better than fourth in advance predictions, scored 46 points yesterday at Dyche stadium to win the thirty-first annual outdoor meet. Illinois and Michigan, which had cornered all the titles for the previous 13 years, finished in that order behind Wisconsin, and with totals which seesawed until the final event, the hammer throw. The Illini ended with 39 5-6 points to Michigan's 38 2-6.

The fight for fourth position was as thrilling as the battle for first. Indiana gained the honor with less than a point advantage over Ohio State; and Iowa, which had led in the number of qualifiers in Friday's preliminaries, slumped to sixth place with 24 points.

Three Big Ten Marks Fall.

Three conference records were broken, and one of these new marks, Lee Sentman's spectacular flight over the high hurdles, equaled the best time ever made. Sentman outraced Jack Keller of Ohio State, his sophomore rival, to win by a three foot margin in 14.4 seconds.

Eleven years ago Earl Thomson of Dartmouth first established the record. Nine years later E. Wennstrom of Sweden was credited officially with the same time. Sentman, officials asserted yesterday, should receive recognition by the International Amateur federation, for he did not use starting blocks, did not knock down a hurdle, and the northeastern wind, blowing cross ways off the cinder path, did not help him.

The mark, of course, will stand in the conference. It displaces Guthrie's record made in 1926.

Sentman also won high point honors for the meet, his last. He finished a close second to Keller in the 220 yard low hurdles and then placed fourth in the broad jump for a total of 11 points. Keller, with first in the low hurdles, second in the high hurdles, and fifth in the 100 yard dash, totaled 10. This also was equaled by Eddie Tolan of Michigan, another senior, who won both dashes. Tolan's 9.6 seconds for the century was the best time the Negro athlete had made since he established the present world record of 9.5 seconds three years ago.

Set Mile, 2 Mile Record.

New conference records also were established in the two mile run and the one mile relay.

George Wright, Wisconsin sophomore, contributed a sorely needed five points to the Badger total, when running in his first outdoor meet, he was timed in 9 minutes 21 9-10 seconds, breaking the conference record of 9 minutes 23 7-10 seconds set by Abbott of Illinois in 1928. Henry Brocksmith of Indiana, defending champion, was second, 25 yards behind Wright, whose final drive gave him that advantage after the pair had matched strides on the back stretch of the eighth lap.

Michigan's mile quartet, Eknovich, Debaker, Glading, and Russell, broke the third conference record in the final track event of the afternoon. The new mark is 3 minutes 18 5-10 seconds, more than a second faster than another Michigan team had done in 1926.

The first three Wolverine quarter milers held their own with their rivals so Edwin Russell, who yesterday won the 440 yard championship, had no difficulty in sprinting across the line 10 yards ahead of Indiana. Northwestern, Ohio State, and Wisconsin finished the scoring positions in that order.

Badgers' First Since 1916.

Wisconsin's victory yesterday, its third in 31 years of western conference competition, was its first since the days of Arlie Mucks, who contributed largely in the two years, 1915 and 1916, when the Badgers reigned undefeated. And Tom Jones, veteran coach, who directed the activities of Wisconsin then as he has every year since, was the happiest man on the north shore last night.

While Charles Hoyt, serving his first year at Michigan, and Harry Gill, another of the Big Ten veterans, coach at Illinois, watched first one and then another of their stars fail to come through, Jones had no mishap

Lucas Holds National Leaders to 4 Hits.

Cincinnati, O., May 23.—(AP)—Red Lucas limited the champion St. Louis Cardinals to four hits today but the titleholders won, 2 to 1, in ten innings when two Cincinnati errors figured in the scoring.

The first Cardinal run came without a hit, Sigafoos making a two base muff of Gelbert's popup and the latter scoring on a sacrifice and outfield fly. In the tenth Douthit doubled and scored when Ford fumbled Gelbert's roller. Score:

NOBODY'S BUSINESS ... By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK, May 23.—Of all men in the baseball business, there is no other as mysterious as Rogers Hornsby, the manager of the Cubs, who is either a bit of a devil or the most thoroughly maligned celebrity that this country has seen since the time of Andrew Johnson. It seems that nobody knows him very well, and the fact that he is not a fellow of a confiding nature probably has tended to stimulate the sinister imaginings, if they be imaginings, of those who delight to hate him and denounce him in the most vigorous terms of a language better equipped for this purpose than most tongues. A half hour with one of those who have never met Hornsby socially, but loathe him as if by instinct, is a recital of the entire Anglo-Saxon glossary of vile names and of all the evil traits that man is heir to, the ultimate impression being that the party who has the floor does not care for Rogers Hornsby very much.

Curiously this reputation has been his with a more or less sizable element of his public in every National league town that he has played in, with the exception of New York, where he was judged merely by his professional ability and commanded virtually no notice from the customers outside his business hours on the ball field. New York, however, is not enthusiastic one way or another about any ball player, including Babe Ruth.

Public for Hornsby in Stoneham Deal.

Elevator boys don't salute their passengers with, "What do you think of the Giants?" or "What's the matter with them Robins?" And, except in those neighborhoods where the residents have become addicts of the baseball gambling pool, there is no daily breath-holding or scoreboard gaping. In New York, Hornsby played a pretty good job of ball and the patrons valued him accordingly, and when he left the general impression was that Charlie Stoneham, the owner of the club, who never will be any public idol, had undertaken to punish a better man than himself for some lack of personal respect. More definitely, the report was that he had refused to call Mr. Stoneham Mister, and while there was a general suspicion that something else had been wrong, people were inclined to respect Hornsby rather than hate him for the offense stated.

But before he came to New York he had shown a capacity to arouse the bitterest feelings, and I recall listening one spring in Florida to a thirty minute hymn of hate by an influential citizen of St. Louis, who had dedicated himself to the work of driving Hornsby out of town.

Beginning with "Why, he is ——," and concluding with, "I do not like him," this party worked himself into an interesting frenzy and wound up limp but happy, for the hating of Rogers Hornsby seemed almost a religious matter with him and the recital of all these things a litany.

But Why Do They Hate Him? Nobody Knows.

"But why," I would interpose at moments when he paused for breath, "why are you sore at the guy?"

"Because," he would say, "of all the no account ——," and away he would go again, never having to repeat himself.

This is the mysterious feature of it all. I hear people, including, as I say, some who never saw the man out of uniform off the ball field, shelling this ball player, one of the greatest of his time, a pennant winner in his first year as manager in a town which had not had a pennant in all the history of the major leagues, as though he had invaded their very homes, swindled them of their savings and put the torch to the church of their faith, and when I ask them, quietly, "Why are you sore at the guy?" they generally have nothing more definite to say than "Because, of all the no accounts ——," and so forth.

I have met Mr. Hornsby several times, in a way of business, and although I am willing to believe that the man can cuss a fairly picturesque and fluent line, possibly as interesting as my own, never have I seen or heard of any substantial reason for all this free-style hating. He always has been civil enough and the baseball writers that I know who have traveled with him have, with one exception, sort of shrugged the problem off, merely saying, "He isn't a mixer or a back-slapper; he has not many friends in the business; he calls a mugg a mugg."

The Wilson Story: What a Laugh!

A little while ago in Chicago, not once but several times, I heard people who admitted that they didn't know Hornsby well and who certainly hadn't the freedom of the Cubs' dressing room, announcing with the most confident assumption of authority that Hack Wilson wasn't hitting home runs this year because he was laying down on the job to discredit Hornsby, and, to the limit of his own ability, assure Hornsby's failure in his first year as manager of the Cubs. Wilson, it seemed, was a friend of Joe McCarthy, who had lost his job with the Cubs after five years of prosperous hire, and to avenge his friend McCarthy he was committing a kind of sabotage, deflating his own prestige and earning power and renouncing his chance of a world series purse of at least $4,000.

May I state that this all strikes me as a bit fantastic, not to say thick. Well, yes, even to say thick.

Mr. Hornsby must have a strange nature, but of his proven shortcomings, if any, I know nothing. I only know that this fellow, who always seems well behaved and efficient on the ball field, somehow has developed a following of enthusiastic enemies who fill the air with hate and keep on following close in the hope of being on hand to enjoy the moment when he is finally waived out of the major leagues, limpy and all washed up.

To me he has always been a great ball player, and, in the lack of valid evidence to the contrary, not a bad fellow, either.

N. U. ERRORS HELP OHIO STATE NINE SCORE 4-1 VICTORY

Columbus, O., May 23.—[Special.]—Ohio State defeated Northwestern's baseball team today, 4 to 1. The Buckeyes collected only five hits off Fyfe, but four errors made by the Purple helped Ohio to score. The Wildcats in the first and third innings had the bases loaded with two out, and Lowell Wrigley, Ohio pitcher, fanned the last man. In the first inning it was Busch and in the third it was Seghi.

Pirates Score Four in Seventh.

As previously set down, there were happenings in the first half of the seventh inning. The session started with passes to Comorosky and Suhr, after which Phillips lined to Wilson for the first out. Mosolf batted for Sankey and hit Malone's first pitch for a single to center, Comorosky scoring and Suhr stopping at second. Brame batted for Meine and furnished the second out by fanning.

Excitement, But No Runs.

The exciting, though futile Cub efforts in the ninth began with Hartnett's double. Teachout thereupon rushed out to run for Gabby and Stephenson went to bat for Jurges. Stephenson sent a long fly to P. Waner and Teachout went to third after the catch. He stayed there while Spencer was throwing out Grimm and died when pinch batter Blair rolled out to Thevenow.

A crowd estimated at 9,000 endured wintry weather to see the game.

WEDNESDAY IS DEADLINE FOR BOAT ENTRIES

Chicago-Milwaukee Race Saturday.

Three days remain in which to enter the outboard motorboat marathon from Milwaukee to Chicago which will be sponsored by THE TRIBUNE Memorial day, and the speed races for inboard and outboard motorboats on May 31 at Navy pier. Entries will be accepted, if postmarked no later than Wednesday, May 27.

It is apparent already that the marathon and the speed events will attract the greatest field ever to take part in a regatta in Chicago waters. The committee heads will meet Tuesday afternoon at Tribune Tower, when all plans will be completed.

Scores of entries have been received. However, if you haven't entered, the opportunity still is presented. Clip the blank which appears in all editions of THE TRIBUNE and mail it to the Motorboat Editor, sports department. On receipt of your request, an official entry blank will be mailed you. If your request is received no later than Wednesday an official blank will be sent.

The marathon inaugurates the two day regatta. The Class B outboards will leave Milwaukee Saturday morning at 8:30 central standard time. They will be followed by the Class C and other groups at times to be set by the handicap committee.

Headquarters for the marathon have been established at the Knickerbocker hotel, Milwaukee. The pilots will report for a race meeting Friday night. Instructions and a map of the course will be given each driver at this meeting. No boat will be allowed in the water Saturday morning before 6 o'clock.

Fifteen Races Sunday.

There will be two divisions for the outboards, displacement boats and hydroplanes. Step boats are classified as hydroplanes.

Ten cups, five in each division, are the awards for the marathon contestants. In addition THE TRIBUNE will present the winners with a gold medal inset with a diamond.

Fifteen speed races are scheduled Sunday afternoon. As the motors roar twice around the 2½ mile course north of Navy pier to decide supremacy in each event, thousands are expected to watch from vantage points along the double deck of the pier, and Lake Shore drive. More than a mile of space is available on the pier.

Headquarters for the outboard racers will be established with the motorboat and engine service at door 36, Navy pier. Headquarters for the inboard racers will be with the Navy Pier Marine service, door 102. Derrick charges for taking the outboard boats from the water will be $2, while the storage charge will be 50 cents a day. Regular transportation charges will be made for shipping boats back to their owners.

Sunday's Program.

The list of events on Sunday follows:

- Stock runabouts, not over 50 h. p.
- Stock runabouts, 50 to 100 h. p.

Burning Up Wins Final Aurora Stake

BY FRENCH LANE.

Burning Up, Mrs. Emil Denemark's fast son of Black Toney, won the Looking Forward handicap as the Aurora spring racing season of 20 days ended yesterday.

Racing brilliantly over the six furlong course and coming from behind in the stretch, Burning Up won in runaway fashion, smothering the fast band that trailed him home by five lengths. Celtic Prince rallied and was second, heading Ellice, the early pacemaker, in the last stride by a nose.

As a result of his victory Burning Up, which last winter won the Cuban Derby, became the outstanding horse of the Aurora season. The field he beat included the best horses that have performed in the Fox river valley. Burning Up gave them such a trimming that he left no doubt as to which was the better horse.

Have Record Year.

The Aurora meeting which ended with the running of the Looking Forward handicap was the biggest ever conducted by the Exposition Park Jockey club, both in attendance and in the amount of money wagered through the mutuels. Official figures on the attendance and the amount of money wagered were not complete and could not be made public, General Manager E. F. Carruthers announced last night.

While Ellice, former start sprinter in the Johnson I. Camden stable, made a sizzling pace for the first half mile, Burning Up was never far back. They were wheeling around the turn before Burning Up could get his nose up on even terms with Ellice.

When he gave Ellice her whipping Burning Up did it like a good game horse should do it. He flew out into a lead of a length. Half way down the stretch he was two lengths in front. Then he laughed the rest of the way home, gradually pulling away until the others were not even close.

Nears Record Time.

He had stepped over the six furlongs in 1:12 1-5 which was within a fraction of a second of the track record. Jockey Bobby Jones rode him but a less skillful rider might have won on Burning Up just as handily. In the mutuels Burning Up paid $10.06 to win, $5.22 to place and $3.48 to show. Celtic Prince paid $7.54 to place and $4.72 to show. Ellice was at $3.70 to show.

Maya, the favorite, ran a very bad race and did not look like the Maya which at times has raced so brilliantly for W. R. Coe of New York. She was next to last when the start came and raced there all the way and was beaten something like 18 lengths. Her running mate, No More, was scratched shortly before post time.

A LA CARTE WINS OHIO DERBY WITH SPANISH PLAY 2ND

Cleveland, O., May 23.—(AP)—A crowd of 5,000 at Bainbridge track today saw A La Carte, chestnut son of Transmute and Silvery Shapiro, run through the mud to win the seventh $12,000 added Ohio Derby by a six lengths margin in 1:58.

Spanish Play finished second and Up third. There were nine starters.

A La Carte, owned by the Alton stable of New York City, hardly showed the effects of his long run, a mile and an eighth, but the others almost staggered when they passed the finish line.

The winner surged to the lead at the half mile post with Spanish Play and Lightning Bolt close behind. Later Up moved among the leaders. At the three-quarter pole they increased their speed, but A La Carte widened his margin and ran away from the others.

Holders of tickets on A La Carte were paid $8 to win. Spanish Play, winner of the Louisiana Derby, and Up, winner of the Agua Caliente Derby, had been favorites.

RACING TO OPEN AT WASHINGTON PARK TOMORROW

Don Leon Is Favorite in $5,000 Handicap.

It brings the twenty-third renewal of the famous old American Derby on June 20 and the revival of six other stake races which will have a bearing on this year's turf championships.

The opening stake is the $5,000 added Washington Park handicap at six furlongs. It attracted a notable field in the overnight entries, with horses from the far west, the east, from Kentucky, and from Illinois scheduled to go into action in the sprint.

Don Leon Favored.

Last night Don Leon, a 3 year old, was installed as the favorite. But there was support for Cayuga, Satin Spar, Ladder, Siskin, and a lot of others. Don Leon won his big backing when he tied the track record at Churchill Downs a few days ago by running three-quarters of a mile in 1:11.

Col. Matt J. Winn, president of the American Turf association, here to oversee what's going on at Washington Park and to lend a hand in putting over the American Derby, is very confident that the Derby, first won by Modesty way back in 1884, will be one of the great 3 year old races of the year.

He is already assured that Sweep All, Mate, Spanish Play, B'ar Hunter, Pittsburgher, Scotland's Glory, Insco, Boys Howdy, and a lot of other leaders in the division will fill the American Derby engagement. And he is hopeful that Twenty Grand will win the Belmont stakes on June 13 so easily that Mrs. Helen Hay Whitney will send that colt west to contest for the $50,000 prize offered at Washington Park.

2,000 Horses Available.

Some 2,000 horses are available for the Washington Park racing. About 1,200 of them are quartered on the grounds at the Homewood course. The other 800 are at Lincoln Fields and will be vanned to Washington Park to fill their engagements. Thirty-nine carloads of horses arrived yesterday from the Churchill Downs track in Kentucky. The big shipment came in four special trains. Most of these horses were unloaded at Washington Park. Such noted trainers as Roscoe Goose, Clyde Van Dusen, Dan Stewart, Dan Moody, John Partridge, Jake Lowenstein, Kay Spence, J. M. Goode, L. Jones, A. Baker, D. R. Riddle, F. P. Letellier, Bub May, William Hurley, Jerome Respass, John Ward, and Chappie Sims were represented in the big shipment.

It is expected that large fields will go to the post in nearly every race run at Washington Park this season because of the large number of horses here that are ready for action.

IRISH FOOTBALL CHAMPIONS FACE CHICAGO TODAY

Sheehy Leads Kerry Team to Soldiers' Field.

The All-Ireland football team from Kerry, winner of the championship of Ireland for four consecutive years, will carry its battle for American honors to Soldiers' field at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the second game since its arrival in the United States.

The Gaelic squad will be opposed by a selected team of players from six Irish clubs in Chicago. Several members of the Chicago team played on an All-Ireland team in Dublin three years ago.

It will be the second appearance in Chicago for six members of the Irish team. They were here three years ago while on a middle western tour when they faced a Chicago team at Sox park.

Sheehy Leads Irish.

Among the players on the team, which is rated as the greatest in Irish football history, is Capt. John Joe Sheehy, who was the outstanding performer in his team's victory over a New York team last Sunday before 60,000 at Yankee stadium.

Capt. Sheehy, Joe Walsh, Con Brosnan, and J. Landers, Danny Ryan and Russell played in America three years ago. Ryan's three point kicks gave his squad an early lead in last week's game against New York.

In Chicago's lineup will be P. O'Donnell and Colleran, two of the best Gaelic football players in Chicago. Heafy and O'Grady, center half backs, also will be on the Chicago team.

What It's All About.

The playing pitch, according to rules governing Gaelic football, is 160 yards long by 80 yards wide. A team consists of one goal keeper, six backs, two midfield men and six forwards. The goal posts are 21 feet wide with a cross bar eight feet high.

In scoring points, when the ball is kicked between the uprights and below the cross mar, the kick will count as three points. When the ball is kicked between the goal posts and over the cross bar, one point.

A hurling game will be played preliminary to the football battle. Exhibition drills by the Woodlawn post of the American Legion, 132d infantry and the drum and bugle corps of Boy Scout troop No. 12 also will be staged.

The lineup:

FOUR FIGHTERS NEW TO CHICAGO ON STADIUM CARD

They're Ramey, Diebolt, Jones, and Jadick.

Boxing in Chicago will be enlivened by young blood tomorrow night when four new faces are paraded in the ring at the Chicago Stadium.

Three of the newcomers have gained considerable reputation in their chosen profession in other parts of the country. These men are Wesley Ramey, Grand Rapids lightweight; Johnny Jadick, Philadelphia knockout specialist, and Gorilla Jones, Negro middleweight.

The fourth stranger on the evening's card is Tony Diebolt, a muscular chap, who held the heavyweight championship of the U. S. navy for [illegible] years before he turned professional. Diebolt will meet Charlie Retzlaff, the Duluth heavyweight, in one of the eight round supporting numbers.

Jones Meets Lawless.

Jones meets Bucky Lawless, Auburn, N. Y., welterweight who has defeated the last three 147 pound champions in non-title bouts.

Jones' chief claim to fame is one of the best right crosses in the business. With it he knocked out Lawless in a previous meeting and beat Al [illegible], Joe Zelinsky, and Jack McVey. His style makes him one of the most pleasing fighters in the middleweight division. He keeps coming in, throwing punches and forcing the roughing. This fight will be ten rounds and is part of a double windup, the other half of which features Ray Miller and Danny Delmont, two lightweight contenders.

Ramey is attached to the Sammy Mandell stable and in his fights thus far he has established his left as one of the best among the little fellows. In addition he is a master of the right [illegible]

KANSAS SCORES 63½ POINTS TO WIN BIG SIX MEET

Nebraska Runs Second, Iowa State Third.

Lincoln, Neb., May 23.—(AP)—Three conference records were broken here this afternoon as the University of Kansas successfully defended its Big Six track and field championship in the third annual meet. Kansas scored 63½ points. Nebraska was second with 57 points, Iowa State third with 39½, Oklahoma fourth with 37½, Kansas Aggies fifth with 20½, and Missouri last with 7 points.

New records were established in the high jump, pole vault, and mile run. The best previous marks also were surpassed in the 220 yard low hurdles and in the broad jump, but were not allowed because of a strong favorable wind.

Klaner Wins Century Dash.

Joe Klaner of Kansas won the 100 yard sprint in 9 5-10 seconds. The finish was so close that officials went into a huddle to decide that Jerry Lee of Nebraska placed second, just a nose ahead of Ralph Sickle, a Jayhawker.

Bob Hager of Iowa State equaled his conference record in the 120 yard high hurdles event by topping the barriers in 14 5-10 seconds. He was pressed by Flick of Kansas, the second place winner.

Rhea Wins Shot Put.

Hugh Rhea's 49 foot heave in the shot put in the preliminaries yesterday was good enough to win the event, in which Nebraska picked up ten points. Summaries:

The meet was decided in the final event, the broad jump, in which the Oklahoma Aggies knocked Grinnell out of a possible victory by taking first and second places while Grinnell was third. Wisconsin Wins Big 10 Track Title; Illinois 2d; Michigan 3d to upset his belief that the Badgers would triumph.

Sammy Behr was the only Badger who did not produce to estimated strength. And Behr only lost a point, finishing second to Clarence Munn of Minnesota in the shot put. That defeat, however, was heartbreaking to the Wisconsin senior. In three years, Behr had won three indoor and two outdoor shot put championships. Three times he had broken the conference record, last year setting the mark, which, while Munn could not touch it yesterday, also was an impossibility for himself. Munn won with a toss of 48 feet 8½ inches, with Behr four inches behind.

Wisconsin won because of its strength in the field events. Michigan predominated the track events while Illinois was the best balanced team in the field.

Wisconsin scored in only four of the nine track races, but it counted in six of the seven field events. The score in these was 29 points. Except the mile relay, in which Wisconsin finished fifth, the Badgers were above average in the races in which they did place. Kirk, second, and Goldsworthy, fifth, accounted for five points in the mile run, won by Rodney Leas of Indiana in the extraordinary time of 4 minutes 18.6 seconds. Homer Davidson of Tom Jones' team added four more points in the quarter mile with a second place. George Wright's victory, with Cortwright's two points for fourth, totaled seven points in the two mile run.

In this race, Perry Austin, Michigan's indoor two mile champion, failed to place. Austin's shutout, Pottle's failure in the pole vault [he secured 2-6 of a point for a triple tie for fifth], and Glading's unfortunate accident in the quarter mile, when he fell on the back stretch, comprised a string of bad luck which the Wolverines could not overcome.

Letts Wins Half Mile.

Tom Warne, defeated last year by Verne McDermont of Illinois in the pole vault, came back yesterday to redeem himself. He cleared 13 feet 9 11-16 inches, while McDermont shared second place with Beecher of Indiana, a sophomore, at 13 feet 6 inches.

Weldon and Gordon, as usual, presented Iowa with two first places. Gordon jumped 24 feet 1½ inches, while Weldon threw the javelin 191 feet 4½ inches.

Ott Hills of Illinois whipped Frisch of Wisconsin by nearly five feet to win the discus championship. Hills had a throw of 153 feet 2 1-3 inches.

Dale Letts, Chicago's premier half miler, who elected this race in preference to competing in both the mile and half in order to try for the 15 year old conference record, failed. He ran the 880 yards in 1 minute 54.4 seconds, more than a second over Scott's mark in 1916. Summaries:

ONE MILE RUN—Won by Leas, Indiana; Kirk, Wisconsin, second; Woolsey, Illinois, third; Wolfe, Michigan, fourth; Goldsworthy, Wisconsin, fifth. Time—4:18.6.

440 YARD RUN—Won by Russell, Michigan; Davidson, Wisconsin, second; Hayne, Northwestern, third; Lagerquist, Iowa, fourth; McAuliffe, Northwestern, fifth. Time—:48.7.

120 YARD HIGH HURDLES—Won by Sentman, Illinois; Keller, Ohio State, second; Hatfield, Indiana, third; Egleston, Michigan, fourth; Scheifley, Minnesota, fifth. Time, :14.4. [New conference record; old mark :14.6 set by Guthrie of Ohio State in 1925. Equals world record of :14.4 held by Thompson of Dartmouth since 1920 and tied in 1929 by Wennstrom of Sweden. Steven Anderson of Washington has the same time, but used starting blocks.]

SHOT PUT—Won by Munn, Minnesota, 48 feet 8½ inches; Behr, Wisconsin, second, 48 feet 4½ inches; Kabat, Wisconsin, third, 43 feet 5⅝ inches; Purma, Illinois, fourth, 43 feet 2¾ inches; Biddinger, Indiana, fifth, 43 feet 2¼ inches.

YOU— are the final Judge!

WHILE we are waiting for the judges to pick the winners in the La Palina $10,000 Prize Slogan Contest—it occurs to us that in a contest far bigger and more important than this one, you, Mr. Smoker, are the final judge. We mean the contest that takes place every time you step up to a cigar counter and ask for a cigar.

Many advertised brands come to your mind. Many big claims—many extravagant statements. But, in the final analysis, you pick the cigar—you smoke the cigar—and you're the one that is pleased or disappointed.

We would like you to judge La Palina in competition with all the rest. Find out for yourself how cool, mild, mellow and fragrant it is. Find out why the Java-Wrapped La Palina has become America's largest selling high-grade cigar.

HOLIDAY SCORES 71 NET TO LEAD AT MIDLOTHIAN

Fast Greens Cause Derby Contestants Grief.

W. J. Holliday of the home club yesterday led the first half of the Midlothian Derby, annual classic of the historic course. Holiday shot 78—7—71 to finish one stroke ahead of Joe Creevy's 81—9—72.

There was a large number of out of town players but none of them came close to the prizes offered for the first eighteen holes. Art Sweet of Ridgemoor finished with low gross, 36—38—74.

The contestants experienced most of their difficulties on the greens, where three putts were common due to the fast condition. C. L. Deliplane missed four short ones, missing a chance to come in with low gross, and Russell Martin reported three "blows" that ran his total to 79.

The second eighteen will be played today. The low net winner for the 36 holes will be crowned Derby champion. Scores:

Michigan Cuts Cost of Auto Vacationing

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 23.—The thousands of Chicagoans who will spend holidays, week-ends, and vacations in western Michigan this summer will find that the cost of outdoor recreation has dipped with other living expenses, according to Hugh J. Gray, secretary manager of the Michigan Tourist and Resort association.

Automobile touring and motor transportation around the southern end of Lake Michigan is cheaper, of course, as a result of the cuts in gasoline, tires, and car prices. Furthermore, Mr. Gray said, hotel and cabin rates have been shaved, and meals are lower.

Fishing and golfing equipment are cheaper, Mr. Gray said, with the drop particularly noticeable in buying special clothing for the sports. The fees on one string of links are offering a saving of twenty per cent for ten day tickets.

Tourists Spent $300,000,000.

This price reduction is Michigan's bid for continued prosperity of an industry second in importance only to the manufacture of automobiles. Tourists brought $300,000,000 to the state in 1930 and Mr. Gray said that reservations and inquiries indicate a fifteen per cent increase for 1931.

THE TRIBUNE road car swung up the east coast of Lake Michigan last week into this vacation land of 3,000 small lakes, hundreds of golf courses, and miles of pretty drives through blooming orchards and over wooded hills with frequent views of blue water. Summer cottages, many of them owned by Chicagoans, were being opened for the season.

Route Leaving Chicago.

The route leaves the loop over the outer drive to Jackson park. For the shortest distance, follow the U. S. 12 markers on southward, through the industrial districts of South Chicago and northern Indiana and on to the Dunes highway. By adding 10 or 12 miles to the trip, a less congested route from Jackson park is over Stony Island avenue to 93d street, to Colfax avenue, to 95th street, to Torrence avenue, to the Ridge road, and thence following Ind. 6 to Westville, where Ind. 43 can be taken north to U. S. 12 at Michigan City.

North of Michigan City, near the Michigan-Indiana line, there is a short detour where the forty foot Dunes relief road is under construction. At New Buffalo, Mich., about 5 miles north of the state line, the U. S. 12 markers are on a new forty foot pavement with graceful curves through wooded sand dunes. The road narrows to two lanes farther north, but it's still a high speed highway with evidence at curves of how the state has improved alignment in the last few years.

Ninety-two Miles to St. Joe.

Approaching St. Joseph and its twin city, Benton Harbor, there is another stretch of several miles of four lane pavement through an arch of old trees in fresh leaf. On the left of the road are attractive homes on the lake front.

The trip mileage of THE TRIBUNE car showed 92 miles from the Tribune Tower to the mouth of the St. Joseph river, which was explored in 1669 by Father Marquette and fortified ten years later by Sieur de la Salle.

U. S. 12 leaves the coast here and goes northeast through Watervliet, at Paw Paw lake, where U. S. 31 is picked up for the trip on northward through South Haven, 124 miles from Chicago. A new road, a scenic cutoff, is being built by Michigan through the lake front dunes from St. Joseph to South Haven.

The old road, including bumpy bituminous pavement, is being improved for this year's tourist travel. The addition of tar and screened gravel is widening the traffic lanes, smoothing the surface, and reducing the height of the crown.

Second Growth Timber.

There are hills where a heavy second growth of trees of many varieties has covered the stumps left eighty years ago when the virgin forests were destroyed by short sighted lumbermen. The woods that brought a boom to this country from 1840 to 1860 are being replaced with woods that contribute to the prosperity of a great new industry, the tourist trade.

North of South Haven, U. S. 12 is in the dunes country, near the shores of Lake Michigan, passing through Saugatuck, with its scenic bay in the hills, to Holland, about 157 miles from Chicago. The tulips are abloom in this picturesque city of 15,000 population on Black lake which retains the Netherlands atmosphere brought to America in 1847 by Dominie Albertus C. Van Raalte and his followers, seeking a religious freedom they could not enjoy in Europe.

On to the North.

Grand Haven and Muskegon, also coastal resorts well populated in the summer with Chicago vacationists, are a little farther north on U. S. 31, Grand Haven being 181 miles from the loop and Muskegon 194.

Grand Rapids, known for its furniture factories and with a new automobile plant, is on the Grand river, about 30 miles from Lake Michigan. It might be called the industrial capital of this part of Michigan, having a population of 180,000.

POLICE MANNERS.

Chicago, May 20.—While traffic was halted at Michigan avenue and Van Buren street we noticed that the car ahead of us had no state license on it (and we later discovered that it had no city license).

Being directly alongside of the traffic policeman, my husband very politely asked, "Officer, don't they need licenses to drive in this city?" The policeman very roughly answered, "G'wan, mind your own business, mind your own business."

SPECIAL PARKING PRIVILEGES.

Chicago, May 15.—Will you be good enough to advise me why the special parking privileges are extended on Dearborn street south of Harrison to the various employés of the so-called prohibition department, special agents of the department of justice, employés of the secretary of state's office, et al.? No doubt it cannot be on account of the heavy taxes these various individuals pay our city, as a number are not even residents of the city.

However, the various city traffic officers make it a point to see that these parties have space reserved for them and refuse to allow the ordinary automobile owner to park in these spaces.

A special officer is detailed on the Federal street side of the Transportation building for the apparent purpose of taking care of the overflow from the Dearborn street side of the building.

It is also interesting to note that not far south on these streets "no parking signs" have been erected in front and rear of a building occupied by a gambling outfit. If you park in front of this building you get a ticket; if you park in the rear your car will be stripped. A ride down Dearborn street to Polk, to Federal, to Harrison will or should be a revelation and show what little consideration is given to the ordinary citizen and taxpayer.

Why not give every one a square deal?

BRONOWICZ AND LONDOS TO TRADE HOLDS ON FRIDAY

Heavyweight wrestling will occupy the spotlight next Friday night when Promoter Doc Krone presents twelve of the current crop of wrestlers at the Coliseum.

Featuring the parade is Jimmy Londos. Londos, making his seventh start of the season in Chicago, will meet Frank Bronowicz. In ten matches the latter has won nine and drew in the other, while Londos has won all six in which he has engaged. Thus one or the other will see his winning streak end.

Karl Pojello, Chicago Lithuanian, will meet Don De Long in another bout. Pojello has won every start here with the exception of one against Bronowicz, which ended in a draw.

1,097 GOLFERS TO TRY FOR PLACES IN NATIONAL OPEN

177 to Play in Chicago District Trials.

New York, May 23.—(AP)—Fifty-three players, including 31 who finished high in last year's event and ten members of the British Ryder cup team, will be exempt from qualifying for the national open golf tournament scheduled to start July 2 at the Inverness club at Toledo, O.

The announcement was made today by Robert M. A total of 1,097 contestants will play for 97 places, bringing the championship field to 150.

Included in the list of Americans automatically eligible to compete at Toledo is Robert Tyre Jones Jr., the champion, who will not defend his title. Craig Wood, professional, and John Goodman, amateur, also were eligible without qualifying, but did not file entries.

GOLF STROKES · RIGHT & WRONG

by Jock Hutchison

RIGHT.

Halfway through the back swing of a wood shot the left arm is straight, the wrists are bending, the left knee is breaking toward the right foot, the heel is ascending and the whole body is pivoting easily. The hands will continue to rise until just above the right shoulder and the club will then be approximately horizontal.

WRONG.

The beginner has bent his left arm at the elbow and has kept his wrists so rigid that it will be impossible for him to find the horizontal position which his club should assume when it reaches the top of the swing. His left heel has not left the ground, making it impossible for him to pivot smoothly.

The difference is—we can PROVE it!

Words don't care who uses them. They will just as readily write fiction about one motor car as facts about another

For that reason we can't say any more about the De Soto Eight than can be said about any other car.

But we can prove a lot more—and we will if you will give us a chance. All we ask is that you make a fair comparison of the De Soto Eight against any car of comparable price. That's our challenge—not a duel of adjectives but a test of quality.

We invite comparison of the performance of De Soto's 77-horsepower engine—of hill-climbing ability—of agility in traffic—of effortless speed on the highway.

We invite comparison of De Soto's all-steel body for safety, permanent silence and stamina.

We invite comparison of De Soto's Chrysler-designed internal weatherproof hydraulic brakes—always self-equalizing; positive and "soft" in action.

We invite comparison of De Soto's riding qualities—the result of long, flexible springs controlled by four hydraulic shock absorbers.

We invite comparison of De Soto's slender-profile radiator; long, sweeping lines; French-pleated Bedford Cord upholstery; tasteful and beautiful interior fittings.

In short, we invite comparison of the all-around quality offered by De Soto against what others are offering for a comparable price—and of the price De Soto charges for this quality against what you have to pay to get something even approximately as good in other cars

Come in today and give us a chance to prove what others can merely claim.

SEE SHORT TERM DEMAND SIGN OF CONFIDENCE

Investors Believe Upturn Near.

BY O. A. MATHER.

Never before in the memory of Chicago bankers has there been such a vast amount of money seeking short term investment and never before have interest rates on such investments been as low.

In the present situation of quietude in business and industry, money is almost literally going begging. The great corporations, with their great surpluses accumulated during prosperous years, and individuals of varying degrees of wealth are willing to take almost any interest rates in order to employ their funds.

It is an anomaly that the country is overflowing with money and yet is going through a depression. But it is significant that the chief demand for investment is in short term securities of the highest grade, with a lesser demand for long term gilt edge bonds. This bespeaks a belief of corporation heads that a recovery in business is not too far off and that then they may obtain a larger return for their excess funds. They are reluctant to tie them up at low rates in long term securities. Furthermore, the demand of individual investors for prime investments is in contrast to the mania for speculation in less worthy securities that prevailed before the stock market crash in 1929 and led up to it.

Most Notable Examples.

The current prices and interest rates on the short term obligations of the United States are one of the most notable examples of the easy money situation. The 1⅛ per cent treasury certificates of indebtedness, which are due Sept. 15 next, sold yesterday at 100 1-32, which affords a yield of only [illegible] of 1 per cent. These certificates are exempt from taxation to corporation purchasers and therefore the yield is equivalent to a return of [illegible] of 1 per cent on taxable securities.

The 1½ per cent treasury certificates, which are due Dec. 15 next, sold yesterday at 100 17-32, affording a yield of 33-100 of 1 per cent, which is equivalent to 1.09 per cent on taxable securities. The 2 per cent treasury certificates, due March 15, 1932, sold at 100 27-32, affording a yield of [illegible] of 1 per cent, which is equivalent to 1.22 per cent on taxable securities. The 3⅝ per cent treasury certificates, due Sept. 15 next, sold at 100 17-32, affording a yield of 64-100 of 1 per cent, or the equivalent of [illegible] of 1 per cent on taxable securities.

Naturally, the longer term obligations of the United States government afford a larger return, but on them, too, the interest rate is unusually low. The Fourth Liberty 4¼ per cent bonds are selling around 105, affording a yield of 2.10 per cent to the optional date in 1933 when they may be retired, although the government is not obliged to redeem them until 1938. The yield is equivalent to 2.68 per cent on taxable securities. The 3⅜ per cent treasury bonds are selling at 100 6-32, affording a yield of 3 per cent to the optional date of retirement in 1941, although they do not mature until 1943.

Other Rates Are Low.

Current interest rates also are correspondingly low on other forms of short term investment. For several weeks the prevalent rate in the New York call money market has been 1½ per cent. As the banks make a service charge of one-half of 1 per cent for placing call loans and as interest received on such loans is taxable, the yield to the lender is less than 1 per cent.

Bankers' acceptances maturing from 30 to 90 days may be purchased to yield seven-eighths of 1 per cent, while those bills of 120 days maturity yield 1 per cent and bills of 150 to 180 days maturity yield 1¼ per cent, although they are scarce. Prime commercial paper of three to nine months maturity may be bought to yield 2¼ to 2½ per cent.

In view of the current low yields on high grade short term investments, New York and Chicago banks have reduced interest allowed to commercial depositors to the lowest level in history. Demand deposits receive one-half of 1 per cent, while time deposits are allowed 1 per cent, although the banks are chary about taking large deposits. No change has been made in the 3 per cent interest allowed on savings deposits, but the banks are not accepting large deposits at that rate.

CUT THRIFT RATES

New York, May 23.—(AP)—Dozens of commercial banks have reduced interest rates on thrift deposits to 2 per cent, the lowest figure in years, and the president of one of the largest savings banks in New York expects many savings banks in this state and elsewhere to cut the rate to as low as 3 per cent within the next few months. On April 1 interest rates paid by savings banks in New York state generally were at 4 per cent.

The informal committee of bankers regulating interest paid on foreign deposits has reduced the rate on demand deposits from 1 to ½ of 1 per cent. The same committee on May 15 reduced the rate on foreign time deposits from 2 to 1½ per cent. The new demand rate is the same as that paid on domestic demand deposits by member banks of the New York clearing house, which was established on May 19.

Officers of prominent mortgage companies said today that investors, discouraged by the low return being paid by commercial banks on deposits, are displaying revived interest in guaranteed mortgages and certificates. Several reported that the demand exceeds the supply and predicted that the mortgage market may come down by mid-summer to 4½ per cent. They said the prevailing rate is from 5½

Trucks Owned by Shippers Rail Problem

BY SCRUTATOR.

In their struggle with motor trucks for freight business the railroads are handicapped by notknowing just where to train their guns. The contest is not between two types of common carriers but rather between a common carrier and an opponent that is a small part common carrier and a large part something else.

Under present conditions regulation of trucks by the interstate commerce commission would fail to include that part of truck transportation which is cutting most heavily into railroad tonnage.

A survey by the United States bureau of public roads in eleven western states reveals that only 5⅙ per cent of the 180,000 trucks surveyed were common carriers. More than 85 per cent were privately owned and 8.7 per cent were contract operated.

The shipper owned truck is responsible for the heaviest drain on railroad tonnage. And transportation of this variety is about as easy to regulate as the old horse and wagon.

American Telephone and Telegraph company, for instance, has a fleet of 16,000 trucks. Standard Oil of New Jersey has 11,000; Borden company, 10,000; National Dairy Products company, 6,700; Commonwealth and Southern corporation, 3,974. These are only a few samples.

Bus Drivers Paid Less.

Motor bus and truck transportation lines are comparatively free from the handicaps imposed upon railroads by labor laws and wage agreements with unions.

This was emphasized by J. B. Mordecai, traffic manager of the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac railroad, in a letter to the interstate commerce commission March 26, 1931, in which he compared wages paid by his railroad with those of the Greyhound Lines, operating buses in competition with the railroad between Washington, D. C., and Richmond, Va.

His figures showed that the hourly wages of the passenger crew were: engineer, $1.83; fireman, $1,43; conductor, $1.51; baggageman, $1.15; and brakeman, $1.08. The bus driver, said Mr. Mordecai, received 72 cents per hour. He also stated that the members of the train crew receive time and a half for overtime, whereas the bus driver received no additional compensation for overtime.

Last fall various railroad unions took up this subject of inequality of wages and conditions of labor. At its convention in St. Louis in October the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employés resolved that: "The principles underlying railway labor laws should be extended to cover the employés of motor truck and motor coach operators."

Differ on Unionization.

Practically all of the employés in railway train service are unionized. Only a small minority of bus and truck drivers on lines competing with the railways are union men.

Railroad executives and owners are not of one mind as to the extent to which motor transportation lines should be unionized. Some side with the railroad unions. Others whose companies own or operate feeder bus lines believe that profitable operation of bus or truck transportation in conjunction with the railroads depends largely upon greater freedom from restrictions and lower wages than those applying to railroad operation.

PURCHASE 300,000 COMMON SHARES OF HOLDING FIRM

Cleveland, O., May 23.—(AP)—William G. Mather, Cleveland capitalist, and his associates have acquired a block of 300,000 shares of Continental Shares, Inc., common stock for $1,500,000. The purchase, confirmed by Mather late yesterday, was made from Otis & Co., in which Cyrus S. Eaton is a partner. There are 2,559,180 Continental shares outstanding.

Continental Shares has extensive holdings in utilities, rubber and steel companies, among them the Youngstown Sheet and Tube, Republic Steel corporation, Inland Steel company, and the Wheeling Steel corporation.

Cyrus S. Eaton, Otis & Co., and Continental Shares, Inc., filed answers here today asking dismissal of several suits which charged they had engineered stock transactions unprofitable to Continental and which asked restitution. Eaton denied that he had directed Continental's acceptance of the deal, and his denial was echoed in the answer by Otis & Co. Otis & Co. further said, concerning one action involving approximately $3,000,000, that Continental paid only "what was due and owing" and suffered no loss.

Estimates 6 Mos. Profit of Tank Car Corp. at $3 Share

Lester N. Selig, president of the General American Tank Car corporation, said yesterday that a conservative estimate places earnings of the company for the first six months of the year in excess of $3 a share. "First quarter earnings were equivalent to $1.47 a share," he said. "We are doing better this quarter and confidently expect that the third quarter will make a better showing than either of the preceding periods."

SHARP BREAK IN GRAINS; JULY WHEAT 58 3-8C

Favorable Weather Influences Drop.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Liquidation in volume was on in the wheat and corn markets yesterday as the result of more favorable weather conditions and July wheat and all deliveries of corn with the exception of the May sold at a new low for the season. July wheat touched 58⅜c, or 1⅞c under Friday's finish, and went into new ground for the first time in three months. There was a noticeable lack of support except such as came from holders of daily and weekly bids. Wheat finished 1⅛@1⅝c lower with July and September, 58½@58⅝c, and December, 62@62⅛c. Old May was off ⅛c at 82@82⅛c.

Despite the sharp break in the leading grains net losses for the week were not large, the deferred deliveries of wheat being off 1¼@2c, while May was ⅛c lower. Corn lost 1⅛@2⅛c. May oats were ⅞c higher and other futures ⅛@⅝c lower, while rye was ⅛@⅝c lower. Lard was 42½@45c and bellies 60@67½c lower, all deliveries selling at a new low for the season.

Showers for Spring Wheat.

Dry weather reports from the American and Canadian northwest attracted little attention during the day as the forecast was for showers over the week-end this side of the international line, and a little precipitation was also expected in the prairie provinces, while the weekly forecast indicated a shower period again at the end of the week in the American northwest with temperatures somewhat above normal.

Winnipeg wheat market was affected by the prospects of a change in the weather conditions and there was also some selling attributed to longs. Final trades there were at net losses of 2c, with July closing at 59⅛c. The Canadian market will be closed Monday, as will Liverpool, and there was more or less evening up for the holiday in both markets. Buenos Aires was ⅞@1⅝c lower.

Little was heard regarding export business during the day, European markets generally having a holiday, and there was little in the news from abroad that attracted attention. An official Russian estimate claimed 37,000,000 acres of spring wheat had been seeded to May 15, compared with 35,500,000 acres during the same period last year.

Crop comments from the winter wheat belt were generally favorable and no damage of consequence from frost was indicated. Cromwell wired Lamson Bros. from Hays, Kas., he found no evidence of frost damage there. Donovan found some thin fields in the Dodge City territory.

Longs Sell Corn Futures.

Corn market showed little disposition to rally, and according to pit gossip there was selling attributed to a leading local professional. Prices dropped 1⅛@1⅝c from Fridays finish to a low of 55⅛c on July with the close 1⅛@1⅝c lower, with May 55⅜c, July 55¼@55⅜c, September 53¼@53⅝c, and December 47¼@47⅜c. Higher temperatures over the corn belt were regarded as favorable for the new crop, and the December showed the most decline during the day, with many of Friday's buyers on the selling side.

An increase of 2 per cent in the Nebraska corn acreage is suggested by the Nebraska mid-month crop report, and according to official figures the state does not have the reserve moisture supply with which it started the growing season a year ago. Rainfall since April 1 has been well below normal. Shipping demand was again slow and the cash basis ¼@⅝c lower.

Commission houses were fair buyers of oats and with a lack of pressure the market failed to reflect the weakness in other grains, although closing ⅛@⅝c lower. May finished at 28c, July 27¼@27⅜c, September, 26⅝c, and December 29¼c. Texas was reported to have offered new oats at 32c in sacks, delivered Vicksburg, Miss., for first half June shipment.

Rye showed considerable resistance to pressure and failed to fully reflect the weakness in wheat, closing ⅞@1c lower, with July 38⅛c and September 38c. There was no trading in the May or December.

ATTRACTIVE YIELDS BRING IMPROVEMENT IN CITY'S BANK STOCKS

After breaking sharply to new low prices last week Chicago bank stocks firmed up due to the attractive yields afforded. Continental Illinois Bank and Trust broke 37 points to low transactions of 280, closing slightly higher 282 bid, 285 asked. National Bank of Republic was held steady at 42½ bid, 43½ asked. Foreman-State National lost 34 points, last sales being recorded at 280.

First National, after early sales at 405, sold down to low transactions at 392. It improved slightly during the late trading, being 394 bid, 396 asked, off 12. Northern Trust sales ranged between 414 and 418. Central Trust Company of Illinois lost some 20 points, establishing a new low at 160, a portion of which was regained, closing 165 bid, 170 asked.

Terminal National was unchanged at 33 bid, 35 asked. There were few reported trades in Chicago Bank of Commerce between 44 and 46. Harris Trust and Savings continued in demand at 450 bid. Union Bank of Chicago lost 2 points at 138 bid, 143 asked. Offerings of Peoples Trust and Savings at 310 failed to attract buyers at better than 300.

The miscellaneous group was featured by a weakness in Chicago Daily News common and preferred being offered at 11 and 75, respectively.

GREAT NORTHERN INCOME IS DOWN ABOUT $7,500,000

New York, May 23.—(AP)—The pamphlet report of the Great Northern Railway company, released today, showed a decline in 1930 of around $7,500,000 in net income as compared with the previous year.

RALPH BUDD.

Ralph Budd, president, said in his report to stockholders that the smaller volume of traffic handled reflected the decline in all lines of business rather than a gain on the part of competitors by highway, waterway, pipe line, and airway last year as compared with 1929.

"The loss of passenger traffic," he said, "is growing more serious because of the impossibility of reducing passenger train miles in an amount to correspond with the declining travel by train. The loss of less than carload freight is also a serious matter and one for which a satisfactory solution has not been found. Private automobiles and private and contract trucks account for more than 95 per cent of the traffic handled on the highways and these types of vehicles are probably beyond the power of regulation as to rates and service. Elimination of the common carrier highway vehicles, therefore, wolud not substantially increase the railway's net earnings."

For the first four months this year, he said, the decline in revenue compared with the like months of 1930 was 16.2 per cent.

Northwestern Ry. Reports Gain in Freight Traffic

The Chicago and North Western's carloadings for the first twenty-one days of May showed a gain of 2,068 over the same period in April. Total loadings for the twenty-one days were 89,467, compared with 87,399 for the corresponding period of last month.

During the first twenty-one days of May the St. Paul handled 90,094 cars of revenue freight, against 108,739 in the same period of 1930.

DECIDE TO CUT WHEAT ACREAGE WHERE POSSIBLE

London Conference Is Adjourned.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 23.—The conference of wheat exporting countries adjourned here today after resolving to cut wheat acreage "where possible," and providing for the appointment of a committee to continue studying the wheat problem and prepare for another meeting of the exporting nations.

The principal task of the committee is the formation of a clearing house for wheat data, which is to be available to all exporting countries, to aid in the intelligent handling of their respective grain crops.

As for existing surpluses, nothing concrete was done, since the conference regarded actual limitation by international agreement impossible. But dumping, as such, will cease in all countries, including the United States, Russia having promised to adhere to a system of exporting in orderly fashion. This does not mean a decrease in exports, but the conference thinks that refraining from wholesale dumping will alleviate the worst aspects of the problem.

Will Issue Information.

G. Howard Ferguson, the Canadian high commissioner and president of the conference, told the press that something may yet be done to solve the immediate problem, since the clearing house, it is expected, will be functioning in time to issue reliable information on the July wheat crop, with which the countries can govern their exports.

The delegates of the eleven countries represented were unanimous for the adoption of the resolution. Mr. Ferguson said that all showed a desire to coöperate, and that a principle of international coöperation has been established with regard to the wheat problem. There was no friction or discord throughout the entire conference, Mr. Ferguson said, and nobody was disappointed over the results.

The resolution listed four causes in the wheat crisis: The effects from economic depression, more wheat has been grown than could be sold at a profit, the absence of adequate information of the movements and requirements in certain countries and the quantities of wheat available for export, and the uncertain state of the market.

The conference believes that a contribution was made in solving the problem through an understanding between the countries.

To Explore Uses of Wheat.

It considers, where possible, that the reduction in area sown should be taken in whatever way each country considers it most effective and practical. There should be a careful exploration of all avenues for the greater utilization of wheat.

The committee established consists of one delegate from each state. The purpose is twofold: To submit a definite proposal for a clearing house to be operated under the supervision of the exporting countries and for information on unloading stocks from all importing points and for statistics on all areas sown and data on the crop prospects. The committee will also look into the prospects of increasing wheat consumption.

The committee is charged with developing the contacts made at the conference and to draft an agenda for a further meeting.

Asked if the Agricultural institute at Rome might be used as a clearing house, Mr. Ferguson said the conferees wanted an institution concerned only in wheat. Neither the Rome institute nor the league of nations facilities would be employed, he said, but both had been asked to coöperate in putting the organization on its feet.

Son Succeeds Father as Eckhart Milling Co. Head

At a special meeting of the stockholders of the B. A. Eckhart Milling company, Percy B. Eckhart was elected president of the B. A. Eckhart Milling company, the office held by his father until his death on May 11, 1931. Mr. Eckhart is executor of the will of Mr. B. A. Eckhart and is a member of the firm of West & Eckhart, prominent attorneys in Chicago.

E. A. Weaver, who has been in active charge of the business as general manager was elected vice president. Carlos K. Eckhart, another son, was elected treasurer, and Frank A. Kucera Jr., who started with the company in his boyhood days, was reëlected secretary.

New Offerings Are Heaviest in Six Weeks

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 23.—New bond financing this week reached $93,235,000, the heaviest in six weeks. Last week's total was $60,829,000, including the $52,000,000 New York City issue, and during the corresponding week last year $131,083,000 of new bonds were brought out. One of the features this week was the resumption of corporation financing, with new utility offerings aggregating $53,000,000.

The utility financing comprised six issues, the largest of which were $13,000,000 Consolidated Gas Electric Light and Power company of Baltimore 4s, due 1981, and $16,000,000 Puget Sound Power and Light company 4½s, due 1950. All of the six issues were well received, with the books on the Consolidated Gas loan being closed in a few hours.

Sold Quickly.

In addition to the bond financing, an issue of 300,000 shares of Public Service Electric and Gas company $5 dividend preferred stock was marketed at a price of $103.50 a share and quickly sold.

The balance of the new financing this week was made up of state and municipal floatations aggregating $40,235,000. The bulk of this financing was accounted for by two issues, viz., $19,337,000 City of Detroit, Mich., 4s and 4½s, due 1932 to 1961, priced to yield 2.10 to 4.15 per cent, and $10,187,000 City of Newark, N. J., 4 per cent bonds, due 1932 to 1970, priced to net 1.90 to 3.65 per cent. These two issues moved out readily, as did most of the smaller offerings.

Offerings by Groups.

The new offerings of bonds, by groups, for this and last week, follow:

	This week.	Last week.
Public Utility	$53,000,000	$ 2,500,000
State & Municipal	40,235,000	58,329,000
Total	$93,235,000	$60,829,000

The classifications of new bond offerings continue to provide an index of the trend of the general bond market. Municipal bonds continue to move higher and public utility issues show moderate advances. On the other hand, railroad and industrial bonds continue unsettled and generally lower, and foregn bonds depressed, with Latin American issues decidedly weak.

FREEPORT TEXAS EARNS DIVIDEND, PRESIDENT SAYS

New York, May 23.—E. L. Norton, president of the Freeport Texas company, told directors that the dividend for the first four months this year was fully earned in that period and the present rate of earnings is in excess of the $3 per share annual dividend requirements. The increase in sulphur production tax from 55 cents to 75 cents a ton voted by the Texas legislature, instead of the $1.50 increase originally proposed, will affect the company's 1931 earnings only to a nominal extent, as the law does not become operative until Sept. 1, he added.

Coca Cola International corporation has declared an extra dividend of 50 cents a share on the common stock, in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of $3.50 on the common and the regular semi-annual dividend of $3 on the class "A" stock.

Giant Portland Cement company has omitted the semi-annual dividend of $1.75 on the preferred stock due at this time.

Subject to approval of stockholders at a special meeting June 16, Gardner Motor company has declared a distribution of 25 cents in cash and one share of capital stock of Detroit Aircraft corporation for each ten shares of Gardner Motor stock, payable July 15 to stockholders of record June 3.

Advance Is Reported in Week's Bank Clearings

Bank clearings in the United States for week ending Thursday, May 21, as reported to Bradstreet's aggregated $9,045,955,000, as against $8,380,190,000 last week, and $10,237,326,000 in this week last year. This week's total shows an increase of 7.9 per cent over last week, but reflects a decrease from a year ago of 11.6 per cent.

Bank clearings gained over last week, and the decrease from a year ago dropped below that in any week since the first week of January, this owing to enlargement in the New York City total. At the cities outside of New York the decrease from a year ago was 19.2 per cent. The decrease at New York, 7.4 per cent, is the smallest of any week this year.

ELECTRIC RAILS SHOW REVENUE, TRAFFIC DECLINE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 23.—A decrease of 8.43 per cent in traffic and 3.26 per cent in gross earnings in 1930, as compared with 1929, is reported by 282 electric railway companies in the United States, representing an appreciable proportion of the industry, according to compilations made by Edmund J. Murphy of the American Electric Railway association.

"These figures are a measure of the effect of the business depression upon the electric railway industry," Mr. Murphy says. "While they represent a serious loss, in view of the general industrial situation the electric railways cannot complain of their fortunes in the depression.

"Automobile production decreased about 43 per cent in 1930; railroad revenues were down nearly 16 per cent; building construction was off more than 21 per cent; steel production was down about 27 per cent. There were few industries, in fact, that suffered as little from the depression as the business of community transportation."

Mr. Murphy's theory that competition from private automobiles reached a peak in 1929 could not be checked from 1930 statistics, he says, due to the generally disturbed conditions, which further reduced street railway traffic.

BY FRED W. HARVEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 23.—Operations on the stock exchange just about came to a standstill today with barely 500,000 shares changing hands in the two hour session. Prices drifted a little ower on the average, but none of them made any fuss about it. Interest appeared to have reached a minimum even for this dullest of all markets.

Again the more noticeable declines were registered in the so-called "blue chip" descriptions, such as United States Steel, American Can, American Telephone, Westinghouse, Eastman Kodak, and the like, indicating to the average observer, at least, that strongbox liquidation from high quarters was still under way. U. S. Steel eased to 98 and closed only a half point higher, which left it with a net loss of 1½ points on the day. American Can lost nearly two points from its Friday closing figure, and American Telephone dropped 3 more. Losses of 2 and 3 points were rather numerous among other higher priced issues.

Rails Lose Part of Gains.

No particular group of stocks acted any better or worse than any of the others, taking the situation by and large. Probably the rails made about as poor a showing as a lot as any, New York Central, Missouri Pacific, Atchison, New Haven and some others of prominence sacrificing from 1½ to 3 points of the gains they have been running up for the last two or three days.

Copper stocks continued to sag, chiefly, it seems, because they have few friends at present. At 8⅝ cents a pound none of the producers can make any money, at least on the basis of present curtailed production. Stocks still are large notwithstanding a program of curtailment that has been followed by all of the important producers with fidelity. Westinghouse was a shining target for bear professionals, dropping almost two points to a new bottom for the reaction before what few friends it has left got busy. Selling here was accompanied by reports that the company's operations during April were not being maintained this month.

Show Early Strength.

Some of the merchandise issues made a show of strength in early dealings, Sears Roebuck, Woolworth, and one or two others perking up quite briskly, but the advances soon attracted fresh selling and the close found most of the group back below the line with the rest of the list.

The utilities were under pressure for pretty much the entire session. Very little interest was taken in the amusement shares, but the close found most of them likewise a bit lower. The amusement shares are, perhaps, selling as a group on the lowest price-times-earning ratio basis obtaining at present in the market. Taken on the basis of preliminary, or reported, earnings for last year, the stocks of the four leading units in the industry are moving at levels ranging from 1.3 to about five times last year's indicated earnings.

On the basis of low prices reached a day or two back, Warner Brothers is selling at about 1.3 times indicated earnings.

Western Union Irregular.

Western Union firmed up noticeably in the first hour of trading, advancing about 2 points on reports of a pickup in the communications business in the last two weeks or so, but profit taking cut it down about to its old level in the end.

Evidently the slackening of the pace of the downward movement of prices, after a period of almost twelve weeks of steady decline, is commencing to turn the interest of some of the more active professional operators to possibilities of something in the way of technical recovery. The flow of liquidation which had been on the market for nearly two and one-half months seemed to have subsided early this week, and, while the market has not shown much in the way of sustained rallying power, it has, nevertheless, shown an increasing measure of resistance to selling pressure.

*Shorn lambs; no wool lambs here.

Prices in all divisions of the live stock market were slashed during the last week, cattle and hogs coming down sharpest, while the price of lambs was cut because of the poorer quality of stock. Cattle and hog markets were lowest for this time of the year since 1911.

Following the drastic cut in hog quotations Thursday and Friday, the demand was better on the week-end session, when hardly enough stock was available to test quotations. Considering quality, prices were strong at the recent decline, but show losses of 60@70c compared with the high point of the previous week.

The extreme top held at $6.70, while the general average was unchanged at $6.30. There is considerable speculation in regards to Monday's probable hog run because of the big receipts on the corresponding Mondays in 1930 and 1929. A year ago 53,940 arrived and two years ago the total was 66,771. However, supplies at leading points at the close of the week were much smaller than on the same Saturday in 1930 and 1929.

The market for fresh pork loins which has been practically the only support the hog market has had for some time, broke badly and the effect of the slump was noticed on the demand for hogs in mid-week and later. The week's general average declined 35c more, at $6.50, being lower than any week since December, 1915, and $3.55 lower than a year ago.

Supplies increased some toward the end of the week, but are running small for this time of the year. The total at the eleven leading markets last week, at 425,000, was 125,000 under the four year average of corresponding weeks.

Hog Futures Dull.

The hog futures market remained almost at a standstill on the week-end session. No bids were made and few offers were posted. June light were offered at $8.00. Mediums for the rest of May were offered at $7.75 and September mediums were offered at $7.75. Heavy grades for the first half of September were offered at $8.00 and for the last half at $7.90.

Cattle receipts have been large for this time of the year, and with packers unable to move supplies in volume on the wholesale market lately, conditions have been demoralized on recent sessions. The general average price of beef steers sank to $7.00, lowest since January, 1922, and below any corresponding week since 1911. It is 45c under a week ago and $4.50 lower than two years ago. The average two years ago was $13.60. Receipts at the seven leading markets last week at 350,000 were larger than any corresponding week since 1927. The total at the seven markets for the first three full weeks this month at 465,000 compares with an average of 422,000 for the corresponding weeks in 1930, 1929 and 1928.

Lamb Market Unsettled.

The lamb market is entering an "in-between" season, when offerings include a larger assortment of grades and classes of sheep and lambs than at any other time of the year, yet on some sessions strictly top kinds are not available. The trade is in an unsettled condition.

The general average dropped to $8.00, mostly due to poorer quality, while top sales on some sessions represented shorn stock in the absence of wool lambs.

A sharp decline in the wholesale market for cheaper grades of dressed lamb caused buyers to insist on a wider range of prices on the market for live lambs. Cheapest lamb cuts are selling 7c under a month ago, while best grades are steady. Aggregate supplies are dropping off as expected. The seven market total for the last three weeks at 792,000 compares with 899,000 for the three preceding weeks.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 16,000 cattle, 42,000 hogs and 12,000 sheep, against 21,010 cattle, 44,495 hogs and 16,336 sheep a week ago and 20,606 cattle, 53,940 hogs and 13,818 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 39,000 cattle, 135,000 hogs and 50,000 sheep, against 42,668 cattle, 143,173 hogs and 53,101 sheep a year ago, and 39,569 cattle, 143,972 hogs and 60,778 sheep two years ago.

LARD LOWEST SINCE 1908

Lard was under pressure from liquidators and hedgers, with support from shorts and eastern interests yesterday. Prices dropped to the lowest since 1908 and at the close were off 12½@17½c, October leading the break. May lard closed at 7.42½c and July at 7.47½c. Liverpool lard was 3@9d lower. Export clearances were 278,950 lbs and of bacon 11,500 lbs. Bellies were given little attention, the only trading being in July, which closed 20c lower at 8.20c. Hog prices were steady, with small receipts, but a large run is expected the coming week. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Prospects of better weather in the southwest and possible rains in the American and Canadian northwest changed the ideas of many traders who were inclined to favor the long side of wheat on Friday, and they sold out early in the day. Traders said it was a liquidating market all day, and while commission house buying was in evidence on every fractional decline, there appeared to be a more bearish feeling. The disposition, however, at the last was not to press the selling side too strongly. A fair decrease in the visible supply is expected on Monday together with large world shipments. It is believed that crop reports from the southwest will be mixed for the next few days, but it is said that no serious loss in production is looked for.

Bearishness predominates the corn market and the disposition is to look for lower prices based largely on expectations of an increased movement from the country. Traders in the main believe that the big long interests have done no selling of late, while other holders have unloaded. The market appears to have few friends despite the fact that prices are the lowest of the year.

"We are now approaching the period when any added speculative power or increased cash demand from abroad will be essential in the maintenance of present price levels," says S. C. Harris. "The seaboard advises a slow trade with bids of 2c under Chicago September for No. 2 hard or red winter for July-August shipment.

"As we are approaching the crop movement, it casts its shadow ahead and with storage room filled up all over the country, after 11 months' movement, the outlook is not very promising for an active demand for the new wheat when it starts to move," says the Uhlmann Grain company. "Of course mills will take some and some probably will be exported, but with wheat in Liverpool selling at 64c it is not likely that the quantities will be large enough to absorb the early offerings and more wheat will have to be stored."

AMERICAN LABOR HEAD APPROVES FARRELL'S STAND ON WAGE CUTS

Washington, D. C., May 23.—(AP)—The leader of organized labor and the head of one of America's greatest industrial corporations today stood aligned against employers who attempt wage reductions.

President Green of the American Federation of Labor gave his approval to charges of President Farrell of the United States Steel corporation that "big standard companies" had not maintained wage scales. He said Farrell's statement should have a most "stabilizing and profound effect."

"Mr. Farrell classifies the action of those who are reducing wages as a 'pretty cheap sort of business,'" Green said. "Labor charges them with violating the agreement made with the people of the United States through their chief executive, the President. . . . I am glad President Farrell exposed this sniping in wages. No one could bring it out into the open quite as effectively as he.

"Through such exposure the public is given an opportunity to understand with what little regard some employers hold a solemn covenant made with the people."

The federation previously had charged that certain interests were contemplating a general reduction in wages, despite the agreement obtained in 1929 by President Hoover from labor and capital that wages would be kept on the same level during the depression.

Meanwhile, the railroads, which Secretary Doak of the labor department understands plan no general reductions in wages, went forward in a move to seek rate readjustments to increase revenues. They contend additional funds were needed to maintain the wage scales.

Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, today discussed informally with members of the interstate commerce commission the study being made by eastern carriers looking to rate readjustment.

CITIES SERVICE AGAIN PROMINENT IN TRADING HERE

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Week-end business settled over the Chicago stock market yesterday, with volume of business falling off to around 46,000 shares and prices holding steady around previous closing quotations. Stocks here did not share to any appreciable extent the sharp reaction which overtook the New York market in the final minutes of trading.

Cities Service was again the volume leader and accounted for 25 per cent of the day's total trade. The issue enjoyed aggressive support and the price was put up a fraction to 12, which was the best price it brought since its sharp break earlier in the week. To date there has been no confirmation of the rumors current earlier that an influential group had bought a large block of the firm's stock.

Well Above Low Point.

Even before the issuance of the company's earnings report Wednesday there had been considerable liquidation in the issue, but Thursday apparently saw the end of it. In the last two sessions the stock has been steady and closed the week nearly three points above its low price for the period.

Fractional recessions predominated in the Insull stocks. Trading in both Insull Utility and Middle West was light. Only a few hundred shares of the leading automotive shares were dealt in. An irregular trend ruled here, with Bendix selling off moderately and Borg-Warner adding slightly to its previous price, apparently on the strength of earnings estimates, which place net for the first six months of the year around 65 cents a share. This is in excess of current dividend requirements.

Near Year's High Point.

A resumption of active trading in National Family Stores has taken place during the last few days. On a turnover of some 1,200 odd shares yesterday the issue was bid up to 5¼, which is within a fraction of its year's high.

Reports from two utility companies whose stocks are listed here are expected early this week. The Central Public Service corporation report for 1930 will be made public tomorrow, as well as the audited report for last year of the Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line company.

Weekly Debits Increase, Reserve Bank Reports

Debits to individual deposit account reported to the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago for the week ended May 20, 1931, by 216 banks in thirty-eight leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $1,251,743,000, an increase of 16.2 per cent compared with a week ago [$1,077,035,000]. Compared with the corresponding week of last year [$1,599,719,000], a decrease of 21.8 per cent was shown.

News and Gossip of Stock Marts

Fight Advances.

Professionals have acquired the habit of fighting the advances by offering substantial blocks of stocks at points "above" the market.

Delay Plans.

Current market conditions have delayed the plans of speculative groups which had just begun to get started in some of the low priced gold issues.

Take Profits.

That small portion of the outside public which has been attempting turns on the long side in the last few days was busy taking whatever profits were available on minor bulges. This is in line with the ultra-cautious policy now being followed.

FOR SALE

Lease covering a most attractively furnished and equipped office of about 5,000 square feet in a high class building on La Salle Street between Monroe Street and Jackson Boulevard in the heart of the financial district; especially equipped for use of investment banking or lawyers' office. HURLEY CAREER REFLECTED IN FIRM'S GROWTH

Electric Household Co. Is Leader in Industry.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Well worth the consideration of those holding a pessimistic attitude regarding the present financial situation is the story of the Electric Household Utilities corporation, which has helped to make the name of Chicago known in every land throughout the world.

EDWARD N. HURLEY.

For this company, which is one of the nation's leading manufacturers of electrical devices for the home, was born during the depression of 1906 and despite the unfavorable circumstances at the start, with losses instead of profits for the first few years of operation, it fought its way through to its present position in industry. The story of the company closely follows that of Edward N. Hurley, one of the most interesting and energetic of Chicago's successful business leaders.

Once Was Rail Engineer.

Mr. Hurley was born in 1864 in Galesburg, Ill. There he attended the public schools and as a lad worked at various odd jobs about the town. The age of 17 found him employed by the Burlington railroad, on which line he served as a fireman and as an engineer. Came the big rail strike of 1888, which resulted in Mr. Hurley going to work for a Philadelphia firm selling railroad supplies. Part of his duties was to buy inventions for his employers.

Mr. Hurley became acquainted with the two Kimman brothers, employed in a boiler factory on Halsted street, who had invented a piston air drill. And in 1897 was organized the Standard Pneumatic Tool company, with the first manufacturing effort taking place in a barn back of the Kimman home in Lawndale.

Financial problems arose, Mr. Hurley couldn't raise any cash in Chicago, so he went to England, where he sold the British patents on the pneumatic air drill for $125,000. He returned to Chicago with the cash, took on a pneumatic hammer invented in St. Louis, and with his company marched on to success. In 1902 Mr. Hurley sold his interests for well over $1,000,000 and at the age of 38 retired from business to live on a farm near Wheaton.

Back from Retirement.

And then came a rift in Mr. Hurley's peace when his sons, filled with the doings of the fathers of their playmates, began to ask, "What are you doing, father?" His retirement began to get under his skin.

One day his brother, Neil, came out to watch the finishing touches being put to a new house. Edward took his brother to the basement, where he was installing an ordinary washing machine in the laundry, which was to be powered by a belt running from an electric motor. The brother, Neil, had a factory in which he made fur arranging devices, but on account of poor business the factory wasn't running.

And then came the idea of making an electric washing machine to be manufactured in the idle factory. The brothers went to a downtown department store where they purchased a washing machine of an old fashioned type. By chance the maker of the machine happened to be present when the purchase was made. "The man who invents a patent reverse machine will make a fortune," the stranger remarked. In ninety days the Hurley brothers had such a washing machine and in addition there was a motor underneath it, with a lot of chains and belts to run it.

Expansion of Company.

This was the beginning of the Hurley Machine company, which was incorporated under the laws of the state of Illinois on April 10, 1906. The name was changed to the Electric Household Utilities corporation in 1925.

Now the company has fourteen acres of property at 22nd street and 54th avenue, Cicero, of which six and a half acres are covered by buildings. Within the last two years an addition has been built to the plant and the firm's foundry, one of the most modern in the country, moved here from Waukegan.

Manufacturing operations are carried on under the progressive system similar to operations in the Ford plant. A shipping system permits the loading of seven freight cars simultaneously.

Succeeds Father as President.

Products manufactured include washing machines, ironing machines, floor lamps, house motors and vacuum cleaners. Business has been holding up satisfactorily despite the general market.

Edward N. Hurley Jr., is president of the company, having succeeded his father, Edward N. Hurley Sr., is chairman of the board. Having built his company to a successful position, Mr. Hurley in the past fifteen years has been devoting a major part of his time to public affairs.

One of his outstanding achievements in this connection was his work as chairman of the United States Shipping board during the war when he played a large part in the building of ships to carry men and supplies that helped win victory. Mr. Hurley has been particularly active in developing the nation's foreign trade and he recently was elected a director of the chamber of commerce of the United States, representing the department of foreign commerce.

Review Finds Favorable Trade Factors Neglected

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 23.—With sentiment so largely dominated by a declining stock market the favorable developments in the economic situation have attracted comparatively little attention, says the mid-month review of business of the Irving Trust company.

Reassuring developments, as listed by the review, include the rising market for high grade bonds, a continued and striking improvement in the automobile industry, and an improved level of railroad traffic, "testifying to a more than seasonal betterment over the early first quarter in many other lines of trade."

Cites Improvements.

Increased shoe production in April, improvement in textiles and a slowing down in the number of business failures are also counted on the favorable side.

"It is only natural, however, that under the circumstances considerable attention should have been centered upon the negative aspects of even such favorable news as has transpired," the review said. "For example, the prospect of a greatly enlarged winter wheat crop, which under some circumstances would have been hailed as a sign of bumper crop prosperity, has been treated as merely another bearish argument, even though the unsupported markets for new crop wheat continue to hold several cents above the low point reached some weeks since.

"To say all this, however, is not to blink the fact that corporate earnings have been poor, that average commodity prices have continued to drift downward and that unemployment and wage cutting are still in evidence.

Sees Biased Comparisons.

"While the volume of business is admittedly at depression levels, its recent moderate improvement has been obscured not only by the decline in the stock market but even more so by the unfavorable bias given so far this year to current industrial news items through the custom of judging mainly by comparisons with the corresponding period of the previous year.

"In ordinary times of fairly stable business such a basis of comparison is reasonably satisfactory and in many respects is helpful. But applied to the first four months of the current year this often valid method leads to biased and misleading interpretations. The first quarter of 1930 and part of the second saw a short lived recovery in business activity to a level which, while below normal, was still relatively high. This means that thus far in 1931 comparisons with a year ago have been so unfavorable that there has been an understandable tendency to deny that a net recovery, even in the physical volume of trade, has occurred so far this year."

COTTONSEED OIL.

NEW YORK, May 23.—(AP)—Bleachable cottonseed oil closed weak today, 19 to 40 points net lower, breaking the 7c level and selling at new lows for the season. Trading was comparatively heavy with a total business of 3,450 barrels. Liquidation of July and Sept. was pronounced. Weakness of lard, lower cotton and grain markets, refiners selling, reports of sales of crude oil in the southwest and valley at 6c, a decline of ⅜c and higher temperatures in the cotton belt caused the weakness.

Prime crude, 6.00c; bleachable spot and May closed nominal; July, 6.88c; Sept., 6.87c; Dec., 6.60c. Prime summer yellow contracts closed nominal for spot, and May, 6.53c for July, 6.70c for September, and 6.40c for December.

LONDON FINANCE CIRCLES NOTE A BETTER OUTLOOK

Cautiously Suggest Shift in Slump Tide.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 23—Back to optimism? Has the tide turned at last in the long disastrous slump which has devastated the world's stock markets since the end of 1929?

The old timers in city financial circles here cautiously suggest it has. The London stock markets decidedly experienced a better week. Liquidation definitely ceased on Wednesday. Since then the recovery has been fairly general, considerable bear covering assisting in wiping out the atmosphere of depression, and the continued scramble for gilt edged stocks provided material for bullish sentiment.

The last days of the week's session were the first period for many months when long faces, dropping prices, and doleful prophecies did not pervade every department in the house.

Pressure Slackens.

Outside the gilt edged section, the market is obviously oversold, especially in industrials, following the persistent and recently forced liquidation of freely marketable stocks. But with abnormal selling pressure now stopped, the marketeers are regarding the immediate future certainly more hopefully, though ragged and periodic slight liquidations may be anticipated as the alarming depreciation in prices since the beginning of the year have materially weakened loan margins. Unusual buying opportunities now exist, it is asserted, although there is still the necessity for discrimination.

With indications of the continuation of cheap money conditions here and with the trend of money conditions in the United States, London is now in sight of a 2 per cent bank rate, and stock exchange discussion is general regarding the prospects of a huge conversion loan offer to holders of two billion sterling [$9,720,000,000] of the 5 per cent war loan. But the belief is growing that this cannot be attempted until British credit reaches round about a 4 per cent basis, and for this to be possible the existing 4 per cent British government stocks must be quoted at or over par, while the investors must be accustomed to 2 per cent on their money with a greater degree of confidence than is now prevailing.

Movement Is Significant.

At present the movement is certainly significant, 4 per cent consols are now over 98, the 4 per cent funding loan has risen substantially to 97, partly aided by American buying, and the prediction is that these stocks will attain par within a not too long distant period. Recently the war loan fives sold considerably for reinvestment into longer dated securities, which explains the present reaction in price to around 102½, but most of the other British government stocks did not show more than a point higher on the week.

The failure of this week's ten million sterling [$48,600,000] Indian loan is regarded in some financial quarters as evidence that the conversion loan operation will not be successful under immediate existing conditions, making it still more probable that Chancellor of the Exchequer Snowden's funding deal will not eventuate before September at the earliest.

Indian Loan Reception.

The fact that the underwriters were left with 62 per cent of this week's Indian loan was in accord with market expectations following the uneasiness in city circles and the investing public concerning unsettled events in India, and the recent declaration of some of Mahatma Gandhi's Nationalists that if they attain power the repudiation of India's debts will follow. The Indian loan fiasco is certainly an indication that India is becoming unpopular with investors.

Improvement in sterling exchange continued, and it was helped by the further reduction on bill rates in New York. The remarkable cheapness of money in America is resulting steadily in an increasing flow of funds from the United States to London.

Sir Arthur Balfour, on landing at Southampton from America, where he had attended the international conference of the chambers of commerce at Washington, was pessimistic concerning the economic and financial situation in the United States. Sir Arthur said:

"I do not think we can look for any real recovery in America's finance for some time. There is still a lot of dead wood to cut out. If one had to choose between the present economic positions of the United States and Great Britain one undoubtedly would choose the latter, for although we have many troubles our foundations are secure."

Sir Arthur was more optimistic regarding Canada. He said: "Providing Canada can liquidate her wheat position without too much loss there is no reason why she should not recover economically fairly soon. I think it is the last time in the lifetime of any present Canadian that any attempt will be made to form a wheat pool or to interfere in any way with normal supply and demand for wheat."

PARIS BOURSE IRREGULAR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 22.—A slight improvement was noted on the Paris market during the middle of the week, but it was of short duration and a sharp decline succeeded. Contrary to the tendency observed during the earlier part of the week, it was international stocks which furnished an exception to the trend by rising while all the French issues—particularly the bank of France—showed a substantial recession.

On the eve of the Whitsuntide holidays the market was extremely calm and the volume of transactions was reduced to a minimum. The news that the Spanish government had opened negotiations with the soviets for buying Russian oil made a favorable impression, as Spanish exchange had supported the consequences of the official policy of the preceding government toward Russian oil. Large interests are involved in the Spanish oil market for internal distribution and consumption, and the peseta suffered in speculative selling.

Earnings Per Share.

There is no pat system for determining the fair market price of a common stock.

Prior to the fall of 1929 some stocks were thought to be "good buys" at a price equal to ten times the amount of their annual earnings per share. Others were believed to be fairly priced at twelve, fifteen or twenty times per share earnings.

Estimates based solely upon such ratios were merely weak substitutes for sound reasoning based on complete analysis.

Their fallacy lay largely in the fact that they were predicting the future in terms of the immediate past. They were projecting the curve into the unknown.

If it were humanly possible to determine accurately the earnings of a company for a year or two ahead then it would be possible to arrive at a fair purchase price merely by multiplying the anticipated earnings per share by some set figure.

The picture, however, is not so simple. The future of any company is so bound up with the affairs of other concerns and the level of prosperity of the nation and the entire world that any prediction is only a guess.

There is another danger for the investor who looks only at earnings per share. Accounting practices vary. Different methods of figuring net income may produce quite different results.

Take, for example, the 1930 report of the American Brake Shoe and Foundry company, which manufactures a diversified line of equipment and machinery for railroads and industrial concerns.

Including income that it received from associated companies in the form of dividends, the company's earnings in 1930 were equal to $3.24 per common share, against $3.71 per share in 1929 on practically the same capitalization.

But in 1930 these associated companies paid out in dividends more than they earned during the year and in 1929 their dividends were less than their earnings.

Now figure it another way. If American Brake Shoe and Foundry company's earnings for the two years are computed not on dividends received from associated companies but on the basis of its equity in their actual profits then earnings per share in 1930 would be $2.95 against $5.50 in 1929. This difference was clearly explained in the company's annual report.

HOME BUILDERS AND SUBDIVIDERS MORE CHEERFUL

Public Showing Interest, Realtors Say.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Subdividers and home builders in the Chicago area are a more cheerful group than they were a few months ago. A talk with A. T. McIntosh, president of A. T. McIntosh & Co., which has properties in all various parts of Chicagoland, discloses an interesting optimism over the future of Chicago real estate. Ernest T. Toberg, vice president of the Metropolitan District Realty Trust, which conducts general and home building operations in both the city and its suburbs, says the public is interested in building and also adds that each month shows a good gain in gross volume over the same months of 1930.

A. T. McINTOSH.

Frederick Bartlett & Co., Percy Wilson & Co., the Harmon National Realty Trust, A. A. Lewis & Co., and the H. M. Cornell company also all report conditions as encouraging and the public's interest increasing.

Near the Bottom.

"Whether the real estate market will go higher or lower during the balance of the year no one can foretell with certainty," said Mr. McIntosh. "There are many indications, however, that we are near the bottom of a world wide depression in so far as it affects Chicago real estate.

"On one point all intelligent students of local real estate conditions are agreed, the future outlook for Chicago realty over a period of years is excellent, in fact, it was never better. Today real estate values are available that have not been offered Chicagoans in many a year and wise investors in this market are certain to be splendidly repaid.

"Above all, real estate owners should realize that the present is the time to buy and not to sell. No wise man will sacrifice property in this market when in a few years the same property will doubtless command a good profit."

Finds Public Interested.

"We find the public cautious, but interested in building," said Mr. Toberg of the Metropolitan District Realty Trust. "Each month of this year our gross volume has shown a gratifying increase over the same month of 1930, and our salesmen report that prospects are much easier to talk to than they were a short time ago. During a portion of 1930 it was almost impossible to get any one to listen to a discussion of home building.

"There's no question but that plenty of money is available for building which is awaiting only the return of general confidence to get into circulation. Economists agree that the United States is sound fundamentally, and our organization is looking forward to a speedy and widespread pickup in construction. In fact, we have right now under negotiation several deals of much greater magnitude than any we've undertaken during the last twelve months."

Market More Favorable.

"With stock dropping to new lows and because of the erratic fluctuations of other forms of investment, the public is gradually turning back to the safety and stability of land ownership," said Robert Bartlett, vice president and general manager of the Frederick H. Bartlett Realty company. "Compared to other forms of investment where prices shift upward or downward to the tune of millions of dollars over night, real estate ownership stands out as the safest. Well located property continues to increase in value year after year.

"We have been busy all winter preparing for an expected huge increase in the number of realty buyers. Although our Beverly Shores property now under development on the lake front has never been officially announced as opened to the public, many hundreds of advance reservations already have been made, totaling $5,000,000 in volume. Fifty homes have been built and many more are projected for the coming summer. The tone of the market right now is distinctly more favorable than at any time last year."

Collections Increase.

Improved collections as an indication of public interest in real estate and a forerunner of a livelier market were cited by Percy Wilson, president of Percy Wilson & Co.

"Our collections have increased recently for the first time in many months," said Mr. Wilson. "Many old buyers who had not paid on their property for more than a year have resumed their installments. This is a never failing sign of increased purchasing power and better employment conditions among people of moderate means, who constitute the bulk of our customers. Our volume of business has held steady during the last few months, with a large number of small sales."

"Our gross volume is not large at present," he said, "but we're making lots of small sales to wage earners. The sales horizon is much clearer than at any time during the last eight months. The most favorable sign is noted in the increasing number of people who stop at our property sites without being solicited and inquire for prices, showing much interest in properties ranging from $1,000 to $5,000."

Increased labor efficiency and lower costs of building materials have stimulated the demand for single family residences on the properties of the H. M. Cornell company, according to A. W. Rhamstine, general sales manager.

"Since Jan. 1 we've completed twelve new home," said Mr. Rhamstine. "We now have six homes under construction, and two additional ones under contract to start by June 1.

"Following the comparatively slow market of the last three years the public is again beginning to realize the investment opportunities offered by local community developments, and this is being manifested by an increasing interest."

A strong increase in sales during May was reported by William F. Zent, head of the Harmon National Realty Trust.

"On last Tuesday alone our sales totaled $49,330," said Mr. Zent. Like commodity prices, realty prices have gotten so low that the public just can't resist them. A lot of money is going to be made by people who invest now. The great fortunes of the country were founded in times identical with the present by persons who had foresight and just a little money."

Loewenberg & Loewenberg are architects of the above building, told about in this department on May 10, which is to be erected at the southwest corner of State and Hohman streets in the center of the business section of Hammond, Ind. It will be of Bedford stone and cast aluminum, and will contain eleven stores. The upper floor can be used in connection with the stores for retail merchandising or for offices. The owner is Joseph R. Gordon. Coen-Schrager & Co., the agents, report having closed several leases with national chain store concerns.

COMISKEY TAKES APARTMENT AT JACKSON TOWERS

Jackson Towers, at 5555 Everett avenue, is now 96 per cent rented, according to Baird & Warner, who announced yesterday that twelve new tenants have become tenants of the building, among them Charles A. Comiskey of White Sox fame. The others were H. B. Gilmore, Samuel Heifetz, M. Martin Gordon, J. H. Dillard, R. L. Block, Jules Landonyi, Harry E. Newman, G. B. Heineman, Armstrong Crawford, David Stern, and Mrs. Mary E. McCarthy. The building contains sixty-nine suites, and all but three are rented.

CHAS. COMISKEY.

"There has been a marked tendency since the first of January towards an absorption of vacant apartments in fireproof buildings," said an official of Baird & Warner. "For example, when we assumed the management of Jackson Towers one year ago there were eleven vacant apartments, as compared with but three today.

"There has likewise been an improvement in the walkup type of structure, but not as pronounced an absorption has taken place as in the larger fireproof type of apartment buildings. A very distinct trend of renting activity each month in the year, in place of the former spring and fall seasonal migrations, is noticed in all classes of apartments, as a result of the activities of the Chicago Homes Economic council in the distribution of lease expirations throughout each month of the year."

HOME BUILDING AND REMODELING

ENGLISH HOUSE FOR FLOSSMOOR COSTS $12,000

Garage Has Big Closet for Tools.

[Proofs of the floor plans of this home may be secured by sending stamped, addressed envelope to Louise Bargelt, Home Builder Editor, Chicago Tribune.]

BY LOUISE BARGELT.
[Home Builders Editor.]

Definitely English in feeling, this design is so worked out as to possess individual character. Much of its exterior distinction comes from the way that the plan elements are massed—to contour of the roof, the shape of the wall and the effect created by the hospitable entrance with its inviting arch and graceful wrought iron rails. Proper stress has been placed on the entrance doorway, a feature which, related intimately to the entire structure, always makes a strong first impression. Regarded by some as an architectural overture, it should invoke a pleasant mood, should please.

LOUISE BARGELT.

An interesting home exterior does not of itself make sound or satisfactory domestic architecture, since the interior plan as well must be practical and present excellent accommodations for everyday living.

Garage Has Tool Closet.

One of the features first observed is the attached garage which is given a convenient location. An adjoining combination driveway and rear and front entrance walk has been wisely outlined, and because of this combined feature the lawn is not cut up in several places but is left in large open spaces which permit of attractive landscaping. A large closet is contained in the garage for storage of garden tools and automobile accessories.

In most instances we find the admonition, "House your car," well heeded. There are almost as many ways for treating the three general types of garages, attached, semi-detached and detached, as there are homes to build them with, and in this particular case we see the attached garage made decorative and efficient.

The exterior of the home is carried out in buff colored brick trimmed with stone. The roof is a graduated, thick butt, blue and green wood shingle, and the brown stained wood shutters form a pleasing contrast with the buff colored brick. The house is thoroughly insulated throughout.

Entering a sizable vestibule, we find the long living room, 13x24, directly beyond, with a dining room 13 feet 2 inches by 16 feet beyond this. A sun porch to the right opens from the dining room, while at the left is a well planned kitchen 8 feet 6 inches by 12 feet 6 inches and breakfast room 5 feet by 8 feet 6 inches. Adjacent to the kitchen is a small pantry, a separate nook for mechanical refrigerator and a broom closet.

Two steps up from the living room at the left is a small hall from which opens a coat closet and lavatory.

The plaster work of the living room and dining room is textured and glazed. The floors are of oak.

Plenty of Closets.

On the second floor there is a small central hall from which open the four bedrooms and bath. There are seven closets, a linen closet and clothes chute.

The master chamber is 11 feet by 14 feet 8 inches and, if desired, this room could connect with the small bedroom next to it if there were a young child in the family. Again, if preferred, and if the family is small, chambers No. 2 and No. 3 could connect with a door and the two rooms be used jointly as sleeping quarters and playroom for the smaller children.

The bedroom walls are tinted and glazed with stained woodwork. The bathroom is tiled in color. The first floor lavatory, kitchen, basement and bath are all equipped with drinking water faucets in addition to hot and cold water faucets.

The house contains 31,800 cubic feet and can be built in Flossmoor, Ill., along suggested lines, for $12,000.

IN SOUTHERN SUBURB

An English residence in buff colored brick which offers an interior plan affording excellent modern accommodations for the family desirous of a seven room home. The attached garage is given a convenient location. Thorough insulation is specified for the dwelling, which contains 31,800 cubic feet and is designed for a 60 foot lot in Flossmoor, Ill. Estimated cost, $12,000. Architect William J. Lindstrom of Flossmoor. Builders, Wagner Brothers, Chicago.

FARM and GARDEN BY PAUL POTTER

NEWER METHODS BRING PROFITS IN ASPARAGUS TIPS

There are many ways to make a living—and growing asparagus on the old lake bed that has a sandy subsoil and a crust of rich black loam in the southern part of Cook county is one of them.

This seasonal crop of tender sprouts is but an item in the menu of most folk and but a portion of the gardens of many others. There are men, however, who have since their boyhood grown nothing else, and the recent years of popularity for green vegetables in Chicago have always given them an outlet.

Heavy Cutting Lowers Quality.

Most commercial plantations are started from root stocks, set out 4½ feet between rows and 2 feet in the row, or a little closer. Depending on the experience of the past, growers differ in the quickness with which they start selling the crop, as well as with the quality which they are able to market.

"The heavier the cutting the lower the quality" is a maxim of harvesting asparagus held by E. P. Lewis, in charge of the University of Illinois truck experiment station in Cook county, near Des Plaines.

Mr. Lewis has in late years been queried constantly by many of the 3,000 truck gardeners in the county, and of them all the "grass" growers have been helped as much as any. Recent years have seen the decline in quantity of manure available for truck crops and other means of fertilizing have been made the object of research.

Plant Food Problem Studied.

Good manure now costs about $40 for the amount needed on an acre, while commercial plant foods cost about half that. They must be supplemented with some such cover crop as oats or rye for mulch and organic matter, however, Lewis finds.

"We have found that heavy cutting the first year after setting out asparagus is injurious to both yield and quality," he states. "Even medium to light cutting this first year is harmful unless extra fertilizer is added. We set our plants in rows 6 feet apart and 1½ feet in the row, to permit tractor plowing."

Illinois ranks third among all states in production of this tender edible. Great acreages of it are raised near Rochelle for canning, while the fresh tips for Chicago come from near-by farms or from Beecher, Godfrey, or Alton, Ill.

Some Beds Live 30 Years.

Care is required in commercial growing to keep the roots deep in the soil, as the old ones die and new ones form at the crown. The plantation's normal life is eight to ten years, although Mr. Lewis knows of some in good health at thirty years, so it is necessary to feed well, cut moderately at harvest time, and to avoid harming the crowns when plowing or cultivating for longevity of the asparagus plant.

The cutting operation is entirely hand work, and special knives are used. On a crown with a diameter of some six inches may be growing a dozen sprouts of various heights. The cutter must avoid harming the little ones by pointing his knife downward at the base of the marketable shoot a half inch or so under the ground, and giving it a slight forward clip to remove it neatly.

PARIS CHIC AT REDUCED RATES

This pale gray wool coat from Mainbocher is ideal for summer wear over different frocks. The smallest of capes cover the sleeve tops. The frock is striped tub silk with a girdle of green velvet and two striped silk roses.

Next, Augustabernard gives originality to this green tricot suit by crimp-plaiting the skirt and jacket. The blouse is made of alternating bands of natural flax and green tricot.

This Mainbocher evening ensemble of black crêpe, printed with pink and green, may, by virtue of its jacket, be worn both for daylight and darkness. The twisted shoulder straps and the fichu drapery on the bodice give it character. Sketched third.

The ensemble shown last is chic and practicle. This ensemble from Philippe et Gaston has a frock of black crêpe romaine, with revers of white Swiss embroidered batiste to match the jacket.

Accessories that go with heaps of costumes are the silk tricot hat with a supple upturned brim, the Chanel white kid gloves, the Worth antelope bag with a bar fastening, the mother of pearl flower necklace, and the low cut sandals of polished kid.

Icings Change Plain Cake to Festive Affair

Decorative Touches Not Difficult to Apply.

By Meta Given.

The elaboration that is demanded in some foods today is truly amazing. Cake is an example. For ordinary every day service we are happy to serve good cake that is simply iced. For festive occasions we are not satisfied to serve the same plain cake [for better is not possible] but we insist that it be adorned until it is luxurious in appearance.

No more time is required to make fancy than a simple icing, but much more time and considerably more skill is necessary to put the icing on the cake. Any one who can make an excellent icing and who is adept at free hand drawing can become skillful in the decoration of wedding, birthday, and party cakes.

But patience is needed. It is necessary to begin at the bottom and learn all the details. One cannot expect to immediately plunge into the making of beautiful roses, lilies of the valley, birds, etc. As one works, however, new ideas will be evolved.

Since the elementary principles of icing must first be learned, it seems logical that we confine our initial discussion to the making of icings and their application to every day cakes and the simplest of the ornamental cakes.

Icings Classified.

Icings are of two kinds—cooked and uncooked. Of the cooked there are three varieties—the fondant, the fudge, and the fluffy. A fondant icing is one made from plain fondant, the kind used for bon bons. Either granulated, brown, or maple sugar may be used to prepare it. The fondant may be made weeks ahead and will be all the better for ripening if it is kept in a tightly covered container. It is an icing that can be prepared on short notice. Great care must be used, however, when putting it on. One must melt it in the top of a double boiler and then manipulate it as carefully and as little as possible. The more it is handled, the more it is likely to develop large sugar crystals. To avoid this, the work must be done quickly.

When applied correctly fondant makes one of the most aristocratic of icings. It is particularly well adapted to small cakes—petit fours—those baked in small muffin pans or those fancy shapes cut from a large sheet of cake. Before covering these little cakes with icing they should be glazed. To glaze, brush the top and sides with unbeaten egg white, in which has been dissolved 1-3 the quantity of granulated sugar. Then dry thoroughly. Glazing prevents crumbs from getting into the icing to discolor and granulate it.

Pour Fondant Over Cakes.

The easiest way to apply the icing is to melt the fondant in the top of the double boiler, stirring it as little as possible. Place the glazed cakes on a cake cooler and pour the hot melted fondant over them, making sure that every bit of the top and sides is covered with a thin layer of icing. Any fondant that drops down onto the surface below may be removed when it is cooled to the double boiler and then reheated. Of course, the reheated fondant is never so fine in texture as that melted only once. But if it is handled as carefully as possible it will be good.

Put a piece of glazed cherry or other colorful fruit on top before icing hardens. These little iced cakes should be placed on a tray, then in a covered ventilated container. They should never be crowded, neither should they be piled on top of each other.

A fudge icing is the same kind that is eaten as candy. The ideal fudge is free from any sugar granules, is soft, and plastic. Fudge may also be made a few days, even weeks, ahead and kept in a closely covered container. If it has been kneaded until smooth and plastic before it goes into the container it will be soft enough to be spooned out, but it will not be soft enough to spread. A little cream or milk and a little egg yolk worked into it until smooth will bring it to a nice smooth spreading consistency. If softened fudge icing is put on a slightly warm cake the heat from the cake will smooth the icing, giving it a more attractive surface. The egg yolk is used especially to give a shine to the icing.

Avoid Sugar Crystals.

Fluffy icings made of a sirup that has a thread and stiffly beaten egg whites have to be made shortly before they are used. Like fondant and fudge the main difficulty is to prevent the formation of sugar crystals. Ingredients like cream of tartar, lemon juice, and glucose or corn sirup prevent the formation of large crystals.

And, of course, the way the sirup is handled as it boils influences the size of the crystals in the finished icing. Sugar crystals should never be allowed to form on the sides of the pan. To prevent crystals from collecting there, wipe the sides of the pan down with a damp cloth wrapped securely around the tines of a fork. Or the pan may be kept covered for the first three or four minutes. The steam that collects on the cover washes the crystals down into sirup.

Equally important as the prevention of crystals is the cooking of the sirup to the proper stage. A thermometer is a great help here. Sirups of all the cooked icings are cooked to the soft ball stage. Here in Chicago where our altitude is not much above sea level a sugar and water sirup cooks to the thread or the soft ball stage at 238 or 242 degrees Fahrenheit. The soft ball stage in fudge is reached at different stages depending on what the ingredients are. Plain chocolate fudge reaches the soft ball stage at 234 degrees Fahrenheit. Brown sugar fudge reaches this point at 236 degrees Fahrenheit. And the sirup for white mountain icings should cook at 240 to 243 degrees Fahrenheit.

Exact Proportion Immaterial.

The proportion of the liquid is immaterial. The more liquid there is the longer it takes to reach the right stage. Liquid to equal ¼ to ⅓ the amount of sugar used is a good proportion. And ⅓ cup of sugar to each

Wedding Rings in Limelight Now June's Near

White Gold, Platinum the Most Popular.

By Doris Blake.

WITH the June bride season again at hand there is much weighing and considering of the proper thing in wedding rings.

On a little investigating tour I made of shops where wedding rings are sold, the elderly salesman, with a merry twinkle in his eye, volunteered: "No, we don't have to dust off last year's unsold ones. People keep getting married the year round, though June, of course, sets more of them to thinking seriously about the time they're wasting out of wedlock.

"Isn't it grand," he added, as one deeply concerned in the institution of marriage itself, "that you can't discourage young folk from making an honorable try at it? They come in here just as full of optimism as if the papers never printed a divorce record. It's too bad for the young ones that things can't be made perfect for them just so they'd preserve that sublime expression of happiness we're accustomed to seeing here when they get the ring."

Once in a while, I learned, you'll find a modern bride-to-be insisting on a simple little gold band. Not often—just once in a while. Only the exterior of the maid is modern. At heart she, in a deep-dyed sentimentalist, daughter of a mother who believed her golden wedding ring a good luck talisman.

Platinum Popular.

Most daughters, however, will have none of mother's choice nor of her old fashioned golden wedding ring sentiments. White gold and platinum are the popular metals. And what a variety of styles there are in these to choose from! You can have yours with hearts and flowers. Or, you can have engraved orange blossoms. Or, you can have diamonds gleaming the entire circle around, or in semicircle. In fact, if you are a very original miss you may draw up a design of your own and have it executed to order in platinum or one of the other white metals.

In answer to a growing demand, they tell me, a special kind of ring for the divorcée's remarriage has been created. The suspicion is that the idea was Reno-born. Anyway, if not born there, it draws inspiration from the busy marriage-splitting center, and any number of "paying" customers.

Etiquette, it seems, demands that a woman contemplating a second try observe certain decencies, such as not usurping the rights and privileges of a first-time bride. As with her wedding frock, the divorcée should be distinguished from the wreath-and-veil group in some way. And so appears the wedding ring [platinum] with a cleft around the center of the ring to suggest that this is no mere novice at the marriage game.

Etiquette projects its head into the business of wedding rings and the "sod" widow, too. It is suggested that she, with her second ring, as with her second marriage frock, be not exactly like the maid on a first venture. For her there is a narrow platinum wedding band with black enamel around it. This is worn as a guard to the wedding ring. To Paris, it is understood, goes credit for this gesture with its mourning note.

Rings for Men.

Men's wedding rings have a surprising run of popularity, when you come to investigate. I am told there is an increase in the double ring service. One cynical gentleman behind a counter suggested that perhaps it be-

Arithmetic, When Given Too Much Importance, Is Bugbear

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

New revised edition of the "Sex Education" booklet will be sent by Mrs. Bevans on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

HE'S the specter at the feast of childhood. He's the Old Man of the Sea around their necks. He's the Ghost that Haunts their waking hours. And—actually too, believe me!—he's often the nightmare of their sleeping hours.

He's the killjoy of pleasant evening hours and the dark cloud over sunny playtime afternoons. He's spoiled the school life of many a boy and girl. And, incidentally, because of the false importance given to him by those higher up, he's lined many a teacher's face and made many a teacher's bonny brown head turn gray.

He's responsible for much real unhappiness, inferiority, sense of failure, and serious nervous conditions in children. Who then—who is this monster? He is arithmetic. But to be quite truthful not arithmetic, but Arithmetic as It Is Wrongly Taught.

And as such it needs to be put in its place. For it has a place—a perfectly good, suitable, proper, modest place in the education of a child. This is the place that arithmetic, correctly taught, has in modern education. But its place is not the place of a monarch, or a huge, overweening ogre such as it is given in schools conducted by people who are not educators. What arithmetic needs is to be put in its rightful place.

Can't Be Hurried.

Now, there's a funny thing about arithmetic. If you lead it calmly and at a natural pace, it'll come along. But if you drive it and hurry it and make it overwork, it'll balk and buck and cause you a lot of trouble and worry. This is what is being done to it in thousands of classrooms today, and children—not to mention parents—are suffering for it.

It's really amazing how much importance has been given to arithmetic through the generations. Apparently most of this importance is due to the mental discipline that is supposed to result from the forcible feeding of arithmetic. Mental agony I should call it, which is not mentally developing. Young minds should not do their growing painfully. In fact, it isn't growing if it's done that way.

Arithmetic shouldn't tower head and shoulders over all the live, enriching subjects, the study of which fit a child for the world he lives in so wholeheartedly while little, and will live in later, when he's grown.

A tremendous amount of time is spent on arithmetic in the lower grades which is wasted time. It is wasted time for several reasons. Wasted because it uses time which could be far more productively spent in other ways. And it is wasted because arithmetic is fed too fast to the younger children and before they are ready for it, so that it takes them many times as long as it should to assimilate it. If it were left for later they could learn the same subject matter in a fraction of the time.

Nature Has Her Speeds.

It makes me think of one of the experiments conducted by Arnold Gesell of Yale in some of his research with babies. The details of the particular experiment escape me, but it had to do with two children of the same age, strength, etc. One was given too early a certain few steps to play on. Weeks and weeks passed before she was able to get from the floor to the third step. The second child was not allowed near these steps until a much later period. When introduced to the steps, in about a week she had climbed them. In a few days she mastered muscular co ordinations which it had taken the other child 7 or 8 or 9 weeks to accomplish. Why? Because she had reached the correct stage of menta

POSITIVELY the smartest people seem to peruse this colm! No less than five winners of last week's street name origin game (hm! a rhyme) had correct answers in the first mail on Monday. So space crowds out the several runners-up. South side leads because of Dora Goldstine, U. of C.; Jane Grant, Harper avenue, and George L. Deverall, St. Lawrence avenue; Rogers Park is represented by Charles C. Riddell and the west side by Adele W. Sabath of West Congress street.

They all guessed promptly that the answer to last Sunday's poser was Rush street. Besides—they knew and wrote reams about Dr. Benjamin Rush, descendant of Cromwell and signer of the Declaration of Independence, the Philadelphia surgeon for whom it was named. This department is properly edified and impressed.

Now, will you west siders even up the score by informing our public what important street in your section is named for the Kentucky estate of an eloquent American statesman? It's first title was a synonym—and still is—for a country boy. In case this is your first experience, Mrs. Leonard Bridges suggested this diversion and the first accurate answers received are the first printed. It's just for fun.

Geno Forbes Herrick writes from Washington about the penalties of owning three dogs: "John and I, going domestic, decided to buy a vacuum cleaner and had two rival machines left here for demonstration. Tonight, laying aside all journalistic dignity, we tried out the machines. And since the main reason for the purchase is to make our living room look a little less like a kennel, we wanted to get the one that was death to dog hair. So John went a round plucking hair out of our dogs while I vacuumed it up. Perhaps we'll get the dogs to write a testimonial for the winner."

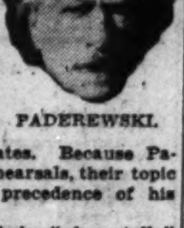
It was a bit disconcerting to the onlookers. Those two great musical geniuses, Jan Ignace Paderewski and Prof. Frederick Stock, were observed chatting at the Ann Arbor music fête about plans for their appearance last week at the Evanston music festival, Edward Moore relates. Because Paderewski dislikes rehearsals, their topic was the order of precedence of his numbers.



PADEREWSKI.

Confident that their "shop talk" embraced exchanges of appreciation about this or that composition, interspersed with eulogies of composers and such, some one approached Prof. Stock as they separated and asked what Paderewski had to say about the music.

"O, the music?" echoed the conductor. "Why, we didn't talk about that."

An Ultra Smart Wardrobe for a Nominal Sum

Slender Purse Emulates Money Bags.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Keeping up with the styles on a limited income is a feat of no mean order. It takes intelligence, will power and time. Any girl with these three qualities can do it. She can turn herself out with as much chic as Mlle. Money-Bags herself, for the best of Paris fashions are the most discreet, wear longest, and are by long odds the most becoming.

An ultra smart wardrobe achieved at a minimum price is, without exception, the result of careful, brainy planning. It means ruthless abandoning of old clothes that won't get into the new style stride. It means keeping emotions suppressed, for the worst enemy of the woman who wants to dress well on next to nothing a year is her own longing for pretty things.

The wardrobe must be visioned in its entirety, right down to the final button, and no allowance for mistakes made. Only the very rich can afford clothes errors, because they don't have to wear 'em so all the world may see.

Attention to Color.

Unlimited chic on a limited income means strictest attention to color, and to materials. Choose the smartest of colors, and never incorporate more than three into your season's wardrobe. Two are better. Don't make the mistake of having only neutral shades, but lively, delicate and vivid colors should be kept in bounds of accessories and such minor parts of the ensemble complete.

Choose the best materials, because they alone are genuinely smart, and if you must have fewer clothes because of this, do so without regret. You will be repaid in style returns on your investment. Leave any flashy or fantaisie fabrics to others less wisely economical than yourself.

Think first of the ensembles you wear most often, and put your noblest efforts into getting them just right. It's a mathematical certainty that you'll be judged by your most frequently worn clothes. This doesn't mean neglect of costumes for other occasions, for chic is as well rounded as Venus de Milo, and should look as pleasing at all hours and from every angle. It's just plain foolishness to let yourself go on a sports clothes orgy if you do nothing in the way of sports, and the same thing applies to any other special breed of costume.

Suit Is Invaluable.

This spring the girl who buys her chic at a bargain can, with forethought, find a suit that will serve for wear around town, for spectator sports, for travel and for the country. The suit is a godsend to the whole feminine world, and if you can only have one daytime outfit, the suit is your salvation. Whether it be knitted, severe, or dressmakery depends on where and with whom you are going to wear it.

Time was when the suit could be changed in aspect only by a shift of blouses, but in this year of 1931, a suit of parts may very well have two skirts—one silk and one wool. It may, on the other hand have two jackets, or a jacket and a sweater in a totally different color, and there is always the blouse transformation feature. A suit jacket, besides playing various rôles, can, this season, be worn as a separate wrap over printed or plain summer frocks. There are few places a style bred jacket can't go, this summer.

Clever planning does one beautiful thing for the wardrobe. It eliminates useless and excessive nicknacks, and increases the simplicity of effect, which is the vital part of style. One complete set of accessories may be made to serve with all daytime clothes, but they must be of good quality and fit the color scheme selected. As an example, a well cut pair of pumps, without extraneous decoration, and in kid or fine calfskin may be worn all through the day, and often far into the night. One coat of irreproachable quality is, by the same reasoning, sufficient to squire all daytime dresses.

A Furless Coat.

The spring coat for the limited wardrobe this season will be a furless affair. A separate fur scarf can be worn with such a coat, and being unattached, it goes just as well with a suit and with a dress on warm days or evenings. I have chosen Mainbocher's light gray woolen coat shown in a sketch today as an ideal coat for the girl with a small income, because it is supremely smart and can be worn over so many different frocks. This coat is straight in line and the back is held in at the waistline by a self-material belt. The tiny cape caps over the sleeves give it a world of cachet, and the loose front may be worn open as shown, or wrapped around.

With this coat is a Mainbocher frock of fine striped, ribbed tub silk in pale gray, green, black and orange, the stripes worked to give the skirt an unusual pattern. The velvet ribbon sash of bright green is attached under two striped silk flowers. This sash makes the dress more formal, and worn with a green leather belt it is suitable for morning or spectator sports.

The gray wool coat may also be worn over simple printed crêpe or chiffon frocks. This makes an ensemble dressy enough for bridge, the matinee, and the country club afternoon.

For spectator sports, country wear, and for traveling, nothing is better than the tricot suit, with accompanying blouses and sweaters. Augusta Bernard's tricot suit, shown in our second sketch, is the smartest one in Paris for such purposes. Both the hip length jacket and the skirt are made of fine green tricot, plaited with the tiniest of plaits.

The blouse is made of alterating bands of natural flax and of green tricot. The gloves are chamois skin egg white is the amount generally used in an ordinary white mountain icing. A cup of sugar to each egg white will produce a stiffer icing and a sweeter one.

A sirup may be cooked to the proper stage and without crystals, but still the icing may not be all that it should be. We must consider the condition of the egg whites. For the smoothest icing the whites should not be beaten until the sirup has finished cooking. I find it best to put the egg whites into the bowl in which the icing is to be beaten and just the instant the sirup is cooked and has been drawn to the back of the stove begin beating the whites.

As soon as they are beaten stiff, add sirup in a tiny stream, beating all the time as you pour. Egg whites that stand for a while after they are beaten never produce the smoothest of icings. It is not necessary to beat vigorously, but the icing should be kept in motion as the sirup is poured. Continue beating until thick and smooth. Never begin to spread the icing until it is thick enough to hold its shape when dropped from a spoon.

Ice Smoothest Side.

The smoothest side of the cake should be iced. Sometimes the bottom is smoother than the top. Set the cake on an inverted soup plate or cake tin. For just a plain cake pour the icing in the middle of the top and quickly spread to the sides. Turn the dish on which the cake stands rather than the cake itself.

For a fancy cake one must use a simple foundation icing [a white mountain or ornamental frosting is best]. When it has almost set, the designs for the ornamental frosting may be drawn on the foundation icing with a clean, sharp pointed instrument like a skewer. If a paper pattern is first prepared the larger designs may be put on the icing and traced around. Even the designs that are to fill in may be drawn in with a skewer. Then these lines are easily followed with the icing. When the main design is in evenly it is not so difficult to complete the details free hand. The idea is to keep the design neat and the details uniform in size.

As icing is being spread, that left in the bowl should be covered up with a damp cloth to prevent a crust from forming. But do not let cloth touch icing. If a fluffy icing happens to become too stiff to spread smoothly it may be restored to the original consistency by the addition of either a tiny amount of boiling water or lemon juice. The kind of cake on which the icing is put will determine whether lemon juice or water should be used.

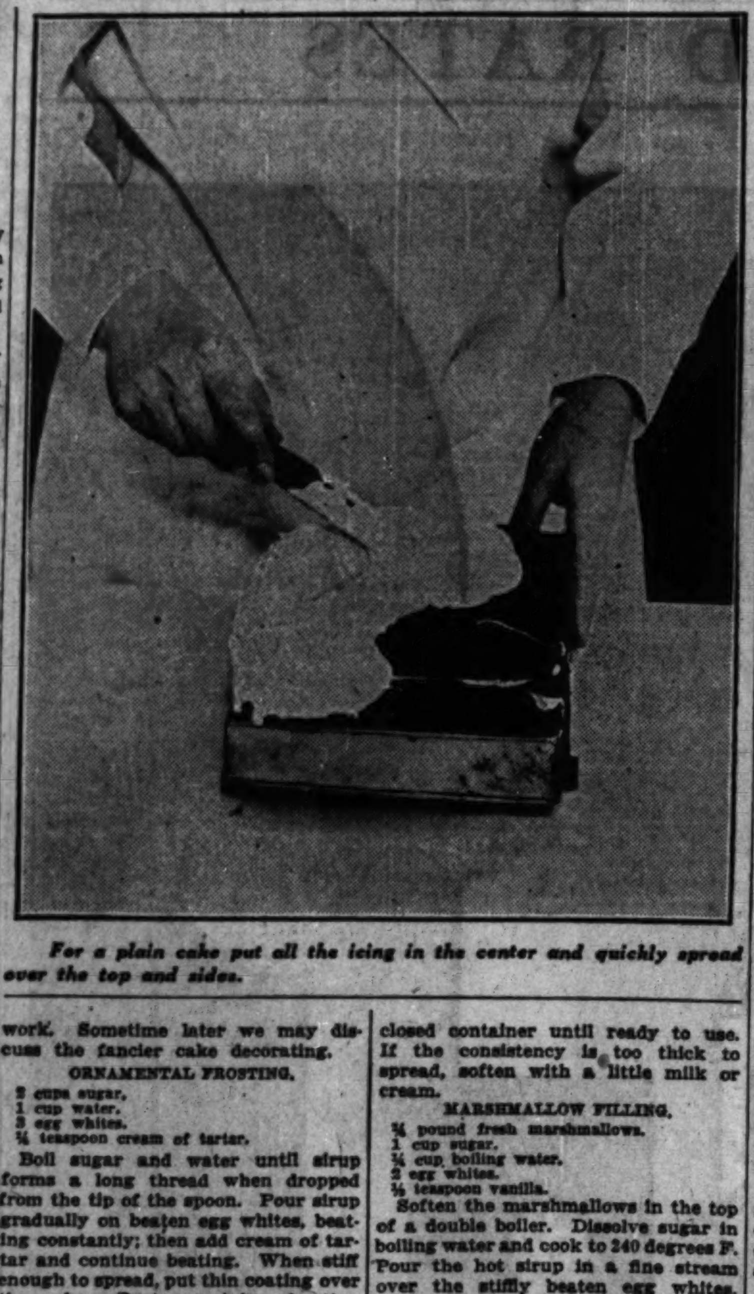
Decoration Aids.

Candied fruits, candied rose petals and violets, citron angelica, and small candies are aids in decoration. In the use of these articles good taste in the combination of colors and flavors should be exercised and it should never be overdone.

Butter icings are not so difficult to make, neither are they so troublesome to keep in good condition while they are being spread. The main thing to keep in mind is to cream the butter thoroughly before starting to add the confectioners' sugar. If cream or fruit juice is added for additional wetting material one has to be careful to add enough sugar to produce an icing sufficiently thick not to run when spread on the cake.

In applying these icings to plain cake, there is nothing better than a spatula. The spreading should be done quickly and once the icing is smooth and even it should not be touched, especially after it has begun to set. Spreading the knife over the surface after it begins to stiffen is sure to produce a roughened unattractive surface.

The following recipes will give the amateur a variety to work with. When two or three are mastered one then has a foundation on which to work. Sometime later we may discuss the fancy cake decorating.



For a plain cake put all the icing in the center and quickly spread over the top and sides.

ORNAMENTAL FROSTING.

2 cups sugar.
1 cup water.
3 egg whites.
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar.

Boil sugar and water until sirup forms a long thread when dropped from the tip of the spoon. Pour sirup gradually on beaten egg whites, beating constantly; then add cream of tartar and continue beating. When stiff enough to spread, put thin coating over the cake. Beat remaining frosting until cold and stiff enough to keep in shape after being forced through pastry tube. After first coating on cake has hardened, cover with a thick layer and crease for cutting. If frosting is too stiff to spread smoothly, thin with few drops of water. With a pastry bag and variety of tubes, cake may be ornamented as desired.

CONFECTIONERS' FROSTING.

¼ cup liquid [water, fruit juice, cream, or milk].
1¾ cups sifted confectioners' sugar.
¼ teaspoon vanilla or other flavoring.

Mix ingredients and use, adding a few drops more liquid or a little more sugar as it is needed to make a mixture that will remain in place. If hot liquid is used, the frosting will thicken more on cooling.

COFFEE COCOA FROSTING.

2 tablespoons butter.
3 tablespoons strong boiling hot coffee.
3 tablespoons cocoa.
1 cup confectioners' sugar.

Melt the butter and cocoa in the coffee and stir in sugar. If more coffee is needed, add it a drop at a time.

SOUR CREAM FUDGE FROSTING.

2 cups sugar.
2-3 cup sour cream.
1 teaspoon vanilla.
¼ teaspoon salt.

Melt the chocolate over hot water, add the sugar, mix well and add cream slowly. Boil without stirring to 236 degrees F., or until mixture forms soft ball when tried in cold water. Pour on marble slab or platter, which has been wiped with a damp cloth. Leave undisturbed until cool. Add vanilla and salt, work with spatula until thick and creamy. Keep in a closed container until ready to use. If the consistency is too thick to spread, soften with a little milk or cream.

MARSHMALLOW FILLING.

1 cup sugar.
¼ cup boiling water.
2 egg whites.
½ teaspoon vanilla.

Soften the marshmallows in the top of a double boiler. Dissolve sugar in boiling water and cook to 240 degrees F. Pour the hot sirup in a fine stream over the stiffly beaten egg whites, beating constantly as the sirup is added. Add marshmallows and continue to beat until smooth and thick. Add extract and spread on cake.

CREOLE FROSTING.

1 generous cup granulated sugar.
1 scant cup brown sugar.
½ cup boiling water.
2 egg whites.
4 ounces bitter chocolate.

Dissolve the sugar in boiling water. Wash down crystals from sides of pan. Cover and let boil 3 or 4 minutes. Uncover and boil without stirring to 240 degrees F., then pour on stiffly beaten egg whites, beating constantly as the sirup is added. Add the flavoring and beat until thick and smooth. Melt chocolate over lukewarm water [110 degrees F.]. This will require an hour or longer if chocolate is left in one piece. Grated chocolate will melt more rapidly. Spread the icing on the cake and when firm pour the melted chocolate on top.

ALMOND ICING.

2 egg yolks.
Powdered sugar.

This icing is used to keep cake from discoloring a white icing and also furnish a smooth surface free of crumbs for icing. Work the paste and yolks of eggs to a smooth paste. Dredge board with powdered sugar. Knead mixture and roll into sheet. Cut this as desired to fit cake. Press edges of paste together and the paste itself upon the cake to avoid air spaces or places where air can enter. When ready to ice the cake, spread icing over the almond paste covering.

Two Jacket Ensemble.

An ensemble is shown in another sketch, one that may be worn all day long by a change of jackets, and one that will do for informal summer evening wear in a pinch. The frock is made of black lusterless silk crêpe, like crêpe romaine, and it is trimmed with stitched bands and two tiny revers at the neckline, made of Swiss embroidered batiste. The jacket shown is white Swiss embroidered batiste and is most dressy, with its flared sleeves and peplum. It is held closed by a black patent leather belt that functions on the dress also.

Another jacket which may be worn with this matches the dress and is trimmed with stitched bands. This jacket makes the ensemble a strictly practical daytime outfit. The model comes from Philippe et Gaston.

One of the most distinguished summer evening frocks in Paris is shown in another sketch. It is perfect for most occasions even in highly discriminating society. Mainbocher makes this frock of black silk crêpe, printed with small green and pink flowers, and the little jacket is of the same stuff. The bodice with its crossed bands that are twisted into a belt, and its twisted shoulder straps is supremely smart, and also most practical. The long gloves match the flowers in the print. With the jacket on, this frock may be worn in daylight.

The silk tricot hat shown in the small sketch is good for all day and evening wear. The Chanel gloves of white kid suit most occasions. The mother of pearl flower necklace is suitable for afternoon and for evening, also, as is the antelope bag from Worth with its gold bar fastening. The polished kid sandals do for evening and day.

Bugbear of Arithmetic Is Child's Worry

Too Many Youngsters Learn to Hate It.

and physical development for this kind of physical achievement. Nature has her own speeds, as every close observer knows.

Homework Experiments.

The idea that quantities of arithmetic homework advance a pupil in that subject is an exploded idea. A child who does a regular or strenuous assignment of arithmetic homework will not do better work each day because of the homework of the night before. In fact, he will do superior work in a superior way if his mind has a rest from the eternal grappling with figures.

It is a simple law of psychology that we learn not only by doing, but by intervals of not doing—a law which is not recognized enough in the matter of giving out homework, not only in arithmetic but in all subjects.

Many modern schools have put this principle to the test and proved it. Many schools which have ceased to give homework, in general, have found the children doing better work and going faster because they're fresher. And also they've found children doing independent, interesting study of their own volition at home.

Three Reasons.

One reason why this subject of arithmetic is again being written about here, today, is because the previous articles appeared daily and so did not reach those who are only Sunday readers. Also, the flood of letters almost pathetically thanking me for my efforts on behalf of the victims of arithmetic, as it is taught, brought home to me more strongly than ever the relief that both children and parents need from this fetish of arithmetic—and incidentally, homework in general. This may seem to be only a school matter, but it is not. With groans, thousands of parents will tell you how much it has to do with the parent-child relationship and with child training.

The third reason for this article is an announcement made in the papers recently which serves to illustrate how misguidedly arithmetic is enthroned in the kingdom of education. The announcement was made by the superintendent of one of the immense public school systems of this country that for the remainder of the spring he had planned an intensive drive on arithmetic throughout the schools. In these modern days, such a pronouncement is enough to make one's hair stand on end.

There are only two things to do at the present time to bring relief. One is for parents and educators to try to change our systems of education to make the school fit the child, instead of making the child fit the school. When the school fits the child, then arithmetic will be forced out of the limelight.

Your Attitude Can Help.

The other thing to do until these changes come is for parents whose children are suffering from arithmetic to help them by their own attitude toward it. First, it goes without saying, though we'll say it, that parents will show an interest in all their children's studies and their progress. But in cases where the child has become overanxious and discouraged over arithmetic, the best attitude for the parents to take is one which will relieve the tension the child feels and ignore marks and results.

This may be done in several ways. First, a visit to the teacher to make her understand and lessen the pressure is usually helpful. Then, let your son or daughter feel that you consider other subjects just as important, if not more so. Avoid mentioning arithmetic in any but the most casual way. If your worried child tells you he got low marks, say "Did you?" and let it go at that. Let him take a mental vacation from the subject, at least while he is at home.

This will tend to loosen up that tension which he undoubtedly experiences whenever arithmetic is in sight or hearing. That tension creates nervousness, and actually keeps his mind from functioning, so that his power to work with figures becomes paralyzed.

By some such mental attitude as this one outlined you who are in a greater or less degree victims of arithmetic-worry can make your child more relaxed and happier, and help him to put arithmetic in its place. And so remove, partially at least, this bug bear—so help slay the monster that threatens so many children's leisure and peace of mind, and put instead a useful tool in its place.

Now we are twirling; now we stand still;
Now we are off over meadow and hill!

Who is to follow? He who can fly
As fleet as the wind that brushes us by.

A teeter and then a merry-go-round!
Our heads in the clouds, our feet on the ground.

Wedding Procedure

By Helen Bartlett

Etiquette questions will be answered on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Miss Helen Bartlett, Sunday department, Chicago Tribune.

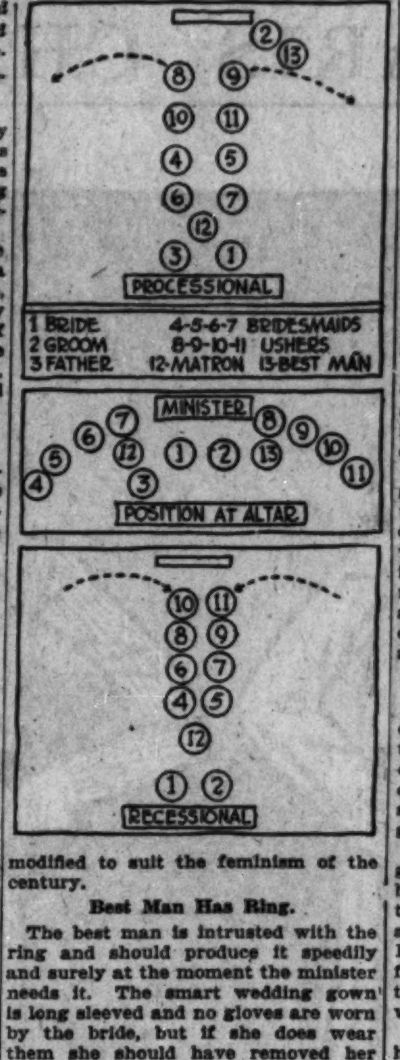
HAVING disposed of preliminary plans, budgets, duties, and dress for the benefit of the season's crop of brides we're getting pretty close to last minute instructions in this course for brides-to-be.

The church wedding is still the favorite for most brides—and that's a custom we approve of heartily. Pomp, and ceremony, and solemnity properly belong to matrimony, which is one of the three BIG things of life. But the small wedding is no less correct and, in many cases, no less dignified and truly beautiful.

Order of the Processional.

Today we will talk about the mechanics [funny word but about the best we can think of] of the ceremony. First and foremost comes the processional.

It is confusing to state just how the procession should enter a church, stand during the ceremony and exit. The three little diagrams given with this article are a better answer.



The diagrams apply, of course, to a church wedding. But the same order of procedure is equally correct for a home wedding or one in a ballroom of a hotel. If the bridal party is smaller, all that is necessary is to eliminate from the diagrams such attendants as are dispensed with in the particular case and you will have the correct order.

Whether a wedding is held in a home or hotel some sort of improvised altar should be used. That is, some place should be set aside for the minister to stand and should be decorated with at least a palm or bouquets of flowers. Then there should be either pillows or a prayer bench for the bride and groom and their attendants to use in that part of the ceremony where they are obliged to kneel.

Duties of the Ushers.

To get back to the church wedding. Before the entrance of the bridal procession there are certain things that must be attended to by the ushers. The left side of the church is reserved for the family of the bride and the right for the family of the groom. When a wedding guest arrives at the church door he or she tells the usher whether he wishes to be seated on the bride's or the groom's side of the church. If the guest does not state which side, the usher asks the question and then proceeds up the aisle with the guest and seats her accordingly. If a man and woman enter together the usher offers the woman his arm and the man walks on the other side of her.

After all the guests are seated and the bridal party has arrived and is waiting in the church vestibule two of the ushers stretch white ribbons over the entrance to the pews. Then the organist plays the wedding march and the bridal party enters as indicated in the diagram above.

When the bridal procession nears the altar the groom should come forward to greet the bride and take her up the altar steps.

Join Party at Altar.

The groom and best man are never in the processional and only the groom is in the recessional. At the first strains of the wedding march they come out of the sanctuary on the right and take their places at the altar, awaiting the coming of the bridal party.

The bride's father used to wait slightly behind the bride until the minister said, "Who giveth this woman to be married to this man?" and then stepped forward and gave his daughter away. But now it is often arranged so that he need not wait for this part of the ceremony, but by the very act of taking her to the altar says as much in intent and may return to his seat with the rest of the family as soon as he has discharged this duty. All this depends, of course, upon the particular ceremony to be read and the arrangements made with the minister or priest.

The word "obey" is now often struck from the text of the marriage ceremony, and, in fact, it is otherwise modified to suit the feminism of the century.

Best Man Has Ring.

The best man is intrusted with the ring and should produce it speedily and surely at the moment the minister needs it. The smart wedding gown is long sleeved and no gloves are worn by the bride, but if she does wear them she should have removed her left glove and given it to the maid or matron of honor.

She should, before the ceremony, put her engagement ring on her right hand until after the wedding so that when the groom puts the wedding ring on her finger she will not have to stop and fuss about taking off the engagement ring.

After the minister says the words, "I now pronounce you man and wife," the groom turns to the bride and it is customary for him to kiss her, but this kiss is often given in the vestibule after the ceremony rather than at the altar in full view of the sentimental guests.

A Warning to Guests.

However, at the minister's words the procession is ready to leave the church, as indicated in the third little diagram. It is here that a warning needs to be given to wedding guests. It is rude to follow the procession out of the church too soon. A decent lapse should be allowed for the bride and her party to get into their motors before any one else appears on the church steps. In this interim conversation and laughter among the guests is in decidedly bad taste in a church of any denomination.

It is perfectly polite, of course, to greet friends and to say how lovely was the bride, but all this must be done in a whisper or at least in a low voice and with no laughter. The family of the bride and that of the groom next proceed out of the church. Then after they have gone the guests may disperse, but always without crowding and confusion.

At Home or Hotel.

In the case of a home or hotel wedding where it is impossible to seat all the guests, it is needless to say that everybody should stand during the ceremony. White ribbons can be stretched, forming an aisle among the guests, for the bridal party.

In the case of a home ceremony the guests should be sure to stand well back from the improvised altar, so that the families can have first place and see the ceremony at close range. It is not the rule, but merely expected, for the families of the bride and groom to take their stand nearest the improvised altar.

After the ceremony in a home or hotel the guests should allow a few minutes in which the bride and groom are greeted and kissed by their families and in which a line can form before they go up to offer their congratulations to the groom and the best wishes to the bride. No one ever congratulates a bride.

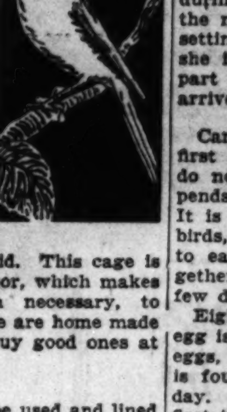
Caring for a Canary

By B. Laura Brockway

WHERE it is only intended to mate one pair of birds, the breeding cage deserves special attention. No cage smaller than 9x12 should be used, and one double this size is better. My own cages are 13x13, made of half inch mesh wire. This sets into a galvanized pan, 13½x13½, four inches high, in which I put sand which can be changed occasionally. One perch runs from seed cup to water cup. There is a small perch across one corner which supports the nest. Another small perch or swing can be added after the eggs are laid. This cage is made with a large door, which makes it convenient, when necessary, to reach the nest. These are home made cages, but you can buy good ones at any bird store.



Wire nests should be used and lined with burlap, or some cloth which allows ventilation. It is well to sprinkle this lining with lice powder and then sew some cotton or good nesting material on this to start the nest. Extra nesting material should be put within reach of the birds so they can finish building.

After the cage is in readiness both birds can be put in, and they will soon become acquainted in their new home. It is well to lay a cloth over the corner where the nest is. This should not be large enough to darken the cage, but it gives the birds a feeling of privacy. Naturally, birds like their nest hidden.

Like people, each pair is different in disposition. Some quarrel violently, some are harmonious; some males are abusive and yet make excellent fathers. I always leave the pair together during the entire breeding season, for the male feeds the hen while she is setting, keeps the eggs warm while she is off for exercise, and does his part in feeding the young when they arrive.

Careful watch should be kept the first few days to see that the birds do not harm each other. Much depends on the attitude of the female. It is sometimes necessary to change birds, as all pairs are not attracted to each other and will not live together. You can generally tell in a few days by their actions.

Eight days after mating the first egg is laid. Some will have only two eggs, the first brood, but the average is four or five, one being laid each day. Some people carefully take the first three eggs out with a spoon and put in cotton, returning them to the nest the fourth day, so that all will hatch at the same time.

My birds have always started to set after the second egg is laid, which makes hatching start fourteen days later. If, after sixteen or seventeen days, no eggs hatch they probably are not fertile.

Discarded Infant Accessories in Your Home Can Bring Great Happiness to the Mother Unable to Provide for Her Baby.

PERHAPS the most momentous and important event in any home is the arrival of an infant. For months before there is preparation on a large scale. A layette of the finest materials, a nursery of the most modern equipment and every conceivable device for the baby's comfort and happiness are thought of as an appropriate welcome for this new master or mistress of the home.

There can be no such extravagant greeting for the newcomer in the homes of our less prosperous citizens, although the happiness of the parents is of no smaller degree. Into numerous squalid and dingy rooms babies are born each day. Perhaps the mother hasn't been able to assemble a layette, at all. She's been so busy trying to find food for the other tiny mouths dependent upon her and lack of employment has prohibited any kind of an expenditure. No downy bassinet insures the comfort of the new arrival and there is no roomy carriage to wheel him out of doors on fine, spring days or to make the mother's visit to the Infant Welfare an easy one.

Baby outgrows his first tiny garments in such a short time that they seldom become worn out and where the layette has been a generous one some of the little dresses, slips, and booties never adorn their young owners. If you have any of these, keeping them will deprive some needy mother of them when she might put them to good use. Think what a joy it would be to her to know that her child will have such necessities when it arrives and think what a worry she would be relieved of if you give them to her.

Baby carriages and cribs are in demand, too. I have numerous requests from families where, for lack of a carriage, the young child must be kept indoors most of the time. If your baby has outgrown his carriage, and you'd like to dispose of it, there are many homes where it would be gratefully received. Please let me know of any infant accessories you can donate. I shall be happy to see that they are placed with deserving, needy applicants.

Clothing Urgently Needed.

"I am writing you in behalf of a young man whom I met in a convalescent home a short time ago. Due to months of illness, he has been unable to work and is in urgent need of clothing. He wears size 37 in a suit and underwear, cap or hat 6⅞, shirts 14½, shoes 6½s, and socks size 10. While all the clothing is badly needed in order to secure work, the suit and hat are needed most.

"A. P."

After a long siege of sickness, becoming established in the business world again is no easy task. Will you help this young man by giving him the clothing which will improve his appearance and consequently his chance of securing work.

Needs Radio Batteries Now.

"Thank you so much for the radio set you secured for me. It has no batteries, however, and since I cannot use it without them and cannot buy them myself, I wonder if you would ask another reader for them. I am an invalid, you know, and will never be able to work again and a radio is so much company for me. A and B batteries and six tubes are what I need.

"E. C."

Having a radio set which doesn't work isn't much help when one is looking for something with which to pass the long hours of the day. If you are dismantling your set or are planning to buy a new one, perhaps you'll have these parts to donate.

Patterns and How to Use Them

—By Clotilde—

Flattering Lines, Captivating in Their Simplicity, Mark the New Summer Designs.

THE wrapped bodice and nipped in waistline of the dress shown in pattern No. 2822 is one of the newest models and one that should be becoming to slender or full figures. The bodice closes in surplice fashion, and a graceful bow made of the material used for the shawl collar finishes it gracefully.

The bodice cuts in one until it joins the skirt. You will find the pattern an easy one to follow. Baste the bodice seams, try on, and fit carefully. Finish the seams and make the collar and put on the bodice. The lower edge of the bodice tapers from the natural waistline at the left side to a point well below the hips at the right side, contributing further to the effect of slenderness.

To this line the circular skirt is joined, flaring gracefully at the bottom where it measures for size 36, about 3¾ yards. Circular skirts should never be finished at the bottom until they have been allowed to hang for several days, and even after that some materials may stretch a little more.

It isn't easy to even the bottom of a skirt of this kind. A square rule should be a part of the equipment of every sewing room, and with this rule the work of evening is easy. Put the dress on, stand on a table, and have some kind friend or relative do the work for you. One arm of the rule must at all times be kept resting on the table, and then with pins, French chalk, or pencil mark at close intervals the length desired. Always let work of this kind rest on a table so it won't pull and stretch. Even off and finish with a narrow bias binding.

The pattern provides for long and short sleeves, the short ones having turned up cuffs, matching the collar in material.

Navy blue silk crêpe made the original model, with a lighter blending shade of the same color for the contrast. Crêpe marocain and printed silk crêpe are smart materials.

An exceedingly pretty party frock for the growing girl is shown in pattern No. 2899, and it can be made at home quite easily. The pattern chart that comes with the pattern has clever little sketches that show how the various parts go together. First there is the fitted bodice, with the double capelet that takes the place of sleeves and is particularly smart.

The skirt peplums will have to be entirely finished before being attached to the skirt. They may have the edges bound or picoted, but whichever finish is used must be repeated at the bottom of the skirt. After the skirt is finished and the lower peplum is pinned in place, matching notches in skirt and peplum, it should be basted and then the skirt and peplum are sewed to the lower edge of the bodice. Large perforations on the bodice show the position of the upper peplum.

The narrow belt is made of the dress material. Pale blue or coral pink in taffeta is lovely for a dress of this kind. Crêpe de chine in old fashioned sprigged rosebuds is pretty for a simpler "best," and dotted Swiss, linen, and the candy striped tub silks are all suitable materials.

One of the navy blue flat silk crêpes will make up beautifully in the smart all day dress made by pattern No. 2984. Fasten the narrow belt with one of the stunning enameled buckles that are shown in the shops, and no other trimming is needed. The cowl drapery of the bodice helps conceal breadth and is generally becoming. The curved seaming of the skirt also helps conceal breadth and gives a slender effect through the hips.

After the bodice is finished, cover a medium sized weight with your dress material, fasten it to a bit of ribbon and fasten the ribbon just inside the neck at the center front. This makes the fullness fall gracefully. Printed flat crêpe and wool crêpe are also good materials for this design.

2822—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 and 18 years, and 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅜ yards of 39 inch material with ⅞ yard of 35 inch contrasting and 2¼ yards of lace.

2984—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 and 18 years and 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅞ yards of 39 inch material.

2899—Junior girl's dress. Sizes 8, 10, 12, and 14 years. Size 8 requires 2½ yards of 39 inch material.

White Gold, Platinum the Most Popular.

...increasingly necessary for men to wear a reminder that they're no longer on the loose, and bachelor-free. The men's rings run to a conventional design in one of the white metals. Curious, though, if the sale is on the increase, that we don't see more men advertising their safely married status so. I rarely ever see one. However, I don't think it is improper that they should be worn by men, since the honest gentleman will be just as upright and honorable with or without a decorated finger.

Some rings are still inscribed, simply for the most part, with initials from so and so to so and so.

In an amusing old book I happened to run across in the library, one day, published in an era when a wedding ring looked like the tie that bound for keeps, I found it a common practice formerly to inscribe in wedding rings expressions of unyielding constancy. Perhaps the depth, breadth and thickness of some of the old-time rings is explained in the room needed for some of the elaborate, lengthy inscriptions. This inscription for instance: "I will be yours while breath endures." Another inscription reads: "Not two, but one, till life be done."

A religious strain predominated in many of the ring inscriptions of the time. "I have obtained whom God ordained," one reads. Another: "God guide our hearts aright." And: "Each for the other, but both for God."

A Little Comedy.

Not all the "posies" bore a religious flavor, however. One comic of the period had inscribed, "Carrie ...." Or, maybe he wasn't a comic ..., a man who'd looked them all over and found Carrie the most eligible for his ring wearing.

... a bad idea is injected into the ring which bore this couplet:

"This circle, though but small about, The devil, Jealousy, will keep out."

... record is made in the case of the widow about to take on a fourth husband that she thought highly of the modern widow's black enamel ring. Probably because she lived too soon to hear about it. Anyway, the burial of three spouses didn't kill her optimism, for her fourth ring read: "If I survive, I will have five."

TODAY we will tell how to finish the brim, how to put the baqua hat together, and how to trim it. We left the brim wired, hemmed, and pressed last week and will now go on with the rest of the brim. Mark the center front of the brim with colored thread. The measurements given are for the left side of the brim; the right side is about the same, only note that it is 9 inches from the center of the brim on the right side, while on the left it is 10 inches.

Mark the measurements with pins as you read the directions. Begin at the center front and measure 10 inches, mark with a pin. At the next inch put a pin, and another pin at the next inch. This makes 12 inches. Lap this 12 inch back to the 10 inch mark. This begins to form one side of a box plait that is on both sides of the brim. Measure 2 more inches, which will be 14 inches, and crease down on the 14 inch mark, another inch, then another inch, which will be 16 inches. Lap the 14 inch crease on the 16 inch mark. This makes the box plait complete. These plaits run smaller into the head size.

Begin now on the right side of the brim and mark the plait the same. It is 10 inches between finished plaits in the back of the brim. Mark one inch at both the front and the back of the brim and pin the crown on to the brim at the back and the front. Two inches from the center front of the crown the brim should be 2 inches wide, 4 inches from the center front of the crown the brim is 2½ inches wide, just back of the plait it measures 2¾ inches deep, as you have your crown pinned on the 1 inch mark in the back.

Measure the right side in the same way. Sew the crown on to the brim firmly with a heavy thread. Sew a ribbon band in the head size. Adjust the brim wire and join it in the back. Put a wet cloth over the plaits and press well. A No. 2 ribbon is drawn around the crown and tied at the back in a small bow.

The flower pads are made by fitting a piece of crinoline the size of the plaits on both sides. Forget-me-nots in orchid, blue, and pink are sewed on to this crinoline as thick as they can be put together, letting them extend over the edges all the way around. Two bunches of the flowers are required for this trim.

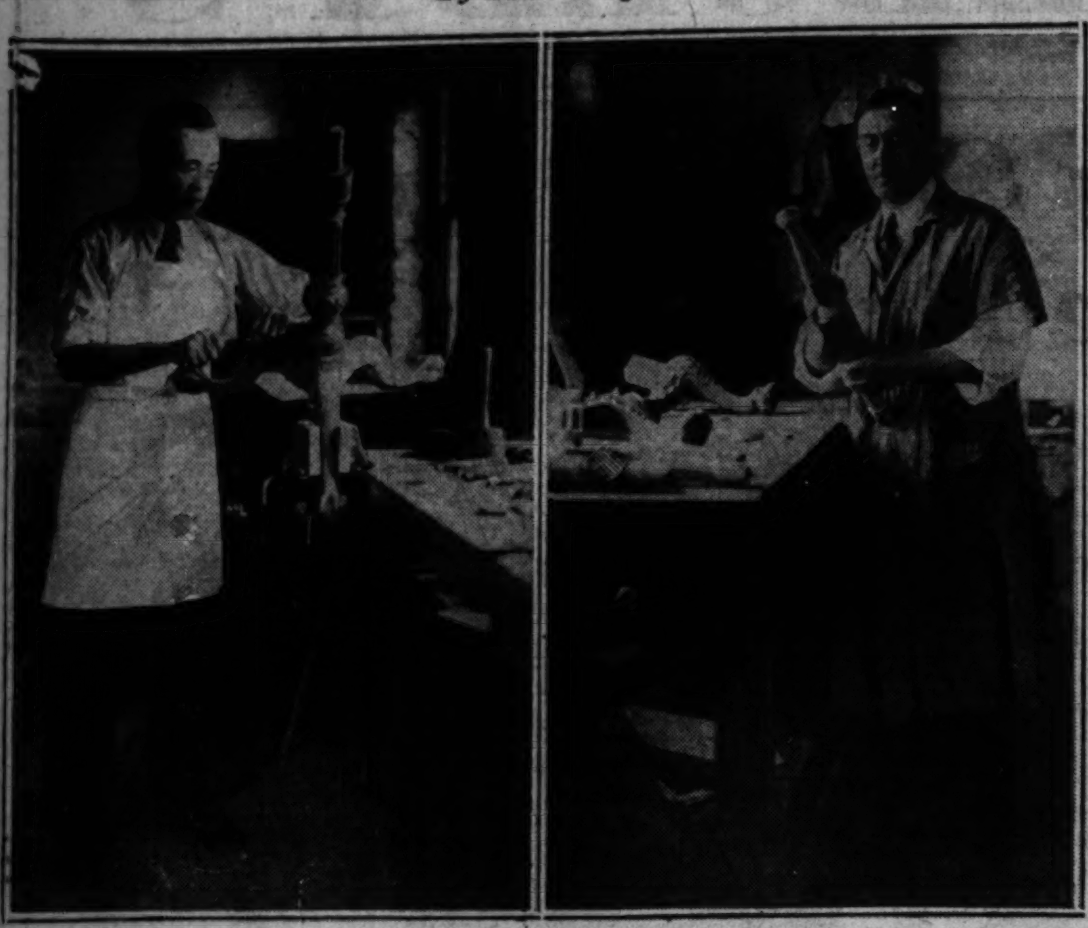
Creating Fine Furniture

—By Edith Weigle—



Ernest Hicock, left, and George Rutherford, right, have spent years mastering the art of making and carving fine furniture. Their skill approaches that of Duncan-Phyfe, Savery and McIntire, whose pieces they often reproduce.

Excellent Copies of Distinguished Old Pieces Bring Laurels to the Modern Craftsman.

FINE furniture, like Rome, was not built in a day. Nor is it the creation of unskilled hands—factory stuff that is turned out by the thousands. Fine furniture is the product of many intelligent minds: the mind of the designer, the mind of the buyer of woods, that of the expert craftsman, and of the man who says the final word, the inspector.

If one reckons it in terms of time, it takes literally years to make a perfect chair. Only the best and the most carefully seasoned woods are used and seasoning requires time. The man who carves the legs and back has spent long months and even years of apprenticeship before, as a master of his vocation, he turns out products that satisfy his ambitions. He is just as much an artist as the man who creates a beautiful painting or a noble piece of sculpture, or a glorious symphony. And artists are not of mushroom growth. Long years go into their development.

You don't have to know a thing about furniture, either, to tell a chair made by a master craftsman from one that is inferior in wood, construction, and design. The two pieces, placed side by side, bear mute but eloquent testimony to the company back of them.

There is a group of manufacturers in this country who are following the dictates of a high ideal. They are striving for the very best; for them mediocrity is without appeal. The one whose merchandise I am concerned with today is in this class.

This firm gives its skilled workmen, some of them hailing from the birthplace of Duncan Phyfe, others from the shops of famous old furniture makers in London, the most excellent models obtainable, from which reproductions are made. A Gillingham chair in one of their prized pieces. Made by James Gillingham, one of America's distinguished cabinetmakers, it was ordered by a Philadelphia lawyer 140 years ago, and its price then was $50. So sound was its design, so splendid its craftsmanship that year by year its value increased, until last year this chair sold for $8,500 at the Reifsnyder sale in New York.

It is now reproduced to the last detail—in fact, as seen by the picture given herewith—it is almost impossible to tell the original from the well nigh perfect replica, which may be seen in the North Michigan avenue store of this firm.

Of Chippendale inspiration, it has the typical claw and ball feet, the cabriole legs and the elaborate open splat that characterize one phase of the work of the famous English designer. The rear legs are sturdy and extremely simple in contrast to the richly carved front ones.

Another famous piece chosen as a model by this company was the writing table used by George Washington during the sessions of the first federal congress in New York City in 1789. A copy of this heirloom, executed by craftsmen who rival the skill of the original creator, is also on vie in this store.

The making of this replica was a task occupying eighteen weeks—ten weeks for air drying and scientific curing of the wood; eight weeks for cabinet work and carving and for treatment after each of five successive layers of selected veneer had been applied. Connoisseurs who know and love the priceless original, which is now in Independence hall in Philadelphia, will delight in the fidelity with which today's workmen have conceived its reproduction.

Pictures of two of the workmen who create this fine furniture are shown today. At the left is Ernest Hicock, who began his apprenticeship as a wood carver in London with one of the old cabinet shops. At that time they had practically no machinery and the furniture they made was worked out from the log, almost entirely by hand. While serving his apprenticeship [as is the usual practice in London] he was required to attend art school regularly each week. After completing this first period he worked for several concerns in England and came to this country about five years ago, joined with workers of the company referred to in this article and has been with them ever since.

George Rutherford, at the right in the picture, was born in Ayrshire, Scotland. After serving his apprenticeship he worked on several outstanding jobs, including the British museum, the Guild hall and the Australian Commonwealth building in London. His experience covers not only the various period coverings most commonly used on furniture but also that used in architectural construction.

Mr. Rutherford is one of the master craftsmen who will demonstrate his skill for visitors at an interesting exhibit of fine furniture in the making, now being conducted by this North Michigan avenue furniture store. This offers a splendid opportunity to get a back stage glimpse of the various stages every good chair, table, secretary, etc., goes through on its way to completion.

match the costume in blues, greens, or dark reds for street and sport. Blues may be gay, and greens will be better than browns for wear with a brown suit. Plain white for summer will be called naïve. Get a brown and white or, better still, one that is half white, half navy blue, or black and white (très chic.)

Sorry. This colm's reference last week to Louise Rogers as secretary of the Chicago Woman's club makes something like the 5,321st error of that type. It was the Woman's City club we meant.

Maiden Meditations

—By Sara Moore—

THE CONSCIENTIOUS WORRIER.

There was a day my hair lacked wave . . .
A crisis which, I felt, was grave.

And on March first, in thirty-one,
My right hand stocking had a "run."

How many noted, to condemn,
The day my sport suit ripped its hem?

How could the public overlook
The soggy, pallid pie I cooked?

How oft I've worried—pride is strong—
About new make-up, right or wrong. . .
(Perhaps this verse is too, too long?)

Small things like these can spoil a day
Or turn a raven tress to gray. . . .
But since I saw a red nosed miss
Become a target for a kiss,
I see no cause for deep dejection
When one falls short of sheer perfection.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN.

Add the warm, sweet breath of hope
To some water mixed with soap. . . .
Then a rainbow, frail and bright,
Trembles on a globe of light.

Fragile beauty's quickly gone—
Blow another BIGGER one.
Dreams you've lost aren't worth your tears. . . .
Dream another dream, my dears.

Slip Covers for Summer

—By WillElla de Campi—

Flowered Chintz, Toile de Jouy, Sateens, Striped Linens and Gay Percales Can Dress Up Your Furniture for the Warm Days Ahead.

NOT going to the country this summer? But if you'd like a change, bring a little of the country spirit into your city home by means of gay slip covers. Cover up the heavy, dark upholstery of your furniture with fabrics which are bright and glad. So many delightful transformations may be effected by using new covers and curtains to hide the severity of winter surroundings. Bright chintzes, flowered sateens, perky, printed percales, striped linens, and similar fabrics make fitting backgrounds for the informality of summer days and summer clothes.

Floral materials, small, allover patterns, stripes, or plaids, give most satisfactory results in slip covers. Plain stuffs tend to show wrinkles and magnify even the smallest unavoidable spots. Many shops specialize in making slip covers to order, but if expenses have to be kept at the lowest possible figure, the covers can successfully be made at home if a few simple rules are followed.

Inexpensive and serviceable toile de Jouy with pastoral scenes in leaf green on a cream background is used for a slip cover on the comfortable chaise longue shown in the illustration. A bowl of flowers, a lamp, and smoking set on the table beside it lend enchantment to the group. The same toile, quilted and piped with green, makes summertime covers for twin beds in this room. Window draperies are of plain green rep, matching one of the soft tones of the toile print. Glass curtains are omitted and Venetian blinds painted cream color exclude the warm sunlight without hampering ventilation.

On the floor are green and cream braided rugs. Lamps and side lights have cream colored shades banded in green.

Especially well adapted to slip cover use because it retains its luster in spite of repeated launderings is a new silk fabric of chintz weight. It may be had in delightful floral patterns with true chintz brilliance of color. This material, showing a pattern of wistaria and lilacs with their soft green leaves, on an ivory ground, gives a refreshing sense of coolness when used for slip covers in a sun room.

Glass curtains of mauve theatrical gauze, gathered quite full, give a crisp, clean appearance to the windows. Black and green linoleum covers the floor, and lamps are fitted with ivory shades banded in mauve and green.

In a living room furnished with American colonial and French provincial furniture the upholstered pieces are economically and serviceably fitted with slip covers for the summer. The material used is plaid gingham. Emerald green, yellow, and white with a fine line of black is the color combination. Since the room is of northern exposure, simple draw curtains at the windows are of yellow chambray, finished with a black and emerald green binding. Incidental notes of yellow and green are further introduced in lamps, flower bowls, and other small objects. Hooked rugs in quaint designs combine many deep, rich colors.

Upholstered furniture in another living room has slip covers of glazed chintz with a design in coral color on a chartreuse green ground. Occasional pieces of Biedermeier furniture combine pleasingly with the sofa and chairs. Silver gray grass cloth walls make a cool, restful background, and a raisin colored carpet gives depth to the room.

Chartreuse green organdy window curtains temper the sun's rays to a cooler tone. The curtains are finished with ruffled edges, crossed one over the other at the top and caught back at the middle of the window, over wooden stars painted silver. Graciously welcome, these notes of green, and remarkably well suited to the spirit of summer in almost any interior.

Recipes for Beauty

These Exercises Will Give You That Flat-Hipped Effect That All the New Gowns Are Demanding.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Perhaps you noticed in the papers recently that Chanel, the famous Paris dress designer, picked ten American models to display her dresses before women from all parts of the world.

"Without exception," the report on Chanel's model choosing said, "the girls chosen were tall and flat-hipped, with slender legs."

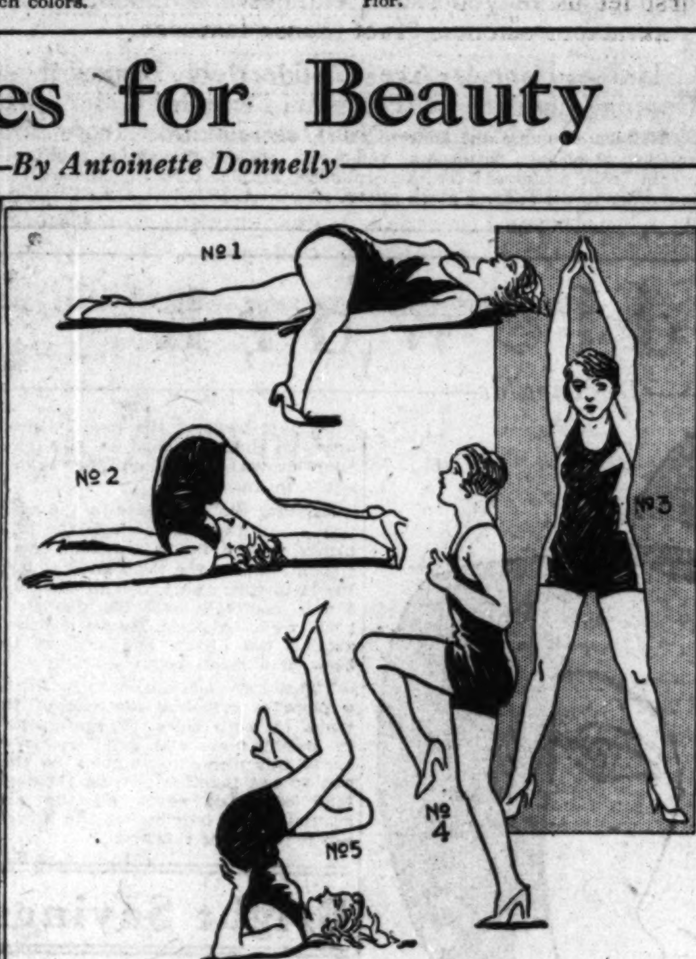
That gives an excellent idea of what a smart Parisian frock needs inside of it. "Tall, flat-hipped, with slender legs!" It's not any particular news that the demand is such. A reminder, rather! And that's why I introduce it here today.

Revamp Your Figure.

You can't all be tall—but flat-hipped and slender-legged, yes! And, flat-hipped and slender-legged, you look taller as well as slighter. The styles keep calling for slenderer and slenderer hips, what with the tight and tighter seaming of skirts over hip lines. Now is the time to get the hips in shape for the coatless season that will be upon us shortly. Dieting alone will not get you that streamline hip or slenderized leg. You've got to work the line thin with fairly strenuous exercise—and DAILY. Not fitfully—but DAILY. So here on this page you'll find a few good exercises to put your legs and hips to work on.

I'm not giving you many. A few well and regularly done are better than a "set" or a "dozen." For the hips you could just take that rolling over on the hips one and get inches off if you'll only do it as if you were going to get inches off or know the reason why.

If you're not too heavy, your heart is in good shape and the rest of you ditto, and you have a back yard or cellar floor to work on, you can add rope skipping with a great deal of benefit to hip and leg. But, unless you are in good shape, this form of exercise might be a bit strenuous for you.



Follow These Exercises.

For Exercise No. 1: Lie flat on your back. Raise the right leg, cross it over the left, and stretch it. Roll over on your hips and repeat with the left leg. Do this ten times morning and night. Keep the head and shoulders close to the floor.

Exercise No. 2: The back roll is an old friend in new employment as a hip reducer. If you can't bring your feet up overhead, get them up as far as you can on a good "heave-ho."

Exercise No. 3: Stand erect with your hands at your sides. Jump, coming down with your feet fairly wide apart. At the same time fling your arms sidewise and up overhead with a clap. With a jump return to the first position. Do this jumping-jack exercise ten times.

Exercise No. 4: Clenching the fists, bend your elbows at your sides. Raise the knees high, alternately, vigorously. Then steam up. Increase your motions to running speed, remaining, however, in a nearly stationary position.

Exercise No. 5: At first don't try to support your back at the waist with your hands and bent elbows. Lie on your back, raise the legs, bend and extend first one, then the other, as in bicycling.

Foreign Missionary Groups Promote Radio Broadcasts

[Further church news will be found in the Metropolitan section.]

By the Rev. John Evans.

RADIO gradually is coming into wider use in religious affairs. The newest move on the part of the church to extend the religious value of broadcasts is made by the Woman's Foreign Missionary society of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mrs. Evelyn Riley Nicholson, national president of the society, has announced that a national hookup over the Columbia system has been arranged for 3 o'clock, Wednesday afternoon.

MRS. EVELYN RILEY NICHOLSON.

Radio listeners have long been familiar with radio preaching. Among the pioneers of this work is the Chicago Sunday Evening club, Orchestra hall. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, radio preacher for the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, has a wide hearing each Sunday afternoon. Possibly the first regular broadcast officially promoted by a denomination is the Lutheran hour, sponsored by the Missouri synod of the Evangelical Lutheran church.

These broadcasts are now going concerns with their regular patrons tuning in at their scheduled periods. But it was left to a woman's organization to conceive of what might be called a nationwide inspirational convention conducted by radio.

Mrs. W. B. Gregory of Downers Grove, a secretary of the Chicago branch of the missionary society, in making the Chicago announcement, declared that interest in the novel radio event is widespread. Among the radio convention speakers are Mrs. Nicholson, wife of Bishop Thomas Nicholson, formerly of Chicago; Bishop Francis J. McConnell of New York and Carol Chen of China. The "College Abroad" movement of the society will be the feature of the broadcast.

Mrs. Gregory pointed out that this novel use of the ether waves in religious matters will be a great boon to women's church societies, made up as they are of home makers, many of whom are unable to attend the regular meetings of their groups.

Dr. Samuel S. Drury, head of St. Paul's school at Concord, N. H., which many famous Chicagoans have attended and where they are now sending their sons, will be the speaker at the Chicago Sunday Evening club tonight. Clifford W. Barnes will give the informal Bible talk at 7:30, and at 7 members of the Western State Teachers college chorus will give a program. Frank D. Loomis, secretary of the Chicago Community trust, will have a part in the meeting.

Dr. Drury was associated with the late Bishop Charles H. Brent during his tenure in the Philippine islands and is one of the leading educators in the east. He will attend several functions while in the city, including the dinner of St. Paul's alumni. During his stay he will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. James Simpson. Dr. Drury has a whimsical style of speaking not unlike that of the late Dr. Samuel McChord Crothers.

Solemn mass, at which his eminence, Cardinal Mundelein, is expected to pontificate, will be celebrated at the Holy Name cathedral at 11 o'clock noon today, with the Very Rev. Msgr. J. J. Horsburgh, archdiocesan director of the propagation of the faith, as assistant priest. The Holy Name cathedral men's choir and boy choristers will sing a new mass composed by Pietro Yon. The choirs will be accompanied by a sixteen piece orchestra and the organ. The Veni, Sancte Spiritus, composed by Father Hoever for solo and chorus, will be sung at the sequence, with Master Elgar Strong of the choristers and Earl Alexander of the men's choir singing the solo parts and with full orchestral accompaniment. The Exultate Justi of Viadana, the sixteenth century composer of ecclesiastical music, whose compositions were featured in the musical program of the cathedral during Holy week, will be sung a capella at the offertory. The Quigley seminary plain chant choir will chant the proper of the mass.

The Disciples of Christ will hold a citywide union vesper service this evening from 5:30 to 6:30 in the North Shore Christian church, corner Magnolia avenue and Ainslie street. The Rev. F. E. Davison, pastor of the Austin Boulevard Christian church, will preside. B. Fred Wise of the University Church of the Disciples will give a twenty minute program of songs. The Rev. Perry J. Rice, executive secretary of the Chicago Christian Missionary society, will deliver a message on the subject "Better Churches."

The service is arranged in celebration of the Pentecost.

Persistency Plus Kruschen—That's All

How One Woman Lost 102 lbs. of Fat

Almost Unbelievable—Nevertheless True

Dear Friends:
You advertise Kruschen Salts for reducing, so I finally tried them and when I started I weighed 219 pounds and when I took them for a year and 3 weeks, I lost exactly 102 pounds.
I am 23 years old and I look at least 5 years younger now than I did when I was fat. I have a picture of myself before and after, so if you want to see them let me know.
I am always telling my friends about the wonderful salts. I am always advertising them.
I took 2 bottles every month for a year and 3 weeks. It amounted to $25 for reducing 102 pounds, but it was worth it. If I can be of any help to you let me know.
Yours truly, Miss Nellie Simpson, 1903 Wayne Street, Swissvale, Pa., Oct. 31, 1930.

Man Takes 3 Inches From Waistline
W. R. Daniels of Richmond Hill, N. Y., writes: "After 2 bottles of Kruschen I've removed 3 ins. from my belt, feel 25% more active, mind is clearer, eruptions have disappeared. Am 46 yrs. old and feel 20 yrs. younger. Kruschen sure is great!"

FIRE

by Charles G. D. Roberts

A Story of the Fight of a Moose and Her Calf, and of a Man, Against the Worst Enemy of the Forest—Flames.

ILLUSTRATION BY LESLIE MICHAELSON.

These strokes were like the strokes of a piledriver, but the bear was ready for them.

THE chill, gray-silver light of the first of dawn, glassy clear but elusive, was stealthily feeling its way down the silent, interminable corridors of the forest. Within the dark heart of a dense hemlock thicket a darker shadow began to take shape, a shadow huge and ungainly like some monster of the early world. It seemed to be nuzzling something at its feet. Presently it lifted a long muzzled and massive head, as if to greet the invading glimmer, and sniffed the air with wide, wet nostrils, and searched the shadows with suspicious eyes.

During the night the great cow moose had given birth to her long legged, sprawling calf; and now, as its mother for a moment stopped licking it, it struggled to its feet and leaned against her shakily, with legs spread wide apart and big ears sagging. When it had steadied itself the mother gently shifted her position to bring its muzzle against her swollen udder, guiding it with her caressing, prehensile lips and coaxing it to nurse.

As the light increased a pair of chickadees awoke from their slumber in the branches overhead and began running up and down the trunk of the ancient hemlock beneath which the moose was standing. Their sharp bills jabbed diligently into the interstices of the ragged bark, in search of torpid beetles and woodlice; and their fine drawn, cheery cries of tsic-a-dee-dee-dee rang startlingly sharp on the moveless air. Then a Canada jay, in his dapper garb of slate-blue, tan, and black, came fluttering down from the high and swaying perch whereon he had slept safe from night prowling marten or weasel. He alighted on a rotting stump within half a dozen feet of the great moose. She snorted at him indignantly for daring to come so near her precious offspring. He stared back at her, unabashed, with his bold, bright eyes, then flirted his tail impertinently, hopped to the ground, and began rummaging briskly among the twigs and dead leaves for something to stay his eager and undiscriminating appetite.

Suddenly, however, he stopped short and stood listening intently, his sleek black head cocked to one side. The great cow, who was watching him stiffened her ears and listened intently, too. What was it he heard which her keen hearing could not catch? Nothing, it seemed to her, but the silence. Except for the thin, sweet conversation of the two chick-a-dees, the woods all about were portentously still. And this was the hour of waking, when the air should have been astir with small, furtive, comfortable sounds. She waved her long ears this way and that; and distended her sensitive nostrils anxiously, but could detect no hint of danger. Then the jay, with a business-like directness quite unlike his usual derisive nonchalance, darted up to the very topmost tip of the hemlock as if to take an observation. Straightway he uttered a harsh squawk, and flew off to the southward as if the matter of his breakfast had ceased to be of any importance.

The two chick-a-dees fell silent, stopped hunting beetles, and seemed to consider the import of that warning. Then they went flickering off in the same direction. If the wise and audacious jay was getting out, there was very surely some good reason for it.

"Clear Out!"

The great moose stirred uneasily. That harsh cry of the jay had spoken to her no less imperatively than to the chick-a-dees—though to neither had it said anything more definite than "Clear out!" But this, for the moment, she could not do. Her calf was not yet strong enough on his legs to travel. She was puzzled as to what the threat might be. She knew only that it came from the northward—for the jay and the chick-a-dees had fled south. She noticed that there were no rabbits about, no squirrels. She had sniffed no pungent scent of fox or weasel. Evidently some alarm had gone abroad hours before; but she, although through long experience wise in all forest wisdom, had been too preoccupied with the pangs of her approaching motherhood to notice it. She could only wait, with nerves quivering and every sense alert, and nurse her calf to strength for speedy flight.

At last the low sunrise over the distant Manoonsis ridges, and a flooding of pinkish radiance into the silvery grayness of the thicket. Everything, on a sudden, stood out with edges and colors sharply defined. Then with the rising light came a slow wind out of the northwest, sighing furtively through the branches. In spite of the direction from which it came its breath was warmish and faintly acrid. At the very first touch of it the moose stiffened and her heart gave a leap of panic. This was the very worst she could have feared. It was Fire!

There had been unusually little snow in the woods that winter, and now a sudden and warm spring had brought a too scanty rainfall. All the brooks and little rivers were running low in their channels, the undergrowth everywhere was parched, the "slashings" left by the lumbermen were like tinder, the very mosses covering the muskegs were dry enough to keep alive a creeping, hidden spark.

Somewhere, perhaps from a dropped match or the red coal shaken from a pipe, perhaps from a campfire too carelessly extinguished, the spark had been started. And presently a flock of sharp little flames was scattering through the brush, darting and licking hungrily wherever they found provender to their taste. The spot where it all began was remote from the fire patrols, so in brief space the red monster had grown full size, and eager flames were racing to the tops of the nearest fir trees.

For a couple of days there had been but little wind and that little out of the southeast, so the smoke of the burning had been swept off over the high barrens to the north where, among granite boulders and lean blueberry scrub, the flames found little to feed on. But they spread and waxed mighty in the timber to either side of their starting point, and they worked slowly but inexorably backward against that southeast breeze. The moment the wind swung round, however, they turned and pounced with a roar upon the fat prey of spruce and pine and slashings, and went raging furiously toward the south. As if to reinforce that dreadful onslaught, the wind rose steadily.

With the first breath of that menacing scent in her nostrils the great moose knew just what peril confronted her. She knew that almost directly south of her lay the waters of a long and winding lake so wide that no fire could overlap it. She knew, also, of a rocky island, about half a mile off shore, with little vegetation on it that would burn. Had her calf been even a day older, able to travel fast and far, all would have been well. Moose are born swimmers, and on that island was secure sanctuary. But now—her heart was torn with terror and uncertainty.

Holding her impatience sternly in check, she waited till the calf had nursed all it would. Then she moved slowly off, picking the easiest way through the thicket. The calf stood staring after her, waving its long ears stupidly, till the idea dawned upon it that it was being deserted. With a harsh little bleat of fear and appeal, it went stumbling in pursuit of that dark, withdrawing form. The mother paused to let him overtake her, nuzzled it encouragingly, and moved on again. The calf waited till she had gone a dozen yards or so, expecting her to return to him. Then with another bleating cry, this time more of protest than alarm, again he stumbled after her. And now, his long legs beginning to feel rather more as if they belonged to him, he moved less unsteadily.

The mother, looking solicitously over her shoulder, was somewhat reassured and kept on her slow way till the calf stopped and bleated again, begging her to come back. This, she knew, would not do at all. Yet she must not discourage or overtire him. She waited, and called softly; and presently, staggered forward eagerly, snuggled against her shaggy flank, and fell to nursing again.

This was all to the good, as it would mean more strength for him; so though the wind was by now coming ominously warm through the branches and with an ever increasing pungency which she too well understood, she curbed her desperate eagerness and encouraged him to nurse all he would. At best it would be his last chance until the grim fates of the wilderness should have decided for or against them.

A Case of Strategy

After this invigorating halt the calf had gained strength suddenly. He went shambling along at his mother's heels quite steadily and contentedly. Instead of pushing her way directly south toward the water—as there was dire need to do, and as she would have done, taking all obstacles in her stride, had she been alone—the wise cow headed eastward for several hundred yards, in order to gain a stretch of more open and even ground which would afford the calf easier going. But when she came out from the heavy timber and looked northward she gave a snort of terror, wheeled south, and involuntarily sprang forward in a wild race for the lake. In a few seconds, however, she stopped, turned, and stared at the calf stumbling frantically far behind. Her heart pounding madly, she strode back to him, fumbled him repentantly with her lips, and then, keeping him close at her side, resumed her journey toward the lake at such a deliberate pace as she thought he would be able to maintain.

Her moment's panic was conquered. But from time to time, as they went, she would glance back over her shoulder at the dreadful scene behind them. To the calf it meant nothing, and he never looked back. But in a dim way he sensed his mother's fear. He shambled onward gamely, watching his steps, and seeming to gain in surefootedness at every stride. It counted heavily now that his mother's last mating, on the lake shore under the round October moon, had been with a great bull worthy of her strength and stamina.

To the northwest, by this time, the sky was filled with a writhing, tumbling curtain of smoke, its thin, yellowish upper fringe driven before the wind in long streamers which seemed to be reaching out hungrily—in pursuit of the fugitives. Its lower portions, seen through the black-green of the intervening tree tops, was a boiling turmoil of sooty brown with tongues of red flame stabbing upward through it. The smoke that now came filtered to a bluish haze through the thick foliage of the spruces was so hot and pungent that the panting nostrils of the fugitives balked at breathing it, and their smarting eyes ran streams.

Coming at length to a little spring-fed pool from which an ice-cold rivulet gurgled off through damp mosses of a living green, the cow knelt and plunged her whole huge head into the water and drank greedily. She tried to get the calf to do likewise, but could not make him understand. She shook her dripping head over his smarting eyes and parched muzzle. And they pushed on again with a fresh burst of speed, the calf seeming to have gained new strength through that momentary halt and the cooling drops in his nostrils.

A big red fox came darting from the underbrush in a great hurry. Evidently he had been sleeping off a heavy meal in some deep covert and had failed, like the mothering moose, to catch the warning which had flashed through the forest during the night. At sight of the apparently unhasting pair, ambling along as if they scorned the devouring death behind them, he checked his flight and trotted on beside them at a respectful distance for several minutes. Foxlike, he was inclined to consider his personal dignity when under observation. He would show these haughty beasts that he, too, was not unduly excited. But both the moose ignored him utterly.

The Smoke Thickens

Then suddenly came a series of fiercer and hotter gusts which steadied into a gale, and the smoke thickened. The far-off mutter of the conflagration swelled into a roar punctuated with the crash of heavy branches falling. A crimson brand came hurtling through the air and fell into a dead fir bush not fifty yards behind. The bush burst into hissing yellow flames. The fox threw dignity to the winds and flashed on ahead at top speed, his magnificent ruddy brush fluffed out indignantly and seeming to float him along in his effortless flight. As he vanished the cow thought wistfully how soon he would reach the comparative safety of the lake, still many a mile distant.

The shortest way to the water led due south, but the wind and the fire were coming from somewhat west of north, so there was the danger that they might be cut off. But that had to be risked. Suddenly the mother saw a tuft of dead grass just ahead of them wink into pale flame, flare up, and die. A wind blown scrap of lighted bark had dropped in it.

Away off to her right and fairly abreast of her she saw the lofty top of a half dead pine transform itself into a nest of writhing scarlet snakes. Two or three more live bits of bark and gummy twig fell about them. One landed on the calf's back and bit through the short, dry hair. He jumped and gave a startled bleat. She brushed it off with her wet muzzle and desperately urged him on to greater speed. If he should fail now it was the end for both of them. And ever the smoke grew more suffocating, the pursuing roar gew louder, the heat grew more ominously intense.

Then, through a lift in the smoke, she saw the waters of the lake gleaming ahead, whipped to an angry blue under the off-shore wind and not more than a couple of hundred yards away.

But those last two hundred yards! The roar, the crashing of branches, the scorching heat, the little spurts of flame that shot up around and before their feet as sparks fired the tufts of short, dead grass—all these had now struck panic to the un-understanding brain of the calf, and from time to time he bleated hoarsely and crowded against his mother's flank. But he still ran gamely, though stumbling now and again over some uneveness in the ground which his half-blinded eyes failed to perceive. Terrified lest he should fall—and not get up again—the mother kept nuzzling his neck and mumbling her encouragements.

Then the lake opened wide before them, darkened by the smoke clouds volleying low above it. The shore at this point was low and muddy, the water shallow and fringed with rushes. Straight into it the mother dashed, with a huge splashing, till she was belly deep. Then she lay down in the blessed coolness, wallowing, and gulping, and snorting. The calf fell, from sheer exhaustion and fright, close beside her, which was just what she wanted him to do. The sharp cold and the shock revived him instantly and he struggled to his feet, spluttering and gasping, but refreshed.

Half a dozen paces down the shore a naked shoulder of granite, almost overhanging, rose some thirty or forty feet from near the water's edge. Here was temporary shelter from the direct thrust of the heat and from the falling brands. To this refuge the wise mother now led the way, knowing that the calf must nurse and rest a few minutes to gain strength for the long swim to the island.

At the Lake

Huddled close to the foot of the rock were a number of rabbits, a score or more, and a half-grown black bear to whom the terror-stricken rabbits paid no attention whatever, although at any other time they would have recognized him as one of their most dangerous enemies. They grudgingly made room for the great cow, lest they be trodden upon, then crowded close for the coolness that was shaken from her dripping hide. The moose paid no heed to the rabbits, though careful not to tread on them.

But the bear was another matter, on account of her calf. She started an angry rush at him, and with a whimper of frightened protest he shrank away beyond the shelter of the rock. The heat soon drove him back again, squealing piteously. And now the cow let him stay. He was quite evidently as harmless as the rabbits. Finding himself thus tolerated, he stopped whimpering and seemed to derive a certain comfort from the apparent confidence and self-possession of the tall cow.

The calf, meanwhile, in his ignorance quickly recovering from his terror, was nursing greedily. But the smoke was thickening and the heat growing more unbearable even behind the shield of the rock, and blazing or red hot brands were now and then dropping well out in the lake. The cow could wait no longer. She cut short the calf's nursing and led the way swiftly down into the water, keeping the calf close at her side. Straight for that low line of the island, dimly seen under the smoke, she headed resolutely.

A few yards off shore the bottom dropped suddenly and the calf went under. He came to the surface again at once with a frightened bawl, kicked out wildly to try and find foothold, and found himself swimming. A yard or two more and the cow also was in deep water. Refreshed by the sudden icy plunge and with the healing coolness in their eyes and nostrils, the two swam onward side by side at good speed toward that refuge which, now that their heads were so low in the water, was almost cut off from view by the frothing waves.

The little bear, who had watched their going anxiously till they were almost out of sight, now summoned up his courage, splashed frantically into the water, and swam after them. He had no idea where he was going, his none too keen eyes not discerning the distant island, but he trusted the great cow and he could not endure to be left behind with the doomed and hopeless rabbits.

The wind being straight off shore, the calf at first found swimming easy and pleasant—less laborious for him, indeed, than running and stumbling over uneven ground. But the further out he got the rougher grew the water. The short, jumping waves began to confuse and frighten him. From time to time his head would be buried for a moment. He would come up choking and gasping. His mother watched him with terrible anxiety.

While they were still between two and three hundred yards from the nearest point of the island she saw that he was beginning to weaken through the difficulty with his breathing. He was wasting strength in trying to hold his head above the slapping waves. She slackened her pace, but this did not greatly mend matters, for he kept on beating the water in the struggle to lift his head higher.

Presently she tried to get him on her back by thrusting her submerged hindquarters beneath him. But this effort was a flat failure. It only confused him, because his long, kicking legs were in the way and he seemed to think she was trying to shove them from under him.

The Island Ahead

Then she tried another plan. She thrust her long head under his neck and lifted it well above the water so that he was able to breathe more freely. Finding this a relief, he tried frantically to climb upon her shoulders. This was a vain effort, of course, but it kept pushing the cow's head under so that she had to struggle for her own breathing. Being a mighty swimmer, she fought onward desperately. But her progress, thus handicapped, was pitifully slow.

And now the island was hardly a hundred yards ahead. As the waves lifted her, she gazed at it with strained staring eyes. Then the struggles of the calf now fairly on her neck, would force her head under again so deeply that she would come up half strangled. She would snatch a deep breath and plow onward, her corded muscles surging indomitably. The young bear, which hitherto had been swimming easily a few yards in her wake, now, suddenly sighting the island, dashed past in a triumphant burst of speed and in a few minutes was clambering out upon the rocky shore. He was puzzled that the two moose should be so slow.

The despairing cow had not even seen him as he forged by. Her every faculty was absorbed in the battle for her calf's life and her own. And it was the calf's baby ignorance that was threatening to make all her struggles vain.

Meanwhile, from further up the shore, another fugitive from the conflagration was battling his way toward the island. A solitary prospector, one Jed Smith, working in a dry stream bed some miles back from the lake, had been so engrossed in certain alluring prospects that he had paid no heed to the peril till it was close upon him. Delaying only to wrap a chunk of bacon, a package of tea, half a dozen "hardtacks" and a handful of cartridges in his waterproof blanket and strap it secure on his back, to thrust his little ax into his belt and his waterproof matchbox, with a fig of tobacco, into his pocket, he had snatched up his rifle and one canoe paddle and dashed away with long, loping strides through the dense woods which lay between his cabin and the lake.

He had wanted—how eagerly!—to take a little bag of flour with him also. But it was not ready. A minute's further lingering might well cost him his life. He cursed his stupidity and plunged into the thickets, with an ominous dull roar in his ears and sharp smoke belching at his heels.

His shortest way to the lake was the roughest, the hardest, but he knew that he must take it through all obstacles. It would lead him to a narrow, sandy cove where, drawn up on the beach, lay a light but sturdy raft which he had built the previous summer for his fishing. It was for this he had brought the paddle. His canoe he had left several miles further up the lake, around toward the north, where the fire had probably reached it by this time. The raft, if he could win through to it, was his only chance of escape. It was no craft for the heavy waters of the open lake in this wind, but it would carry him to the island.

That desperate rush to the lake was like a nightmare. At first he ran circumspectly enough, holding himself down to such a pace as he thought he could maintain and avoiding the obstacles and guarding his face with an uplifted arm as he thrust through the deep, thorned tangles of blackberry cane which filled every patch of open glade. The thorns ripped his sleeves to ribbons, gashed his arms, and even pierced his breeches of stout army cord.

But as the smoke thickened and the pursuing roar grew louder he increased his pace to the utmost, realizing that his best might well prove to be not good enough. He was strong and lean and swift, but the acrid smoke was soon doing uncomfortable things to his wind. It also confused his eyes, so that once he stumbled and fell headlong over a fallen trunk which he should have cleared at a bound. The paddle and the rifle also delayed him, getting tangled in the branches. At last, with an angry groan, he hurled the rifle from him. After all it was was something he could do without. But the paddle—without that it would profit nothing if he did succeed in reaching the water. The pack on his back was so light that it scarcely troubled him, but he would have lost it over and over if it had not been strapped on so securely.

At last, gasping and bleeding, he burst out upon the shore of the narrow cove and his heart bounded as he saw the raft. An awful fear had swept over him lest it should have been carried away in the break-up of the ice. Already fragments of light, burning bark were falling about him. A big spark had caught on his shoulder and burned through to his flesh. And but a few yards to is right, close to the shore of the cove, he saw a burst of savage scarlet flower upward from the top of a giant fir. But he knew that he had won the dreadful race.

Instead of instantly turning to the raft he threw himself flat in the water, and rose up dripping and revived. He drank, but parched though he was, he drank sparingly. Then, snatching up a stick of driftwood, he pried the raft off into the water, thrust it out, and surged furiously on the paddle, urging his sluggish craft toward the narrow outlet of the cove. And as he labored heavily forth into the open lake, long tongues of flame, golden and smoky rose, swooped hissing after him, by a handsbreadth balked of their prey.

Paddling to a Refuge

Clear of the cove-mouth, he paddled straight out for a couple of hundred yards to escape the worst of the heat and smoke. Then he turned to the left and kept on parallel with the shore for some distance before heading on a long slant for the island lest that tearing wind should sweep him past it and out into mad turmoil beyond. Soon the icy waves were lashing over him, the raft wallowed and swung, steering heavily, and he longed for his canoe. But his heart thrilled in exultation as he slogged on with straining shoulders and aching wrists, and slowly the island drew near. Already he had marked a low and sedgy bit of shore where he could make landing without damage to the precious raft.

About this time he caught sight of the moose and her calf swimming toward the same goal. He glanced at them sympathetically. They, too, had fought their way out of the jaws of the red hell behind him. Presently he saw the little bear go swimming past them at a pace which left them speedily far in the rear. This puzzled him, for he felt sure that a moose could swim as fast as any bear unless it were the half-amphibious white monster of the arctics.

Then, looking more closely, he saw that the pair were in trouble. He saw that the mother was drowning herself in a desperate effort to support the exhausted calf. This would never do! And that pesky bear was making shore without any trouble at all! He had always had a friendly feeling for the moose, anyway, above all the other creatures of the wild, and never would shoot one unless absolutely in need of red meat. He put fresh vigor into his strokes and pushed over toward that piteous struggle.

As he ranged alongside them the cow stared up at him with despairing eyes. Bracing his knees firmly between the timbers of his plunging craft, with his left hand he reached far over, grabbed the calf by the scruff of its neck, and dragged its shoulders and long forelegs on to the raft. Holding those legs securely under his left knee, he paddled hard for the island.

The calf struggled feebly for a moment or two, then relaxed with a sudden sense of security, feeling something more substantial beneath him than that elusive neck of his mother's upon which he had been trying to climb. The cow, relieved of her burden, rose higher in the water, greedily filled her tortured lungs, then grunted with anger and alarm as she saw her precious offspring apparently being snatched from her. In three or four strokes she overtook the raft and tried to board it. The man pushed her aside several times with quick thrusts of his paddle, and presently she seemed to realize that he was a friend, an ally. Calming down at once, she swam along close beside the raft, now and then nuzzling at the calf's flank to assure herself of his safety.

The Beach at Last

A few strenuous minutes more and the beach was gained. The raft grounded heavily in a surf tossed tangle of dead reeds. The man sprang to his feet, releasing his prisoner, hastily splashed ashore, and clambered to the top of a steep rock. He felt by no means sure that the cow fully appreciated what he had done for her, and he was taking no risks with the temper of a worried mother. The cow, however, heeded him not at all. She nosed the calf all over as he struggled sturdily to his feet in the pursuing surf. Then she led him above the reach of the waves, shook herself mightily, and stood for him to nurse—which was the first thing he thought of.

Seated on top of the rock, and drying himself in that hot, smoke laden wind, Jed Smith grinned defiantly at the flames which now raged and roared all along the opposite shore. "We're well out of that, old girl" he remarked to the moose, some twenty feet below him. The great animal, startled at the sound of his voice, wagged her ears and looked up at him, then unconcernedly resumed her attentions to the calf.

"Guess she don't bear no grudge agin me, anyhow," muttered the man, as he fished out his pipe and tobacco from his wet pocket. The pipe he dried with a wisp of dead grass; and [illegible] the sodden outer layers of [illegible]

The CALENDAR by Edgar Wallace

INSTALLMENT I.

At the Races.

"DO you like me well enough to let me use your name?"

Garry Anson stared at the beautiful woman who put this tremendous question so casually.

"To use my name? I don't quite know what you mean, darling."

Wenda Panniford shrugged her shoulders impatiently. It was an odd little trick of hers. The beautiful gray eyes sought his for a moment, and then fell.

It was a fortnight before Ascot, and the garden of Daneham lodge was at the height of its splendor.

They had been pacing the level, shaven lawn, talking of flowers, when the question of Willie Panniford arose. Willie was a source of worry to Garry Anson. He liked the big, blustering fool, drunk or sober; had speculated without profit for a very long time as to what Wenda could see in this husband of hers, and what charm Willie had had that had induced her to throw herself away upon an impecunious Scottish baronet.

He had taken a pride in his faith that he knew Wenda till then—she was almost a complete stranger to him at this moment.

"Honestly, I don't understand, Wenda. Do you mean, use my name—?"

"Willie is jealous of you. He is ready to believe almost anything about you. If I went to him this moment and told him"—again the jerk of her shoulder—"you know."

"You mean he would believe it? What a blackguard!"

"Don't be stupid, Garry!" Her voice was a little sharp. "Why shouldn't he? We've known each other since we were children; we've always been close friends. Willie isn't terribly mental. He believes things now without any particular reason; why shouldn't he believe—I nearly said 'the worst.'" She smiled faintly. "Would it be the worst?"

Garry Anson was still dazed. The tanned, good looking face was blank with amazement.

"You mean that I should let my name be used as co-respondent? My dear, I like you too much to allow your name to be dragged through the muck and mire of a divorce case."

She sighed, again impatiently.

"Never mind about my name, Garry—your altruism is sometimes offensive. Do you like me well enough to make that sacrifice—and all that is involved?"

He ran his hands over his crisp, brown hair.

"Of course, I like you well enough. The idea is monstrous. Isn't there any way of patching up——"

There was a tremor in her voice; chagrin, pain, anger—he could not tell which; never dreamed, indeed, that he had done more than hurt her, and was panic stricken at the thought. For Wenda Panniford was to him the one woman in the world.

"Of course, if you want it—I'll do anything. It would be beastly for you, but naturally I wouldn't hesitate a moment, and when it is over possibly you would care to marry me——"

He saw a look of astonishment come into her eyes, and blundered.

"You needn't, of course; that isn't obligatory—I mean, there's no reason why you should!"

"Of course, I'd marry you. Why——" She checked herself. "You love me, don't you, Garry?"

Close Comrades

He loved her very dearly, but realized at that moment with stunning force that he did not love her quite like that. They had been brother and sister all these years, close comrades, sharing one another's secrets—at least, she had shared his. Perhaps she realized the starkness of his embarrassment, for she went on quickly:

"Are you going to Hurst Park today? Willie is going with us. I'll see you there—I expected you would be at Chester; it was a great relief to find you here."

"But listen, darling." He was recovering something of his balance. "Is Willie being too frightful? I know he drinks, and that he's an awful lout in some ways, but there's a lot of good in old Willie——"

"Don't let us discuss Willie," she said shortly. "We're leaving for Italy on Tuesday. When we come back I want a really serious talk with you." And then she changed the subject, and talked about the old general who had died that week.

"Of course, that is why you didn't go to Chester. I had forgotten. Poor old man! Did he leave a lot of money, Garry?"

"Buckets full," smiled Garry Anson. "There's Molly!"

A girl was waving from the other side of the lawn.

"I'll see you at Hurst Park."

In another moment she was out of sight. Garry continued his restless pacing of the lawn, his head still in a whirl. Wenda—of all people in the world! He knew things were not going too well in the Panniford household, but he had not dreamed that they were as bad as Wenda had revealed when she lifted the curtain and gave him a momentary glimpse of her mind.

As he walked slowly back to the house he caught a glimpse of Hillcott, smoking a surreptitious cigaret, on the far side of a heavily laden lilac bush; but by now he was so accustomed to Hillcott's acts of indiscipline that he never even thought of calling him to account. Indeed, Hillcott made no attempt to conceal the fact that he was taking a quiet loaf at a moment when he should have been engaged in pressing Garry's trousers. He was his valet, had once been cook, to Garry's establishment; cherished a bitter loathing for all housemaids, and a profound contempt for society at large; for Hillcott had once been a burglar, had suffered a term of confinement in one of his majesty's prisons, and had come to harbor in Garry's service, as so many good men had come, through the medium of a shell plastered trench in the war. He had been Garry's batman, was now almost the keeper of his conscience.

"Lady Panniford coming to breakfast?" asked Hillcott with that easy familiarity which Garry had long since ceased to chide.

"No, she isn't."

"Pity," said Hillcott. "We've got mushrooms—picked them meself."

"Which means I shall be dead before nightfall."

"You never know," was Hillcott's only retort.

Hillcott interpreted the news he had read in the morning papers, and kept up a running fire of comment on men, women, and horses, and, requiring no encouragement, came unexpectedly to the subject of Sir William Panniford.

"Heard about his lordship?" he asked, setting a plate for fruit.

He invariably so referred to Sir William; whether in sarcasm or a misunderstanding of courtesy titles Garry was never sure.

"What about him?" he asked carelessly.

"Got soused down at the Boar inn last night with a lot of clodhoppers—the question is, can a gentleman get drunk on beer? I've been having an argument with a groom——"

Garry eyed him sternly.

"You'll oblige me by not discussing my friends, Hillcott," he said.

"If you don't like my style you'd better get another servant, captain," said Hillcott stiffly. "I'm a human being and I'm entitled to me opinions."

"I doubt very much if you're human, but you're certainly not entitled to express your opinions to me about my friends," said Garry furiously, "and you can leave at the end of the month."

"That'll do me," said Hillcott.

He either gave notice or received notice regularly once a week, but little came of it. He was amiability itself, when he brought out Garry's field glasses from the car, and, uninvited, placed himself by the side of the driver. Garry gave him up; he spent his life giving up Hillcott.

A Righteous Beast

Peter Hipplewayne spotted Garry as he was crossing the course from the members' motor enclosure and intercepted him.

"You runnin' your horse?" he asked.

Garry Anson had no great love for this lanky ex-subaltern; found it at times a little difficult to be civil to him.

"Yes. Why?"

Peter fingered his weak mouth and smiled. He was terribly sure of himself, was self-consciously clever, and therefore was a little objectionable.

"Just asked you," he said laconically. He stood for a while gazing down the wide track.

"I thought of giving Ediphos a run," he said, "but I can't beat yours."

Garry gently released the detaining hand.

"I wonder if I can beat yours?" he asked. "On the book you have an outstanding chance, and I doubt if I shall win."

The other man looked down at him slyly.

"Then why not row in with me?" he asked. "With your horse out of the way, mine is a certainty. You'll get three to one to your money, and it will be a case of putting it down and picking it up."

There was nothing sinister in a suggestion that an owner should not run his horse but should back another—if that was Peter's suggestion.

"All right—I'll not run him."

Mr. Hipplewayne closed his eyes wearily.

"Don't be silly; of course you'll run your old hair-trunk. Otherwise I'll have to take rotten odds about my own."

Garry's eyes glittered. If Peter's skin had been a little thinner he would have sensed the gathering storm of wrath.

"What is the idea—that I should run mine and stop him?" he asked.

Peter nodded coolly.

"Why not? It is done every day of the week, old boy. Are you pretending you don't know that?"

Garry turned away.

"We won't discuss it," he said, and the other man caught his arm.

"What a righteous beast you are, Garry! All right! You can't get money at this game if you're too straight."

"There never was a turf crook who didn't die broke," said Garry quietly, and saw the young man frown.

"'Crook' is not a word I like," he snapped, and lagged behind.

An hour later Garry was absorbed in one of those minor problems which concern the racing man and, momentarily, he was oblivious of the externals of life. He had watched Rataplan being saddled; now he stopped at the public entrance of the paddock to see the claret and white hoops go flying past on the way to the post.

It was not an important race—the value of the plate was less than three hundred pounds—but his commissioner had gone into the ring with instructions to put on a monkey at the best price, and five hundred pounds was a considerable bet for Garry. He assured himself uneasily that he could afford to lose five hundred—if anybody could afford to lose that amount. Yet was he not going beyond the limit and margin of safety?

Here was a line of thought, uncomfortable in itself, and yet a pleasing relief from the more pressing problem of Wenda. Phew! Every time he recalled that interview of the morning he felt a little chill, but a chill which made him hot under the collar.

ILLUSTRATION BY P. T. JENSEN.

Molly was not using glasses. Her keen gray eyes had found the claret hoops as soon as the field had settled down.

Garry strolled under the veranda outside the weighing room, past the unsaddling enclosure, and was turning through the iron gates when Wenda called to him and he turned, with unaccustomed embarrassment, to meet her.

Lady Panniford was lovely; had always been lovely as long as Garry could remember her. About her there were two definite schools of opinion: those who thought she had the perfect face, and those who swore by her more perfect figure. She was almost as tall as Garry, golden-haired, blue-eyed, flawless of skin. She had the trick of giving insignificance to even attractive women who had the misfortune to be near her. The girl who was with her at the moment was both conscious and careless of this inequality. She was doomed by relationship to appear with and to attend her sister-in-law.

"You came, then?"

Garry was conscious of the lameness and futility of the remark.

"I've come to back your horse, darling," Wenda smiled.

But there was a challenge in her smile. It said as plainly as words:

"There is one subject we will not discuss—today!"

"I've just seen Peter Hipplewayne. He told me to back Ediphos," she went on. "So dear of Peter to try to make me some money. But it is favorite, and I hate favories."

"Then he should win," said Garry, "and if you've backed mine you are going to be disappointed. Hullo, Molly, darling!"

He became aware of Molly as one became aware of almost every woman whose lot it was to appear in Wenda Panniford's company.

"Where's Willie?" he asked, and might have saved himself the trouble.

Willie Panniford was at the members' bar. He generally met somebody who wanted to go to the bar—a hunting man, or a man of his old regiment, or somebody he had met in Cairo, or anybody else who wanted to go to the bar.

20,000 Pounds

Wenda took his arm and led him down towards the rails. Molly followed obediently. She had a sense of humor and a growing consciousness of advancing age. Twenty-one is more certain of itself than eighteen. Wenda was finding it increasingly difficult to cope with Molly. Men were taking an interest in her. Some people thought she was clever. Almost everybody except Garry realized that she was passing from the stage of girlish prettiness to the maturer beauty of her years.

Wenda drew him out of the range of Molly's hearing.

"I told you we were going to Rome on Tuesday, Garry," she said, "but I forgot to ask you something this morning. Do you mind if I delay sending you a check for another week or two?"

Garry laughed and squeezed her arm.

"Wenda, darling," he said with mock seriousness, "if I don't get my share of it now I will issue a writ. Of course I don't! I wanted you to keep the whole of the income from that little nest egg. You know that."

The blue eyes smiled gratefully at him.

"You are a brick," she said. "Two hundred and fifty pounds doesn't mean anything to you, but it means an awful lot to me just now."

She held twenty thousand pounds' worth of 5 per cent stock. Garry's one provident act, in a moment of financial panic, had been to make her an official trustee for this sum. His betting was a little too heavy; he knew the time would come when racing must play a less important part in his life, and when his betting book would be locked away in a drawer. He had discussed his plan with Wenda, and she had agreed to hold the bonds against his need and for her service receive half their revenue.

"Write to me, like an angel," she said; and then, as a thought occurred to her: "I wasn't terribly sympathetic about the general, was I?"

This was the second reference she had made to Gen. Anson's death. He was puzzled to know why. She had known his uncle and had heartily disliked him.

"He really was a fine old soldier, and I admired him like anything. Here's your boy friend."

Henry Lascarne was coming across the lawn in search of her. He was making one of his rare visits to a race course, and had probably come under protest. Certainly nobody but Wenda would have induced this tall, correctly tailored young man to descend from his Olympian heights to the vulgarities of Hurst Park.

"Are you seeing the racing down here, Wenda?"

She looked back at the crowded stands and made a little grimace. From their position on the sloping lawn they commanded a fairly good view of the course, could see the horses lining up at the gate, and were almost exactly opposite the winning post.

"Let's stay here. Do you mind, Henry?"

"I'll go on the stand," said Garry, and left them.

"Not exactly polite," began Henry. His nose had a queer way of wrinkling up when he was contemptuous, and he was mainly contemptuous.

"Garry's maners are deplorable," she said gayly. "We will wait here."

She was a little tense, more than a little excited, Molly noticed. Molly noticed everything.

"They say he's betting like smoke," said Lascarne.

"Who? Garry?"

Wenda put down her glasses and turned an amused face to him.

"Why shouldn't he? He's terribly rich."

"I wonder if he is?"

It was the first doubt she had ever heard expressed concerning Garry's prosperity, and her eyes opened a little wider.

"Of course he is! He's probably enormously rich. Why don't you bet, Henry? It would be very human of you."

Henry Lascarne smiled.

"Racing is a fool's game, and only blind idiots engage in it," he said.

He had all the assurance of twenty-four.

"I've seen more fellows ruined on the turf than—than——"

"On the stock exchange."

It was Molly who spoke.

He did not like Molly, being well aware that his dislike was reciprocated, and he was all the more irritated because that reference to the stock exchange had struck home. There had been a big Wall street slump, and Henry Lascarne's securities had depreciated in value by over a hundred thousand pounds. It was true that he could bear the loss, for old Lascarne had left his son the greater part of two millions, even after the death duties had been paid. But he hated losing money.

"If I may be allowed to say so——"

"Which you are," said Molly, calmly.

"—it is absurd to compare legitimate investment——"

"They're off!"

Trembling Hands

Henry Lascarne was annoyed. Things were always happening on a race course which interrupted him in his more profound and imposing moments.

He took his glasses from their case and focused them reluctantly upon the field. The horses were moving swiftly along the back stretch, a compact bunch of vari-colored jackets. He could not distinguish Garry's colors, and had only the dimmest idea of what they were, although he had had them described to him a dozen times.

Wenda's voice was impatient, trembled a little; the hands that held the glasses were trembling. Her failure to pick out any horse was understandable.

Molly was not using glasses. Her keen gray eyes had found the claret hoops as soon as the field had settled down.

"He's on the rails, about third, I think," she said.

"And he'll finish first."

She turned quickly. Garry had come down from the stand and was behind her.

"Will he, Garry? Will he?" asked Wenda eagerly.

Again her shaking hands went up, and again she failed to control her race-glasses.

"He's won it there," said Garry. "The only danger is Ediphos, but I don't think——"

He was suddenly silent, nor was his voice raised in the roar which greeted Rataplan as it cantered past the post two lengths ahead of its nearest opponent.

"How wonderful! How wonderful, Garry!" Wenda was shaking from head to foot, her eyes shining. "I had a hundred pounds on it. What was the price?"

Garry stared at her. Only a few minutes before she had excused herself paying him two hundred and fifty!

"A hundred pounds? But, darling, you're not betting in hundreds?"

She shook her head a little impatiently.

"Don't be silly, Garry. Of course I hadn't a hundred to put on, but somebody did it for me. Isn't it wonderful!"

"Very!" Garry's voice was a little troubled, and she misjudged the reason.

"Don't be absurd, Garry. You backed this horse yourself, and when some nice man told me he'd put a hundred on for me——"

"I'm not worried about that. I shouldn't have won that race. I think there's going to be a devil of a lot of trouble about it."

"Trouble?" said Wenda quickly. "Do you mean there's a chance that your horse will be——"

"Disqualified? No. But Ediphos should have won. He wasn't trying. I didn't realize it till they were nearly home."

"Ediphos?" She frowned. "That was the horse Peter said would win. Of course it was trying! Peter wouldn't tell me——"

Garry nodded.

"Peter would sell his own aunt! He is rather a tricky young gentleman, who has tricked once too often. If the stewards didn't see what happened in the race they're blind, and these stewards are never blind."

He had seen Ediphos nicely placed as the field turned the bend into the straight, and then he had seen the horse drawn back and deliberately put himself behind the two leaders in such a position that he could not possibly be extricated at the crucial moment of the race.

The knowledgeable racing folk were discussing it openly as they streamed into the paddock. Garry heard one pillar of the turf say:

"I've never seen anything more disgraceful."

His Noisiest Mood

At the entrance of the paddock he met the owner of Ediphos and, making an excuse to Wenda, he took him aside.

"There is going to be a row over this race."

"A row—what sort of a row? You won it, didn't you?" asked Peter truculently.

"You didn't win it—that's the trouble," said Garry grimly. "You'd better prepare yourself for an inquiry."

"O, rot!"

But the pink face had gone white.

"I gave the jockey orders to come away when he could."

"I'm just telling you that it's absolutely certain the stewards will send for you."

"Nonsense," said the other.

Later in the afternoon Garry met a press friend in the paddock and learned that the running of Ediphos had been the subject of inquiry, and that the matter had been referred to the stewards of the jockey club.

He did not see Wenda again until the last race had been run, and then he met her on the way to her car. Willie Panniford was leading the little party, a tall, fattish young man, not in the best of tempers.

"Beastly place, this," he complained loudly. "Why the devil I ever come racing I don't know. What a brute you are, Garry, to have a winner and tell nobody!"

"I told Wenda—" began Garry, when a warning glance stopped him.

"You told her what? She said you never mentioned the horse."

"Darling, your understanding is rather dull this afternoon," she said sweetly. "I told you that Garry thought his horse might win. He wasn't very definite about it, were you, Garry?"

Garry was never definite about his horses winning. He had lost all his earlier enthusiasm for communicating his good things to the world as the result of bitter experience. When an owner confides to a friend that his horse will win and it doesn't, he is apt to be reminded that the man to whom he imparted the information would have backed the real winner if he hadn't been "put off."

Willie was in his noisiest mood.

"Nice business, racing, I must say! Did you hear about that fellow Hipplewayne? Stopped his horse—deliberately stopped him, old boy! A disgraceful thing to happen. Hipplewayne is a cad! By Jove, they ought to warn the beggar off right away!"

"Willie, darling"—it was Wenda's most urgent voice—"you're talking very loudly, and very stupidly."

He glared round at her. Willie had found the bar very companionable that afternoon.

"If I'm not allowed to express my views——"

"Not in public!" she smiled.

Willie went, grumbling, to his car, cursed the chauffeur for keeping him waiting, swore at the policeman who held him up to let the other traffic pass, and Garry imagined he could still hear his voice when the car was out of sight.

He found his car, and the voluble Hillcott discussing something vital with the chauffeur.

"Well, Hillcott, had a good day?" he asked, handing his glasses and raincoat to the man.

"Not so bad," said Hillcott. His tone was friendly, his manner more so. "I backed yours and had a saver on Ediphos—what a ramp!"

"It was very stupid," said Garry.

"I saw old Panniford——"

"How did he get it?" asked that irrepressible little man.

Garry did not argue with him. Hillcott climbed in by the side of the chauffeur, and the bonnet of the car headed for Ascot and Daneham lodge.

"We'll Make Good."

"IT'S funny, not working," Lola told her mother, after she had been home about a week. "Like marking time, or something."

"You've had vacations before," Mrs. Davis reminded her, practically.

"I know, but this is different somehow."

Yet the days went quickly enough. She helped with the house, helped plan and prepare the meals. "When you're back at work," her mother said, "I'm not going to let you do so much. It isn't right. That's half the trouble with you girls, keeping houses and working. You bite off more than you can chew."

Up the street, across the way, old Mrs. Carney fell sick. Mrs. Davis watched the doctor come and go; tiptoed, actually, across the intervening pavement, to inquire, to talk to the daughter, who stood in the doorway, one ear listening for the slightest sound from the sickroom, the other attentive to Mrs. Davis' assurances that people, even quite old people, with pleurisy, got well. "Why, I knew a woman once——"

The Davis kitchen was a welter, an extravagant, neat welter of extra eggs and milk, boiling miraculously into cup custards; a steaming chaos of soup kettles, "nothing like good strong home made beef broth to keep the strength," said Mrs. Davis. Lola watched, amused; helped where she could; sat on the kitchen table and swung her slim legs and made observations: "You work yourself to death for every one."

"They'd do the same for me. Folks say people aren't neighborly in the city. That isn't true. On a street like this every one knows every one else. It may be different in your apartment houses," Mrs. Davis admitted, scornfully, "but we've lived in this neighborhood for so long. Of course, people don't depend on neighbors the way they used to. I remember when I was a girl"—she was silent, thinking back to the small upstate town—"all our pleasures came from neighbors. And I remember the things your grandmother—rest her soul—used to tell me. She grew up in a little town. Her mother was highly thought of, better than a doctor for a child birth, they said. My mother, too. I remember the many nights she'd go out, sit up all night, and come home the next day, cheerful and tired, after making the new mother comfortable and bathing the baby and all. She'd pitch right into a batch of baking. There were six of us children, you know, although you never knew any of them except your Uncle Tom and your Aunt Ella. Six. And a big house and barns and a yard. Mother was sick at having to move to the city when father died and the place went and she had to come down here where her sister could give her a home and we went out to work." She thought back, standing there, her apron twisted about her fingers. "Neighbors, in those days; even in my time it had changed some, but not much. Mother used to tell me about the shingling and barn building parties, and the haying time, and all. Hay rides. And in winter the big sleighs with hot bricks to your feet and singing along the hard white road, under a moon, with the river alongside, smooth as glass, frozen solid. That was in my day, too. Skating parties, we had; and barn dances. And if there was a birth or a death the neighbors came in. Food on your table and in your pantry. Clothes they'd bring, for the one who had died, or the one just born. Home made soups and jellies and wine. Nowadays, folks in the country have radios and cars, and all that. They don't have to depend on their next door neighbors so much. But still and all, more than most city people do. This street, now, it's friendly. That's why I don't want to move."

"Move?" asked Lola, amazed.

California Climate

"Your father, now. He wonders some time, about when you and Ken are settled and Howard married and all. If I wouldn't rather have a little place? This property has gone up in value, the restrictions being off help. But I say, no. I've lived most of my life here. I'd like to die here," she said, without fear or sorrow, "and leave it to you children. The place you were born in. It ought to mean something to you. That's why even if Millie wanted us to—and I don't think she does, I think it's just duty to her, I wouldn't like to settle in California. No neighbors," said Mrs. Davis firmly.

"Neighbors? But there's lots of them," said Lola laughing, "wherever you go. People wouldn't stay away from you long. You have a way with you—and father says he's crazy about California. Climate and all."

"Climate?" asked Mrs. Davis, disparagingly. "That isn't all there is to life. I don't like it much, anyway. Too much sunlight. Times, I longed for a good sockdolager. Rain, like a waterspout leaking. Earthquakes, too—not that I ran into any. And the houses built so—stagy. Pretty, it is, flowers and everything. But flowers grow out there, too easy. You don't have to fret and stew over them like you do here—watch every bud and coax 'em along. They're too big," she criticized, with finality, "out there everything is. Everything's so much the same—no weather changes, though, when it does rain, they say it rains for months. That's too much change. I like it here, good and hot in summer and freezing cold in winter, and spring and fall thrown in so's you get used to things. No, they wouldn't be very neighborly out there. I'd feel like a fool trying to make myself fit in with Millie's friends."

"I'd like to know why they're any better than you are!" asked Lola, hotly loyal.

"They're not," answered Mrs. Davis in mild surprise, beating things in a deep yellow bowl. "Whoever said they were? But different. Young things, most of them. No better looking than you or Millie or Howard and some of them with not as much education and not many of them coming from better homes. But money makers. You don't know how—how unlikely a whole lot of youngsters like that are, all making more money in a week than your poor father makes perhaps in half a year. And some of the mothers——! You'd think I'd take to the mothers, now, wouldn't you? Well, I didn't. One or two were nice old ladies, sort of bewildered, just the way I felt. But you couldn't feel much at home out there. Things seem so—what's the word they use to advertise hotel rates?—transient," she brought out, triumphantly, "as if they were put up over night like a movie set. Marriages, too. Just get to know some nice young couple, and the first thing, they've changed partners and you have to get used to a new husband and a new wife. Not for me," said Mrs. Davis. "I'm too old fashioned."

Lola went down to the gas station occasionally. She brought home the books with her and studied them. Some days she spent hours in the cubbyhole office, regardless of the noise of cars driving into the garage, and backing out, unheeding the mild—and sometimes not so mild profanity—looking out of the little door now and then to catch a glimpse of Ken, in the stained and faded blue overalls, wiping his hands with cotton waste, or his forehead with a brush of the arm, arguing animatedly with this man or that; or dashing out to the pumps—"How many—five? O. K."

She thought, perhaps he really shouldn't be doing this. She thought of him as she had first known him. White collar. Utility company salesman. Well, why shouldn't he be doing this, she told herself; what sort of a snob are you turning out to be? He's happy, isn't he?

And would turn back to her typewriter and the letters Ken had not time to answer, with Jake's notations scrawled on them.

A Stab of Regret

She went several times to New York to see Agnes and felt, the first time, very conscious of her clothes. The last year's suit, well worn in St. Louis with the bit of sable Millie had given her for chic and warmth. Agnes was terribly smart. Lola eyed her soft, fine tweeds, her impeccable shoes and gloves, her casual, expensive hat and handbag, with normal envy. If I could afford it! But she couldn't. Even if she could—she couldn't. Agnes was, however, unchanged. A bit more brisk perhaps, perhaps a little hardened. But not a hardening which would repel the onlooker. She was keen and alert and brimming over with her job. "Men," she replied, in answer to Lola's natural question, "lots of them. They don't matter. Except to take me out—dinner and theater, a night club now and then—dancing—I always liked to dance, you know. But that's as far as it goes." She added carelessly that Jim had remarried.

"He has—O, Agnes, who?"

"I don't know. A girl, out west. I heard in a round-about sort of way. Some one said she was young and pretty and something of a clinging vine. But his sort. Debutante stuff, in a small town way, a state college graduate, I believe. I hope he'll be happy," she said, sincerely.

"You don't miss—I mean, you're not hurt—you don't think of Jim?"

"No. O, of course, sometimes. But it's—comic, rather. As if I'd been another person then. I'm detached about it. You see, for a long time I had to be or go crazy not knowing where I really stood, what I really believed and felt. Then after a while it got to be a habit. You get over everything," philosophized Agnes, "except failure. I don't get over the bare fact that I failed, in marriage. That's detached, too, apart from Jim. Just a sort of blot on the mental escutcheon. I won't fail at anything else," she said, confident.

Lola thought of Peter Acton. He'd "gotten over" things, too, probably. She felt the normal stab of regret, of wounded vanity. And Agnes asked, as if she had been clairvoyant: "Peter Acton? Do you see him now, or rather, did you? I know he's abroad. I see his name in the papers now and then. There's a man I might have cared for in a big way," she added, laughing.

"I did see him," Lola answered. "Yes, he's gone away. I read his name in the papers, too."

"When are you going back to work?" Agnes asked.

"Soon. I don't know."

Marking Time

Agnes speared some lettuce with especial care. She asked casually:

"You are going back, then, aren't you?"

"Well, yes," said Lola, astonished. "I suppose so. I have to."

"Necessity then, not choice?"

"Perhaps. I don't know. I seem to have gotten out of the way of thinking about it. Yet I've only been lazy a little while. Funny, isn't it?"

"I don't know. Don't you miss it?"

"Dreadfully. And yet—" she stopped and repeated, "I am getting lazy, I guess."

"Seen Connie?"

"Yes. I'll see her again soon. She sent you her love, Agnes."

With Connie, a few days later, she felt as little at home as she had with Agnes.

Connie, far advanced in her second pregnancy, was placid and serene. The boy had grown into a good looking, sturdy youngster, demanding a good deal of his mother's time. Louis came in and slipped a package into his wife's hands. She opened it, smiling. A glaring pink sweater suit for the new baby. Connie regarded it, laughing. "It's very Italian," she told Louis without malice. "Well, why not?" he wanted to know.

He was amiable to Lola, discounted all he had done for Ken with a shrug and gesture of his dark, plump hands. "Why not?" he asked again. "Ken's a good boy." His accent was, she thought, as marked as ever. "He and that Jake, they'll make money for me some day. I'm not afraid." His own business, he went on to say, was good despite the building slump. He reminded Lola again that he had "friends" in the city.

She herself stood, Lola told herself, somewhere between Agnes and Connie; not sure of herself, marking time. Agnes made her feel useless, shabby, uncertain, and Connie made her impatient. She went to see Rhoda; Rhoda had had to give up a good job because of an unwanted baby. She found her up to her thin neck in housework, looking dragged, and frail, and harried, all her good looks gone. "It's a great life," said Rhoda, "if you don't weaken. I weaken—a lot." She looked at the baby in his spotless crib, and Lola said: "You keep him like a new dime."

"Well, I have to, even if it means more work. I couldn't let him go. You've seen some of the poor mites around here, haven't you?" She wrinkled her nose in disgust. "I'm getting this down to a system. Of course, it takes all my time. But Fred's working hard. He's doing well, too. I'll be able to have help with the work by next year, and we're saving to get a little house out on the island somewhere. Lynbrook, maybe. Not too far out."

She asked for office news. Lola had little to give her. Rhoda wistfully said: "It must have been swell in St. Louis. Weren't you sick at giving it up? Why did you, Lola?"

"Ken's in business for himself, with a partner, that is," Lola said, "and he couldn't come out. So I came back."

Rhoda nodded.

"It will get you," she said slowly, "one way or another."

Lola asked:

"The baby? You were pretty sore about it. Now how do you feel?"

"I haven't time to feel anything but tired. Then it's another day." She smiled and her mouth relaxed. "I'd sell him for two cents this minute," she said, and laughed. "It's sort of worth it, after all," she contradicted herself, seriously, "and Fred will get ahead. I won't have to slave long. Since the kid arrived he's been so ambitious that it's almost funny. He's got a college picked out and everything," she concluded.

And when Lola was leaving, Rhoda said:

"Give my best to the girls when you go back. I don't see many of them; just Sally Bartel, since she married and came to live on this street. And one or two others. I haven't gotten over missing things."

"You'd go back if you could?"

"Like a shot, if I could afford some one to take care of the baby. I mean some one I could trust. Probably there isn't any such person. Probably I'd be a total loss, sitting in an office and wondering if the kid was falling downstairs, or getting his fingers burned, or his stomach upset."

She laughed again and shook her head.

Vacation's End

"I guess it's one too many for me. I guess I'll never go back, not even if Fred gets me a French governess and a flock of nursemaids, which isn't very likely. Lynbrook and a part-time maid's the best I can look forward to, and it looks like a millionaire's dream from where I sit now, believe me."

Lola asked curiously:

"If you could go back—to the time before the baby, I mean—would you?"

Rhoda evaded uneasily:

"That's putting it up to me." She cast a defiant glance at her sleeping son. She smiled suddenly.

"Darned if I would!" she admitted.

Lola's month was up. Her mother said at breakfast:

"Going over to the office soon?"

Ken looked up from his coffee. He asked nothing. He merely looked. And Mrs. Davis remarked, "Ken, eat your cereal! I declare, the way you go off to work, hit or miss, it's a shame. You're as bad as father."

Lola answered, watching the toaster intently:

"O, a day or so won't matter, I suppose. I've some letters to get out for Ken and I want to finish that house dress you cut out for me."

Ken rose:

"Off to the day's battle," he said gayly. "Got an operation to perform today on one of the world's oldest Renaults. Come down and see it, Lola. It will give you a good laugh. But the darned thing runs! You'd be surprised."

He bent and kissed her and in passing dropped his big hand lightly on his mother-in-law's shoulder. Outside the house stood the battered "service car." "Come along, Dad! Hey, Howard!" he called to Mr. Davis and Howard, who were out in the back yard putting Howard's latest acquisition, a homeless pup picked up off the streets, through his clumsy, touching paces, "time to step on it!"

He would drop them at the subway. Presently the door slammed and the three had gone, and the loud and angry noise of the motor turning over was heard. Lola rose, smiling, and started to clear the dishes.

A day or so later she sat with Jameson in his office.

"Well," he said delightedly, "you look great. Put on weight, haven't you?"

"A little."

"That's fine. You could afford to."

Gladys and Dorothy, heads together in the outer office, speculated. "She's coming back!" "Bet she isn't." "Sure she is." "She looks like a million, doesn't she?" "Well, I don't know," said Gladys, regarding her own costume complacently and smoothing the skirt which showed below the short smock, "her dress has an even hemline!"

"Ready to come back?" asked Jameson.

"Ready to have me?"

"Not," he replied regretfully, "at the old salary. There isn't a place, Lola. You know how it is here. But I can find something. How'd you like to work in Medical for a while? You're quick; you'd catch on."

She said:

"I think I'd like it. But——"

"But what——"

She said desperately:

"Mr. Jameson, I don't know. I want to come back, and I don't want to. Yet I feel I should. To help Ken."

"If that is the way you feel," he said, "and, by the way, it wasn't always 'to help Ken,' was it? It was something a little different, wasn't it? If that's the way you feel, perhaps you won't have to. If you're willing to do without things."

She said, low:

"I'm afraid."

"Of what?" he wanted to know.

"Either way you'll probably be sorry," he told her. "Don't decide now. Give it more time. And if we can't fit you in here, I'll see that you have letters. Most companies are faced with cutting down staffs and wages. You know all about that, and the unemployment problem. But make up your mind yourself."

Thinking It Over

That day she did a strange thing on leaving the office. She went down into the BMT and, changing at Fourteenth street, took an express through to Coney island. The sea was blazing blue under an October sky. The island was empty save for the people who lived there, whose business it was to be there. Pleasure park and Ferris wheel stood closed and idle. The great steel dip and sweep of the scenic railways were empty and still. There were some people on the board walk, walking or in chairs, a few boys fishing from the piers, an invalid or two sitting in the sun.

Lola walked along the board walk and looked out to the smooth, quiet swell of the sea. She told herself, I have to think this out. The best way. The way for all of us.

Ken had been happy since her return; happy to find her there at night, to leave her there in the morning; happy to have her come into the cubbyhole office and sit down at the battered typewriter; happy to talk to her, nights, of this new scheme and that old problem. There had been very little friction between them. She thought, sensibly, but I haven't been home long. If things went on this way there'd be trouble, same as always. Bound to be. You don't make things different as easily as that. But different trouble, maybe.

She had remembered that he had promised that if she went back to work he wouldn't "kick" or "grouch." But there would be the same things over again to wear on them both; the frantic rush in the mornings, the frantic return at night; the business of money; the inevitable being tired; the quarrels that came from irritated nerves.

Not that Ken wasn't tired nowadays, or irritated, too, sometimes; gloomy when things went wrong; appalled, looking over bills; frightened, wondering if he and the more stable Jake could swing things. But it was different. She wasn't tired, or worried, or irritated. Against her placidity, her assurance, her laughter his irritation turned off, like blunt arrows striking a smooth wall. He'd laugh and say, "Well, tomorrow's another day. Gee, I'm tired!"

She thought, it would be easier if I were earning, and harder.

It was long past dusk before she turned back and went home, to find her mother peering out of brightly lighted windows and Ken pacing the living room floor.

"For Pete's sake, where were ya?" he demanded. "I thought you were run over or something. I was ready to phone the hospitals."

"Ken, don't be silly. Think of all the nights I've come home late, after you," she reminded him.

"Sure, but you haven't been doing it lately," he grinned, sheepishly, "so I got out of the habit of not worrying, see?"

Her mother said, bewildered: "You couldn't be with Mr. Jameson all that time."

"No." She smiled at them both. Ken asked, suddenly:

"Out with the boy friend?"

She saw him trying to speak lightly of the possibility; saw her mother's amazement; heard her comment, "Ken, how you talk—as if Lola would——"

"Well, no," said Lola, hastily.

Not Worth the Price

Mrs. Davis sniffed at a pie, burning. She left the room like a small, plump whirlwind and Ken asked, quietly:

"By the way, what became of Acton?"

"I'm sure I don't know. He's in Europe somewhere; I read it in the papers," she replied carelessly. "I was down at Coney, taking my daily dozen on the board walk if you must know," she said, after a pause.

She thought—they always "must" know. You have to account for your time whether you like it or not. In one way or another.

Ken asked, elaborately casual: "Get the job?"

"No."

"No?" His face was incredulous. He said, quickly: "Gee, I'm sorry, Lola; I know you're fit to be tied sitting around doing nothing. Darned tough. What's the matter with them over there, anyhow?"

"I'm not worried," she denied. "I can get work."

"Somewhere else?"

"I don't know." Suddenly she was tired of delay. She asked seriously: "Would you care? Could we make out? Mr. Jameson will give me a place, at a lower salary. Or letters, references—which ever I like. I—I think perhaps I should go back. We'd get along faster. But if I didn't go back? If I stayed? I mean, it would mean staying on longer with the family perhaps than we planned. And doing without some things."

His face was almost stupid with astonishment, with his willingness to understand yet as if he lacked the ability to do so.

"You mean—you'd live on what I bring in?" he asked. "You wouldn't mind?"

"I'd mind," she said honestly, "in lots of ways. Not having new clothes now and then. Not getting away, vacations, and having to ask for money. I'd mind that most of all."

He said, a little proudly: "We've a business checking account, Jake and I. And I'll have one of my own, soon. With you. A joint account. You won't have to ask me for money, Lola; can you stand the gaff?"

She rose and faced him. She said: "I think I'll have to. I can't bear going back to—I think you know. It isn't worth the money it brought in. At least, not to me. We can do without things, Ken. Without an apartment, for a while, without theater tickets and radios and vacations, and—and speakeasies. I won't mind, much, after I get used to it. But you've got to let me help. I can't just sit home and rust out, help mother with the housework, sew a little, and pay calls. You've got to take me in with you, if Jake doesn't mind. A silent partner, like Louis. Only I can't invest anything in it," she said, "except time. I'll take care of the books and do the typing. I can do a lot of it, at home. I—I've been thinking. I might have some ideas, I'm not so dumb, even if I don't know the engine of a car from—from the bumper. I'd go crazy if I didn't think I was helping in some way. Helping save, too, for the business. Our business. Will you let me help, Ken——?"

"Will I?"

He was across the room; he had her in his arms. Mrs. Davis, returning to the living room, backed hastily out again. She went out in the yard and spoke to Mr. Davis and Howard, who had come home to rush out of doors and regard the priceless puppy once more. "Lola," said Mrs. Davis, "isn't going back to work!"

"Are you sure you won't be sorry?" Ken was asking.

"I know I'll be sorry, lots of times. But it won't matter. We'll try it this way, anyway. Your way. My way, too, perhaps. I don't know."

He said, his voice roughened: "Gee, you'll never know. I'll work so damned hard——"

Inches to his stature, somehow. Funny new sort of ring to his voice. She thought, it can't mean so much to him. Or does it, to all men, only they won't admit it? He was saying: "I've been a pretty rotten sort of husband. I'll make it up to you, Lola."

Ambition

That night she lay awake, looking beyond the dim blur of the window into the uncertain future. She would be sorry. Often. She'd miss—O, not only the office and the other girls and the feeling of being something, the tiniest cog in the amazing machine, but the sense of belonging to herself. Yet she knew that she belonged to Ken as well. That was funny; you couldn't belong to yourself and to some one else, at the same time, could you? She'd miss excitement, rumor, gossip, competition. She'd hate the girls to come see her, looking at her with curious, rather pitying eyes, "poor Lola, tied to a house and husband—and children." Children? That, too, perhaps. She'd hate growing complacent, as Connie had grown complacent, looking, in her turn at the girls who worked, unmarried, or at the—what was it Ken had called them—at the part time wives with eyes also curious and pitying—"poor devils, working themselves sick for—nothing very much." She'd loathe, in a way, not being able to say—"I'm on my own."

Ambition? Well, she could use her ambition for Ken. It would be as much hers, wouldn't it? He was the sort of person who was easily discouraged, who needed pushing and prodding, and, "sure, you can do it!" Not that he was weak. He was no weaker than any man in his position would be. Sensitive perhaps; a bit of an inarticulate dreamer. Nervous. Brimming with a nervous energy, the sort that lets down easily. She knew that much about him now.

Pride? Well, she'd hated Ken's pride. And now she had her own. His had remained, although he had managed to compromise with it. Hers would have to go. They couldn't both have what they wanted.

She was not unhappy, planning her letter to Jameson: "I've made up my mind not to come back. I want to thank you for everything." She wasn't happy, either. Yet, her heart was oddly light within her, and there was a certain eagerness in her determination.

He'll make good. I'll make good.

That's what it amounted to. She'd soon find her routine, soon forget, except at moments, the things she missed, the things she thought she'd had.

Doing Without

She flung out a hand and touched him, sleeping. She thought we love each other. If we can keep that, what else matters? He's always thought we could keep it this way. I didn't. But I know now that we couldn't keep it the other way. So we'll try this.

She could not see very far ahead on the road. She guessed at things dimly, not putting them into words. The things which waited: struggle and discouragement; short tempers and long endurance; laughter, happiness; failure and success; birth and death, and sorrows shared and hopes frustrated and dreams coming true. All ahead of her. Ahead of them both. She said to herself, Agnes will think I'm a fool and Connie will think I've come to my senses at last—both of them right, both of them wrong.

She remembered some of the things Jameson had said to her in Mannering's office at St. Louis. She thought of Jenny fleetingly; Jenny writing her carelessly spelled, perfectly entranced letters. Jenny was happy, two months married. She'd have a lot to learn.

Doing without. The things she—and Ken—would have to do without were not important. They had only seemed so. Curious that the reasonably small amount of money she was able to contribute to the running of a home should make all the difference, stretch out to cover those unimportant things. But they were things people expected nowadays, somehow took for granted.

Well, she could do without them. She could do without anything but Ken.

There were drawbacks living at home; there would be more as time went on. But they would plan ahead. When it was safe for them, and sane, they'd make their own home. They'd have a foundation on which to build.

Not yet quite reconciled, yet unrebellious, she lay there and listened to Ken's quiet breathing. She made herself—and him—a promise, in the speech of her generation. She had made it before, three years earlier when they had married. She had not kept it—nor had he. Was it through any fault of their own? This time they would keep it, no matter what happened.

"We'll make good," she said.

Next Sunday:

V. SACKVILLE-WEST spins an exquisite yarn of a placid, bromidic woman who, for one startling moment, has a sudden glimpse of what her life will be twenty-four years hence. The title:

The Unborn Visitant

FIRE . . . .

By Charles G. D. Roberts

black-jack he spread carefully on the rock, with a stone to keep them secure, to dry in that parching wind. He would have a smoke and a rest before setting out to examine the island which would be his prison for some days, at best. Unless heavy rains should come, it would be a week at least before he would be able to pick his way through the smouldering ruins of the forest.

The island was something over a quarter of a mile in length and perhaps about two hundred yards at its widest. An irregular, rocky ridge formed its backbone. It carried a sparse growth of deciduous shrubs, wythwood and viburnum, huckleberry and blueberry, at this season just budding and too full of sap to catch fire from the half extinct brands that occasionally reached it. This applied also to a few clumps of young birch and poplar that grew in the hollows.

Strange Companions

But an ancient spruce, mossy and resinous, towering solitary at the further end of the ridge, had intercepted a sailing curl of lighted bark and now was blazing like a giant torch. Here and there a tuft of dry grass would flare up and fade. But the island, as a whole, was fireproof. Satisfied on this point, Jed picked up his pack and his paddle, crossed over the ridge to the outer shore where he would be sheltered from the scorching wind and to some degree from the smoke, and proceeded to make camp under an overhanging rock by simply unfolding his pack and standing the paddle and the ax in a bush beside it. Forthwith the spot became a home.

Between two stones he built a little woodsman's fire, and with a pronged stick began to toast himself a thick slice of bacon. He would have relished a mug of strong tea, but in his haste he had forgotten to bring a tin to make it in.

While he was munching with satisfaction on bacon and hardtack, down along the shore came the moose, with the calf at her heels, glancing about as if looking for something. When she caught sight of the man she stopped and fell to browsing contentedly on a clump of poplar saplings. Apparently he was what she had been looking for.

"Guess she has decided we're pals," muttered Jed. And presently the pair drew nearer, and lay down not more than a dozen paces away from him. Then, a little farther on, appeared the young bear which he had seen swimming ashore. The bear peered shyly around a corner of rock, eyeing first the great moose and then the man; and at last very diffidently he emerged into full view and fell to turning over stones with his paw in search of grubs or beetles. It was evident that he craved company, and that horror of the flames which he had so narrowly escaped had overcome his instinctive fear of man.

Suddenly Jed heard a scrabbling of claws and a frightened squeak from the rock above him, and a red squirrel, alighting just beside him, scurried around to the other side of his fire and sat up there chattering and jerking its long tail in great excitement. Jed turned his head and glanced up to see what had scared the little animal. The crafty yellow mask of a big fox was snarling down upon him. It stared at him superciliously for a moment and then faded away.

The fox knew there were many more squirrels to be hunted. The squirrels being good swimmers, the island was now swarming with them; and there being no tall trees to give them refuge they would be easy prey. But this particular squirrel, perceiving that the man was an efficient protector, decided to keep close by him, and presently fell to nibbling at a scrap of biscuit which the man had tossed to it.

That night Jed Smith slept heavily beneath the shelter of his rock, while the conflagration raged and crashed along the shore behind the island, the billowing smoke was torn to streamers high overhead, the sky glowed crimson to the zenith, and the lake was lashed to fury under the tearing gale. He was awakened at daylight by the shrill chattering of the squirrel hardly more than an arm's length from his head. It was jerking up and down as if on springs, trying to nerve itself to the venture of darting in and stealing a scrap of biscuit which peeped whitely from under the edge of the blanket. Laughingly he shooed off the little thief, bidding it mind its manners and wait for breakfast.

While he was toasting his bacon the moose and her calf strolled past, so close he could have touched them with his toasting fork, and disappeared around a bend of the shore in search of better browsing.

After breakfast he decided to try and catch some trout, to vary his bill of fare and make his bacon go further. From a water soaked leather wallet in his pocket he extracted a fishhook, and from another pocket a hank of line, two articles which, in the wilderness, he was never without. Then, sticking his little ax in his belt, he sauntered off down the island looking for a birch sapling that would make a good fishing rod.

An Evening in Ambush

Now it chanced, quite naturally, that the man, the moose and her calf, the little bear, the fox, and the many squirrels were not the only fugitives who had found refuge on the island. From further down the blazing shore a full grown bear, huge and gaunt and hungry, had got away with a scorching which did not improve his temper, and had made his landing at the lower end of the island. Men he hated, but also wisely feared. He had once been well peppered with buckshot, and had never forgotten the experience.

Having caught sight of Jed Smith, while the latter was drying himself on the rock, he had thereafter taken good care that the man should not catch sight of him; and he had kept to the far end of the island, teasing his mighty appetite with a mouse or two, and torpid beetles, and stringy roots. But he had also, to his great satisfaction, caught sight of the big cow and her calf. He could afford to wait. These restless creatures would wander all over the island. The calf would not be always at its mother's side. When the chance came he would strike it down with one blow of his paw. He would then have to fight the mother, of course, and he knew that a full grown cow moose was fully a match for the average bear. But he was a monarch of his kind, a victor in many battles, and skilled to ward off the lightning stroke of those slashing and trampling hoofs.

When the cow and calf got started they kept wandering on, very slowly, stopping now and then for the cow to crop the aromatic twigs of a young birch or the tips of a huckleberry bush or stunted moosewood sapling, till they were come nearly to the end of the island. Then the cow clambered up a steep slope to reach some especially tempting provender. The calf, shirking the climb, lingered lazily below, watching his mother. Suddenly, out of the corner of his eye, he caught sight of a monstrous black form rushing upon him. He gave a bawl of terror. The cow slid down the slope like an avalanche, saw the peril, and hurled the calf out of the way, bowling him clean off his feet. In the same instant she whirled about nimbly as a dancer. In the same instant, also, the bear was upon her; but, unable to check himself, he was too close to strike with the full force of his armed paw. As she was in the act of swinging away from it his claws merely raked her shoulder, damaging little more than hair and hide. As she completed her swing she struck at him like lightning, a short blow which caught him on the ribs and made him grunt angrily. Then she danced back out of reach, away from the calf.

Savagely the bear lunged after her, but again she was too nimble for him, and before he could strike she was beyond reach of the stroke. And in a few seconds she had drawn him some twenty or thirty paces away from the calf. Then, seeing her game, he stopped and half swung about, as if to charge back upon the trembling youngster. The cow was deceived by this feint. Frantically she plunged forward, rearing and striking with her great knife-edged hoofs. Those strokes were like the strokes of a piledriver, but the bear was ready for them. Rising to his full height he fended them with his massive forearms like a skilled boxer, and with a terrific side sweep he threw her off her balance. Before she could recover herself he was on her flank, rending and tearing with his long claws and striving to pull her down while his fangs, fixed in the tough hide of her humped shoulders, baffled her maddest efforts to wrench herself free.

Jed Smith, meanwhile, from a near-by point on the ridge where he had paused to cut his fishing rod, had seen that first rush of the bear upon the calf. Cursing the loss of his rifle, he jerked the light ax from his belt and went racing down the rugged slope. He felt as if those moose belonged to him. If he could get there in time he knew that he and that valiant cow together were more than a match for any black bear that ever lived.

Just as the cow was sinking to her knees under the irresistible, crushing drag of her mighty antagonist, Jed Smith arrived. Neither of the straining beasts had seen him. Swinging high his little ax, he brought the bright blade down with all his force, splitting the bear's skull clean to the throat. Then he sprang aside several paces, wiped his weapon on the moss, and stood watching with grim satisfaction while without a sound the huge black bulk slumped down in a sprawling heap.

Saved by Man

Thus suddenly freed, the cow was on her feet again in a flash. She whirled about, ready to renew the battle, though her flank was streaming with blood and her knees trembling. For a second or two, as if dazed, she stared down at the motionless form of her foe.

Then, with a squeal of fury, she reared to her full height and brought her fore-hoofs down upon it with all her weight behind them. For the next few minutes she slashed, and pounded, and trampled blindly till she was bathed in blood to the knees, and what had been a bear was but a shapeless mass of dark fur and crimson mangled flesh. At last, convinced that her adversary was effectually defeated, she hurried over to the calf, nosed him to make sure he was unhurt, and then let him nurse, which was apparently her panacea for all ills. The man she never even looked at.

"You think you done it all yourself, old girl," muttered Jed, "but if I hadn't got here in time you were a goner." And he strode off grinning to find himself that fishing pool.

That same night the wind fell, and rain came down in torrents. All night Jed Smith sat with his back against the rock, drenched, but smoking philosophically. In the morning the smoke that rose from the blackened forest, which still glowed red in spots, was mingled with white clouds of steam. Jed allowed himself one hardtack, then strapped on his pack, picked up his paddle and headed for the raft. It was still raining heavily, but he felt that he would be no worse off on the raft than here, and it would be well to push along while the lake was calm. But first he cut himself a strong pole, with which to thrust his raft through the shallow waters along shore at a much better pace than he could hope to make with the paddle.

Just as he was shoving off the squirrel arrived. It came with a scamper and a wild leap, landed close beside him and sat up, chattering and flirting its tail on the forward end of the raft. It was not going to be left behind on that dangerous island. It had found Jed Smith very useful, and likely to be more so. It would journey with him till they should reach some favored spot afar from fires and bears, where the fir trees would grow thick and green, and tall enough to be a refuge from the fiercest foxes.

THERE are three new theatrical productions for the week in Chicago: "He," with Tom Powers, opening at the Illinois tomorrow night; "Meet My Sister," with Bettina Hall, which opened at the Grand last night, and "The Rap," with Helen Tenney, opening at the Studebaker Saturday night.

Pulitzer Prize Play Provokes Hot Argument

"Alison's House" Is Bad Choice, Critics Assert.

By Charles Collins.

THIS is the time of year when almost every dramatic critic and stage connoisseur rises from his cultural throne to utter a vigorous protest against the Pulitzer prize award. Last season was an exception to the rule—every one agreed that "The Green Pastures" deserved the top ribbon and the cash honorarium. The merry Maytime of 1931, however, has revived the grand old custom of baiting the umpires, and Susan Glaspell's "Alison House," recently presented as the best play of the season from the point of view of the committee on Pulitzer awards, is receiving a pretty panning.

The New York critics, in particular, seem thoroughly understand that "Alison's House" is not the people's choice. They are not in agreement upon the better play that should have received the honor, but their ex post facto nominations include "Green Grow the Lilacs," "Elizabeth the Queen," "Tomorrow and Tomorrow," "Five Star Final," and "Once in a Lifetime." A voice in the wilderness has also been heard crying out loud in favor of Channing Pollock's "The House Beautiful," but since it does not come from a member of the dramatic critics' union it may be disregarded.

Voice of the Times.

Brooks Atkinson of the New York Times, sound writer and sympathetic observer of the American stage, may be quoted on the subject. He saw virtually "Alison's House" that his colleagues missed when the first nighters made their hegira from Broadway to Fourteenth street to report upon Eva Le Gallienne's staging of Miss Glaspell's drama; but he bluntly refuses to greet the work a Pulitzer selection. He says:

"Miss Glaspell is one of our most gifted writers, particularly of novels, and 'Alison's House' is a play with a respectable theme. But to select it as the best play of the season is to show how meagerly the committee esteems the current American drama and the annual prize it helps bestow. Every few years this committee insists upon flaunting its ignorance. . . .

"It is a play of flat statements—of emotions, of sentimentally literary allusions and of perfunctory characterizations. No matter how earnestly the characters talk, in a strangely stereotyped prose, the image of Allison never appears for an instant. . . Everything that might be conceivably dramatic in the narrative is consistently crowded off the stage, so that nothing disturbs the rigid dullness of the spoken word.

"Prize committees are always under fire and under suspicion; all cultural authority is accepted on sufferance. But sometimes, as in the case of 'Alison's House,' the drama committee for the Pulitzer prize goes out of its way to make its glory hollow."

Reading the Play.

All of which has piqued my curiosity and stimulated my zeal for research. "Alison's House" will not be a matter of playgoing attention in this region until next season, when it will figure on the subscription program of the Dramatic league; but I said to myself, "This affair seems to be an atrocity that should be investigated without delay." So I settled down to read "Alison's House," after legally borrowing Fanny Butcher's copy of the printed text.

Strangely enough, I enjoyed the experience. The chore I had expected turned out to be an hour of recreation. I liked "Alison's House." I found its theme interesting; its atmosphere friendly; its characters persuasively American; its story quietly stirring. It may easily be a play for reading rather than for acting, for it is gray and demure of tone, and its scenes are not high-lighted with action. Still, I found pleasure in "Alison's House" under the lamp. What I think about it as revealed before the footlights will be another story, and I hope that nothing I have said as a play reader shall be held against me when I sit in judgment upon this bone of contention as a first nighter.

Lares and Penates.

I found in "Alison's House," among other things, a feeling for American family life that is rare in the theater. Most plays kinship between the characters is merely an assumption of the author and a line of type upon the program. It is a matter of fortune, and the audience is expected to take the blood-relationship, home and tribal spirit for granted. In "Alison's House," however, this elusive quality is caught and communicated without waste of dialogue. I call it no slight achievement. It brings Miss Glaspell, the American, into association with Tchekhoff, the Russian, master magician for the evocation of domestic moods and background.

The play, as nearly every one has been told, relates to the discovery, years after her death, that a New England spinster and recluse named Emily Dickinson was a poet who had left important, strikingly original contributions to American letters. She had lived as an unknown, the contemporary of the literary giants of the nineteenth century, but she came out of that old-fashioned past to confound the radicals of modern verse. It is a famous story among literary folk, and Miss Glaspell has followed it closely, changing the name of Emily Dickinson to Alison Stanhope and the environment from Amherst, Mass., to the Iowa shore of the Mississippi.

"Busy" Aunts.

The denouncers of the Pulitzer award are inclined to argue that the appeal of "Alison's House" is predicated upon one's familiarity with the life story of Emily Dickinson. I refuse, however, to regard the unseen

Critic Writes a Last Tribute to David Belasco

Master Showman Was Shy at Heart.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—David Belasco would have approved a visualization of his own death and the ceremonies attending it, I think. It was, without stress being placed on making it so, sufficiently theatrical to have pleased the master showman to whom all life was a show.

He might have added the item of lying in state, though I doubt it. David had failed greatly, the last several weeks. He was white and drawn and, being a proud man, I doubt if he would have approved the idea of his cold corpse being stared at by a curious multitude.

He had a sense of dignity. He was a sensitive soul, really, and rather shy, though his showman's impulse overcame both these characteristics as frequently as it gave way to them. People said he was an old cheater when he backed away from curtain calls and pulled his forelock. They said it was quite noticeable that he was always there, in the wings, waiting to be dragged on to the stage by one of his new made stars or to split the honors with a Warfield or a Carter, a Starr, or an Ulric.

This is true. He was a showman. He never denied that. He knew, none knew better than he, the value of publicity. He could absorb salutes as greedily as any be-medaled general in the National Guard. But the actual doing of the thing that would gain him the publicity he wanted and the applause for which he hungered; the physical transference of himself to the front of the procession or out upon a stage to face a grinning, applauding audience was not easy for him.

Not Without Enemies.

Much of the talk of the week, naturally, has been about Belasco and his way. He was not without enemies in the sense that many people distrusted him and many accused him of being the author of certain of their misfortunes—actors he had fired, or hired at low salaries; playwrights whose royalties he had cut into deeply after helping them rewrite their scripts; ambitious players to whom he had, they say, given his word as to future preferment and then forgotten.

For a few days kindly things were said, and eloquent tributes paid, as is the old human custom. But once the wasted body was laid in the tomb, out popped tributes with a reverse English. Which is natural. Any man of many contacts with sensitive, vain, child minded people is bound to make such enemies.

A good many have asked me about his affectation of wearing clerical garb. What was that but a kind of cheap showmanship, they have asked. And what was the cause for it?

I don't know. I suspect it could be traced, first, to a sort of infant fixation. A part of his impressionable youth was spent in study with a Catholic priest, Father MacGuire of Victoria, B. C., where, incidentally, David made his first appearances on the stage as the child in "Pizzaro" and again as the child in "Metamora."

He may have admired the good father so much that he copied his choker, or it may be that his love of the theatrical prompted his trying the priest's garb. Finding that it both became him and attracted attention, he probably clung to it as a sort of trademark—as Louis Mann clung to the huge, batwing collars, and as Dan-

Army Planes Keep Newsreel Cameras Busy

And Give Film Producers Food for Thought.

By Tom Pettey.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—These "million dollar air thrillers" from Hollywood hereafter will be just so much celluloid to this movie goer. I have seen the real thing. Ten days with the army airmen—days filled with aircraft thrills—make shadow pictures seem futile things. More than 600 planes, fifteen million dollars' worth of fighting ships, roaring through the skies is a spectacle for the film makers to shoot at with their heaviest bank accounts.

The newsreel men, however, have profited greatly through the army's biggest air show. The "Battle of Dayton," the "Capture of Chicago" and the "Destruction of New York City" will flicker on many news screens for weeks to come. The air maneuvers have been field days for the newsreel men.

In Dayton, the concentration point for training for the two weeks of mimic war, movie sound trucks were parked deep in the flying field out past the farthest ship. No such pictures have ever been made, for nobody except the army has so many airplanes to play at war with.

Camera Planes Numerous.

The camera planes have become as much a part of battle formations as the fighting ships. In the next real war the movie machine is going to play an increasingly important part. Its eye never falters and out of the dark room after the "battle" comes the real story of what happened.

A camera man standing erect in the rear cockpit of a speeding biplane has become a familiar sight to those who followed this year's greatest air maneuvers. I talked to several of the picture men and obtained a story from each movie maker.

The best "shots" just happen, they say. One young English war captain, now a flying photographer, told me of two remarkable air pictures

High Schools' Chorus of 346 Will Give Concert Wednesday

By Edward Moore.

WHAT the Chicago high schools are doing in music will be set out in the form of a concert at Orchestra hall next Wednesday evening. A chorus of 346 picked from all the high schools of the city will sing, a selected high school orchestra will play, and Dr. J. Lewis Browne, director of music of the Chicago public schools, will conduct. Oscar W. Anderson will act as assistant conductor.

Dr. Browne has given time, thought, and erudition to the program. It is to be a historical program, beginning with some of the earliest music that has come down to us and ending with some of the present era. The first song, "Sirath Hayyam," is an ancient Sephardic melody, how old no one knows, but bearing a legendary theory that it was the song sung by Miriam and her companions in the biblical story. It will be sung in Hebrew.

A Greek work, the Hymn to Apollo, sung in ancient Greek, is one of the few works of its kind to have been deciphered from inscriptions in Greece. Its date of composition is placed about 278 B. C. It was discovered some forty years ago by the French Archæological school in Athens. From thence the old music goes to an Ambrosian chant of the fourth century in the first mode, a Gregorian chant of the eighth century in the eighth mode, and works by Palestrina and Cruger of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

The rest of the program will be modern—choruses by Franck, Gounod, and some Chicago composers and a few specimens of Americana. The orchestra will play Brahms' "Academic Festival" Overture and a movement from the Mozart Symphony in G minor. William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools, will make an address.

News of Ravinia Artists.

Most of the artists of the coming Ravinia season have been getting ready for the season by standing by, although they admit nationalities variously of the United States, Canada, Spain, Italy, Germany, Russia, France, Poland, Scandinavia, and Belgium. Giovanni Martinelli and Virgilio Lazzari are taking short vacations in Italy, Giuseppe Danise has gone to Switzerland to put his children in school there, Ina Bourskaya has returned to Russia for the first time since she left that mysterious land, Marek Windheim is in Poland, Louis Hasselmans is in France, and Julia Claussen is visiting her daughters in England.

But Lucrezia Bori prefers republican America to republican Spain—she has received decorations from the ex-royal family of the orders of Isabel la Catolica and Alfonso XII.—and Elisabeth Rethberg has remained on this side for the first spring in a number of years. Yvonne Gall has been singing in Europe this winter, but will soon be here. Others that have stayed here are Edward Johnson, Mario

Suspense Keeps You Guessing in This Thriller

Underground Railway Has Strange Murder.

"THE SUBWAY EXPRESS."

The subway train was speeding on,
As subway trains do do. (Yes, two "do's," copyreader.)
When some one murdered Tracy!
AND—the question then was—
WHO?????

Produced by Columbia. Directed by Fred Newmeyer. Presented at the Palace theater.

THE CAST.

Killian	Jack Holt
Dale Tracy	Aileen Pringle
Kearney	Fred Kelsey
Tracy	Alan Roscoe
Borden	Jason Robards
Stevens	Sidney Bracy
Mason	Selmer Jackson
Mr. Cotton	William Humphrey
Mrs. Cotton	Ethel Wales
Mrs. Mullins	Julianne Leighton
Mulvaney	James Goss
Prizefighter	Mason Williams

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

Who killed Mr. Tracy on the subway express, between two stations of the underground railway?

The train is full of passengers, any one of whom MIGHT be the murderer and most of whom probably aren't. It is up to Inspector Killian to solve the mystery.

Called to make an investigation, Killian puts every one through a process of questioning. For a long time his efforts to locate the killer are fruitless. Then—BING! Killian triumphant! With promotion undoubtedly flirting with him from the offing! [Here's ONE time when Mr. Jack Holt gets a break!]

The action of the picture takes place almost entirely in one car, with shots of stations along the tracks. The passengers conduct themselves and respond to the volley of questions fired at them in varied fashion. Fred Kelsey, as a bonehead cop, furnishes the low comedy—and they could have left him out for all of me—but Ethel Wales, Julianne Leighton, Mason Williams and others, provide real amusements.

A Polished Performance.

Mr. Holt, as usual, gives a polished performance. As Officer Killian, he is shrewd, determined, ungullible. Aileen Pringle [who has gone permanently blond, I'm afraid] does well the little she has to do. The same may be said for other members of the cast.

I won't spoil the story for you by giving leads re: the answer to its question, but I will say that the piece is quite suspenseful and hides its secret

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know

THE Leo Hirschbergs celebrated their silver wedding anniversary Tuesday evening at the Belden-Stratford hotel. A large number of their good friends turned out to help make the occasion a merry one. Mr. and Mrs. Hirschberg responded with great big smiles, and made jubilee.

We are sorry to announce that Mr. and Mrs. George H. Garbutt, 6055 Mozart street, left recently for Lincoln, Neb., where they will make their home. George has been appointed western manager of the Consolidated Products company, with headquarters in Lincoln, which is a break for Lincoln and for George, but not for Our Town. Mrs. Garbutt, who was bookkeeper and cashier of the North Shore Fireproof Storage company, will also be missed by the many Uptown and North Town residents who knew her.

The engagement of one of our townswomen, Miss Phyllis Goldstein, 451 Wrightwood avenue, has just been announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Goldstein. Fred Berman, a Milwaukee boy, is the lucky fellow. Both Phyllis and he are graduates of the University of Wisconsin.

There is a war. The province of North Shore, state of Kiwanis, has been torn asunder by civil conflict, according to Frederick J. Bertram, president of the North Shore Kiwanis club. The governors, princes, burgomasters, and merchant chiefs of the recent charity ball of the North Shore club have come to a perfect misunderstanding as to who rates first in the North Shore social circle. Two rival factions have sprung up. One is under the leadership of "Skipper" Milt Myers, who has done service in the navy, while the other is officered by Col. Charlie Kraft, who has eaten army rations in every war Uncle Sam has conducted in the last 30 years, including the late European misconduct. The two factions have chosen to settle their disputes by a series of "attendance barrages" until June 30. Each attendance of a member will be a direct hit, 10 points, and each guest attendance will be an indirect hit and count 5 points.

MISS ROSELLE BEZAZIAN, 6212 Winthrop avenue, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Bezazian, will be a member of the women's honor committee for next year in Oberlin college, Oberlin, O. As a member of the honor committee, Roselle will have to cultivate a stern expression quite contrary to her usual charming smile, for the honor committee helps direct the educational work that is part of the Oberlin student honor system, and Roselle will be a member of the court that deals with any violations of the college rules. Next year will be her senior year in the Oberlin conservatory of music.

We met Carl Johnson, the popular Clark street coal, grain and hay merchant, down at the beach near the Navy pier on Thursday morn, sunning his tonsils while looking at the airplanes. Mrs. Johnson and the two boys were along to see that father didn't step off into the water while looking upward. Carl wants to fly, but his charming missus reminds him ever so often that he is a family man and had better keep at least one foot on the ground.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Bright, 1300 Hood avenue, are passing six weeks in Hollywood, Cal., with their son, John, who is making a name for himself as a motion picture writer. Jack is only 23 years old, but during the year he has been in Hollywood he wrote the story of "The Public Enemy," now playing in New York, and "Larceny Lane" and "Smart Money," which are in production. Jack is a graduate of Senn High school and attended Lake Forest college and Columbia university before going to Hollywood.

New members of the Stuck Up club are Mr. and Mrs. George Dahl, 6316 Paulina street, who were held up by two bandits with revolvers and robbed of jewelry and currency amounting to $1,700 last week-end.

ANOTHER member of the Stuck Up club is John Fathauer, 1457 Leland avenue, who had the unusual experience of being held up by a trio of bold bad men who had no gun. He was robbed of $478 and a watch valued at $50, by three men who followed him into the hallway of his home.

George Van Kasp, a bright young feller of 20, fell through the glass panel of a door in the office building at 1123 Argyle street Wednesday night and cut his arm. He was taken to Edgewater hospital.

Among the Chicagoans who reported possessing $3 bills after a Cincinnati man had boasted that he owned the only one extant was Mrs. Fred Bullen, 6141 Sheridan road. Mrs. Bullen's note was issued 93 years ago by the Berrien County bank, Mich., and came into her family 30 years ago when a Mr. Pearcroft gave it to her daughter, Mabel, who is now Mrs. Herman Friestedt, 6906 Sheridan road. Mr. Pearcroft was given the note by a Michigan teacher, who had received it in part payment of her salary. The banknote is beautifully engraved on one side, and is blank on the other.

Old money seems plentiful in Our Town, even though the new money is somewhat scarce. R. L. Wickes, 4501 Racine avenue, is one of a few Chicagoans who own banknotes of the time of the revolutionary war. Mr. Wickes has 11 such notes, ranging in face value from 18 cents to $8. Most of them were issued by a resolution of the Continental congress on May 30, 1777. The notes are engraved on both sides, and were exchangeable for Spanish currency as well as gold and silver coin of the colonies. These notes are the remainder of a larger collection once owned by Mr. Wickes, who also collects stamps. The other notes of the collection were lost some time ago. The revolutionary notes include some that were handed down to him by his grandfather.

'Use Your Head' Is Knickerbocker School Command

Miss Ora M. Riggs Tells of Her Aims.

By Virginia Schmitz.

"USE your head" as chief axiom takes the place of a rule book; absolute freedom without license is the bill of rights, and placing the child in a situation where he will have to think is the chief aim of Knickerbocker school, 2301 Clifton avenue, under the guidance of Miss Ora M. Riggs.

The Knickerbocker was one of the first schools to break away from the traditional form of education and interject an activities program along with a project method in the classroom.

"The reason I undertook the change," Miss Riggs explained, "was that my early teaching experience was in the traditional type of school, and when I went into the high school I found that the minds of children trained that way were stultified. They could work from patterns only. I decided that if I ever had anything to do with the administration of a school I would try to seek situations for them where they would have to think themselves out of it."

Clubs Develop Hobbies.

Clubs of various types which are given full sway once a week are developed out of the hobbies of the children. A group of older boys will spend their Wednesday afternoons making bird houses or constructing tables and other paraphernalia to present to the kindergarten children.

For those interested in music there is a harmonica club—really an orchestra—a drum and bugle corps that can drown out the best of them, a toy orchestra for the younger children as well as glee clubs. The staff of the "Knickerbocker News" also meets to discuss the merits and demerits of editorials and articles submitted by the group, and dramatics, sewing, handcraft, story telling, art appreciation, library work, science, scouting, and folk dancing have their followers.

Each child has the opportunity to select his own club, but he must stick with it until the semester is out, when he can make another choice if he wishes.

Work Is Correlated.

But the club program is only one phase of the educational program at Knickerbocker. School work is interrelated through one central project undertaken by the class.

In the seventh grade, under Mrs. Elizabeth Marshall, for instance, Japan is the focus of all the class work and the presentation of "The Sun Goddess," with every child taking part, will be the culmination of the semester's work.

Japan forms the basis for the work in geography and history; English lessons are covered in composition work with Japanese subjects.

Mrs. Marshall wrote to the American consul general in Japan, Arthur Garrells, asking that he commission some one to buy lanterns and parasols and other materials they could use in their play. The whole consular staff joined hands in seeking out the materials and a sheaf of bills in Japanese with their proper translations accompanied the local color—and formed the basis for a lesson in arithmetic."

Pageant to Be Presented.

Next Thursday as a part of open house week, the "Sun Goddess" will be presented in the gymnasium decorated as a Japanese tea garden. Costumes and wigs have been made by each student in the class and costumes for their pre school age brothers and sisters who will be imported for the occasion.

Similarly the whole school focuses its attention on the yearly pageant. A subject is chosen at the beginning of the year and is worked out through the various courses until spring. Parents, teachers and students all cooperate for its success. One year the history of Chicago was chosen and the pageant given in Lincoln park. This year's choice was "In Music Land."

The school is also noted for its boys' chorus, directed by Miss Sophia Lorden and considered one of the finest in the city. Working entirely with unchanged voices, Miss Lorden has developed a type of chorus singing often compared with the Paulist choir.

With Miss Riggs as direct advisor the school has organized itself into a little city with a girl mayor this year, with judges and attorneys and representatives on the council. The various departments of "city" work give special responsibilities to certain students.

The fire department has its chief and drummers with door monitors and fire line guards and sign handlers. The department of inside traffic is thoroughly organized along with the safety department and the senior and junior safety patrols. There is a department of public property, of courtesy, of decoration, health, inside cleanup, outside cleanup, thrift, with 'Be thrifty but don't be a miser' as its motto. There is a civics and welfare department, publicity, and junior and senior public speaking.

Duties for Every Child.

Other special responsibilities are given to the color guards, taps girls, office pages, assembly ushers, ushers for the Parent-Teacher meetings, chair movers, supply girls, bell boys and attendance officers. Then there are a group of orange juice servers and servers for the P.-T. A. meetings, the playground assistant, kindergarten and primary assistants and primary escorts.

Hardly a child in the school but has some duty that is his and his alone.

"It was drudgery," Miss Riggs said, "for both the teachers and the students in the old days and now its fun for both. A criticism of the new method has been that the children do not accomplish the work but standardized tests taken every third semester show that they hold their own at least with students taught under the traditional methods."

VOICE of the NORTH SIDE

Lincoln Park Program Gives Added Proof That City Is Summer Resort

Announcement of the summer program in Lincoln park will give Chicagoans a new appreciation of the splendid recreational facilities they have at their front door. Certainly, plenty of sport has been provided for those of all ages. The park with its stretch of lake front constitutes one of the city's assets, the benefits of which in health and vigor and rested nerves is beyond estimation.

The new bathing pavilion just north of Montrose avenue has been designed to accomodate approximately 10,000 bathers at one time. Before long there is due to be a repetition of the beach crowds which no other of America's seven greatest cities can match.

Success of the recent Jubilee has inspired the suggestion that it be made an annual summer event, advancing Chicago as the world's best summer resort. Despite the size of the throngs attracted to the beaches each year, there is still room for the accommodation of many thousands from less favored parts of the country who perhaps do not associate Chicago with this form of health giving pleasure.

With its reputation of an unfavorable sort fast disappearing, Chicago's reputation as a great summer resort well might be pushed to the fore.

CHICAGO'S DRUMMER BOY OF 1931.

Nearly every American is familiar with the famous painting called "The Spirit of 1776," with its drummer boy playing a leading rôle. It is not probable that Moritz Rose, the diminutive drummer of the Lake View High school band, who was one of the sensations of the city-wide Jubilee parade, was conscious of giving a performance destined to be historic, but if he symbolized "The Spirit of 1931" Chicago need not fear of its future.

Moritz entered the Jubilee parade with the many thousands who helped make that spectacle great. He was small in size, and the drum strapped about his waist was no different from that of many others to be heard in the procession. But apparently Moritz set out to do what he was given to do with all that was in him, and the multitudes along the line of march were left in no doubt about his being in the parade.

For this lad there were no lulls, no moments for taking it easy. He manipulated the drumsticks with a pep that was contagious, and the hearts of listeners kept pace with his stirring drumbeats. If the ghost of depression was hovering near, it shivered and slunk to other quarters far away from where Moritz played the drum. With such energy and enthusiasm abroad, pessimism found itself put to rout.

THE LESSON IN SCHOOL AWARDS.

During the last week New Trier High school recognized student achievements of many kinds. Those who received the awards as inspiration to further progress rather than as an end to effort are to be congratulated for victories thus achieved early in their careers.

Said Edmund Burke: "God has implanted in man a sense of ambition and a satisfaction arising from the contemplation of his excelling his fellows in something deemed valuable among them." It is best that ambition reveal itself in youth, for it is far less apt to stir the pulses when bodily energy begins to wane and problems of existence interfere.

Statistics do not show that the honor student always continues to pass his fellows in later life. There are legends of those who, after giving little promise in the schoolroom, turned out to be geniuses. Teachers of long experience, however, have had few surprises of this sort. That ambition sometimes does flicker out along the way is one of life's tragedies, but it is no cause for disparagement of commencement honors won at a time when such distinctions carry keenest pleasure.

Every school graduate has the satisfaction of knowing that persistence has resulted in reaching a first set goal of importance. All graduates cannot be honor students, but, in finishing a task begun, all of them have demonstrated a fiber of character essential to success.

THE NEIGHBORHOOD'S HEROES.

The fact that Chicago is a city of neighborhoods, each with its own patriotic organizations, means much toward the observance of Memorial day in a manner that makes the remembrance of the soldier dead definite and doubly impressive.

Thanks to the posts of the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the United Spanish War Veterans, and the Grand Army of the Republic, the graves of Chicago's soldier dead have been carefully marked. Thus wreaths are placed not only in memory of comrades in arms but of former neighbors and personal acquaintances. In death, as in life, the division of the great city into many communities has overcome that lack of human sympathy which might otherwise caharacterize the metropolis with its millions.

Certainly, in fixing the date for Memorial day, the founders could not have chosen better so far as the Chicago setting is concerned. Between the city and many of the cemeteries lie forest preserves which, as if conscious of their part in the floral remembrance, just now present a riot of color in blossoms.

The passing of years finds no passing of the Chicago spirit to pause in reverence for its soldier dead. Memorial day brings out a fine expression of the great city's soul.

VETS TO LEAD IN N. SIDE TRIBUTES TO SOLDIER DEAD

Kenilworth Has Memorial Service Today.

Led by veterans of the civil war, the Spanish-American war, and the world war, the north side and the north shore this week will pay tribute to the memory of the war dead. Most of the activities will be held next Saturday, Memorial day. However, Kenilworth will hold its memorial service today. Besides the services in cemeteries, one of the most spectacular events will be a parade through the principal business streets of Evanston.

Evanston post, No. 42, of the American Legion, will join with the United Spanish-American War Veterans, the Reserve Officers, Northwestern university, the Boy Scouts, the Junior police and other civic organizations in the observance of Memorial day. The executive committee, headed by Thomas H. Bullock of Evanston camp, No. 57, U. S. W. V., has held several meetings to formulate plans, Commander W. C. Bechtold is general secretary.

Evanston post is represented by Commander Ray Jackson, chairman of the Legion committee; Past Commander Harold A. Garwood, again chairman of the parade committee; Newell Mecartney, and Dean James Armstrong, program committee; Francis L. Bacon, chairman of the committee on school speakers, and Lieut. Paul Jones, co-chairman of the Memorial church services.

Others on Evanston Committee.

Others on the committee are D. J. Blaauw of the Spanish-American War Veterans, chairman of the program committee; W. E. Tulloch, commander of Evanston camp, U. S. W. V., chairman of the flower committee; William H. Scott, also of Evanston camp, chairman of the finance committee; J. L. Swihart, chairman of music; Eugene Worthington, serving with Lieut. Jones on the Memorial church service; Dr. James H. Keith, president of the North Shore chapter, Reserve Officers' association, and W. F. Leggett, Boy Scout commissioner.

Commander William P. Turner, among the last of the Grand Army of the Republic veterans, still active in Evanston's patriotic and civic affairs, will be reviewing officer.

Col. B. F. Bliss will again be grand marshal of the day.

Kenilworth Parade Today.

Memorial services will be conducted this afternoon by the Kenilworth club at Kenilworth. The parade will form at 2:30 o'clock at Culbertson gymnasium of the Kenilworth Union church and proceed to Village Memorial park where the Rev. Herbert L. Willett will give the invocation.

Kenilworth Gold Star fathers and mothers and Kenilworth veterans of the civil, Spanish-American, and world wars will be special guests at the program in the assembly hall at 3:15 o'clock. Maj. James H. Cunningham of Fort Sheridan and Hugh A. Foresman will speak.

Graceland Cemetery Services.

Lincoln Park post, No. 481; Van Buren post, No. 401; F. W. Galbraith post, No. 358; Chicago Loop post, No. 144, and First Division Catigny post, No. 556, will hold joint services at 10 o'clock in Graceland cemetery on Memorial day.

Lincoln Park and Van Buren posts and their auxiliaries will assist Tent No. 16, Daughters of Union Veterans, in placing flags and wreaths on the graves of departed comrades. Commander Ben Kaufman of Van Buren post will furnish the buglers and firing squad. Walter George, past adjutant of Lincoln Park post, has arranged for the Rev. Edwin Moll, pastor of Luther Memorial church, as the principal speaker.

Advertising Post Service.

Advertising Men's post, No. 38, will hold Memorial day exercises at Sauganash Community center at 9:30 o'clock Saturday morning. The Rev. William J. Stephenson, C. S. V., chaplain of the Advertising Men's post and a veteran of two wars, will be the celebrant of a solemn requiem field mass. The Rev. F. A. Ryan, pastor of Sauganash, will be deacon of the mass and will preach the sermon. The Rev. F. J. Dolan will be subdeacon. The Rev. Mathew Canning will be master of ceremonies.

North Town post, under the command of H. Soule, with drum corps and rifle squad, will furnish the guard of honor and other military features of the field mass.

St. Viator's boys' choir, under the direction of the Rev. John Kelzer, C. S. V., will render the Gregorian requiem. The Boy Scouts of St. Timothy's parish, under the direction of the Rev. F. J. Dolan, assisted by Scoutmaster Henry Malone, will be ushers.

Details of the annual reunion of marines in Chicago on June 6 at the Auditorium hotel were discussed Monday evening by Marine post. C. D. Devere, commander, with a committee, has arranged entertainment for the visiting veterans and invitations have been extended to all marines, whether members of veterans' organizations or not, to attend the affair. More than 500 reservations have been made by W. D. Scheurer, 20 West Jackson boulevard.

Next Sunday will be American Legion Aviation day at Curtiss-Wright airport, Glenview. The show will be held under the joint auspices of Evanston post, No. 42, W. C. Bechtold, commander, and Niles Township post, No. 134, Irving Dilg, commander. Beginning at 11 a. m. and continuing throughout the afternoon, there will be a series of events similar to those that made Chicago's National Air show of 1930 an epochal event in aviation history. Starting with a boys' model airplane contest, the program will include a ten mile race, parachute jumping contests, stunt flying, balloon bursting contests, and numerous other features. A glider exhibition will feature entries by the Chicago Glider club.

Invitations have been extended to men famed in the world of aviation

CITY CONTRACT SHUTS COUNCIL DOOR TO LA BAHN

Evanston's Eighth Ward Faces New Election.

With Ald. Peter N. Jans [5th] casting the only dissenting vote, John F. La Bahn, elected short term alderman for the new Eighth ward of Evanston, was called ineligible for office by the city council Monday night and his seat was declared vacant. No date for an election to fill the vacancy has been set.

The action came in spite of withdrawal of a petition contesting the election by Robert H. Risch, defeated candidate, the impassioned pleas of Ald. Jans, and the general good feeling of council members toward La Bahn.

It was based on the Illinois statute providing that any person holding a contract with a municipality may not hold office in it and La Bahn, with his brother, is leasing a dump to the city at a monthly rental of $200.

Case Hinges on Option.

The period of the lease extends beyond the end of the term to which La Bahn was elected. The judiciary committee pointed out, however, that the city has an option to buy the dump, and that there might be action under this contract during La Bahn's term.

Risch withdrew his petition, stating that he had not realized that action on it would leave a vacancy in the ward. Ald. Jans succeeded in mustering five votes on a losing resolution that action on the La Bahn case be deferred a week, but was the only holdout on final approval of the judiciary committee's finding.

Second of the three council seat contests, that of Russ versus Jourdain in the Fifth ward, has been passed over to Judge Harry H. Porter by the judiciary committee with the consent of counsel for both parties. The committee report stated that since the hearings would take up so much time and would include 50 to 100 witnesses, a magistrate who could hear in the daytime would ease the situation and keep it from dragging out. Hearings will open tomorrow and will continue probably two or three days.

7th Ward Contest Hangs Fire.

No decision has yet been rendered on the Kappelman versus Paddock contest for the Seventh ward seat, a matter of vote counts, whereas the Russ-Jourdain case includes charges of fraudulent voting.

The financial committee reported that a checkup revealed that the county owed the city $361,281.80 in back taxes from 1921 to 1927, and directed the corporation counsel to look into the possibility of collecting and report back.

Other business of the meeting included awarding of concessions in the beaches and parks to Sophia Lorden and George Brown, highest bidders, and authorization of radios for police cars.

Manchu Court Robes Will Be Displayed

To illustrate the second of his series of lectures on Chinese art and drama this afternoon at Vista del Lago club, in No Man's Land, Kenneth Eagleton Foster will display a rare collection of old Chinese court robes, stage costumes, and hangings which were the pride of the imperial court in Peking before the downfall of the Manchu dynasty. The collection was purchased by Mr. Foster during a stay in the orient.

INVENTORY GIVES NORTH SIDE 356 ACRES FOR PLAY

Lincoln park, the healthy north side youngster of the large park systems, has more than 356 acres of park and harbor areas now available to the public for sports and recreation, ac-public for sports and recreation, besides its many acres of lawn and picnic grounds, according to announcement by Warren Wright, president of the park board, on Tuesday. The park has been growing so rapidly that no stock of its recreational facilities had been compiled for several years prior to the present report. The information announced by Mr. Wright had been available in separate units of the park's files, but had not been totaled, it was explained.

"Every park should be an oasis for the molding of better citizenship, instead of a mere picnicking grounds," Mr. Wright declared, in explanation of the large proportion of park land that is occupied by organized park activities and group sports. "The spirit of coöperation, along with the sense of rivalry involved in sport, is what we seek to develop. Plenty of the park's land is left for sheer natural beauty, but we want to be sure to give enough facilities for organized sport as well. This report shows an enormous increase in the park's facilities for such sport, and we hope with the building of our northward extension to continue the policy thus far observed."

Besides the 356 acres of recreational land, the park has 4¾ miles of bridle paths.

Of the park's total acreage, 149.03 acres are devoted to baseball diamonds, golf and putting courses, tennis courts, horse shoe pits, rocque courts, archery ranges, hockey fields, and the range of the Diversey Parkway Gun club. Bathing beaches take up another 18.1 acres, while the lagoons for boating and the two harbors for pleasure craft at Belmont and Montrose avenues total 155.6 acres.

Highland Park Service Body to Continue Efforts

Members of the Highland Park social service committee have decided to continue their work, started as an emergency venture last fall, through the summer. The chamber of commerce is again donating office space and office hours beginning the first of June will be from 8 o'clock until noon.

COAST GUARD IS READY TO MOVE TO NEW STATION

Evanston Loses Post to Wilmette.

One of Evanston's finest and oldest traditions will be yesterday, as far as its physical manifestations are concerned, when the flag atop the old coast guard station at the edge of Northwestern university campus is lowered and raised again over the new station in Wilmette harbor.

Official acceptance of the new station has delayed the exodus of the guard stationed in Evanston since the wreck of the Lady Elgin, but it is expected that all details will be ironed out this week or next and the old boats will be launched for the last time, putting out for the new home harbor.

If wild winds and a rough sea prevail there will be no tears from the coast guard members, who will be reminded realistically of storms that dashed their small craft against the unprotected shore in their past attempts to make rescues. They will be glad to set out for the last time.

Advantages of Wilmette.

It was the protected vantage of Wilmette harbor that helped the government to decide to move the coast guard two years ago. According to Capt. Otto W. Fricke, commander of the station, not only the damage done to their boats when launching in heavy seas but also the impossibility of launching a boat of the size needed in the shallow waters were deciding factors in the move.

No concerted move was made by Evanstonians to keep the station in their midst until the official plans had gone through. Louis K. Gillson, president of the Wilmette park board, offered the site in Wilmette harbor, and yachtsmen of Wilmette and other towns farther north asked for the transfer, that it might better serve their needs.

The location of the station, too, on a bathing beach site, as it is in Evanston, complicated their work, which is to guard the boats on the lake, transfer people from wrecks, and clear out derelicts.

Members of Guard.

The men, in addition to Capt. Fricke, who will make the move include B. B. Hellman, mate; T. W. Schlag, motor machinist, and Surfmen W. G. Sommers, J. A. Vandieren, G. O. Magnussen, H. S. Mortenson, George Blumberg, B. E. Carlson, and E. C. Manthey.

The new station will have quarters for the crew and captain, but no quarters for the captain's family. However, enlargements have been made in the crew's quarters and Capt. Fricke will live "ashore."

The site of the old station belongs to the university.

KEEP UPTOWN IN SINGLE WARD, BUSINESS ASKS

Association Cites Unity of District.

The ward redistricting plan submitted by the social service bureau of the University of Chicago, in conjunction with the Kiwanis clubs and 500 other civic and community organizations in the city, met further opposition last week when the Central Uptown Chicago association adopted a resolution favoring a ward plan that will include Uptown in one ward, as at present. The plan submitted by the university and the community groups would divide Uptown into three wards.

Earlier opposition had been expressed by the Clark-Wilson Center Business Men's association, which objected to running the ward boundary down Clark street, and suggested Ashland avenue, one block west, as an alternative boundary.

Declare Area Is a Unit.

"The lake shore district from Argyle street to Montrose avenue is a business, neighborhood, and social unit, and should not be divided," declared Edward H. Hicks, business manager, who presented a resolution against the present ward reapportionment plan. The resolution was unanimously adopted.

"We will oppose any effort to split our community into more than one city legislative unit," announced John C. Bowers, president. "The advantages of being in one ward are apparent, and the natural ties which make this community a unit are likewise apparent. When the time for the city council's consideration of the ward map plan arrives, this association will send a delegation to vouch for the desire of the residents and business men to remain in one ward."

Eye Pump Station for Library.

The association is also considering a suggestion that the old Lawrence avenue pumping station be utilized to house a branch of the Chicago Public library. David Skoodlund is chairman of the association's library committee. He reported that the library board has said that it could not build a new library at present, because of its financial condition, and does not want to rent other quarters. The pumping station, now vacant, is owned by the city and is centrally located.

Mr. Skooglund promised that the committee would investigate the possibility of obtaining the building for library purposes, and the suitability of such quarters.

Oppose Resurfacing Broadway.

The resurfacing of Broadway between Wilson and Foster avenues by special assessment is to be opposed by the association. Ald. John A. Massen [48th], in a letter to the group, stated that the resurfacing would cost $143,000. A resolution, asking that the street be repaired, instead, from vehicle tax funds, was presented by Mr. Hicks.

Election of officers will be held at the association's next meeting, June 8. Ernest A. Eklund is chairman of the nominating committee, which includes Warner and Harold C. Dix. The election was to have been held at the latest meeting, but Mr. Edlund asked for more time for the committee to investigate the possible candidates.

DANCE OF EVERY KIND INCLUDED IN GYM PROGRAM

A gymnasium demonstration will be held at 7:45 o'clock Tuesday and Wednesday evening at the Von Steuben Junior High school, 5039 Kimball avenue. Approximately 2,000 boys and girls are to participate in the exhibition of physical education, which will include calisthenics, double wand drill, free exercise drill, tumbling relays, Bowery dances, an ox dance, a newsboy dance, reed drill, soft shoe and tap dances, a folk dance, tactics drill, sword drill, a scarf dance, a Spanish dance, a sailor drill, a carnival, a band, a drum and bugle corps, and an aviation dance. WARD'S FACTION IS ABSENT AS NORTH PARK BOARD MEETS

The meeting of the North Shore park board held on Monday night was attended by Commissioners Howard P. Savage, Thomas F. Myers Jr., and Patrick C. Winn. None of the other commissioners, who have been aligned with James P. Ward Sr., president of the old board, and Frederick C. Chetlain, commissioner, whose terms have expired, were at the meeting. Mr. Ward and Mr. Chetlain were also absent, and it was reported that Mr. Ward was in New York on business.

Meanwhile, concern over the financial status of the board was expressed by the members in attendance. The exact status cannot be determined, as records have not been turned over to the board by Mrs. Mary Richards, secretary, and James R. Glass, treasurer of the old board, both of whom were voted out by the Winn-Myers-Savage bloc.

The new commissioners and Col. Savage are unable to deny rumors that the pay roll cannot be met.

"We do not know," said Mr. Myers. "The financial condition of the board cannot be determined without the records, and even if we had the records, from what we last knew about the board's finances, it seems likely that the board is now broke. Meanwhile nothing can be done about borrowing money."

8 ROGERS PARK BALL TEAMS TO GET INTO ACTION

The baseball schedule of the Rogers Park Athletic association will begin at 9:30 o'clock this morning at the baseball diamonds near Farwell avenue and the lake. This was announced by Morey L. Rosenthal, president, on Tuesday, when the drawings to determine the schedule were made.

Eight teams have been signed up to participate for the two team trophies and sets of individual gold and silver medals, and games will be played on the Farwell avenue diamonds each Sunday morning until the schedule is ended next fall. At the end of the season, a banquet is to be held at which the trophies will be presented to the teams winning first and second places on a percentage basis. The teams are sponsored by business men in Rogers park, who pay all expenses in connection with the league.

Although the recruiting of the teams had not been completed on Tuesday, the presence of several former college stars from Northwestern and Loyola universities on the lineups was already assured. Games to be played today will be: the Robert E. Ferguson company team vs. the Chris Paschen company team; the Archie Warden vs. the Howard News; the Gray Man team vs. the John Hayes team, and the Drivers vs. the Howard Man's Shop team.

Besides Mr. Rosenthal, officers of the association are: vice president, James Nunamaker; secretary and treasurer, Ed Driver; and athletic director, Paul Johnson.

FIND 329 WOMEN ELIGIBLE TO TAKE DRIVING EXAMS

Practical School to Open in Two Weeks.

Out of the 679 women enrolled in the Evanston Drivers' school, 329 have been found eligible to take the examination Tuesday in the Nichols school on the basis of attendance at four out of the five meetings held under the auspices of the police accident prevention bureau and the Evanston safety council.

The examination will be held in the school cafeteria. For those who pass certificates have been prepared which will make them eligible for the practical school to open in two weeks.

An enrollment of about 150 is expected for the practical school figuring on the basis of a half and half split in enrollment of novice and experienced drivers. Automobile agencies of the city will furnish teachers in addition to the men that can be detailed by the police and the safety council.

Kreml Opens Files.

Following the announcement of a $1,000 reward by the Harris Trust and Savings bank for information establishing the identity and leading to the apprehension of the driver whose car struck down Chester Gorey, late vice president of the bank, Franklin M. Kreml, head of the accident prevention bureau announced that the police files and all clews that the bureau had would be open to any investigator who wanted to work on the case.

The bureau has been working on the case since the accident occurred on May 1 and will continue to work on it along with their other hit and run cases not yet cleared up.

Research is continuing on north end streets to provide against repetition of the fatal accident that occurred there some months ago and a plan of routing traffic is now being considered.

Safety Tests Planned.

Safety equipment will be installed on Lake street some time in June for a petition of the tests for headlights, brakes, wheel alignment, steering wheel, tail lights, rear view mirror, and stop lights given by the bureau last year in a pioneer move in this section taken up by other communities. Stickers will be given to those passing all tests.

Recent convictions include: Reckless driving, $10 and costs, William Payne, 1302 Maple avenue; the same charge and fine against G. E. Brawner, 1226 Rogers avenue.

IRVING PARK BOY SCOUTS WIN 1ST AID HONOR AGAIN

Scoring 94.5 out of a possible 100 points, Boy Scout troop 856 of the Irving Park Presbyterian church, 3807 North Keeler avenue, for the second consecutive year won the annual North Shore district first aid contest held at the Broadway armory.

Troop 836 of Berry Memorial church, Leavitt and Giddings streets, finished a close second with 94.4 and troop 80 of the Avondale Presbyterian church, with a 94 score, took third place.

39TH WARD BODY ASKS BUILDING OF FIRE STATION

The 39th Ward Federation of Improvement clubs will seek passage by the city council of an appropriation to construct a double fire department truck and engine house at the intersection of Belmont and Lamon avenues. The ground recently was purchased by the city for the structure. The federation is also to seek transportation facilities on Laramie avenue from Grand avenue to Milwaukee avenue, according to Frank W. Schmidtke, president. Another objective of the federation is to make Diversey avenue a boulevard from Sheridan road to the city limits instead of Wrightwood avenue, as has been proposed.

EVANSTON'S IDLE START PLANTING OWN VEGETABLES

Get Free Plots, Seeds and Jars for Canning.

Evanston's unemployed will not want for fresh vegetables when the crop comes in. Nor will they lack a stock of canned goods for the lean months of the winter. For they are turning truck gardeners in large numbers with the aid of property owners, the Garden club of Evanston, and the Central Association of Evanston Charities.

J. E. Hebblethwaite has given over for their use a tract at McCormick boulevard and Emerson street, and Harry P. Pearsons, former mayor, has given a lease to the charities on ten acres or so of property at Church street and Hartrey avenue.

Seeds and Jars Furnished.

Mrs. Hebblethwaite has presented a barrel full of mason jars and the Garden club of Evanston, headed by Mrs. Robert Lindsay Scott, is supplying the plants and the seeds. All of the agencies are being coördinated under H. I. Pettis, who is in charge of the project for the charities.

Land is being portioned out according to the number of members of the family and advice on planting and care given. Vegetables in excess of what the family will use at crop time under the plan are to be canned or preserved for future use by each family.

350 Get Permanent Jobs.

The free employment bureau is continuing its work started in the fall with encouraging success in obtaining job offers. More than 1,900 are registered with it now and 1,757 part time jobs have been secured. For 350 of their applicants permanent jobs have been found.

According to Mrs. Emma Brewster, head of the bureau, however, applications are still coming in with seven or eight new registrants each day.

Many of the unemployed are expected to be absorbed in the work on the new school buildings in District 75. In the contract with the architects it is specified that 80 per cent of the mechanical and other laborers must be taken from among Evanston residents.

Jobs are now opening for men to work around Evanston homes, gardening, mowing lawns, and helping with repair work.

Mrs. Janet B. Keating, 14 West Elm street, against Frank A. Keating.

EVANSTON HIGH TO PRESENT HOME PRODUCT MOVIE

Maxine Mae Kellogg Is Scenarist.

A home product movie, "Bargains," from an original scenario by Miss Maxine Mae Kellogg, junior at Evanston Township High school, will have its premier showing next Wednesday afternoon in Social hall of the high school, Dodge avenue and Church street.

MISS JANE IREDALE.

The movie has a local setting for the most part and has been filmed by the Camera club of the high school during the last six weeks. It runs about 800 feet—equivalent to 2,000 feet of commercial film. The club is charging 25 cents a ticket for the show, which will start at 3:15.

Scenes from Colorado.

R. E. Hughes of the physics department and G. W. A. Rutter of the English department have been responsible for the film and acting direction. Interior and exterior scenes are laid in the high school environment with some exteriors in Colorado.

The plot concerns the joys and trials of a group of high school students. Miss Jane Iredale, a junior, plays the single feminine rôle of Judy Arnold, a very popular student. John Huggett, a senior, plays opposite her. Arthur Allyn, a senior and a former "strolling player," complicates the plot as the hero's pal.

Other parts are taken by Woods Hinrich in a humorous rôle; Morton Hair and Ben Gage as the fathers of the two principals. In addition there is a supporting cast of several hundred—mostly students of the high school.

Thrills For All.

"This is the initial attempt at such a project on the part of the Camera club or any similar group of high school students so far as is known," says the directors, "and the results are surprisingly interesting."

Promotion broadsides for the show carry the legend "Come to this movie prepared to see yourself as others see you. You will be in it, or your friends will be in it; enough thrills have been provided for everybody in high school."

PUPILS' EXHIBIT OF HANDICRAFT DRAWS PRAISE

The Youth week handicraft exhibition held last week in connection with the Rogers Park observance of Youth week at the Adelphi theater, 7074 Clark street, attracted much interest. It contained more than 300 pieces of handiwork by children of the Armstrong, Gale, Field, Hayt, Stone, St. Jerome's, and Swift schools. Hardly any two of the handicraft pieces were alike. Among them were ship models, relief maps, dresses, pajamas, cushions, reedwork, towels, tables, and various kinds of toys as well as useful articles.

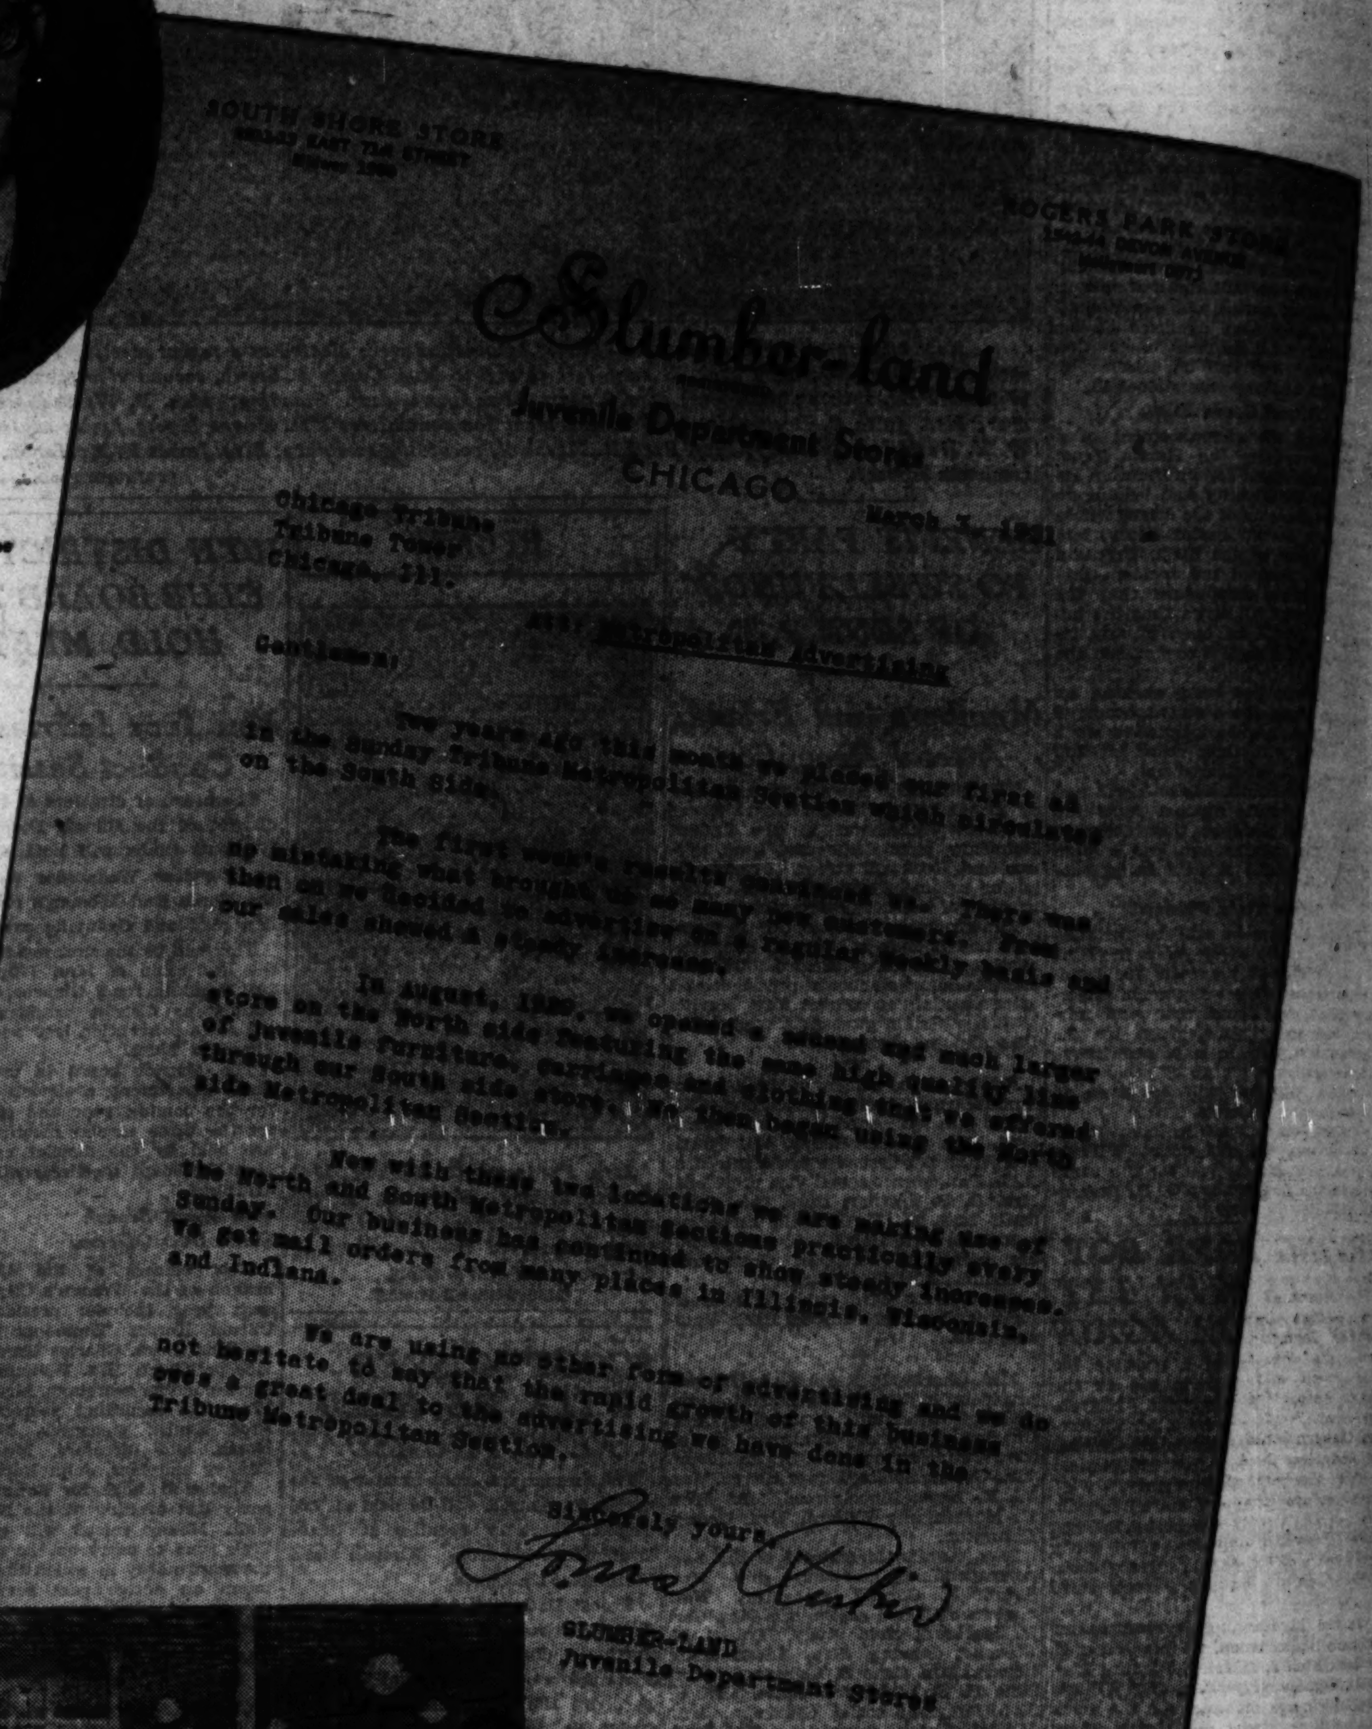
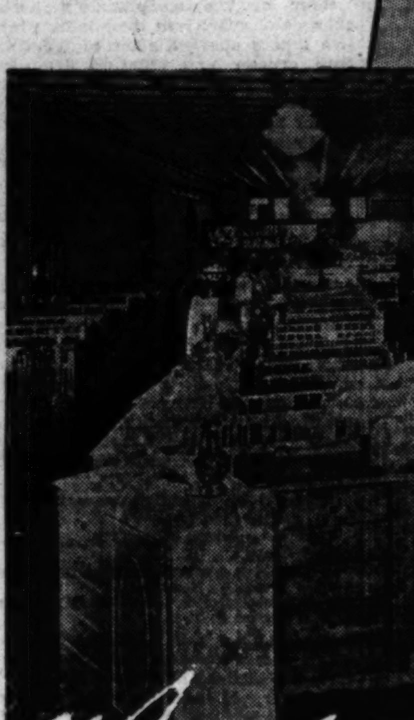
"THE FIRST WEEK'S RESULTS convinced us—"

LOUIS RUBIN
General Manager
Slumberland Juvenile Department Stores





Advertising in the Tribune Metropolitan Section draws customers from all parts of the North side and the suburbs to this Slumberland Juvenile department store at 1542 Devon avenue.

"There was no mistaking what brought us so many new customers"

IN MARCH, 1929, the "Slumber-Land" Juvenile Department Store, 2211 E. 71st street, decided to give the Tribune Metropolitan Section a chance to show what it could do. They placed an advertisement in the Metropolitan Section of the Sunday Tribune which reaches 11 out of every 14 families living on Chicago's great South side.

"The first week's results convinced us," writes Louis Rubin, General Manager. "There was no mistaking what brought us so many new customers. From then on we decided to advertise on a regular weekly basis and our sales showed a steady increase.

"In August, 1929, we opened a second and much larger store on the North side, featuring the same high quality line of juvenile furniture, carriages and clothing that we offered through our South side store. We then began using the North side Metropolitan Section.

"We are using no other form of advertising and we do not hesitate to say that the rapid growth of this business owes a great deal to the advertising we have done in the Tribune Metropolitan Section."

Advertising in the Tribune Metropolitan Section has increased sales and boosted profits for scores of Chicago merchants and retailers. Large and small stores alike have cashed in on Sunday Tribune pulling power.

Don't decide that your business can't take advantage of Metropolitan Section advertising until you have examined the complete facts. A Tribune man will be glad to give them to you, without obligating you in any way whatever.

Call Superior 0100 tomorrow. Simply say that you would like to have more information about advertising in the Metropolitan Section.

BOY BUILT HOME IS CAMPAIGN HUB IN HIGHLAND PARK

Furnished by Girls of High School.

Built by Deerfield-Shields High school boys and furnished by the girls of the school, a six room house on a 75 by 100 foot lot at 158 Beverly place, Highland Park, is the focus of the Better Homes in America campaign week in the north shore suburb, which opened Tuesday and will close this evening at 9 o'clock. Mrs. Howard G. Kornblith is in general charge of the week.

Built on a one year construction program with a $10,000 budget under W. E. Durbahn in the vocational training department of the school, this is the sixth house to be constructed by the boys and is entered in the nation-wide campaign for boy-built houses.

Firms Carry Bills.

Firms supplying the material have carried over their bills each year until the house was sold—to the highest bidder in closed bidding—and the profit realized has made it possible for the land for next year's house to be bought, making the plan continuous.

Plans for the furnishing and decorating of the exhibition house were made in the art appreciation classes of the high school under the direction of Miss Margaret Kerfoot. Some of the furniture, notably the dining room table and chairs and three upholstered pieces in the living room, were constructed in boys' classes as well.

Mrs. Richard L. Thorsch is chairman of the advisory furnishing committee for the Better Homes in America organization, which includes Mrs. Carlton Vail and Mrs. Richard Carr. Curtains are being made by the girls and the kitchen furnished with the assistance of Mrs. Claburn E. Jones, chairman of the kitchen committee.

Construct Bird Bath.

Students of Ravinia schools have constructed a bird bath for the house and in connection with the exhibition Highland Park Elementary school children are entered in a competition for flower boxes of their own construction.

On the advisory committee for the campaign week are Mayor Emil Wetten, J. W. Simons, George W. Carr, Ralph Fletcher Seymour, Howard G. Kornblith, S. A. St. Peter, R. L. Erskine, C. P. Hunter, J. B. Deibler, William Brown, Lyle Gourley, Paul L. Diell.

The reception committee includes Mrs. George Galdzik, Mrs. Ralph Fletcher Seymour, Mrs. George W. Carr, Mrs. Richard Thorsch, Mrs. J. M. Lebolt, Mrs. Carlton Vail, Mrs. Alfred Stern, Mrs. Leonard Reisser, Mrs. Allan Wolff, Mrs. Richard Carr, Mrs. Claburn Jones, Mrs. Robert Grinnel, and Mrs. C. A. Harkness.

Other members of the furnishing committee are Mrs. J. M. Lebolt and Mrs. Alfred W. Stern; Mrs. Eugene Eisler heads the landscape gardening committee, with Mrs. James Cady Bell and Mrs. Frederick Hodgson.

On High School Committee.

On the high school committee are Richard L. Sandwick, W. E. Durbahn, Robert Schneider, Miss Margaret Kerfoot; on the window box contest, Mrs. Dudley Crafts Watson, Mrs. Fred Cotton, Mrs. Jacob Weinberg, Mrs. Walter Lillienfield, and Mrs. Byron Reeves.

John S. Van Bergen is chairman of the small house competition, with Dudley Crafts Watson, Harry Howe Bentley, Xavier Vigeant and Marshall Johnson.

Mrs. Kornblith was appointed by Secretary of the Interior Wilbur to take charge of the Better Homes campaign here, and the work has been backed by women's clubs, the chamber of commerce, and other civic organizations.

Outstanding Graduates to Get Medals.

Seniors at Roosevelt High school were jubilant last week over the report that the class prom had received the approval of the faculty, and would be held on June 12 at the Edgewater Beach hotel. A minimum number of bids had been set by the faculty board, with the understanding that if that number of bids was not sold, no prom would be held. Early indications were that the minimum quota would not be reached, and there was some anxiety on the part of interested members of the class.

Missionary work was performed by the anxious members, with resulting conversions to the extent that the final count showed 275 bids sold. Instead of failing to hold the prom, the class will hold it on a larger scale and with a better orchestra than had originally been planned, according to Miss E. C. Moynihan, faculty advisor to the prom committee.

Class Motto Chosen.

Announcements for the commencement exercises have been chosen by the graduation committee. The class flower is to be the talisman tea rose, and the class colors will be coral and silver, "The Will to Do and the Soul to Dare" has been chosen as the class motto.

It has been decided that the outstanding boy and girl in the June graduating class will be awarded a gold medal sometime in the near future. The awards are offered by the Albany Park post of the American Legion. Points to be considered in making the award are courage, honor, service, leadership, and scholarship. A faculty committee is to make the selections.

Palmer Wins First.

Palmer school won first place in the Roosevelt district for its work in the recent cleanup campaign, it was announced last week. Fourteen schools were entered. Results were compiled and tabulated by the supervisory committees, consisting of Miss Shulamis Dorinson, chairman; Harold Gersen, and Milton Ram, from Roosevelt; and Marion Murck, chairman; Warren Soltenburger, and Miss Beatrice Fox, from the Von Steuben Junior High school.

The Palmer school was highest with 29 points, while the Budlong school was second with 26. Third place went to the Bateman school with 21 points, and three schools, the Cleveland, Mayfair, and Peterson schools each had 19 points to tie for fourth place.

Collect Famous Autographs.

TRIBUNE OFFERS CASH FOR BEST SPRING PHOTOS

Spring is sprung! Wandering among the daffodils may inspire the young photographer to make some snappy shots. The Tribune continues its offer of $5, $3 and $2 as weekly prizes for the best amateur photographs received. All subjects are eligible to be treated in the photos for this contest, but we suggest that they be in keeping with the season. Photographers must be, as heretofore, of amateur standing. An amateur photographer is one who has not sold photographs for commercial gain.

Lakes, ponds, rivers, the new spring bonnet, the children, unusual views, the woods, the meadows, the streets, and, in fact anything indoors or out is a legitimate subject for an amateur photographer.

Send your best photo to the Photo Contest, Metropolitan Section, The Tribune. Three prizes will be awarded each week in your own metropolitan section, north, west, or south. The full name and address of the person submitting the picture should be printed clearly on the back of each entry, with the full name and address of each person appearing in the picture, left to right.

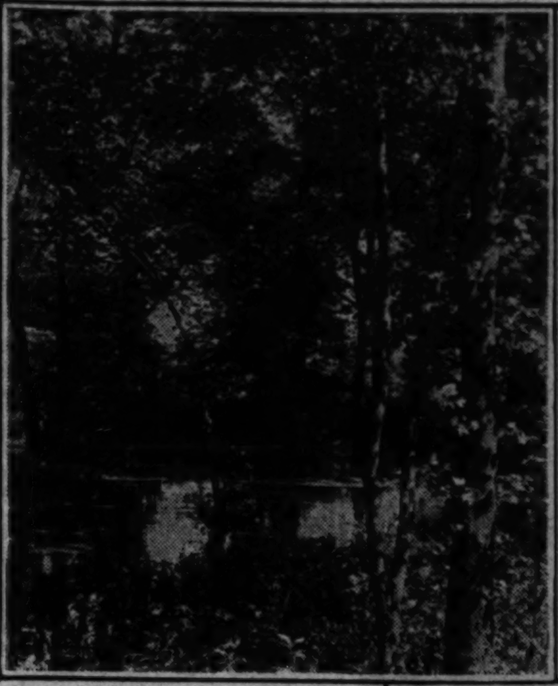
GLORIOUS SPRING COMES TO FOREST PRESERVE



Spring comes to the forest preserves and its photographer, Frank W. Snyder, 3252 Leland avenue, wins the first prize of $5 in the Metropolitan section photo contest.

Carol Occhionero, 8 years old, took part in a religious procession, and here she is posed by her mother, Mrs. George Occhionero, 4644 North Rockwell street, just before the procession started. Mrs. Occhionero won second prize of $3.

Third prize of $2 goes to Miss Irene Schroeder, 1945 Mohawk street, for her snapshot of her mother, Mrs. Eva Schroeder, taken on Mothers' day. The flowers are lilacs, Mrs. Schroeder's favorites.

Neighborhood Theaters

"Daybreak" and "City Streets" are double featured at the Granada this week. The former picture brings Ramon Novarro as a handsome young officer who falls in love with a music teacher. Ramon, by the way, gets no chance to make use of his wonderful singing voice, and his foreign haircut failed to make good with at least one of his feminine fans. Helen Chandler plays the part of his little girl friend who doesn't think Ramon can love her like he ought. She should know!

Gary Cooper is the mainspring of "City Streets," which will doubtless catch some people who will think they are going to see "City Lights." But the suave Paul Lukas and the lovely Sylvia Sydney are well worth seeing and hearing. Paul plays the part of the Big Boy in this gang film, and does it convincingly.

Montgomery in "Shipmates."

Any day this week is Robert Montgomery day at the Uptown, for there he is in "Shipmates," his first starring vehicle. Robert is one star who has never been officially starred until now. [Think of that!] He's not as good a sailor as he is a sophisticate, if any such comparison can be made. Dorothy Jordan and Cliff Edwards, of uke fame, are in the supporting cast. O, for the life of a sailor.

"Strangers May Kiss."

"Strangers May Kiss," at the Century and Nortown theaters, also has Robert Montgomery, as well as Norma Shearer, Neil Hamilton, and Irene Rich. Norma and Neil play the parts of runaway lovers. Neil is a love 'em and leave 'em war correspondent, and Norma a sweet young thing. He pulls his usual l. and l. stunt with the result that Norma becomes exceedingly gay—too gay—and things almost go flop. Robert is the adoring, devoted, and continually boozed lover whose case is hopeless. He sticks through thick and thin, which is just how the plat is in spots.

"Cracked Nuts" at Pantheon.

Wheeler and Woolsey are at the Pantheon in "Cracked Nuts," a nutty operetta that should tickle their regular fans. Also on the double bill is "Gun Smoke," featuring Dick Arlen as the cow hand who foils a bunch of city gangster galoots, all for the love of Mary Brian, the wistful western gal.

Double Bill at North Center.

"Viennese Nights" and "Charlie Chan Carries On" are doubled at the North Center theater. The Viennese picture is from the Romberg-Hammerstein operetta, and is filled with sweet music and technicolor. Walter Pidgeon as an imperial guardsman is K. O., and does some right nice warbling. [How do officers warble in those tight collars?] Vivienne Segal and Alexander Gray also sing sweetly, and Jean Hersholt is an eyeful as well as an earful. Our old friend Louise Fazenda is also among those present in the cast.

Cross Class Votes Today on Time for Boat Jaunt

Members of Cross class at Edgewater Presbyterian church, Bryn Mawr and Kenmore avenues, are to vote today on whether to make their annual boat trip as guests of H. H. Cross, sponsor of the class, a daytime or evening affair. The trip will be made some time in June.

F. W. Fullers Observe Golden Wedding Today

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Fuller, 2228 Giddings street, will celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversary with a tea at 5 o'clock this afternoon at their residence. They have lived in Chicago since 1881. Mrs. Mae H. Dicke, their daughter, lives with them.

TALE OF RUSSIAN WOES IS TOLD BY NORTH SIDER

The tale of a poverty stricken land, where butter is $3 a pound, where boots cost $100 in American money, and many of whose people live in holes like animals because of the acute housing problem, was told today by Mrs. Kate Hebley, who has just returned from a stay in Russia. Mrs. Hebley, who for many years has been an active member of St. Peter's Episcopal church, 621 Belmont avenue, will rejoin her husband, who is a mining engineer, in Russia next fall.

Russian churches are being taxed out of existence, according to Mrs. Hebley, because the soviet government views them as unproductive. Often, she said, a group of three or four are so heavily taxed that the congregations combine to pay the tax of one.

An automobile is so rare in Russia that it will cause a crowd to gather, Mrs. Hebley declared. An imported combination sprinkler and snow scraper stopped traffic in the main street of Leningrad, she said.

LANE TECH NINE TO MEET SHAW OF CLEVELAND

Intercity Champs Will Play 2 Games.

Lane Technical High school will play an intercity championship baseball game with Shaw High school of Cleveland, O., at 3 o'clock Saturday, Memorial day, at Wrigley field. This is the first intercity game that Lane has scheduled since playing New York for an intercity championship several years ago. It will be the first of a two game series, the second game of which is to be played on June 5 at Cleveland, in the American league ball park.

The Shaw High school diamond-dusters will arrive in Chicago on Thursday before the big game and will be met at the train by the Lane Tech band, which recently won second place in the city band contest. From the station they will go to the city hall, where they will be presented to Mayor Cermak and Supt. William J. Bogan.

After meeting public officials they will proceed to their hotel. An elaborate sightseeing tour, including a trip to the Tribune Tower, has been arranged for the visitors.

Ceremonies at the Cubs' park on Memorial day will include a flag raising by the Lane Tech R. O. T. C. and band. The game is to be substituted for the field day that Lane puts on every two years, and will determine the intercity championship.

A silver trophy is to be given to the winner of each game, so that in the event the series is split each team will have a memorial of the game it won.

The home and home series was arranged with a view to eliminating advantage of the home team from the decision of the series.

EARL BURTNETT, DUKE ELLINGTON COMING TO W-G-N

West Coast Favorites to Make Bow Wednesday.

Earl Burtnett and his orchestra, an outstanding dance aggregation of the west coast, and Duke Ellington's orchestra, the current toast of New York City, will be heard exclusively this summer through W-G-N, THE TRIBUNE station, from the Lincoln Tavern on Dempster road.

Earl Burtnett's orchestra has played for five years at the Biltmore hotel in Los Angeles and will be heard for the first time locally when the Lincoln Tavern opens next Wednesday evening.

Famed in Talking Pictures.

His band will be augmented by a new rumba section and the famous vocal trio which has appeared with the orchestra in scores of talking pictures, including "The Broadway Melody," "Gold Diggers of Broadway," "Viennese Nights," "Puttin' on the Ritz," Mary Pickford's "Coquette," and Doug Fairbanks' "Reaching for the Moon." In the middle west the orchestra is best known through mechanical appearances—on the records and in the talkies.

Station W-G-N will present Earl Burtnett and his big band every night between midnight and 12:30 and between 1 o'clock and 1:30 in the morning, and, more importantly, at various times during the early evening programs every night in the week.

Duke Ellington Coming.

During the month of July the orchestra will be succeeded by Duke Ellington's orchestra, the most sensational success in the last two years. They captured New York City last year, were signed up for night club appearances, doubled in Ziegfeld's production "Show Girl," then were featured in the talking picture "Check and Double Check," and lately were called back for five weeks of return engagements at the Oriental theater in Chicago. They will remain until Sept. 1, giving radio listeners of the middle west ultra modern treatments and arrangements of dance music.

Memorial Day Features.

A memorial day program featuring the W-G-N Symphony orchestra and David Pritchard, baritone, will be given from W-W-N at 8 o'clock next Saturday evening. In addition to a memorial day tribute civil war songs and marches will be presented by the symphony and Mr. Pritchard will sing "In Flanders Fields" "The Light Brigade" and Elgar's "Land of Hope and Glory."

Two baseball games between the Chicago White Sox and the St. Louis Browns will also be broadcast on Memorial day. The morning games start at 10:30 and the afternoon broadcast at the regular hour, 2:45. Bob Elson will be at the microphone giving the play by play report.

Program for Mystery Fans.

Other programs of outsanding entertainment will be offered during the coming week. Mystery story fans and devotees of Sherlock Holmes will hear a dramatization of Conan Doyle's story "The Adventures of the Six Napoleons" tomorrow night at 9 o'clock on the "Adventures with Sherlock Holmes" hour. Richard Gordon will be on the air again in the rôle of the famous detective.

The W-G-N staff will again present their minstrel show at 9 o'clock Tuesday evening. Stars from other highlight programs of the week take part —Marlin Hurt of the Tom, Dick, and Harry trio is one of the end men and Hal Gilles, famous as the Weasel in Louie's Hungry Five is the other. Henry [Hank] Moeller, Herr Louie himself, is the interlocutor.

"In Modern Mood" Wednesday.

Featured for Wednesday night will be the W-G-N orchestra with Leroy Maule conducting through rhythms of the latest dance hits aptly named "In Modern Mood." New and unusual arrangements by the conductor add sparkle to the program.

Thursday night at 8:40 the W-G-N orchestra will be heard in a different mood with modern dance numbers in symphonic arrangement and purely symphonic numbers under the baton of Gaston Du Moulin. The Clef Barons, Negro quartet will also be heard Thursday evening. Popular tunes and favorite spirituals will be included in their program.

Various musical themes from the cheerful to the sombre will be contrasted on the program at 7:30 o'clock Friday night followed by Quin Ryan at 8:10 with a half hour of radio reminiscences. At 9:45 Del Owen and Allen Grant will give a double piano concert featuring old familiar ballads.

And every day—except Sunday—the Singing Lady program comes from W-G-N at 5:15 with entertainment and instruction for the younger children. The Singing Lady not only sings but teaches the children how to sing. Some of the melodies are original compositions of Allen Grant who accompanies her.

TOSCHA SEIDEL WILL BE HEARD ON CBS TODAY

Toscha Seidel, famous violin virtuoso, accompanied by a symphonic orchestra and by Ossip Giskin, cellist of the Continental string quartet, will play the second and third movements from Brahms' "Concerto for Violin and Cello," during the Symphonic hour to be broadcast over CBS from 2 to 3 this afternoon.

KNX, Failing to Use High Power, Loses It

While more than a score of broadcasters are fighting over places on the 50,000 watt cleared channels, station KNX of Los Angeles has forfeited its right to construct a transmitter capable of using the maximum power, thus making one more vacancy for the other applicants. The federal radio commission announced Saturday that the KNX permit had been canceled because of the failure of the station to take advantage of it. The Los Angeles station has held the permit to raise its power from 5,000 to 50,000 watts for two years and has obtained frequent extensions of three month periods.

130 EXHIBITORS SIGN FOR TRADE SHOW ON JUNE 8

In attendance and exhibits, another successful RMA convention and trade show at Chicago during Radio week, beginning June 8, is assured, according to final reports on plans for the annual radio industry gathering which were received by the board of directors of the Radio Manufacturers' association at their meeting May 14 at Briarcliff lodge, New York.

More new radio products, including television, will be exhibited in the trade show at the Stevens hotel in Chicago than ever before in one year, according to reports to the RMA board. President Morris Metcalf of Springfield, Mass., presided and received reports from Maj. H. H. Frost of New York, chairman of the association's show committee, and Leslie F. Muter of Chicago, chairman of the convention committee.

Of the leading radio manufacturers, 130 will have exhibits in the trade show for which nearly 24,000 square feet of exhibit space already has been assigned, with more applications being received. The large exhibition hall and grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel will be required to take care of the many exhibits. A larger proportion of manufacturers of the RMA will have exhibit space than ever before at any RMA trade show for the last three years.

Rosa Ponselle, American born prima donna soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, will be heard over CBS from 2 to 2:45 Monday afternoon, June 1, when a part of a performance of Verdi's opera, "La Forza del Destino," is relayed to this country from the stage of the Royal Opera house, Covent Garden, London.

Miss Ponselle's portrayal of the rôle of Leonora in "La Forza del Destino" is considered one of her greatest achievements and has won her wide acclaim. It was in this rôle that she made her operatic debut opposite Caruso in 1918.

HOOVER TO SPEAK AT VALLEY FORGE MEMORIAL DAY

George Bernard Shaw to Be Heard.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Special Memorial day broadcasts and several international programs will be highlights of this radio week.

President Hoover will deliver a Memorial day address at historic Valley Forge at approximately 9:30 o'clock next Saturday morning to be broadcast over both of the major networks. Military bands will salute the President as he speaks from Washington's headquarters of the winter of 1777-'78.

Capt. Charles W. Lockwood, who at 88 years is the last man of Minnesota's famed "Last Man's club," will speak over CBS at 10 a. m. on Memorial day from Washington. Capt. Lockwood last year opened the bottle of the rare old Burgundy wine as the last and privileged survivor of a company of Minnesota volunteers in accordance with a pledge made many years before.

George Bernard Shaw, who still insists he won't visit America, will however speak to the United States by radio for the second time from 3:20 to 3:40 over CBS on Memorial day, the 500th anniversary of the martyrdom of Joan of Arc.

Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley will speak on the question of armament reduction at 8:30 Saturday evening.

The prince of Wales is to be heard again this week. The hour is 3:20 on Thursday over CBS when the Prince speaks at a dinner in London to help raise funds for the blind.

As reported in this column several weeks ago the nation's leaders are trying to find a suitable word to apply to television spectators. For those who don't read the New Yorker we present its suggestion of "televictims."

"At least 50 per cent more eggs will be produced for market if the poultry farmer offers his hens the same opportunity to hear good radio programs that he extends to his family," said O. H. Caldwell, former radio commissioner, recently. Does Mr. Caldwell include the well known toothpaste program and "Consider Your Adam's Apple" hour?

If all the words broadcast by a single big radio station during a week were laid end to end they would reach all of the way through Theodore Dreiser's "American Tragedy" and into a bottle of aspirin [100 tablets], with a few hundred thousand left over. That makes a total of about 700,000 words.

Installation and operation of all radio broadcasting in Ecuador is to be controlled by the Durham corporation, an American firm, which has just made a 25 year contract with the South American government. The first station is to be built at Quito, the capital.

The ancient and sacred Guild of Former Pipe Organ Pumpers, holding its 49th annual fiscal meeting and bicentennial hard times party recently elected the NBC organist, Archer Gibson, as chief tremolo.

Besides being heard in "Hail Bright Abode," the entire choir will unite in singing "The Lost Chord," a request number.

A solo will be sung by Mrs. Mabel Sharp-Herdien. Another of the numbers on the musical program is to be a quartet arrangement of "Christ in Flanders."

PADRAIC COLUM, SENATOR DILL TO TALK OVER SEA

Two speakers will be heard from abroad today in Columbia's international series. He will speak at 11:30 a. m. United States Senator Charles C. Dill of Washington will speak from London at 11:45 a. m. Senator Dill, co-author of the radio act of 1927 and sponsor of additional radio legislation, is touring Europe to discover methods of broadcasting control used in other countries.

It is for this audience that Fireside Melodies on W-G-N at 8:20 o'clock Saturday night was inaugurated. HENRIETTA TEDRO OF "ORPHAN ANNIE" REAL DAUGHTER OF STAGE

A real daughter of the stage is Henrietta Tedro, who plays the rôle of Mrs. Silo in "Little Orphan Annie" in the radio sketch of that name which comes every week day from W-G-N. Left an orphan when a baby she was reared by her grandparents. Her grandfather being an employé of the Empire theater in Cincinnati, she began to do child rôles when only three years of age. At 14 she was an experienced actress and went on the road touring the country from coast to coast.

HENRIETTA TEDRO.

At 16 Miss Tedro was in New York and playing in the then popular Mort Singer musical comedies, where she remained for six seasons. Then followed appearances in "The Velvet Lady," and the "Girl in the Private Room" and two seasons on the Orpheum circuit with Vera Gordon, star of "Humoresque." Then came the rôle of the divorcée in "Lightnin'," a part in which she toured the Pacific coast.

Chicagoans know Miss Tedro best for her excellent work in the Harry Minturn stock company, where she played character parts for four years. Two years ago Miss Tedro came to W-G-N and joined the W-G-N players and has played many characters rôles in the dramatizations of grand opera produced by that group. Besides her rôle of Mrs. Silo in "Little Orphan Annie" Miss Tedro is heard in other W-G-N sketches and programs.

"Divorcons" to Be Given Tonight.

Between 7 and 8 o'clock, this evening the W-G-N Players will present Sardou's comedy, "Divorcons." The play was written for radio presentation by Jean Conover, W-G-N playwright, and will be played by Patricia O'Brien, Nina Lawrence, Douglas Hope, Eugene McGillan, and E. M. Johnstone and Frank Harrington. On next Sunday evening, at the same time, "Oliver Twist" will be played.

Since the institution of the station, in 1924, W-G-N has pioneered in the dramatic form of radio entertainment. In that year, Quin Ryan originated the "Play Shop," a series of programs dramatized from original stories. In 1926, the radio comic strip, a new dramatic form, was born at station W-G-N in the feature "Sam 'n' Henry," now known as "Amos 'n' Andy." On the heels of this came the ever popular comic interlude, "Louie's Hungry Five."

Then, in 1930, another radio dramatic form was inaugurated at station W-G-N—the radio comic srip presenting the familiar characters of the newspaper comic strips. Three of these are presented nightly by station W-G-N—"Harold Teen," "Gasoline Alley," and "Little Orphan Annie," the latter being given to a national network in addition.

Revive Musical Comedies.

Early in 1928, the program department of W-G-N conceived the idea of reviving the old La Salle theater musical comedies which were a national vogue a generation ago. New dramatic and light operatic companies were organized under the direction of Harry W. Spingold, assisted by Reed Myers, both veteran show men, and the series of plays was adapted for radio presentation by Delos Owen.

The first presentation, the "Girl Question," presented with full cast and chorus, met with instantaneous success.

This was followed by revivals of such well remembered hits as "The Honeymoon Trail," "A Stubborn Cinderella," "Prince of Tonight," "The Flirting Princess," "The Time, the Place, and the Girl," "Miss Nobody," and "The Girl at the Helm." The company then delved further into the old repertoires and produced "Robin Hood," "In Old Vienna," "The Chimes of Normandy," "Pirates of Penzance," "The Mikado," "S. S. Pinafore," "The Beggar Student," "The Purple Towers," and "Betty Jane."

Miss Conover Adapts Play.

When the presentation of famous plays from the dramatic stage was considered, Miss Jean Conover, a foremost scenario writer from the movie world, was brought from New York to adapt them for radio production.

During 1929 and 1930, the W-G-N Players presented "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Rip Van Winkle," "Under Two Flags," "Sign of the Four," "Michael Strogoff," "Lena Rivers," "Napoleon and Josephine," "Two Orphans," "Streets of New York," "Midnight Rose," "Anthony and Cleopatra," "The Courtship of Miles Standish," and "The Romance of Preston Manor."

Next came a series of comedy dramas including "Enter Mary Jones," "Call of the Woods," "End of the Lane," "Looks Like Rain," "Civil Service," "Path Across the Hill," "The Shakeup," "The Runaway," "Mr. Jerry Weston," and "Romance, Ltd."

Present Dramatized Operas.

Beginning with the Chicago Civic Opera season of 1930-'31, the W-G-N Players presented 26 one-hour musical plays dramatized from the opera librettos, as follows: "Pagliacci," "The Masked Ball," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Faust," "Rigoletto," "Il Trovatore," "Carmen," "Camille," "The Elixir of Love," "Fra Diavolo," "Aida," "Martha," "William Tell," "The Bohemian Girl," "Lohengrin," "Tanhausser," "Lakme," "The Barber of Seville," "Samson and Delilah," "Mignon," "Lucia di Lammermoor," "La Giocanda," and "The Queen of Sheba."

The summer program, now under way, will see the revival of old familiar plays, including "Under Two Flags," "The Count of Monte Cristo," "Amy of the Circus," "Rip Van Winkle," "When Lindy Ran Away," "The Road Agent," "The Man of Destiny," "The Dancer, and "The Dagger," and "Under Arizona Skies."

Radios Scarce in Wyoming.

Wyoming is still a fertile field for radio manufacturers, according to the census bureau tabulations just released. Only 34 per cent of the state's family, numbering 57,218, on April 1, 1930, reported radio receivers. The average number of persons in a household was 3.9, while the number possessing sets was 19,482.

VOICE OF LISTENER

Winona, Minn., May 13.—My dear Mr. Ryan: THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE surely does everything on a wonderful scale. The boxing tournaments have been very interesting and extremely thrilling, thanks to your power of description and your very exciting voice. The announcing last night must have been wearing and exhausting. All of us "out in the sticks" are more than interested in the crowd, the scenery and all the celebrities. It is our only contact with big things, really. You make things so real and so startling over the radio that we immediately get into the spirit of things with you.

Chicago was cold last night and Winona was warm, but you convinced me that I was freezing with the crowd and you. I put on my coat, opened the drafts in the furnace and actually froze with you until that last wonderful round was over!

Your announcing was clever, quick and lovely, and thanks a lot for an enjoyable evening. I wouldn't go to see a fight anywhere, but would listen to you describe one any time with joy.

Sincerely,
MRS. G. B. DOUD,
360 Harriet street.

Opening Attractions.

So, with that settled, this is as good a time as any to tell briefly the story of "William Tell," which will be the opening attraction of the Ravinia season.

Rossini wrote this opera of the liberation of Switzerland in a fairly international setting. That is, the story by Schiller had come into Paris through translations of the writer's works, and the first libretto was written in French by Jouy and Bis. It was produced at the Grand Opera in Paris in 1829 with Nourrit as the original Arnoldo in what was then known as "Guillaume Tell." In 1831 it was presented in Lucca, Italy, as "Guglielmo Tell." London saw in 1838 at Drury lane in English and in 1839 at His Majesty's in Italian.

There seems to have been a New York production in English in 1831, as well as a production in New Orleans in 1842 and an American tour in 1857 with Karl Formes in the title role. Tenors who have sung Arnoldo include Mierswinski, Tamagno, Martinelli and Lauri-Volpi at the Metropolitan, and John O'Sullivan at the Chicago Opera in 1918-'19. The opera was written in five acts, cut down to three by omitting the third act and condensing the fourth and fifth into one, and was then rearranged into four acts, the form it now holds.

Story of a Brave Swiss.

William Tell is a Swiss patriot of the thirteenth century who yearns to free his people from the hated Austrian yoke represented by the tyrant, Gessler. He fears the younger folk will forget former freedom in the habit of servitude. So, the story opens on a May morning when a patriarch blesses young couples in love. His own son, Arnoldo, does not ask this blessing, for he loves Matilde, daughter of Gessler. The festival is halted by a fugitive seeking refuge from Gessler's men, one of whom he has slain to protect his daughter. Tell braves the coming storm to row him across the lake to safety.

Gessler arrives, and in vengeance burns the town and condemns the patriarch to death. Meanwhile, Arnoldo and Matilde have pledged their love, but when the young man learns of the death of his father, he joins Tell in the conspiracy of the cantons to overthrow the tyrant.

Then comes the famous market place scene, in which Gessler presides over the holiday by forcing the people to pay obeisance to his hat, which is stuck atop a pole. This Tell refuses to do, and Gessler, knowing him an expert archer, orders him to shoot an apple from his son's head. The shot succeeds, but Tell drops a second arrow and, questioned, tells Gessler that had he killed his son, the second shaft would have gone to the heart of Gessler. Tell and the boy are condemned to death, but intervention of Matilde saves the boy while the uprisen Swiss free Tell, and an avenging arrow removes Gessler from an otherwise peaceful picture.

In the Ravinia production, Giovanni Martinelli sings Arnoldo, Elisabeth Rethberg is Matilde, Giuseppe Danise is Tell, Margery Maxwell is the boy, and Alfredo Gandolfi is Gessler.

"The Science of Voice."

"The Science of Voice," by Douglas Stanley, M. S., A. C. G. I., reprinted in pamphlet form from the Journal of the Franklin Institute of Pennsylvania, would seem to be an abbreviation of a book with the same title and by the same author issued two years ago by Carl Fischer, Inc. At least, it takes up the same thesis. He holds that the field of voice culture is still a good deal a matter of witchcraft, of secret methods, and mysterious arts, that practically every theory heretofore held is wrong, and that true principles of the art can only arise from the sum total of the sciences of acoustics, anatomy, physiology, psychology, and the laws of music. What these principles are he proceeds to set forth in detail.

Whether they are the true principles or not cannot be told without trial. Certainly they cannot be told from this desk without it. As one whose peculiar mode of life makes it obligatory to listen to dozens and dozens of incompletely developed young voices every season, I am not always in the mood to rush to the defense of the embattled singing teachers. But the pamphlet, also the larger book, contains this statement in all the emphasis of capitalized letters: "The range of every properly produced voice should be at least three octaves, and sometimes nearly four may be reached."

Critic Makes Offer.

Like Paolo in his famous literary affair with Francesca da Rimini, in that book "I read no more that day." Two years ago I made an offer. I renew it. If Mr. Stanley will make a public demonstration in my hearing of a small group, say half a dozen average pupils trained in his principles and with an effective, musical vocal range of three octaves, I will see to it that he gets the publicity such an exploit deserves. I do not ask for the exceptional cases of nearly four octaves. Just three will be enough.

After a lifetime of listening to singers, you, I, anyone, can count upon the fingers the number that can go three octaves. They are as rare as radio directors who permit a musical program to be finished after the time is up. In the meantime, much as I should like to believe that the vocal situation is going to be transformed by Mr. Stanley's researches, I am inclined to issue what in certain legal actions is called a certificate of reasonable doubt.

"Carmen" to Be Heard Here.

"Carmen" is to be returned to the répertoire of the Chicago Civic Opera company, next season, it was announced last week by the management. Conchita Supervia, mezzo-soprano from La Scala, and the Madrid and Barcelona operas, has been engaged for guest performances of the title rôle. Mme. Supervia, who is of Spanish birth, has the distinction of having made her debut at the early age of 14. At 15 she sang her first important operatic rôle, Carmen, and while still in her early teens was a member of the Chicago Opera association for one season.

She was chosen by Richard Strauss to create the rôle of Octavion in "Der Rosenkavalier" in its first performance in Rome and later interpreted this rôle at La Scala with Toscanini conducting. She was a member of the La Scala company under Toscanini for six years and appeared for several seasons at the Royal Opera in Madrid and the Liceo in Barcelona. She took Paris by storm in the summer of 1928 when she participated in the Rossini cycle at the Théâtre des Champs-Elysées in Paris. She was engaged immediately for the Opera and Opera Comique, and during the last winter has been appearing in concert also in London, Paris, and Germany.

Fifty Events Listed.

Sunday, Oct. 18, would seem to be the day that Miss Bertha Ott will begin concert operations for the new season. At least, John McCormack is booked at the Civic Opera house and Sergei Rachmaninoff at Orchestra hall on that date under her management.

Miss Ott is prompt in making and announcing her commitments. About fifty events are already scheduled under her name, though this is by no means the total that will probably have her name at the head of their programs. Some of the more important are these:

Singers—Florence Austral, Beniamino Gigli, Yvonne Gall, Roland Hayes, Isa Kremer, Lotte Lehman, Juliette Lippe, John McCormack, Sigrid Onegin, Paul Robeson, Tito Schipa, Lawrence Tibbett, Reinald Werrenrath, Richard Tauber. The last named is rated as Germany's best tenor. At any rate, he is good.

Violinists — Mischa Elman, Fritz Kreisler, Frank Kneisel.

Pianists — Josef Lhevinne, Myra Hess, Mischa Levitzki, Elly Ney, Sergei Rachmaninoff.

Cellists—Hans Hess, Gregor Piatigorsky, Felix Salmond.

Combinations, vocal or instrumental —"The Blue Bird," a Russian revue; Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson; Gaylord Browne and Gibson Walters; Don Cossack male chorus; Kedroff quartet; Kneisel string quartet; London Singers with John Goss; Minneapolis Symphony orchestra.

Other engagements will be made and announced later. They will all be heard variously at the Studebaker, the Civic theater, and the Playhouse, with some of the larger ones at the Civic Opera house and Orchestra hall.

Late Season Concerts.

As spring burgeons, concert appearances fade away. Paula Schlueter, soprano, will give a song recital at the Playhouse this afternoon. Yetta Sokolow a piano recital at the Chicago Woman's club. Robert Macdonald will appear in an organ recital at the Oak Park First Baptist church this evening, assisted by Lillian Knowles, contralto. Maria Matyas, mezzo-soprano, and Rudolph Magnus, baritone, will give a joint song recital at Kimball hall tomorrow night, and on Wednesday the Friends of Music of Chicago will close the season with a performance at the Bal Tabarin.

This last will enlist the services of Irene Pavloska, mezzo-soprano of the Civic Opera company, also Sylvia Lozier Stone, Bessie Kaplan Nelson, Benjamin Landsman, Lillyan Sacks, Sara Rose Wexler, and Louis Jacobson. The program will be in large part operatic.

The German Grand Opera company is to make its fourth American tour next winter. The season will be of eight weeks, beginning Jan. 18, and the repertoire will be mainly Wagnerian. In fact, Eugen d'Albert's "Tiefland" is the only non-Wagnerian work to be announced. "Lohengrin" and "Tannhäuser" are to be added to the list. The others will be the four items of the "Ring des Nibelungen," "Tristan und Isolde," and "Der Fliegende Holländer."

Dr. Max von Schillings has been re-engaged as musical director, and the principal sopranos will be Johanna Gadski and Margarethe Baumer. Mme. Gadski sends word of a contest for young American women singers, the winner to be engaged as a member of this tour, with salary and expenses guaranteed by Mme. Gadski personally. Voice is the only requisite. Operatic experience will not be required. Applicants are requested to write to the German Grand Opera company, 11 West 42d street, New York.

"The Legend of the Piper," the opera by Mrs. Eleanor Everest Freer of Chicago, is to be sung at Sacramento, Cal., under the auspices of the board of education of that city and the direction of George Sims, superintendent of recreation. The date will be June 6 and the company will number over forty. The work will be remembered as being in the repertoire of the American Opera company, an inspiriting organization which for the last year has been only an inspiriting memory.

Other news of "Peter Ibbetson," to be sung at Ravinia this summer, is that it will be conducted by Wilfrid Pelletier, and the word is that he was chosen at the express wish of Deems Taylor, composer of the work. Mr. Pelletier is to go, at the end of the Ravinia season, to San Francisco and Los Angeles, where he will conduct "Carmen" and "Marouf." He conducted a late night performance of "Romeo and Juliet" in Montreal recently, with Edward Johnson and Queena Mario in the name parts. The performance began at midnight and ended some time after three o'clock in the morning.

TO SING CARMEN

CONCHITA SUPERVIA.

THIS mezzo-soprano from Spain is returning to the Chicago Opera next season and, because she is returning, "Carmen" is to be revived for her appearance in the name part. She was a member of the company years ago when the late Cleofonte Campanini was general director, and she sang as Carmen then. She was very young at that time, however. For that matter, she is by no means old yet, and maturity has brought her an enviable reputation in many of the most noted European opera houses.

Coincidences

Your strange coincidence will be printed if you will submit it to Strange Coincidences, Chicago Tribune.

Sensed Boy Friend's Accident.

A girl friend and I were walking home from work Tuesday at 5 p. m. We were talking about the danger of working around machinery. She told me about her boy friend, who worked on a tractor. She had the strange feeling, she said, that she could picture him on the tractor riding along and the next moment he lay on the ground, badly hurt. I told her that was because she was always thinking of the worst. We then dropped the subject.

She arrived home at 5:30 p. m., and at a quarter of 6 she received a telephone call stating that her boy friend was painfully scalded about the face and chest. The radiator on the tractor had cracked and the steam had scalded him.

When she told me the next day what had happened I considered it a strange coincidence. A. M. P.

A Pleasant Occurrence.

About one month before the Golden Gloves tournament my husband purchased two tickets.

At the last minute my two brothers were given tickets for the bouts. We intended to call each other and find out where our seats were so that we might meet afterward. However, in our rushing around, we neglected to do so.

Imagine our great surprise to find that out of those thousands of seats, our seats were not only the same row as theirs but right next to them!

M. O. H.

Cripples, True and False.

We were playing "tag" after school. When we got tired I suggested that we limp instead of run. We had been limping for about five minutes when we saw a cripple limping in the same manner as we were. The cripple, thinking that we were imitating him, whirled his cane at us. I ran and fell. That ended my childhood days. H. W. M.

Debussy Music, Springtime Go Hand in Hand

Two Nocturnes Recorded in Paris.

By Edward Moore.

SPRINGTIME and Debussy's music somehow seem to go together rather well, so it is more than commonly to the purpose that Brunswick is issuing some of Debussy's best. Two of the three nocturnes for orchestra, "Nuages" (Clouds) and "Festivals," two sides each, numbers 90158 and 90159, are played by the Orchestre de l'Association des Concerts Lamoureux of Paris under the direction of Albert Wolff.

They are first class examples of what recorders can do when they set themselves out to reproduce some of the less frequently heard music, that which is usually confined to the elect of concert givers. In the first place, the performance is excellent. Conductor Wolff and the orchestra are thoroughly in the Debussy spirit with the light touch and flexibility and color which does not in the least stifle a great amount of exultant energy.

Next, the recording is as good as can be. It is not only that the qualities of string and wind instruments are faithfully recorded, but how many, or rather, how few years is it since tympani could be put upon a record to sound like anything more than a vague, muffled noise? In this case, they sound like tympani.

A Favorite Number.

Orchestral music of an older and consequently more conventional and possibly more popular type is also well presented by Victor in number 9733, where Mendelssohn's "Ruy Blas" overture is played by a symphony orchestra conducted by Malcolm Sargent, another European recording. The story of Ruy Blas ranks among the stirring melodramas of dramatic history, but both the period and the personal nature of Mendelssohn kept him out of musical turgidness or anything except frank, lively melody.

This overture used to be a favorite number in both popular orchestral and band concerts, and there is no reason why it should not continue in that enviable position for years to come. At least, this record makes a strong argument.

Once again it is a little amusing to see the recording companies duplicating each other at the same time. This example is Handel's famous and so called Largo, whose proper title is "Ombra mai fu" from the opera, "Xerxes." Columbia and Brunswick are both issuing it, Columbia through the voice of Jo van Yzer-Vincent, soprano, with organ and violin accompaniment, number 50282-D; Brunswick through Emmi Leisner, contralto, with orchestral accompaniment, number 90160.

You can pretty well take your choice which one you will prefer. Both are in Italian, and both voices are well fitted for the purpose. Mme. van Yzer-Vincent sings in a key which reproduces as G. Mme. Leisner approximately D. Mme. Leisner's accompaniment is a bit the better, since the violin for Mme. van Yzer-Vincent does not register as quite ideal perfection of tone.

Reverse Sides Vary.

The solo is short, taking only one side of a record, and the reverse sides are different. Columbia presents Theodora Versteegh, mezzo-soprano, in Cesar Franck's sacred song, "Panis Angelicus," again with organ and violin, which, together with "Ombrai mai fu" will be remembered as high spots in John McCormack's repertoire. The Brunswick reverse is another by Mme. Leisner and another by Handel, the solo cantata with instruments, "Dank Sei Dir, Herr." Rather curiously, it is much in the same musical mood as "Ombrai mai fu," even to the leisurely three-four rhythm. It is perhaps unnecessary to add that both of these disks are imported recordings.

Two records that cannot be slighted by any admirer of one of the foremost of German leider are of the ten inch size from Brunswick. They are made by the great baritone, Heinrich Schlusnus, and they display him at the top of his voice and form. 85001 presents Hugo Wolf's "Heimweh" and Richard Strauss' "Heimliche Aufforderung"; 85003 has Schumann's "Es zogen zwei rust'ge Gesellen" and Humperdinck's "Am Rhein." Both are confidently and earnestly recommended, particularly 85001. Franz Rupp plays the piano accompaniment for all.

Army Planes Keep Newsreel Cameras Busy

taken over Manhattan. The first of the two was snapped last winter. The picture ship was cruising over New Jersey when a sudden shift in the wind swept in a blanket of fog. The ship wheeled and headed for its home port on Long Island. As it swung across the bay the camera man noticed the towers of dozens of the skyscrapers sticking up through the fog like white candles atop a birthday cake. He waved to the pilot to fly over the city, and roaring above the thick clouds the photographer cranked away at a unique sight. The plane eventually got down, but it was nip and tuck with old man bad weather.

Movie Houses Turn Automat.

The newest things in the way of movie houses are the Translux theaters in Manhattan. Two new ones have just opened on Broadway. They are under the same roof, but show different types of programs. These are the "automats" of the picture house world. The auditoriums are small, there are no ushers—one just drops his quarter in the slot, enters, and takes a seat.

The house is lighted at all times—almost to daylight brilliancy. A new method of projection makes this possible, and the lighted auditorium is popular with every one except those couples who go to the movies to be alone. News pictures are being shown in one of the Broadway houses, and feature shorts make up the bill at the other.

Foreign Language Talkies.

One hears a lot, these days, about the problem of making Hollywood and Long Island movies for foreign distribution. England is making a lot of its own pictures, these days, and then, too, there is no language obstacle to hurdle in that country. In France the old picture quarrel, which has been going through an armistice, probably will be renewed this summer. American film men, members of the French government, and United States embassy officials in Paris will meet to draft a new film quota agreement. The talkies have come along since the original row and the United States producers probably will have to promise the French pictures in their own language.

The making of foreign language talkies should be profitable, for there is a demand for them right here in our own country. I have seen and heard talkies in at least four different languages in New York City, and in the Rio Grande country every Texas town has its picture house that caters to the Mexican population by showing Spanish language pictures.

If film trade agreements with foreign countries can be worked out on a satisfactory basis there is no reason why the foreign language talkie industry should not be one of the biggest gold mines in the cinema manufacturing Eldorado.

DREAMS

Have you ever had a dream which later came true? If you care to see it in print address Dreams, Chicago Tribune.

Received Death Warning.

I have for years been forewarned of any approaching troubles by dreams, but am not always able to interpret the meaning or place the ones involved.

However, on April 13, 1931, I had a confused dream. I seemed to have to cross over a stream of muddy water which reached up to my mouth. The shock, for my dream was so real, wakened me. I was as awake as I am this moment, and I heard a voice say, "your dream is a warning of death." Naturally, I slept very little that night.

I was so worried I told some friends about it the next morning. Two days later I received word that my brother in Portland, Ore., had been operated on the night of my dream, and that there was little hope he would recover. He died five days later. R. J. C.

Dream Brought Good Luck.

I was one of the unemployed for some time. One day I answered a blind ad in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. That same night I dreamed that I was granted an interview by a small concern in the suburbs for 3 o'clock.

The next day I got a call to be at the office of a concern in the surburbs at 3 o'clock. The interviewer was just the man in my dream and I landed the job. F. J. P.

Kid Gloves Restored.

Sometime ago I missed two pairs of kid gloves. I looked through dresser drawers and every place I could think of. I have a couple of bags in which I put things that I don't use. I even looked there, but no kid gloves, so I gave them up for lost.

That night, lying in bed, I racked my brains trying to think where I could have put them. I went to sleep and dreamed that I found them in one of my bags. I told the family about it, and they told me to look there again.

I did. I too keverything out, and, sure enough, there were the gloves. M. B.

Found Pen in Purse Lining.

Recently, as I was on my way to the city, I couldn't find my fountain pen, which I always carried in my purse. I decided that I had left it at home. On returning I did not find it at home. I could not believe I had lost my pen and kept talking about it. That night a member of the family said to me, "I hope you dream about your pen and that the dream will tell you where it is."

I remembered the next morning that I had dreamed that my pen was in my purse. I looked, but failed to find it. The following day a little girl at school asked me to change some money for her and in putting my hand into the inside purse attached to my purse I felt it through the lining, for it had slipped behind this pocket. Then I realized that my dream had come true. E. M.

Memorial Day Originated by Georgia Women

First Formal Exercises Held April 26, 1866.

COLUMBUS, Ga.—(AP)—Memorial day, now set aside in every state in the Union each year, and in many foreign countries, for honoring the dead, had its inception here nearly 65 years ago.

It was on April 26, 1866, that Mrs. John Tyler of Columbus called together a group of her friends for the purpose of forming a Ladies' Memorial association.

Four southern states still hold their Memorial day exercises April 26. They are Georgia, Florida, Mississippi and Alabama. Alabama was the first state officially to observe Memorial day, and New York the first state to declare it a legal holiday.

First Formal Ceremony.

Mrs. Tyler and her friends pledged themselves to "perpetuate as a religious custom to wreathe annually the graves of our martyred dead." With the vow recorded, they went to Linwood cemetery in Columbus and held formal exercises.

Many memorial associations were organized throughout the south, and the spirit of the movement soon seized the people of the north. One New York newspaper observed:

"The women of Columbus have shown themselves impartial in their offerings to the memory of the dead. They strewed flowers alike on the graves of the Confederate and National soldiers."

Idea Sponsored in North.

Gen. John A. Logan, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, gave impetus to the idea in the north. He issued an order May 30, 1868, that every post should hold appropriate exercises and place flowers on the graves of dead comrades.

When the day ultimately became a legal holiday, most states observed it on May 30.

Besides the four states already mentioned which observe "Confederate Memorial day," April 26, the other exceptions are: North and South Carolina, celebrating on May 10, and Louisiana on June 3.

Pulitzer Prize Play Provokes Hot Argument

"Alison's House" Is Bad Choice, Critics Assert.

By Charles Collins.

[and Miss Dickinson, too, for that heroine of this play [she has been dead eighteen years] as something more than an alias for a special case of poetic genius. Alison for me matter] represents a type of American character that used to be prevalent before females became emancipated.

Many a family has had an Alison Stanhope without the posthumous poems. Many an American household has sheltered a sensitive girl who, for some inscrutable reason, has withdrawn from life, shut herself away from all social contacts, and let the years roll by until she withered into eccentric spinsterhood and crumbled silently away. There must have been many thousands of them, although they were too shy to come to the attention of statistics takers. They were the "queer" aunts of the old homesteads, known best to the children of the household. They were the nuns of puritanism.

In "Alison's House" this character finds her place in American drama. The play ought to stimulate a searching of many attics after the papers that "queer" aunts may have left behind. Perhaps there are new Emily Dickinsons to be discovered.

Past Prize Winners.

The controversy over "Alison's House" has caused me to refresh my memory of past Pulitzer prize winners. They were: 1918, "Why Marry?" by Jesse Lynch Williams; 1919, no award because of inferior material; 1920, "Beyond the Horizon," by Eugene O'Neill; 1921, "Miss Lulu Bett," by Zona Gale; 1922, "Anna Christie," by Eugene O'Neill; 1923, "Icebound," by Owen Davis; 1924, "Hell Bent for Heaven," by Hatcher Hughes; 1925, "They Knew What They Wanted," by Sidney Howard; 1926, "Craig's Wife," by George Kelly; 1927, "In Abraham's Bosom," by Paul Green; 1928, "Strange Interlude," by Eugene O'Neill; 1929, "Street Scene," by Elmer Rice; 1930, "The Green Pastures," by Marc Connelly.

I am not convinced that the Pulitzer prize committee was lamentably in error when it added "Alison's House" to this list.

For Sharpshooters.

Writers who deal with the theater arts [including music critics] make frequent use of the word "diction"; and often draw the fire of sharpshooters who insist that the correct word for the intended idea is "enunciation." In order to settle the point for all time, so far as this department is concerned, and to assert my right to write "diction" when I mean diction I shall refer the sharpshooting population to the following definition, which is to be found in Funk & Wagnalls New Standard Dictionary.

"Diction: 1. The use of words or the manner of using them either in literature, oratory, or song; the manner with which anything is expressed in words. It includes articulation, pronunciation, intonation, declamation, and punctuation. 2. Specif. That department of rhetoric which deals with the choice and arrangement of words and modes of expression."

This ought to persuade all of the sharpshooters in the "diction" brigade to abandon their rifle pits.

French Tribute to Belasco

HENRY BERNSTEIN, author of "Melo," French dramatist now making his first visit to this country, has issued a statement regarding the death of David Belasco as representative of the French Society of Authors and Composers. He says:

"The Society of French Authors and Composers, which is the most powerful association of writers in the world and also the most powerful association of theater professionals, has been very deeply moved on hearing of David Belasco's death. Our society wishes to express publicly the profound sympathy of its members for America's loss of the great Belasco.

"We do not forget that David Belasco presented with all his skill and his deep sense of beauty those French plays he deemed worthy of the American public's interest. All who love the theater and seek its greatness should hope to find in every country servants of its art as efficient and inspired as David Belasco."

How Mr. Belasco Died in Harness; Gotham Theaters

Mr. Leiber Wants Stars for Next Season.

NEW YORK, May 23.—[Special.]—The late David Belasco was engrossed in theatrical plans almost until the day of his death, May 14, according to tomorrow's Broadway gossip in the New York Times. On Friday, May 8, six days before the end of his career, he purchased the rights to "The Night Remembers," by Martha Madison, co-author of "Subway Express." He was looking forward joyously to a birthday celebration next July in Atlantic City, for it was his custom to make this anniversary coincide with the tryout of a new production. His office declares, however, that reports that he had a score of plays or more on hand are unfounded.

Max Faetkenheur, business manager of the Chicago Civic Shakespeare company, is in New York with great plans for next season seething in his mind. The Times will say tomorrow:

"On a star hunt through these sections is an agent provocateur for the Chicago Civic Shakespeare society whose plan is to arouse persons of stellar importance to appear in the Fritz Leiber company next season. The search will be carried to London, if necessary, to find for Mr. Leiber some support more lustrous than he has been in the habit of receiving."

A story is going the rounds of Broadway which illustrates in a grotesque manner the economic difficulties of the stage, so far as "the road" is concerned. A play whose "properties" consist only of one barrel and one revolver will not be able to travel, merely because three stage hands, at salaries of $115 a week, would have been required, under union rules, to handle these articles. Efforts to persuade the union to moderate its rules covering this point were unsuccessful; and so the affair has been called off.

Chester Erskin, who staged "He" for the Theater Guild, may put on another play for that organization before he joins the Erlanger forces for full time duty next fall. At least he mentioned this possibility before sailing for Europe last Tuesday. The play in question is "Mother and Son," by Leonard Atlas, author of "The House We Live In." Herman Shumlin was once interested in this manuscript. . . . This Mr. Shumlin, incidentally, is said to be losing his affection for "Pariser Platz, 13," by Vicki Baum, author of "Grand Hotel." He may decide to permit his lien on the American rights to lapse.

Rudy Vallee informed the ladies and gentlemen of the radio audience a few nights ago that he and his fellow musicians will contribute to the program of the forthcoming "Scandals." This summer revue goes into rehearsal two weeks hence.

Jane Cowl will end her season in "Art and Mrs. Bottle" with a week in the New York suburbs, beginning June 8. One of her managers, Joseph Verner Reed, has sailed for England to inspect "Lean Harvest" and "Autumn Crocus," and to decide whether or not these London plays should be seen in America. It's easy to imagine how the Broadway wisecrackers will bear down on the word "crocus" if that play doesn't meet with their approval.

Earl Carroll is shopping for celebrities to appear in his next "Vanities," which will dedicate his new theater. Eddie Cantor is said to have rejected an offer of $7,500 a week. Mr. Carroll is negotiating with the four Marx brothers, who collectively want $10,000 a week.

Encouraged by the success of "Meet My Sister," the Shuberts have acquired another musical piece of this intimate, no chorus type. It is called "Cocktail," and is now pleasing the patrons of the Komödienhaus in Berlin. Ralph Benatzky, composer of "Meet My Sister," wrote the score. Its story deals with a childless queen, a king who wants an heir, and a third ...

New in Chicago: Operetta, Guild Play, 'The Rap'

"MEET MY SISTER," a musical comedy which has had a long run in New York, began an engagement at the Grand Opera house last night. It is an adaptation of a piece which has had a marked success upon the lyric stage in Europe. The score is by Ralph Benatsky, and the libretto, which deals with a romance between a spirited girl of noble family and a shy, humble professor, has been adapted by Henry Wagstaffe Gribble.

The cast includes Bettina Hall, formerly of "Three Little Girls"; Walter Slezak, son of the opera singer, Leo Slezak, and originator of the rôle of the professor in Germany; Harry Welsh, the comedian who appeared here a year ago in "A Wonderful Night"; David Hutcheson, last seen in "Sons o' Guns"; Olive Olsen, Kay McKay, Boyd Davis, Donald Campbell, Ronald Brown, and several others. "Meet My Sister" is described as an intimate musical play which has no chorus to interrupt its flow of comedy.

"He," a comedy from the French of Alfred Savoir, will have a première at the Illinois theater tomorrow night under the auspices of the Theater Guild. This production is being offered to the Guild's Chicago subscribers and patrons prior to its showing in New York, and marks the final chapter of the Guild's season in this city. The engagement is for three weeks.

"He" derives its title from a mystifying character who appears at a convention of atheists in a Swiss hotel and announces himself to be God. He meets with derision, but his stay is accompanied by a sequence of events which strike the atheists as miraculous. The play tells an unusual story in a vein of lightly satiric comedy.

For the interpretation of "He" the Guild has assembled a notable cast which includes Tom Powers, in the title rôle; Claude Rains, Violet Kemble Cooper, Pedro de Cordoba, Edward Rigby, Edith Meiser, Viola Frayne, Victor Killian, William Gargan, and Robert Su LeSueur. The stage settings were designed by Aline Bernstein.

"The Rap," a play which is described as a mystery melodrama, will begin an engagement at the Studebaker theater next Saturday night, May 30. It comes directly from New York, where it has had a nine weeks' run at the Avon theater. John Peter Leister is the author; Leonard Bergman and Raymond Payton are the producers. The former is a nephew of the late A. L. Erlanger.

The story of "The Rap" is based upon recent exposés in New York of alliances between politics and the criminal classes. The cast includes Helen Tenney, Paul Harvey, Jack Marvin, Ernest Anderson, Robert Shayne, Kenneth Bradshaw, Richard Gregg, and Edwin Vickery.

B'way Openings

NEW YORK, May 23.—[Special.]—Only one première is announced for the Gotham stage next week. The other items recorded below come under the heading of miscellaneous and incidental stage activities:

"Gasoline Gypsies"—Opens Wednesday night at the Lyric. This is a comedy by Charles Conger Stewart; acting in it will be Gene Byron, Dorothy Randall, Gertrude Flynn and Emmett Lynn among others.

"The Legend of the Golem"—Tuesday night at the theater of the New School for Social Research. A play, in the most constructive manner, of medieval religious conflict. Boris S. Glagolin, a Russian director, has staged it, and there will be 25 actors, a troupe of dancers and a choir. The performance will be repeated on Wednesday and Thursday and on June 1, 2 and 3.

"Precedent"—Tuesday night at the Bijou theater. The I. J. Golden play, which has to do with the Mooney-Billings case, will move uptown from the Provincetown theater, where it has been providing fireworks of a sort since mid-April. The original cast, including Clyde Franklin, Royal Dana Tracy, William Bonelli and Kirk Brown, will continue to play it. The settings will be new.

Master Showman Was Shy at Heart.

By Burns Mantle.

iel Frohman clings to band collars as high as a fence.

Admired Catholic Ceremony.

Belasco must always have admired the form and ceremony of the Catholic church. I recall an afternoon, nearly twenty years ago, when he took me on a personally conducted tour of what was then his famous studio atop the Belasco theater.

We had been through one room, 15x15, I should say, filled with his Napoliana. We had seen the collection of rock crystal, the frieze of spears, the paintings and the cabinets of objet d'art. We had sat for a moment at the old English dining room table, imported by Stanford White from a collection handed down by a feudal lord. And we turned suddenly around a pillar and started down what had the appearance of being the chancel of a church in miniature. David walked in front and every foot or two he would press a hidden button and another section would burst into light.

At the end of a fifteen or twenty foot walk we came to a wall shrine. He opened the doors and the interior was flooded with light. A handsome figure of a madonna was the central object and on the wall about the madonna were possibly a hundred rosaries of every conceivable hue and quality—jade and jet, polished ebony and teakwood, ivory and coral.

Showing them, David would stand back with shining eyes and drink in the surprise of the beholder, and then explain: "These were my daughter's [his youngest daughter, Augusta, who was the wife of William Elliott and who had died but a year or so before]; I was a collector and she wanted to be a collector, so she collected these.

"I put them here after she died."

This was the Augusta for whom he ordered that a candle be kept burning in her tomb, because she was always afraid of the dark.

Longed to Die in Harness.

I didn't believe David was afraid of the dark. He had pondered the mysteries and put much of what he had come to believe in "The Return of Peter Grimm." He will come back, if he can, for he loved life. But not for long. He will be ever so curious about the way they are staging things farther on.

His one great wish was, as he often said, to die in harness. He was a little jealous of Sir Henry Irving for having died on the stage. He wanted to be carried out of his theater to the mortician's parlor.

He did not die in harness, but he had his harness polished and ready, hanging on his bedroom wall. He had been reading plays for weeks. He had found one or two he thought something might be done with. He was just about to get the harness down and set to work on a play by Martha Madison and Eva K. Flint, who wrote "Subway Express." "The Night Remembers" was the tentative title.

Not many of us will come that close to getting our last wish.

It is difficult to stop writing about Belasco, once you start, if you have lived the last thirty years of your life in the theater. I came to admire him sincerely, after several years of distrust and suspicion. Not for the plays he produced so much as for the way he produced them and for the standards he set for other showmen to shoot at.

There are many fine entertainments in the Belasco list of plays, and probably not a single fine play in the literary sense. They acted superbly, but they read quite badly. He was, so long as he lived, our master showman. His influence was marked. He was, I think, the last great showman of his and our time.

"If Booth Had Missed."

Which leaves but little room for my report of the week to you. Fortunately, there is but little to report.

The most interesting new play is one called "If Booth Had Missed," by Arthur Goodman. It won the $1,000 prize offered by Samuel French to the annual little theater tournament for long plays.

Originally, you will remember, this tournament was devoted to one-act pieces by amateur groups. This year the one-act play contest was abandoned because of the depression, but five long plays were tried by four home groups and one from Lapeer, Mich. They were the Wigwam players and offered a three-acter called "Side Show."

The Lincoln play starts with the night in Ford's theater, April 14, 1865, when Booth's aim was true. This time his gun arm is thrown up by a colored porter and Lincoln lives.

Thereafter the martyred one is set upon and finally taken, even as his successor, Andrew Johnson, was treated. His own party opposes his reconstruction program. The military heads want an army dictatorship. Grant deserts him. Lincoln finally asks the resignation of Stanton [as Johnson did] and Stanton refuses to resign.

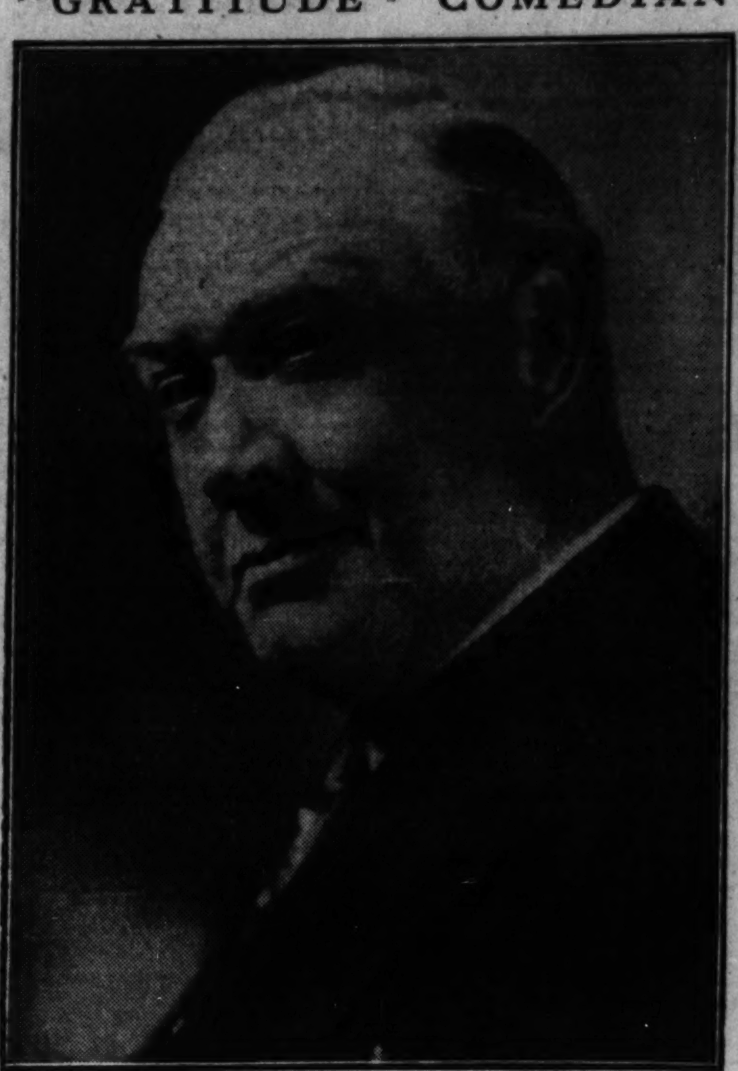
Lincoln is, as Johnson was, thereupon impeached for a violation of the tenure of office act. In a final scene in the senate Lincoln is saved from impeachment by a single vote, after he pleads his own case, but as he rises to thank his supporters a Senator Tilton rises, and crying, "The penalty of treason is death!" shoots him dead.

The play has its dramatic moments, as any Lincoln play must have, and the amateurs did it fairly well. They represented the Morningside players of Columbia university, who also won last season's prize with a piece called "The New Freedom." Nothing has come of that, either.

Saturday Night Premieres.

Apropos the opening of "Meet My Sister" last night at the Grand Opera house, the Messrs. Shubert say that they hope to establish Saturday night openings as regular events for next season, for their musical plays. They feel that there is as much of a demand for gala first nights on Saturday as on Sunday.

"GRATITUDE" COMEDIAN



GEORGE W. BARBIER.

THIS veteran comedian is one of the reasons why "That's Gratitude" is having a long run at the Blackstone theater. His character study of a soft-hearted and soft-headed business man of the middle west is mellow with humor. When he finishes with this play he will go into "pictures"; but next season will probably find him on the legitimate stage again, with the rank of a star.

Old School of Stage Producers Almost Extinct

NEW YORK, May 23.—(AP)—William A. Brady remains as the leader of the old guard of producers with the passing of David Belasco. Nearly all except Brady are gone now—Belasco, Charles Frohman, Klaw and Erlanger, and the others.

Brady still remains active, working as hard as he did in the days when he managed prize fighters in the daytime and rehearsed shows at night. He produces and directs—and even as recently as 1927 he acted the leading rôle in "A Free Soul." Two seasons ago he made a fortune off "Street Scene."

Belasco's death ended the school of realistic producers. When he had a play calling for a drawing room, he actually built a drawing room. There would be actual books in the book cases, real flowers in the vases, and good, solid furniture in the room.

The newer schools of production, headed by Robert Edmond Jones and Lee Simonson, are not so much for realism as for suggestivism. For instance, in "Miracle at Verdun" a cenotaph and a dozen crosses suggested a huge cemetery. Belasco would have built an actual cemetery on the stage.

The two Broadway premières of this week were an Irish comedy and a revue. Arthur Sinclair and Marie O'Neill, veterans of the Dublin stage, returned in the comedy, "Old Man Murphy." It is the work of Patrick Kearney and Harry Wagstaff Gribble.

Billy Rose brings out his second revue in "Crazy Quilt," with Phil Baker, Ted Healy and Fannie Brice as stars. It is a smart summer show, and rarely does it drop down among the mediocre and dull.

"Tom" Show for Benefit.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" will be acted at the Goodman theater tomorrow night by the University of Chicago Dramatic association. The performance will be for the benefit of the University Settlement. This famous old play, which has passed into American folklore, has become practically extinct on the professional stage.

Play Festival

BLANCHE YURKA, Tom Powers, Violet Heming and Martha Graham have been engaged for a dramatic festival to be held at the Lydia Mendelssohn theater, Ann Arbor, Mich., from May 25 to June 27. Robert Henderson, in association with George Coulouris, will stage the program of six plays.

Miss Yurka will appear in Sophocles' "Electra" and will take Lynn Fontanne's rôle in "Caprice." Mr. Powers and Miss Heming have been cast for the principal rôles in Noel Coward's "Private Lives" and "The Way of the World," by Congreve. Mr. Powers will be seen also as Bluntschli in Shaw's "Arms and the Man." The sixth play will be Strindberg's "The Father."

Succeeds Eva Le Gallienne.

Gale Sondergaard has replaced Eva Le Gallienne in the cast of Susan Glaspell's "Alison's House," in New York. This is the second time Miss Sondergaard has stepped into a Pulitzer prize play in the midst of its engagement. She replaced Judith Anderson in "Strange Interlude" when Miss Anderson left the cast of O'Neill's play in the middle of the Chicago run. She is the wife of Herbert Biberman, stage director with the Theater Guild.

Star Willingly Lends Name to Business Firm

Commercial Enterprises Swell Film Salary.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Discoveries of oil at the seaside resort community of Venice have made wealthy people of several picture stars. Foremost among these are Mae Murray, Lewis Stone, and Madge Bellamy. Mae Murray now has five wells spouting liquid gold on her beach property. A casual drive about the environs of the little town not far from Hollywood reveals huge derricks and oil tanks where formerly the stars used to bask in the sun and swim in the gentle breakers of the Pacific.

A Sunday afternoon drive is bound to be well sprinkled with signs advertising this and that commercial enterprise of film celebrities. Practically all of the stars are willing to lend their names to enterprises that will return them some value commercially.

In Cahuenga pass one sees an elaborate modernistic sign on the front of a much fussed up and fancy tiled beauty parlor. Esther Ralston owns it and her name appears in big letters over the combination beauty parlor, Turkish bath, swimming tank, and gymnasium enterprise.

Noah Beery Trout Club.

Along Vine street and also around the corner on Hollywood boulevard are signs advertising the Noah Beery Trout club. Little fish, big speckled fish, and various crustaceans flounder around in an outdoor water tank with glass sides, used as an ad for the trout club.

Out Wilshire boulevard one finds many picture names in a few blocks. Mary Pickford's name is over a miniature golf club furnished with modernistic trees, and tables, and chairs. A few blocks further on is the Jackie Coogan golf course.

Ruth Roland's Trout Fishing club occupies a whole block. It is landscaped with huge cataracts and pools in which the passer-by may catch trout, which will be broiled at a little restaurant on the club grounds.

A traveler passing down the ocean highway towards Laguna is confronted with Hallam Cooley's name in huge letters. Cooley is in the real estate business down that way.

Raymond Griffith has developed a fine "Drive In" open air market where you may buy anything edible, and such fancies as floor wax, mops, brooms, clothes line, soap, and shoe polish.

Recently Raised Prices.

Ronald Colman and Lew Cody both have money invested in tonsorial parlors. Lew also owns a drug store. Charles Bickford owns a huge garage, filling station, and parking station opposite the M-G-M studios in Culver City. It is doing so well he recently raised prices.

Enid Bennett presides with a motherly air, no longer in demand on the screen, at "Grandma's Farm," out on Ventura boulevard, where you can get choice fried chicken. Bill Haines has a charming and profitable antique shop on La Brea, just off Hollywood boulevard.

Jetta Goudal and her husband, Harold Grieve, are doing very well in the interior decorating business. Jetta is to make a picture at Fox soon, the first in a long time.

Corinne Griffith recently opened her Victor Hugo market in Beverly Hills with a regular movie première.

Charles Chaplin will never lack for a meal as long as his friend and fellow actor, Henry Bergman, runs Henry's restaurant on Hollywood boulevard. Charlie has stock in it.

To Open First Automat.

Howard Hughes has added another industry to his oil, tool business, motion picture producing, and theater constructing enterprises. He and Harold Franklin have approved plans for the construction and opening of the first automatic restaurant in the west. It will be built on Vine street, Hollywood. With so many actors out of work an automat should become the most popular eating house on the boulevard.

The financial clouds that hovered over Eugene V. Brewster and Corliss Palmer ever since they came to Hollywood from New York to launch Miss Palmer on a film career lowered again recently. The Brewster's sold off a residence on Hollywood drive which they had bought some years ago in more prosperous times. The results of the sale, Brewster sadly announced, produced little more than required to pay taxes on that and another little piece of property here which he still holds.

The Brewsters have moved into a small cottage on Selma avenue. Through, or maybe because of, adversity the one time multimillionaire publisher and the beautiful Macon, Ga., girl whom he took as a protégée remain as devotedly in love as during the heyday of their romance.

Embarrassing Moments

What was the most embarrassing moment of your life? If you care to have it published address Embarrassing Moments, Chicago Tribune. Please write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

A Mistake in Identity.

One rainy day I got off the train, opened up my trusty old umbrella, and started for home. Just a few feet ahead of me I spied the familiar shuffling figure of my uncle. Catching up to him, I tapped him on the back and said, "Uncle Alex, you dear old man, aren't you afraid of getting wet? You had better walk under my umbrella."

At the sound of my voice the old gentleman turned around, and to my horror and embarrassment I saw that he was a stranger. I mumbled something about "making a mistake" and hurried away as fast as I could.

Perfumed Eggs for the Guest.

Not long ago I had a sample of a new kind of cold cream given me. Wanting the jar I put the cream in a cup, which somehow got in the ice box and was forgotten.

One Sunday morning, having a guest whom I was eager to impress with my culinary ability, I decided to fry the eggs in butter. Noticing that my efforts seemed to be going unrewarded I began to look for the reason.

Imagine my chagrin when I found that I had used face cream and the eggs were highly perfumed.

F. B.

Impressing the Boy Friend.

Recently I purchased some sweet rolls. After returning to the office I proceeded to wrap them more securely in order to carry them home. While so doing my fingers became quite sticky from the sugar and cinnamon.

In the meantime a young man on whom I had tried to make a good impression in the past, and whom I had not seen for some time, came into the office, a fact of which I was unaware at the time. I started out to wash my hands when he jumped up and jokingly held out his to me. There was nothing else for me to do but politely grasp it, with my sticky paw. He said nothing, but I still wonder what he thought. That was my most embarrassing moment.

H. J.

A Jovial Recognition.

One afternoon I came to Chicago on the elevated. As we neared the city a drunken man boarded the same car. I have been told that I look very much like President Hoover—as a matter of fact my friends call me "Herbie."

This intoxicated man finally noted the resemblance and in a voice so loud all the occupants of the car could hear him, called attention to me by saying: "Why, just look at that fellow. He looks like Hoover. I'll bet he is one of his relations."

Imagine my embarrassment with all the people gazing at me and the drunken man talking on and on until his station was called.

H. O. T

Harsh Words for Minnie.

I had spent most of a hot spring afternoon in my garden, spading and planting. Feeling quite proud of myself, I went out after supper to view the result of my labor. What a picture met my sight! There in the middle of one bed was "Minnie," our little boy's pet chicken, and seed and soil were flying in every direction.

Just then beyond the fence I saw our neighbor in her garden. And the look she gave me! Her name was Minnie. I turned and fled, too embarrassed for explanations.

A. L. G.

Due to a Slight Misunderstanding.

A lady belonging to our church phoned one day and, as I understood her, said: "Will you bake two jelly cakes this week?" I unhesitatingly agreed.

Imagine my feeling when just in the midst of the baking she arrived and said: "Here are the two delegates you were so kind as to take in your home this week and keep for us."

O. M.

Typing Was Perfect.

I experienced my most embarrassing moment shortly after I got a position with a real estate firm. My employer came to my desk one afternoon with three gentlemen and gave me an important form to be filled out in quadruplicate. They were in a hurry for it and I was told to be careful in filling it out, as there could be no erasures.

I arranged the papers in my machine and after fifteen minutes of careful typing according to the dictation of my employer, while the others stood at my desk and waited, I carefully took the sheets out, delighted that due to my care I hadn't made a single mistake. But my delight soon changed to terrible embarrassment—I had placed the carbon paper wrong side up and the printing appeared on the back of each sheet instead of on the front.

Italian Scions Plan to Follow Fathers' Lives

Prince and Mussolini's Son Train for Power.

ROME.—(AP)—In marked contradiction to the United States, President's sons go to business school and scions of banking families are orchestra leaders, the sons of most Italian leaders plan lives like those of their fathers.

Prince Umberto and Bruno Mussolini, Italy's most famous sons of famous fathers, are treading the exact footsteps their parents took before them.

The prince, who will one day rule Italy from the throne of his father, King Victor Emmanuel, is getting a thorough training in court and military life.

Holds Colonel's Office.

He is a full colonel of a line regiment, stationed at Turin, and will fill, as a practical officer, the post of commander in chief of the Italian armies. His career was cut out for him at birth, as was his father's.

Bruno, 13 year old son of the duce, has embraced early the same career that led his father to his post as head of the Italian government and founder and leader of Fascism.

Already he is an editor. A short time ago he founded a paper, the Boys' Pen, which has a growing circulation among Fascist youths.

He is getting a sound background of Fascist political thought and will undoubtedly hold a governmental post when he grows older.

Carving Political Career.

Another example is the career of Galeazzo Ciano, son of the minister of communications and son-in-law of Mussolini. While not yet holding a portfolio, he is carving a career in his government's service. He has chosen diplomacy and is at present stationed at Shanghai.

Other cases of sons following their fathers into the government are somewhat harder to find, since most of Mussolini's aids are young men, well on the sunny side of 50, and their sons, if they have them, are still in the romper stage.

Berlin Dancers Halt as Fiddler Collects His Pay

BERLIN.—(AP)—The wild wave of dancing that swept Germany after the war, reaching its crest about the time one dollar could buy four trillion marks, has now sunk to a ripple.

Just a few months ago there still was life in the old cry "On with the dance!" But 1931 really is "economy year" in Germany, and millions of people, instead of dancing, are paying the fiddler.

Ballrooms seldom are packed any more, and the frothier side of the nation's amusement industry has wilted under the high luxury taxes like a paper flower in the rain.

Latest among the pleasure palaces to go into bankruptcy is the Palais de Danse, rendezvous of Berlin's snobbiest set before war.

After the revolution it became an expensive place of relaxation for any one who had the money, and even after few Germans felt they could afford to visit it tourist gold from other lands kept it going. But now that isn't enough to pay the overhead.

And there are other flashy establishments of the sort that look empty enough these nights to suggest that they, too, will have to turn off the glittering lights and fire the jazz orchestra.

Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or aged complexion is one fair to look upon? Nature causes abnormal skin to peel off in tiny, flour-like particles, a little each day, renewing the complexion of youth naturally, but there comes a time when this skin shedding slows up. Worry, overwork, illness, inactivity are reasons that cause the face to be blotchy, discolored, pimply and old looking. The thing to do, if you wish to look your prettiest at all times, is to assist nature in the process of absorption by using pure Mercolized Wax. Get an ounce at any drug store or beauty counter and use as directed. It gently but surely peels away the outer scarf skin, removing freckles, pimples, blackheads or a muddy complexion. The underneath skin, now in evidence, is clear, pink, fresh and velvety, and the entire face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty. To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines we recommend a face lotion made of: One ounce powdered saxolite and one-half pint witch hazel.

Japanese Wives Arrange Code for Husbands

Urge Quieter Manipulation of Chopsticks.

TOKIO. — (AP) — Japanese women have grown weary of the old, old custom of "yesing" their men folk all day long. In the new order of affairs the formerly demure, kimono clad wife has become so bold that she even dares to give her husband advice now and then.

The Fujokai or Women's World, in its stand for more rights for the housewife, has compiled a code of laws for husbands, covering jealousy, finance, home administration, health clothing, food, children, and other subjects.

Some of the "don'ts" for husbands, as arranged by the women staff members of the Fujokai, follow:

"Don't be a killjoy all your life. Crack a joke once in a while, even if it isn't very funny. Why confine your wisecracks to your friends?

Suggested Attentions.

"Don't crack your chopsticks against the bowl while eating. You're apt to get on your wife's nerves.

"Don't ignore her wishes. If she suggests that you go together to a department store, go, even though you can think of nothing quite so boring. On the way back, stop for something to eat or drink. She'll like that.

"No matter how much you love your wife, give her a vacation from you now and then. Never loaf about the house all day, you may be in the way.

"If she happens to look pretty, don't forget to tell her so. If she isn't particularly pretty, tell her so anyhow. It won't hurt you.

* *

Celebration for Birthdays.

"Don't forget her birthday. Stage a little celebration of it each year.

"Don't reprimand her bitterly when she has simply forgotten to sew a missing button on your clothes. She'll snap back at you and then something is bound to happen.

"Never lie to your wife. You mustn't get her in the habit of disbelieving you. Some day you may really want her to believe you.

"Remember that your wife has a right to an opinion, too. Of course, it may be wrong, but it's hers anyhow."

Soviet and British Build Brisk Trade Around Galoshes

MOSCOW.—(AP)—Galoshes, 42,500,000 pair of them, are on this year's program of the soviet rubber trust. The schedule also calls for 800,000 automobile tires and tubes.

The raw rubber for these products will come from English concerns, but the government is experimenting with rubber plantations in the southern Caucasus near Batum, and hopes some day to be independent of outside sources.

Until then the British will be the winner in both the import and export part of the trade. While every one in Russia seems to have a pair of galoshes, and they are absolute necessities in this climate, large quantities are exported.

In fact Russian galoshes sell in England for about $2.50 a pair whereas this winter at the shop here where only foreigners may trade, the price was around $10.

France Votes $100,000 to Build Foch's Tomb

PARIS.—(AP)—A credit of $100,000 has been voted for a tomb for Marshal Foch, who led the allies to victory in the world war.

The tomb will be in the Invalides, close to the resting place of Napoleon. It will measure 12 feet in height and will take two years to complete.

ARMCHAIR PLAYGOER

By Fanny Butcher.

LONDON has been excited about a dramatization of "Dark Hester," Anne Douglas Sedgwick's novel of 1929. It was done by Walter Ferris, who did the final adaptation of "Death Takes a Holiday," which, by the way, is having a revival in New York. The revival started last Monday night.

ANNE DOUGLAS SEDGWICK.

You may read the acting version of the Casella play, if you missed it when it played here, or if you want to live over that excellent second act. The last act and the first act read less well than they play. The second has a good deal of the thrill of the action in its printed word.

But to come back to "Dark Hester." The acting version isn't promised for publication, but the novel is waiting for every one. It is a study of the clash of two temperaments, that of the mother and the wife of a young man. The mother is "Victorian," as the wife calls her, only in the sense that she has certain delicacies of thought, manner and ideals which are completely alien to the wife who, as the mother thinks her, is hard, cold, often bitter, "dark," as her mother-in-law believes her to be.

They are as opposite in temperament as any two women could possibly be, and yet neither one is really right about the other. The mother worked to support her son, was independent in days when independence for women was almost a career in itself. Her daughter-in-law considers her tact and her gentleness weakness, and fails to see the strength which made her face a difficult life.

The daughter-in-law, "Dark Hester," has an honesty of outlook, a fairness in dealing with her husband and her child and her life which, to the older woman, is incomprehensibly cold. There you are.

The novel would have been a better novel if the author hadn't made her readers feel all along that she was being so fair with her characters that she was determined her readers should learn the lesson that there would be less misery in the world if people tried harder to understand one another.

As a record of a classic struggle between the two women who love a man it is memorable. The play has not elicited unqualified praise, although two scenes—one in which the mother and the son quarrel about the wife, and one in which the wife says good-by to the man who had once been her lover, were hailed as great emotional drama.

Australia Changes Code.

CANBERRA. — (AP) — Because confidential cable messages between Prime Minister Scullin, when he was in London, and members of his ministry in Australia mysteriously found their way into the newspapers Australia's cable code has been changed.

THE PENALTY of GRAY HAIR

Gray hair—age—slipping. All these unpleasant ideas seem to go together. Yet, it is not at all necessary. Gray Hair often comes to a young head and people who have it are neither old nor incapable. But how often you hear people say, "Why, she has gray hair!" and—she is on the shelf.

This penalty need no longer handicap the woman who uses Canute Water. This is a clear, spring-like water, of wonderful properties which actually restore hair to its original girlhood color. No complicated "color plan"; no danger of getting brunette shade when your hair is blonde. Not only the one king but the one bottle is enough. It really is surprisingly what successful, youthifying results it gives.

Apply Canute Water yourself, in the privacy of your own home. Many women in town are doing the same thing; they simply do not mention it. You need not mention it either. Just buy a bottle from any good druggist—and get rid of the "age-penalty" in gray hair. Canute Water is so safe, so scientific and sure that your dealer knows it will satisfy you; if not, he will refund your money. Sold and recommended by Boston Store, The Fair, Owl or Walgreen's, or your own druggist. — The Canute Co., Milwaukee, Wis.—Adv.

VOICE OF THE FAN

If you would like your letters printed in this column please write on ONE side of the paper ONLY. If you want a personal answer send stamped, self-addressed envelope—PLEASE.

Wastes No Money on Garbo.

Dear Mae Tinée: Wouldn't this world be a sad place instead of the funny one it is, if we all liked the same things? Go on, Mae, darlin', love your Garbo in peace and pat her back all you want to, I like you, love your reviews and your style, but I do not like Garbo or her so-called style which, to me, is nothing but an affected, insincere pose, and I know right well that you don't expect me to swallow her as art just because you like her.

She bored me enough in "A Woman of Affairs" to last my whole life. So many years ago that was, yet, I have never spent a cent to see her since and never will. Of course, I cannot always escape the advance shots advertising the coming of another of her bromides, so I have heard her supposed to be ravishing voice. It falls as raucously on my pink ears as that of a New York stevedore cussing the far away greasers who inadvertently shipped a big tarantula in the bunch of bananas he's unloading. What? You've never heard one? Well, you've heard a chorus of peddlers yell "strawberries" or "ice" up and down Chicago alleys, haven't you? Garbo's voice is exactly that melodious [?] to me.

So, "Disgusted Reader" who plays at hating you, and I, who sincerely admire you and dote on the reviews he despises, have a good deal in common after all. Only, I'm willing that those who like Garbo, rave and spend their four bits over her all they please. That, to my notion, is their business, and I wouldn't waste good postage to tell her I wish M. G. M. would tie a can to her posing. Life's too short to get that hot and bothered over things not directly my business.

C. W.

Editor's note: You are a broad woman, I see [I mean, mentally].

Still the Mythical Kingdom.

Dear Miss Tinée: In your review of "The Front Page" I noticed that you wrote, "In other cities and in the sticks the background is still unhesitatingly mentioned as the 'Windy City.'" This town I am temporarily located in probably comes under the category of "the sticks," but when "The Front Page" was shown here the mythical kingdom note was shown with it and Chicago was not mentioned.

I should like to comment on Mrs. M. L. S.'s letter. In my opinion (contrary to hers) you do not criticize pictures harshly enough. What the movies in general need more than anything else is more analytical, challenging criticism. Good pictures and good actors can bear it—the other ones deserve no better. Sincerely.

Editor's note: Thanks for the information and your interest in general.

Synopsis for German Talkies.

My dear Miss Tinée: German talkies seem to be becoming quite the thing, yet you regret that you do not understand them. Why don't you use your influence to have the theaters prefix a synopsis of the whole thing or of each part?

Yours truly, M. J. FINK.

Editor's note: When I get some, I will.

Valentino's Successor.

Mae Dear: Too bad you are not still using stars. You could pick out a cute little star for your write up about "Daybreak." Why not use hammers and give Ramon about ten? Do not forget he might go to a monastery, and he aspires to Valentino's crown. He has all the late lamented Italian had—plus a delightful sense of humor. He can talk and sing—well, maybe not as well as some of our grand opera boys, but he seems to please a few of us ordinary beings. And really, Mae, I think he is just as good looking.

ONE OF YOUR EX-ADMIRERS.

[Until I was razzed because I thought you could "critic."]

Editor's note: Who dared to razz you? Mama 'pank!

How the Cards Are Stacked.

Dear Miss Tinée: I know that you get a pleasant kick out of publishing the courteous appeal of the mother who signs herself "Mrs. M. L. S." for more decent pictures that can be viewed by children, and then turning the page over and praising a filthy gangster picture and branding as "smart" the work of the director in weaving into the film things that have no place in any picture which you merely term as "coarseness."

If Mrs. M. L. S. knew how the cards are stacked against her, she would waste no time in appealing to you for aid in the renovation of the movie industry. Mrs. M. L. S. does not know that the "review" published in THE TRIBUNE is the best advertising that any picture can get in Chicago and that no important movie house would permit you to give an unfavorable write up of a picture they have booked.

It perhaps never occurred to Mrs. M. L. S. that a drink of gin and a twenty dollar note would bring praise through the "review" column of any picture and that some of them are actually written by the press agents of "stars" and advertising agents of the theater. Very respectfully.

NOT A "FAN"

Editor's Note: Are you proud of yourself?

Dear Mae: If it must be "on one side of the paper only"—here goes. Give M. T. a pat on the back for "Them's my sentiments," too, about "Cimarron." I've seen it three times, and I felt the same thrill pass through me each time as it unfolded before my eyes.

It is THE picture of the year—of the ages. Richard Dix's performance will live in my mind all the rest of my life. I can never forget Yancey Cravat. I was so blinded by tears the first time I saw "Cimarron" that I never really saw him die.

I would call him "the Finest Actor on the Screen Today."

ELEANOR CLARK.

Editor's Note: Wonder if Richard's ears are burning!

well till the time comes to shoo it out into the open.

Photography and sound are commendable and you get the illusion of traveling underground. I read somewhere that the subway stations aren't the lifelike reproductions they might be, but I don't know, being an infrequent visitor to New York. They suited me, all right.

"The Subway Express" isn't one of the world's greatest mystery thrillers, but it is passing fair, and ISN'T a gangster picture. It'll keep you guessing—that's a cinch.

Banner Musical Show.

With last Thursday's performance, "Fine and Dandy," at the Erlanger theater, reached the 300 mark. The show opened at the Colonial theater, Boston, on Sept. 1, 1930, and after two weeks in that city played in New York until May 2 of this year. At the time of its departure from Broadway it was the longest run musical show on the street. Over this long period "Fine and Dandy" has averaged a weekly business slightly in excess of $30,000, which is an undisputed record for the current theatrical season. "Three's a Crowd," its nearest competitor, will end its New York run on June 6, about a dozen performances short of the "Fine and Dandy" record.

BETTINA HALL.

AILEEN PRINGLE.

SPENCER TRACY and UNA MERKEL.

RICARDO CORTEZ and LORETTA YOUNG.

THERE are three new theatrical productions for the week in Chicago: "He," with Tom Powers, opening at the Illinois tomorrow night; "Meet My Sister," with Bettina Hall, which opened at the Grand last night; and "The Rap," with Helen Tenney, opening at the Studebaker Saturday night.

Pulitzer Prize Play Provokes Hot Argument

"Alison's House" Is Bad Choice, Critics Assert.

By Charles Collins.

THIS is the time of year when almost every dramatic critic and stage connoisseur rises from his cultural throne to utter a vigorous protest against the Pulitzer prize award. Last season was an exception to the rule—every one agreed that "The Green Pastures" deserved the blue ribbon and the cash honorarium. The merry Maytime of 1931, however, has revived the grand old custom of booing the umpires, and Susan Glaspell's "Alison House," recently presented as the best play of the season from the point of view of the committee on Pulitzer awards, is receiving a hearty razzing.

The New York critics, in particular, wish it thoroughly understood that "Alison's House" is not the people's choice. They are not in agreement upon the better play that should have received the honor, but their ex post facto nominations include "Green Grow the Lilacs," "Elizabeth the Queen," "Tomorrow and Tomorrow," "Five Star Final," and "Once in a Lifetime." A voice in the wilderness has even been heard crying out loud in favor of Channing Pollock's "The House Beautiful," but since it does not come from a member of the dramatic critics' union it may be disregarded.

Voice of the Times.

J. Brooks Atkinson of the New York Times, sound writer and sympathetic observer of the American stage, may be quoted on the subject. He saw virtues in "Alison's House" that his colleagues missed when the first nighters made their hegira from Broadway to Fourteenth street to report upon Eva Le Gallienne's staging of Miss Glaspell's drama; but he bluntly refuses to grant the work a Pulitzer franchise. He says:

"Miss Glaspell is one of our most gifted writers, particularly of novels, and 'Alison's House' is a play with a respectable theme. But to select it as the best play of the season is to show how meagerly the committee esteems the current American drama and the annual prize it helps bestow. Every few years this committee insists upon publishing its ignorance. . . .

"It is a play of flat statements—of assertions, of sentimentally literary flourishes and of perfunctory characterizations. No matter how earnestly the characters talk, in a strangely stereotyped prose, the image of Alison never appears for an instant . . . Everything that might be conceivably dramatic in the narrative is consistently crowded off the stage, so that it never disturbs the rigid dullness of the spoken word.

"Prize committees are always unpopular and under suspicion; all cultural authority is accepted on sufferance. But sometimes, as in the case of 'Alison's House,' the drama committee for the Pulitzer prize goes out of its way to make its glory hollow."

Reading the Play.

All of which has piqued my curiosity and stimulated my zeal for research. "Alison's House" will not be a matter of playgoing attention in this region until next season, when it will figure on the subscription program of the Dramatic league; but I said to myself, "This affair seems to be an atrocity that should be investigated without delay." So I settled down to read "Alison's House," after frugally borrowing Fanny Butcher's copy of the printed text.

Strangely enough, I enjoyed the experience. The chore I had expected turned out to be an hour of recreation. I liked "Alison's House." I found its theme interesting; its atmosphere friendly; its characters persuasively American; its story quietly stirring. It may easily be a play for reading rather than for acting, for it is gray and demure of tone, and its scenes are not high-lighted with action. Still, I found pleasure in "Alison's House" under the lamp. What I think about it as revealed before the footlights will be another story, and I insist that nothing I have said as a play reader shall be held against me when I sit in judgment upon this bone of contention as a first nighter.

Lares and Penates.

I found in "Alison's House," among other things, a feeling for American family life that is rare in the theater. In most plays kinship between the characters is merely an assumption of the author and a line of type upon the program. It is a matter of form, and the audience is expected to take the blood-relationship, home lead and tribal spirit for granted. In "Alison's House," however, this elusive quality is caught and communicated without waste of dialogue. I call it no slight achievement. It brings Miss Glaspell, the American, into association with Tchekhoff, the Russian, a master magician for the evocation of domestic moods and background.

This play, as nearly every one has been told, relates to the discovery, many years after her death, that a New England spinster and recluse named Emily Dickinson was a poet who had left important, strikingly original contributions to American letters. She had lived as an unknown, unrelated contemporary of the literary galaxy of the nineteenth century, and she came out of that old-fashioned past to astound the radicals of modernism. It is a famous story among bookish folk, and Miss Glaspell has followed it closely, changing the name of Emily Dickinson to Alison Stanhope, and the environment from Amherst, Mass., to the Iowa shore of the Mississippi.

"Unseen" Aunts.

The denouncers of the Pulitzer award are inclined to argue that the appeal of "Alison's House" is predicated upon one's familiarity with the literary story of Emily Dickinson. I prefer, however, to regard the unseen

Critic Writes a Last Tribute to David Belasco

Master Showman Was Shy at Heart.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—David Belasco would have approved a visualization of his own death and the ceremonies attending it, I think. It was, without stress being placed on making it so, sufficiently theatrical to have pleased the master showman to whom all life was a show.

He might have added the item of lying in state, though I doubt it. David had failed greatly, the last several weeks. He was white and drawn and, being a proud man, I doubt if he would have approved the idea of his cold corpse being stared at by a curious multitude.

He had a sense of dignity. He was a sensitive soul, really, and rather shy, though his showman's impulse overcame both these characteristics as frequently as it gave way to them. People said he was an old cheater when he backed away from curtain calls and pulled his forelock. They said it was quite noticeable that he was always there, in the wings, waiting to be dragged on to the stage by one of his new made stars or to split the honors with a Warfield or a Carter, a Starr, or an Ulric.

This is true. He was a showman. He never denied that. He knew, none knew better than he, the value of publicity. He could absorb salutes as greedily as any be-medaled general in the National Guard. But the actual doing of the thing that would gain him the publicity he wanted and the applause for which he hungered; the physical transference of himself to the front of the procession or out upon a stage to face a grinning, applauding audience was not easy for him.

Not Without Enemies.

Much of the talk of the week, naturally, has been about Belasco and his way. He was not without enemies in the sense that many people distrusted him and many accused him of being the author of certain of their misfortunes—actors he had fired, or hired at low salaries; playwrights whose royalties he had cut into deeply after helping them rewrite their scripts; ambitious players to whom he had, they say, given his word as to future preferment and then forgotten.

For a few days kindly things were said, and eloquent tributes paid, as is the old human custom. But once the wasted body was laid in the tomb, out popped tributes with a reverse English. Which is natural. Any man of many contacts with sensitive, vain, child minded people is bound to make such enemies.

A good many have asked me about his affectation of wearing clerical garb. What was that but a kind of cheap showmanship, they have asked. And what was the cause for it?

I don't know. I suspect it could be traced, first, to a sort of infant fixation. A part of his impressionable youth was spent in study with a Catholic priest, Father MacGuire of Victoria, B. C., where, incidentally, David made his first appearances on the stage as the child in "Pizzaro" and again as the child in "Metamora."

He may have admired the good father so much that he copied his choker, or it may be that his love of the theatrical prompted his trying the priest's garb. Finding that it both became him and attracted attention, he probably clung to it as a sort of trademark—as Louis Mann clung to the huge, batwing collars, and as Dan-

Army Planes Keep Newsreel Cameras Busy

And Give Film Producers Food for Thought.

By Tom Pettey.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—These "million dollar air thrillers" from Hollywood hereafter will be just so much celluloid to this movie goer. I have seen the real thing. Ten days with the army airmen—days filled with aircraft thrills—make shadow pictures seem futile things. More than 600 planes, fifteen million dollars' worth of fighting ships, roaring through the skies is a spectacle for the film makers to shoot at with their heaviest bank accounts.

The newsreel men, however, have profited greatly through the army's biggest air show. The "Battle of Dayton," the "Capture of Chicago" and the "Destruction of New York City" will flicker on many news screens for weeks to come. The air maneuvers have been field days for the newsreel men.

In Dayton, the concentration point for training for the two weeks of mimic war, movie sound trucks were parked deep in the flying field out past the farthest ship. No such pictures have ever been made, for nobody except the army has so many airplanes to play at war with.

Camera Planes Numerous.

The camera planes have become as much a part of battle formations as the fighting ships. In the next real war the movie machine is going to play an increasingly important part. Its eye never falters and out of the dark room after the "battle" comes the real story of what happened.

A camera man standing erect in the rear cockpit of a speeding biplane has become a familiar sight to those who followed this year's greatest air maneuvers. I talked to several of the picture men and obtained a story from each movie maker.

The best "shots" just happen, they say. One young English war captain, now a flying photographer, told me of two remarkable air pictures

High Schools' Chorus of 346 Will Give Concert Wednesday

By Edward Moore.

WHAT the Chicago high schools are doing in music will be set out in the form of a concert at Orchestra hall next Wednesday evening. A chorus of 346 picked from all the high schools of the city will sing, a selected high school orchestra will play, and Dr. J. Lewis Browne, director of music of the Chicago public schools, will conduct. Oscar W. Anderson will act as assistant conductor.

Dr. Browne has given time, thought, and erudition to the program. It is to be a historical program, beginning with some of the earliest music that has come down to us and ending with some of the present era. The first song, "Sirath Hayyam," is an ancient Sephardic melody, how old no one knows, but bearing a legendary theory that it was the song sung by Miriam and her companions in the biblical story. It will be sung in Hebrew.

A Greek work, the Hymn to Apollo, sung in ancient Greek, is one of the few works of its kind to have been deciphered from inscriptions in Greece. Its date of composition is placed about 278 B. C. It was discovered some forty years ago by the French Archæological school in Athens. From thence the old music goes to an Ambrosian chant of the fourth century in the first mode, a Gregorian chant of the eighth century in the eighth mode, and works by Palestrina and Cruger of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

The rest of the program will be modern—choruses by Franck, Gounod, and some Chicago composers and a few specimens of Americana. The orchestra will play Brahms' "Academic Festival" Overture and a movement from the Mozart Symphony in G minor. William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools, will make an address.

News of Ravinia Artists.

Most of the artists of the coming Ravinia season have been getting ready for the season by standing by, although they admit nationalities variously of the United States, Canada, Spain, Italy, Germany, Russia, France, Poland, Scandinavia, and Belgium. Giovanni Martinelli and Virgilio Lazzari are taking short vacations in Italy, Giuseppe Danise has gone to Switzerland to put his children in school there, Ina Bourskaya has returned to Russia for the first time since she left that mysterious land, Marek Windheim is in Poland, Louis Hasselmans is in France, and Julia Claussen is visiting her daughters in England.

But Lucrezia Bori prefers republican America to republican Spain—she has received decorations from the ex-royal family of the orders of Isabel la Catolica and Alfonso XII.—and Elisabeth Rethberg has remained on this side for the first spring in a number of years. Yvonne Gall has been singing in Europe this winter, but will soon be here. Others that have stayed here are Edward Johnson, Mario

Suspense Keeps You Guessing in This Thriller

Underground Railway Has Strange Murder.

"THE SUBWAY EXPRESS."

The subway train was speeding on,
As subway trains do do. (Yes, two "do's," copyreader.)
When some one murdered Tracy!
AND—the question then was—WHO?????

Produced by Columbia. Directed by Fred Newmeyer. Presented at the Palace theater.

THE CAST.

Killian	Jack Holt
Dale Tracy	Aileen Pringle
Kearney	Fred Kelsey
Tracy	Alan Roscoe
Bordon	Jason Robards
Stevens	Sidney Bracy
Mason	Selmer Jackson
Mr. Cotton	William Humphrey
Mrs. Cotton	Ethel Wales
Mrs. Mullins	Julianne Leighton
Mulvaney	James Goss
Prizefighter	Mason Williams

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

Who killed Mr. Tracy on the subway express, between two stations of the underground railway?

The train is full of passengers, any one of whom MIGHT be the murderer and most of whom probably aren't. It is up to Inspector Killian to solve the mystery.

Called to make an investigation, Killian puts every one through a process of questioning. For a long time his efforts to locate the killer are fruitless. Then—BING! Killian triumphant! With promotion undoubtedly flirting with him from the offing! [Here's ONE time when Mr. Jack Holt gets a break!]

The action of the picture takes place almost entirely in one car, with shots of stations along the tracks. The passengers conduct themselves and respond to the volley of questions fired at them in varied fashion. Fred Kelsey, as a bonehead cop, furnishes the low comedy—and they could have left him out for all of me—but Ethel Wales, Julianne Leighton, Mason Williams and others, provide real amusements.

A Polished Performance.

Mr. Holt, as usual, gives a polished performance. As Officer Killian, he is shrewd, determined, ungullible. Aileen Pringle [who has gone permanently blond, I'm afraid] does well the little she has to do. The same may be said for other members of the cast.

I won't spoil the story for you by giving leads re: the answer to its question, but I will say that the piece is quite suspenseful and hides its secret

The work on this issue of the paper constituted the final examination in an editing course at the school. Poinier was art director of the year book.

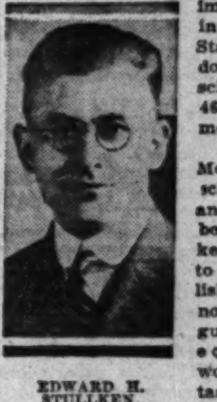
Calls Science to Help School Save Bad Boys

Montefiore Principal Blazes Trail.

By William Irvin.

A year and a half ago Edward H. Stulken inaugurated one of the first educational experiments of its kind in the United States in an abandoned elementary school building at 461 North Sangamon street.



EDWARD H. STULLKEN. [Russell Photo.]

It was the Montefiore special school for truant and incorrigible boys. Mr. Stulken had no model to follow in establishing the school, no program to guide him and no equipment to work with. The task given him by Superintendent William J. Bogan might have stumped a less determined and resourceful man, but to Mr. Stulken it was an opportunity to blaze a new way in the field of juvenile delinquency. The school was to be a departure from contemporary methods of attacking the problem, in that it would offer clinical facilities in connection with regular academic work.

Mr. Stulken had equipped himself for the task through a comprehensive study of education methods in the United States and Canada, undertaken at the request of the board of education and a citizens advisory committee of the board. He spent four months, traveled 12,000 miles, and visited 13 of the largest cities in this country and Canada in his investigation of all departments in the public schools relating to compulsory education, vocational guidance, child study, and special work.

Zeal and Decrepit Building.

On the basis of his preliminary work, the board and the advisory committee decided to establish a special school that would incorporate the most progressive and adaptable of the methods studied. Mr. Stulken was appointed principal.

But his status was something akin to that of the man without a country. He had no school, no teaching staff, no equipment, and no pupils. Nothing, in fact, but a decrepit hulk of a building abandoned as an elementary school and a zeal for the task ahead of him.

In looking back over the year and a half of the school's existence, during which a comprehensive program has been developed, a teaching and clinical staff organized, equipment assembled and more than 1,000 boys helped of Mr. Stulken's comment is that "like Topsy, the thing just grew."

"We've had to work things out as we went along, experimenting and testing every step of the way," he said. "The major problem, of course, has been to develop a satisfactory and adequate program, embracing courses of study that fit in with the needs of the boys for which the school was established.

"The process of experimentation is still going on and will continue, I suppose, indefinitely, but at least we have a fairly definite course charted. We try to meet our problems as they arise and nearly every boy represents an individual problem in himself. The school has more than justified itself as a result of the combined clinical and academic facilities. As it grows its program and facilities naturally will be expanded to meet the needs."

Boy Usually Stays Year.

More than 171 schools on the north and northwest sides of the city send boys to the Montefiore, which has facilities for handling 500 at one time. Their stay is usually for a year, if they exhibit no indications of hopeless incorrigibility during their first month there. Mr. Stulken turns the unmanageable ones over to the Juvenile court. Even then, Judge Mary M. Bartelme often gives them a second chance to make good at Montefiore. Otherwise, they are sent to the Chicago Parental school at 3600 Foster avenue.

No court action is involved in sending the boys to Montefiore and this alone, Mr. Stulken believes, is justification for the school. Court experience is unfortunate and is likely to work irreparable harm, in the opinion of this friend of boys. Only about 10 per cent of the boys who go to Montefiore have been in court, and of the 95 who appeared before Judge Bartelme during the last year 52 made good on their second chance at Montefiore.

"Every boy first gets an opportunity to make good at Montefiore," said Mr. Stulken. "And a majority of them make good. The clinical features here include a psychologist, psychiatrist, physician, nurse, dentist, and a remedial speech and remedial reading room. The dentist is furnished by the board of health.

Ten Days for Diagnosis.

A case history is worked out for every body who comes to the school, Mr. Stulken said. He is registered upon his arrival and then turned over to one of the social workers who, through interviewing the boy, obtains information upon which a complete case history is based. Next he goes to the receiving room where he is given a psychological examination, achievement tests, and examined for speech and reading defects.

He is assigned to the receiving room for about ten days. During that time information concerning his mental age, academic achievenemts, personality, disabality, mechanical ability, and intelligence quotient is obtained and used in determining into what group classification he shall be put. There are 17 different groups to which they can be assigned depending upon which one they seem best adapted to.

Facilities at Montefiore include a machine and metal shop, wood shop,

VOICE of the NORTHWEST SIDE

Charming Naperville to Celebrate Close of Its First Century

Naperville, planning for the celebration of its 100th anniversary early in June, has a rare opportunity to take stock of much that has been worth while in its past and preserving it in the life of the modern era. The town is not without its landmarks that speak of a pioneer period when sociability was perhaps at its highest peak. Early settlers were then obliged to struggle on a common basis. Without the exchange of genuine hospitality, life in the raw country would have been unbearable.

Progress brought its economic changes to Illinois communities. Social distinctions followed. The handshake did not disappear, but it became more perfunctory as inhabitants depended less upon their neighbors. Sophistication tended to develop restraint.

After a century of existence, during which Naperville has taken its place among Chicago's modern suburbs, public spirited residents feel the desire to look back over the years as a basis for planning the future. Scenic beauties that lured the founders down "by the old mill stream" find new appreciation in the eyes of the present generation possessed of privileges of which their forerunners never dreamed.

Modern Naperville, however, realizes that the old timers experienced a contentment and happiness which depended on something besides invention or material progress. Pageantry will feature the anniversary program, but old fashioned fellowship will be the keynote that will make the celebration delightful.

SAFETY WEEK.

Those who believe that the setting apart of special days or special weeks for this and that has been overdone should certainly have no objection to Safety week, just observed by the eight western suburbs forming the Western Gateways association. A study of statistics points to the necessity of motorists observing such a week fifty-two times a year.

With a safety lane located in the business section of La Grange, the Western Gateways association has offered an opportunity for free testing of mechanical equipment of motor cars. Many drivers discovered to their surprise that brakes, lights, wheel alignment, steering apparatus, and rear view mirrors were not all that they should be. Constant increase in the number of automobiles on the highways demands perfect performance at critical moments if accidents are to be avoided.

It speaks well for the attitude of motorists that the safety lane in La Grange was a busy place throughout last week. This mechanical checkup, supplemented with safety talks in the churches and schools, served to make the community danger conscious. A survey of accidents fixes the blame where it belongs. The speeder and the road hog are still abroad. Excuses and regrets continue to offer little solace to those who are maimed for life.

The Western Gateways association, with its intensive Safety week program has demonstrated that it is not only interested in better highways, but in the education of motorists who use them.

AWARDS AS INSPIRATION.

As commencement time approaches various west side high schools recognize student achievements of many kinds. Those who received the awards as inspiration to further progress rather than as an end to effort are to be congratulated for victories thus achieved early in their careers.

Said Edmund Burke: "God has implanted in man a sense of ambition and a satisfaction arising from the contemplation of his excelling his fellows in something deemed valuable among them." It is best that ambition reveal itself in youth, for it is far less apt to stir the pulses when bodily energy begins to wane and the problems of existence interfere. Statistics do not show that the honor student always continues to pass his fellows in later life. There are legends of those who, after giving little promise in the school room, have turned out to be geniuses. Teachers of long experience, however, have had few surprises of this kind. That ambition sometimes does flicker out along the way is one of life's tragedies, but it is no cause for disparagement of commencement honors won at a time when such distinctions carry keenest pleasure.

Every school graduate has the satisfaction of knowing that persistence has resulted in reaching a first set goal of importance. All graduates cannot be honor students, but, in finishing a task begun, all of them have demonstrated a fiber of character essential to success.

THE NEIGHBORHOOD'S HEROES.

The fact that Chicago is a city of neighborhoods, each with its own patriotic organizations, means much toward the observance of Memorial day in a manner that makes the remembrance of the soldier dead definite and doubly impressive.

Thanks to the posts of the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the United Spanish War Veterans, and the Grand Army of the Republic, the graves of Chicago's soldier dead have been carefully marked. Thus wreaths are placed not only in memory of comrades in arms but of former neighbors and personal acquaintances. In death, as in life, the division of the great city into many communities has overcome that lack of human sympathy which might otherwise caharacterize the metropolis with its millions.

Certainly, in fixing the date for Memorial day, the founders could not have chosen better so far as the Chicago setting is concerned. Between the city and many of the cemeteries lie forest preserves which, as if conscious of their part in the floral remembrance, just now present a riot of color in blossoms.

The passing of years finds no passing of the Chicago spirit to pause in reverence for its soldier dead. Memorial day brings out a fine expression of the great city's soul.

Grace Bible Class to Entertain 100 Orphans

The adult Bible class of Grace Evangelical Community church, Kimball and Wrightwood avenues, will give an entertainment this afternoon for 100 children from the Illinois Home Finding society, 4840 Byron street. A program of readings and musical selections will be given.

The service at the cannon will consist of a brief address by Commander George Schelkopf, songs by the Portage Park school chorus and the firing of a salute by a uniformed squad of post members.

In parade formation, headed by the post's junior drum and bugle corps, the post will then proceed to Mount Olive cemetery where the program will be continued at the soldiers' plot in the west section.

The speaker will be Ninian H. Welch, master in chancery of the Superior court.

A Memorial day parade and exercises will be conducted at La Follette Memorial building, Laramie and Hirsch streets, Austin, at 10 o'clock Saturday morning. The parade will form at Merrick park at 8:45 o'clock. If the day is fair, exercises will be held out of doors; otherwise, in the auditorium of the La Follette building.

Brig. Gen. John V. Clinnin will be the principal speaker. Six remaining members of Kilpatrick post, No. 276, G. A. R., will be given seats on the platform. Invitations have been extended to patriotic, civic, and service club groups of Austin to participate in the observance.

Oak Park post, No. 15, will hold its seventh annual Memorial Shrine service at 11:45 o'clock Saturday morning at Forest Home cemetery. Here "row on row," white crosses present an exact reproduction of an original A. E. F. cemetery overseas. Each cross bears the name, rank and organization of one of the 57 men from Oak Park or River Forest who died in service during the world war.

The address at this year's service will be given by Walter C. Rattray, commander of Oak Park post; O. Allen Postlewait will call the "roll of honor"; prayer will be offered by the Rev. Advertising Men's post, No. 38, will hold Memorial day exercises at Sauganash community center at 9:30 o'clock Saturday. The Rev. William J. Stephenson, C. S. V., chaplain of the Advertising Men's post and a veteran of two wars, will be the celebrant of a solemn requiem field mass. The Rev. F. A. Ryan, pastor of Sauganash, will be deacon of the mass and will preach the sermon. The Rev. F. J. Dolan will be subdeacon. The Rev. Mathew Canning will be master of ceremonies.

North Town post, under the command of H. Soule, with drum corps and rifle squad, will furnish the guard of honor and other military features of the field mass.

West End post, No. 2004, Veterans of Foreign Wars, will hold an open charter night meeting at 8 p. m., June 5, at Chopin park fieldhouse, Long avenue and Roscoe street. All ex-service men and their families are invited to attend. Officers of West End post are: Joseph Hence, commander; William Kraleski, senior vice commander; F. P. Fox, quartermaster; M. C. Dillon, adjutant; Pat J. O'Donnell, chaplain, and P. Stobbe, officer of the day.

Larry Fenlon, county commander, will speak and the girls' choir of St. Catherine High school will sing at the memorial service of James G. Brophy post at the soldiers' and sailors' mounment, Laramie avenue and Washington boulevard, at 10 o'clock Saturday. The Rev. F. J. Ledwig, post chaplain, will celebrate a memorial mass.

Memorial services for 52 members of the sixth district association, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, who died in the world war, will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon in the auditorium of Austin Methodist Episcopal church, 530 North Central avenue. The committee in charge includes Andrew Olson, Joseph Knudson, J. W. Anderson, George H. McMurray, and M. Froehlich. The Rev. D. Klontz, pastor of the Austin church, will officiate. J. Paul Kuhn, of Batavia, past grand master of Illinois lodge, will be the speaker.

Details of the annual reunion of marines in Chicago on June 6, at the Auditorium hotel, were discussed on Monday evening by Marine post. C. D. Devere, commander, with a committee, has arranged a number of programs and entertainment for the visiting veterans and invitations have been extended to all marines, whether members of veterans' organizations or not, to attend the affair. More than 500 reservations have been made by W. D. Scheuber, 29 West Jackson boulevard.

Next Sunday will be American Legion Aviation day at Curtiss-Wright airport, Glenview. The show will be held under the joint auspices of Evanston post, No. 42, W. C. Bechtold, commander, and Niles Township post, No. 134, Irving F'lg, commander. Beginning at 11 a. m. and continuing throughout the afternoon, there will be a series of events similar to those that made Chicago's national air races of 1930 an epochal event in aviation history. Starting with a boys' model airplane contest, the program will include a ten mile race, parachute jumping contests, stunt flying, and balloon bursting contests. A glider exhibition will feature entries by the Chicago Glider club.

Invitations have been extended to men famed in the world of aviation and to prominent officials of the American Legion. The list includes Rear Admiral Byrd, Lieut. Jimmy Doolittle, Maj. Reed Landis, National Commander O'Neil, and State Commander Poorman. Nationally known stunt flyers will entertain the spectators, and army planes from the sixth corps area will take part.

Admission will be free, but the Legion posts sponsoring the program are conducting an advance sale of special tickets at $1 each, these tickets entitling the holder to parking, admission to the grand stand, and a credit of $1 on a $3 ride.

Logan Square Kiwanis to View Industrial Film

"Basic Industries of the United States," a talking picture, will be shown at a meeting of the Logan Square Kiwanis club Tuesday noon at the Norske club, 2741 North Kedzie avenue. On Tuesday, June 2, Thomas Patterson, American engineer recently returned from Russia, will relate experiences in Russia. Quin Ryan, director of W-G-N, THE TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, spoke at a meeting of the club Tuesday.

Neighborhood Theaters

A gang chief in the making is convincingly depicted in "Little Caesar," taken from the book of W. R. Burnett of the same name and now on the screen at the Harding. Edward G. Robinson, a newcomer but an extraordinarily good actor, gives an excellent portrayal of Caesar Rico Bandello, whose craving for power leads him from obscurity as a minor gang character to affluence and power in gangland. His ultimate fall is as dramatic as his rise and provides the film with much of its punch. Douglas Fairbanks Jr. and Glenda Farrell turn in excellent performances.

Also on the screen at the Harding are Wheeler and Woolsey in "Cracked Nuts," another one of those films that starts in the United States and ends in a mythical European country, where there are all kinds of complications having to do with a throne and royal love.

Double Bill at Gateway.

"Behind Office Doors," and "Charlie Chan Carries On," are on a double bill today at the Gateway. Mary Astor provides a pleasing eyeful in the former, which is a story about a girl and her employer, and of how she takes him in hand with surprising results. In the cast are Robert Ames and Ricardo Cortez. Mystery and intrigue vie for supremacy in "Charlie Chan Carries On," in which Warner Oland portrays the ingenious Chinese who helps solve the most baffling of murder mysteries.

Two Openings at Congress.

The Congres stoday offers a double bill on which are "Cracked Nuts" and "The Spy." In the latter film Neil Hamilton and Kay Johnson play a story of love and intrigue, in which spies are spies when they fall into the enemy's hands.

"The Conquering Horde."

"The Conquering Horde," in which Gary Cooper, Lily Damita and Ernest Torrence play stellar parts, is included in a double bill at both the Embassy and Logan theaters today. It's another picture of life in the raw in the pioneer west. The other half of the bill at the Embassy is "Not Exactly Gentlemen," also a western of lesser quality in which Victor McLaglen and Lew Cody are to be seen. Marion Davies in "It's a Wise Child," a comedy romance, shares honors with "The Conquering Horde," at the Logan.

39TH WARD BODY ASKS BUILDING OF FIRE STATION

The 39th Ward Federation of Improvement clubs will seek passage by the city council of an appropriation to construct a double fire department truck and engine house at the intersection of Belmont and Lamon avenues. The ground recently was purchased by the city for the structure. The federation is also to seek transportation facilities on Laramie avenue from Grand avenue to Milwaukee avenue, according to Frank W. Schmidtke, president. Another objective of the federation is to make Diversey avenue a boulevard from Sheridan road to the city limits instead of Wrightwood avenue, as has been proposed.

CALLS SCIENCE TO HELP SCHOOL SAVE BAD BOYS

E. H. Stullken Blazes Trail at Montefiore.

art room, music room, a weaving and basketry room, gymnasium, and several academic rooms. Regular dental service is available to the boys, as are also the services of a physician and nurse.

The walls of the art room are lined with surprisingly good drawings by the boys, the motif of most of them being historical. In the machine and metal shop can be seen skillful machine work while in the basketry and weaving room particularly fine specimens of rug and basket weaving are on display.

"Some of these young chaps show surprising ability in the arts and in mechanical work," said Mr. Stullken.

"Most of them come from broken homes in what might be called deteriorated areas," he continued, "where there is something essential lacking in their environmental background. I should say that at least half of the boys here are sons of parents who have separated. In some cases one or both parents are dead; and in others, they both work."

The average age of the boys sent to Montefiore is 14 years, although some are as young as 10 and some as old as 17.

Chicago Teacher Since 1922.

Mr. Stullken has been in the Chicago public schools since 1922. His teaching career, however, dates back to 1916. Born in Edwardsville, Ill., and educated at Central Wesleyan college, Warrenton, Mo., with graduate work done at University of Illinois and the University of Chicago, where he received his master's degree, Mr. Stullken taught in Nashville, Mount Carmel, and Sullivan, Ill., before entering the Chicago school system.

His first assignment here was at Austin High school, where he taught physics and was supervisor of attendance and discipline. From there he went to the principalship of Longfellow school and then to Goethe school.

While at Goethe Superintendent Bogan selected Mr. Stullken to make a survey of educational methods throughout the country that resulted in the establishment of the Montefiore special school.

Only Such School with Clinic.

While there are seven similar special schools in various parts of the United States the Montefiore is the only one that has full clinical equipment in connection with its academic work, Mr. Stullken said.

The boys attend the school from 9 o'clock until 3:30 o'clock, and at least one-fifth of them are given free lunches every day.

The special school represents, in Mr. Stullken's opinion, a more progressive step in the solution of the problem of handling the truant and the incorrigible than does the institution that relies upon detention as its principal remedial measure. Even greater benefits will accrue from transferring some of the features of the special school to the regular elementary and high school.

Judge McGoorty to Speak to Scouts and Parents

The Boy Scout and Girl Scout troops of the Irving Park Baptist church, Irving Park boulevard and Kostner avenue, will sponsor a parents' night dinner at 6:30 o'clock Thursday evening at the church. Girl Scout troop 155, under the leadership of Miss E. Wood, and Boy Scout troop 881, led by William A. Ziezell, and troop 1881, under Arthur E. Gjertsen. Chief Justice McGoorty of the Criminal court will be the speaker and E. Walker Ropp, assistant Scout executive of north shore district, will be toastmaster.

Mayfair M. E. Men to Hold Special Service

HOLSTEIN LEADS PARK RACE FOR JAMES TROPHY

Award of Cup Will Be Made in December.

Holstein park recreation center, 2200 North Oakley avenue, is leading the annual race for the William R. James silver trophy. This announcement was made last week when the season of indoor activities in the west parks closed. Award of the cup will be made next December following the grading of the year's activities in all of the west park centers. Anthony DeJulio, Miss Frances Stewart and Avis Overfield are instructors at Holstein park.

"Mr. DeJulio, men's gymnasium instructor, is now in possession of the boys' division A banner, turned over to the park having accumulated the largest number of points at the end of each sport," said William J. H. Schultz, superintendent of small parks and playgrounds, yesterday. "Indoor baseball has just been completed, and preparations are now under way for outdoor sports which will begin with playground baseball, and continue with track and field meets, swimming meets, tennis tournaments, horseshoe pitching tournaments, soccer, touch football, and volley ball tournaments."

Holstein Leads Pulaski.

Miss Frances Stewart, woman's gymnasium instructor at Holstein park, and Avis Overfield, recreation instructor, have also captured the girls' division A banner and a recreation banner for this center. The grand total of points accumulated by Holstein in the three departments amounts to 1717.25, giving the park a lead of 301 points over Pulaski park for the cup.

Eckhart park holds one leg of the cup for having accumulated the largest number of points during 1930, the first time the cup was awarded. The park accumulating the largest number of points at the end of 1931 wins a leg on this trophy, and the park winning three legs in the trophy keeps it permanently.

Harrison Boosts Standing.

Mr. Schultz pointed out yesterday that Harrison park, 18th and Wood streets, has bettered its standing considerably since the west park board built a community fieldhouse with a gymnasium for boys and men and another for girls and women. Previously there were no facilities for practice indoors.

The playground baseball tournament for both boys and girls and men and women will be held in all the recreation centers on June 6. MOUNT PROSPECT STARTS CONTEST IN BEAUTIFYING

Site Acquired for Park in Business Center.

To make Mount Prospect a suburb of lawns, gardens, and parkways is the object of a lawn and garden contest started by the Mount Prospect Improvement association, according to G. A. Andresen, president of the association.

More than 50 residents of the suburb already have entered the contest, which will end in September, Mr. Andresen said. Paul Jones is chairman of the committee in charge of the contest, assisted by H. T. Gunderson, R. E. Gould, and M. J. Walsh.

Acquire Site for Park.

Parkways throughout the village will be beautified, Mr. Andresen said. The first step in this direction recently was taken by the village when it acquired for park purposes the land in the block in which the new Chicago and North Western station is located.

Landscaping of the area was completed last week. It will be maintained as a park space in the business district. It is situated on Northwest highway, between Emerson and Main streets. The project was carried out by the village in coöperation with the Mount Prospect Improvement association.

Station Ornaments Trade Area.

"The North Western station has been a distinct asset to the village since its completion, being a handsome structure that enhances the attractiveness of the business area," said Mr. Andresen. "Plans to establish the park area surrounding the station came about as a result of a desire to provide a worthy setting for the structure."

Plans to install new lights through the business district along Northwest highway are under consideration by the village, according to Herman Meyn, president of the suburb. There are lights at present only at intersections. The lights would extend from Elm street to Wille street.

Officers of the improvement association, in addition to Mr. Andresen, are L. G. Johnson, vice president; E. C. Bolton, secretary, and Wayman Lihtinen, treasurer.

Henry Hansen is director of the drum and bugle corps and A. L. Hupe director of the band. Oscar C. Johnson and Frank M. Kalteux are in charge of arrangements for the festival.

The program will be patriotic in character, being held in connection with Flag day, Miss Andersen said. One of the features will be the formation of a living flag by children of the district. Creation of the flag will be depicted by soloists representing Betsy Ross and George Washington.

The North Park District Tennis association opened its tournament play last Sunday. Six park district tennis clubs are represented in the association, which will continue a round robin of tennis matches in various parks each Sunday during the summer. The park winning the most matches will receive a trophy. Frank Dority of Kelvyn Park Tennis club, is president of the association.

The Riis Park golf course was opened last week, Miss Andersen announced. The horseshoe courts in various parks under supervision of the northwest park district also were opened. Horseshoe tournament matches will be held in the parks during the latter part of the summer.

WELLS SCHOOL PLANS CHANGED; SEEK NEW BIDS

Cermak Economies to Be Effected.

The board of education will readvertise for bids for the new Wells Junior High school, to be located at Ashland avenue and Augusta street, as a result of changes in the plans for the school by which several economies have been effected. The revised plans will be sent out for bids in about two weeks, according to Don C. Rogers, director of the building survey.

The proposed economies in the construction of the school were worked out following Mayor Cermak's request to the board of education to exercise greater economy in its expenditures. The changes were first made in the plans for the Wells because it is one of five new high schools upon which construction will be started shortly. Similar savings will be made in the construction of the other schools, Mr. Rogers said.

Extra Facilities Eliminated.

Reductions in cost have been effected in substituting less expensive materials and by the elimination of certain extra facilities, Mr. Rogers explained. Glazed brick will be used instead of tile, for instance, for the walls of the swimming pool and cement floors substituted for more elaborate or decorative types of flooring throughout the building. A proposed social room will be made into a wood shop, and what was to have been a corrective gymnasium will become instead a combined orchestra and band room. A band room and an orchestra room will be replaced by four classrooms, and two teachers' workrooms will become instead another classroom.

These changes will increase the pupil capacity of the school by 175, bringing the total to 2,653, Mr. Rogers said. This will make the cost approximately $700 per pupil, making it the least expensive junior high school built in Chicago. The cost per pupil of the Wright and Amundsen Junior High schools was $847, Mr. Rogers pointed out. Corrective gymnasiums will be eliminated from all schools built in the future and the size of the regular gymnasiums reduced, he said.

Highest Efficiency Rating.

The Wells school when built will have 61.4 of its total floor space given over to instructional use, giving it the highest efficiency rating in this respect of any junior high school in Chicago.

The first bids for the school were received by the board on March 17 and it was thought at that time that contracts could be let by April 15. The contracts, however, were held up pending the changes in plans. The original cost was estimated at $1,725,000.

Bogan Recommends Building.

A recommendation was made in an emergency report sent to the board Friday by Supt. William J. Bogan for the immediate construction of an elementary school building to replace the 19 portables that now serve as the Leyden School at 3458 Oketo avenue. The building is to be the same type as the Volta elementary school at Avers and Springfield avenues.

It will be adapted to community use, containing facilities making it suitable for community gatherings. A kitchen will be constructed adjoining the gymnasium in which hot lunches can be prepared and served to the children in the gymnasium at noon at a nominal cost.

The purpose of the course, as outlined by Allan R. Carpenter, educational director of the council, is to give both new and experienced scout leaders a general knowledge of the aims of the Boy Scout program.

The instruction is supplemented by series of short talks by Chicago scout officials. James Hiner, Jr., west side district scout executive, opened the course Wednesday evening. Mr. Carpenter will address the group this week. Leo Mielcarek and Edwin Erb are in charge.

CONBOY PLANS IMPROVEMENTS IN RIVER GROVE

Mayor Seeks Widening of Grand Ave.

Frank A. Conboy, newly installed president of River Grove, discussed plans last week for his administration. Among them are a number of improvements which he expects to have completed during his term of office.

Mr. Conboy has been a resident of the suburb for seven years. He was connected with the election commissioners' office for 12 years and the county treasurer's office for two. He is now engaged in the undertaking business at 4817 West Madison street.

"I expect to carry out all of my preëlection pledges and promises in the matter of improvements," said Mr. Conboy. "Several important projects now pending will be brought to completion and others undertaken as the needs of the village make necessary."

Water for Subdivision.

Among the projects being given immediate attention are plans for the installation of water facilities in a new subdivision which was annexed to the village about two years ago. Mr. Conboy has had a temporary water line installed until the regular mains are put in. Work will start on their installation as soon as the village can finance the work, he said.

Work now is also under way, at the instance of President Conboy, on the filling in of Grove street.

Plans Grand Avenue Project.

President Conboy has under consideration also plans for the widening and improvement of Grand avenue through the village. The street is the principal business thoroughfare. The improvement has been considered by former officials of the village, but President Conboy hopes to procure definite action on the project. Mr. Conboy indicated that he might call a conference with the village presidents of Elmwood Park and Franklin Park to discuss plans for the project. Grand avenue runs through the three suburbs, and it has been proposed to widen it from 18 to 40 feet.

Several paving and street lighting projects are also under consideration. Mr. Conboy is president of the board of local improvements of the village.

ROOSEVELT HIGH SENIORS TO HOLD PROM ON JUNE 12

Outstanding Graduates to Get Medals.

Seniors at Roosevelt High school were jubilant last week over the report that the class prom had received the approval of the faculty, and would be held on June 12 at the Edgewater Beach hotel. A minimum number of bids had been set by the faculty board, with the understanding that if that number of bids was not sold, no prom would be held. Early indications were that the minimum quota would not be reached, and there was some anxiety on the part of interested members of the class.

Missionary work was performed by the anxious members, with resulting conversions to the extent that the final count showed 275 bids sold. Instead of failing to hold the prom, the class will hold it on a larger scale and with a better orchestra than had originally been planned, according to Miss E. C. Moynihan, faculty advisor to the prom committee.

Class Motto Chosen.

Announcements for the commencement exercises have been chosen by the graduation committee. The class flower is to be the talisman tea rose, and the class colors will be coral and silver. "The Will to Do and the Soul to Dare" has been chosen as the class motto.

It has been decided that the outstanding boy and girl in the June graduating class will be awarded a gold medal sometime in the near future. The awards are offered by the Albany Park post of the American Legion. Points to be considered in making the award are courage, honor, service, leadership, and scholarship. A faculty committee is to make the selections.

Palmer Wins First.

Palmer school won first place in the Roosevelt district for its work in the recent cleanup campaign, it was announced last week. Fourteen schools were entered. Results were compiled and tabulated by the supervisory committees, consisting of Miss Shulamis Dorinson, chairman; Harold Gersen, and Milton Ram, from Roosevelt; and Marion Murck, chairman; Warren Soltenburger, and Miss Beatrice Fox, from the Von Steuben Junior High school.

The Palmer school was highest with 29 points, while the Budlong school was second with 26. Third place went to the Bateman school with 21 points, and three schools, the Cleveland, Mayfair, and Peterson schools each had 19 points to tie for fourth place.

Bundesen, Amos 'n' Andy [Correll and Gosden], and Jane Addams. Most of the writers sent letters of thanks for the honor of being in the collection, and some of them sent photographs. Clifton Williams, a Milwaukee lawyer, draws a face with the letters in his signature. Gray Wolf, chief of the Indian reservation at Indian City, Kas., inscribed an Indian sign and wigwam below his name. Winnie Winkle and Orphan Annie, features of THE TRIBUNE's comic strips, speak greetings from autographed drawings by Branner and Harold Gray, the respective creators of the strips.

LANE TECH NINE TO MEET SHAW OF CLEVELAND

Intercity Champs Will Play 2 Games.

Lane Technical High school will play an intercity championship baseball game with Shaw High school of Cleveland, O., at 3 o'clock Saturday, Memorial day, at Wrigley field. This is the first intercity game that Lane has scheduled since playing New York for an intercity championship several years ago. It will be the first of a two game series, the second game of which is to be played on June 5 at Cleveland, in the American league ball park.

The Shaw High school diamond dusters will arrive in Chicago on Thursday before the big game and will be met at the train by the Lane Tech band, which recently won second place in the city band contest. From the station they will go to the city hall, where they will be presented to Mayor Cermak and Supt. William J. Bogan.

After meeting public officials they will proceed to their hotel. An elaborate sightseeing tour, including a trip to the Tribune Tower, has been arranged for the visitors.

Ceremonies at the Cubs' park on Memorial day will include a flag raising by the Lane Tech R. O. T. C. and band. The game is to be substituted for the field day that Lane puts on every two years, and will determine the intercity championship.

A silver trophy is to be given to the winner of each game, so that in the event the series is split each team will have a memorial of the game it won.

The home and home series was arranged with a view to eliminating advantage of the home team from the decision of the series.

MILWAUKEE AVE. TRAFFIC RELIEF A STEP NEARER

Council Subcommittee to Study Reform.

Milwaukee avenue traffic reform came a step closer to realization on Tuesday morning when the city council committee on traffic regulation and public safety voted to appoint a subcommittee to investigate the proposed plan of relieving congestion at the street intersections by prohibiting parking within specified distances ranging from 50 to 150 feet of the corners.

The sub-committee consists of Ald. Thomas H. Keane [34th], chairman, Ald. J. B. Rostenkowski, [33d], Ald. F. H. Konkowski [31st], Ald. Joseph B. Ross [40th], Ald. James C. Moreland [41st], Ald. Walter J. Orlikoski [30th], and Ald. Frank H. Landmeser [38th], representing the wards through which Milwaukee avenue passes. Subcommittee hearings are expected to commence this week.

The reason for the appointment of a subcommittee on the plan was the entire difference of the plan from anything now being tried out by the city.

Bowler Introduces Measure.

The ordinance is the result of data collected for several years and was introduced by Thomas F. Bowler, now president of the sanitary board, who was then alderman of the 41st ward. The survey on which the ordinance is based involved counting the customers entering Milwaukee avenue stores in special and in representative blocks, and asking each customer what means he had used in getting to the store. It also involved the collection of data regarding what percentage of the parking space on side streets is utilized by cars from outside the neighborhood.

The data was collected with the assistance of Leslie Sorenson, city traffic engineer, and was prepared by Charles V. Falkenberg, president of the Logan Square Business Men's association; Charles H. Stevens, president of the Milwaukee-Armitage-Western Business Men's association, and Dr. Henry J. Wieland, president of the Northwest Federation of Commerce.

Mr. Falkenberg, Mr. Stevens, and Mr. Wieland were among those present at the hearings on Tuesday, as were also C. C. Muth, president of the Milwaukee-Montrose Business Men's association; Jacob W. Molay, president of the Jefferson Park Business Men's association, and John R. O'Reilly.

Provisions of Bill Vary.

The provisions of the ordinance vary according to the amount of traffic shown by the survey to be passing each intersection.

At some intersections, according to the plan now being weighed by the subcommittee, no parking would be allowed for one street car length, on the near side of the street, and at others the parking would be forbidden for two or three street car lengths from the intersection. At intersections where the street roadway is less than 44 feet wide, it would be widened at the "no parking" zone by one, two three, or four feet, according to whatever is necessary to permit automobiles to pass around the street car loading zones which would be established there.

In no case, however, would the sidewalks be narrowed to less than 10 feet.

Expect to End Jams.

Sponsors of the plan believe that it would eliminate traffic jams which now occur because the through traffic on Milwaukee avenue is held up for the unloading of street cars. Traffic would continue to move until the lights change, under the new plan.

If the ordinance is passed by the traffic committee, it will have to be further considered by the council committee on judiciary and special assessments, inasmuch as the proposed curb cuttings would have to be done by the board of local improvements by special assessment. At the hearings Tuesday it was suggested that the new traction company might be assessed for part of the cost, inasmuch as patrons of the surface lines will be benefited by the change.

Among those to be heard by the council subcommittee this week are Mr. Falkenberg, Mr. Stevens, Mr. O'Reilly, Dr. N. Ginsberg, and Charles Severinghaus, all of whom are members of the Milwaukee Avenue traffic committee; Mr. Sorenson, and J. B. O'Connel, Chicago surface lines engineer. Drawings, specifications, and statistics will be employed to convince the members of the subcommittee of the necessity and advisability of enacting the ordinance.

WEST SUBURBAN LEAGUES OPEN ART EXHIBITIONS

Painters Need Money, President Says.

The Austin, Oak Park, and River Forest Art league opened an exhibition of paintings by local artists last week at the store of John A. Colby & Sons, 1140 Lake street, Oak Park, to continue through June 13. All of the pictures on display are for sale, according to Mrs. F. H. Bartholomew, president of the league.

"Depression in the business world has been particularly felt by painters," said Mrs. Bartholomew yesterday, "and now is the time when our own artists may be helped by villagers interested in purchasing paintings. We have in the west suburban communities many artists who are recognized not alone in Chicago but throughout the American art world. Pictures included in this exhibit have been selected by a jury of four leading Chicago artists. Each of them is the work of one of the eighty members of the league."

Picture to Be Bought for Schools.

Mrs. Georgia Leigh Caldwell, Oak Park artist and prominently identified with Chicago art circles, will be on hand each day to handle the sale of pictures and to give information concerning them. The art league has voted to purchase one picture, not to exceed $200 in price, to add to the collection of pictures now in circulation among the public schools of Oak Park and River Forest. Twenty-four paintings are now included in this group. The new picture will be selected by a vote of the members of the league.

The Maywood Art league, a branch of the Oak Park and River Forest organization, has also placed several pictures in the collection under the direction of E. T. Grigware. At a meeting last week Mrs. M. B. Murray was reëlected president of the Maywood organization. James D. Dowdakin was named vice president; Edward E. Kibbee, recording secretary; Mrs. John E. McCullough, corresponding secretary; and Frank J. Ulrich, treasurer. The new board of directors includes D. C. Donaldson, Mrs. Wilbur Coons, Ivan Beard, and Mrs. J. D. Dowdakin.

Officers to Be Hostesses.

Officers of the parent league will be present at the exhibit and sale as hostesses. They include Mrs. Bartholomew; Mrs. Ralph Weyburn, first vice president; Mrs. Robert Kerr, second vice president; Mrs. Alfred Pohlman, recording secretary, and Miss Maud Wilson, corresponding secretary.

O'KEEFE SEEKS TROLLEY BUSES FOR ADDISON ST.

Resolution Is Introduced in Legislature.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., May 23.—[Special.]—A resolution in the interest of street car riders on Chicago's northwest side was introduced in the legislature this week by Representative Ray O. O'Keefe [Dem., 25th]. It read:

"Whereas, the central northwest business men, in October, 1927, filed a complaint before the Illinois commerce commission against the Chicago Railway company, asking that they be directed to operate 'feeder buses' on Diversey, Belmont, Central and Narragansett avenues.

"Whereas, this case was carried to the Supreme court of the state of Illinois and this honorable body in thirty days' time affirmed the order of the commerce commission.

"Whereas, by the granting of this order Gov. Emmerson's commerce commission gave to the people living on the northwest side streets more transportation extensions than they have received in the last 15 years.

Northwest Petitions I. C. C.

"Whereas, the Northwest Federation of Improvement Clubs has petitioned the commerce commission for a similar service on Addison street from Sheridan road on the east to Harlem avenue on the west.

"Whereas, the commerce commission, whose members were appointed during the last administration, granted the Chicago Motor Coach company the right to operate motor coaches on this thoroughfare, charging the people a ten cent fare.

"Whereas, the average family of five that is forced to pay two fares of ten cents on the motor coach and seven cents on the surface lines, this amounts to $300 per year.

"Whereas, the people living in this community, which is a part of the 25th senatorial district in the city of Chicago, cannot afford to pay this extra money for transportation.

"Whereas, the Northwest Federation of Improvement Clubs, on June 23, 1928, appealed this order of the commerce commission to one of the Circuit or Superior courts in the city of Chicago, and said case, for over three years, has been lying dormant; therefore, Asks That Carlstrom Fight Case.

"Be it resolved, that Oscar Carlstrom, the attorney general for the people of the state of Illinois, be directed to appear in the case both before the Illinois commerce commission and the state court and intervene therein; see to it that this case is brought to a conclusion, so that the people now living on Addison street and adjacent thereto shall receive their just dues by having the Chicago Railway company directed to operate trackless trolleys on that street with a 7 cent fare and the right to transfer to street cars at all cross intersections, thereby granting to the people a service that necessity and convenience calls for."

The resolution will be considered by the judiciary committee of the house.

SCOUT MUSTER WILL BE HELD NEXT THURSDAY

IRVING PARK BOY SCOUTS WIN 1ST AID HONOR AGAIN

Scoring 94.5 out of a possible 100 points, Boy Scout troop 856 of the Irving Park Presbyterian church, 3047 North Keeler avenue, for the second consecutive year won the annual North Shore district first aid contest held at the Broadway armory.

Robert F. Kenning is scoutmaster of the winning troop. Scouts James E. Coates, Nick J. Dittrich, Richard Malwitz, Charles Seyferlich, and William Seyferlich are members of the team who will represent the North Shore district in the city-wide contest to be held in June under the auspices of the American Red Cross.

Att: Metropolitan Advertising

Gentlemen:

Two years ago this month we placed our first ad in the Sunday Tribune Metropolitan Section which circulates on the South Side.

The first week's results convinced us. There was no mistaking what brought us so many new customers. From then on we decided to advertise on a regular weekly basis and our sales showed a steady increase.

In August, 1929, we opened a second and much larger store on the North side featuring the same high quality line of juvenile furniture, carriages and clothing that we offered through our South side store. We then began using the North side Metropolitan Section.

Now with these two locations we are making use of the North and South Metropolitan Sections practically every Sunday. Our business has continued to show steady increases. We get mail orders from many places in Illinois, Wisconsin, and Indiana.

We are using no other form of advertising and we do not hesitate to say that the rapid growth of this business owes a great deal to the advertising we have done in the Tribune Metropolitan Section.

Sincerely yours,
Louis I. Rubin

SLUMBER-LAND
Juvenile Department Stores

Advertising in the Tribune Metropolitan Section draws customers from all parts of the North side and the suburbs to this Slumberland Juvenile department store at 1542 Devon avenue.

"There was no mistaking what brought us so many new customers"

IN MARCH, 1929, the "Slumber-Land" Juvenile Department Store, 2211 E. 71st street, decided to give the Tribune Metropolitan Section a chance to show what it could do. They placed an advertisement in the Metropolitan Section of the Sunday Tribune which reaches 11 out of every 14 families living on Chicago's great South side.

"The first week's results convinced us," writes Louis Rubin, General Manager. "There was no mistaking what brought us so many new customers. From then on we decided to advertise on a regular weekly basis and our sales showed a steady increase.

"In August, 1929, we opened a second and much larger store on the North side, featuring the same high quality line of juvenile furniture, carriages and clothing that we offered through our South side store. We then began using the North side Metropolitan Section.

"We are using no other form of advertising and we do not hesitate to say that the rapid growth of this business owes a great deal to the advertising we have done in the Tribune Metropolitan Section."

Advertising in the Tribune Metropolitan Section has increased sales and boosted profits for scores of Chicago merchants and retailers. Large and small stores alike have cashed in on Sunday Tribune pulling power.

Don't decide that your business can't take advantage of Metropolitan Section advertising until you have examined the complete facts. A Tribune man will be glad to give them to you, without obligating you in any way whatever.

Call Superior 0100 tomorrow. Simply say that you would like to have more information about advertising in the Metropolitan Section.

MAYOR GOLD TO STRESS ECONOMY IN FOREST PARK

Police Courtesy Drive Is Started.

Mayor George R. Gold, elected to office again in the spring election in Forest Park, announced yesterday that during his new term he would follow the policies of his last four years of incumbency, with additional stress, however, on an economy program. Organized under the commission form of government candidates in Forest Park run independently for the village offices.

GEORGE R. GOLD. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

"My main object will be to keep Forest Park clean as I have endeavored to do in the past," said Mayor Gold.

Stresses Police Courtesy.

"I want Forest Park to be a village that visitors enjoy coming to and are loath to leave," the mayor continued. "Right now we are stressing courtesy on the part of all the village officers, especially the members of the police department who contact the public every day.

"Finances do not permit of further improvements at the present time so economy is to strike the keynote of the next four years. Forest Park is $1,000 short in the amount, due it from the county treasurer on the 1928 tax levy and the 1929 taxes are slower in coming in than those of the former year."

Mayor Gold is a native Forest Parker, having been born and reared in the western suburb. With Mrs. Gold, their three sons and daughter, he resides at 512 Hannah avenue. He is associated in business with the Sheesrofen company, manufacturers of soft drinks.

Known as Hard Worker.

Other Forest Park officials point out that Mayor Gold has, no doubt, given more actual hours to the position of mayor than any former incumbent. He is frequently at his office at 7:30 in the morning and it is not unusual to also find him there at 10 or 11 o'clock in the evening.

During his former term of office, the mayor made it his business to see that all village employés received their salary checks promptly, there having been numerous complaints in this regard.

Before his election to office the first time the installation of a new street lighting system had been voted but it fell to Mayor Gold and the commissioners to see that it was installed.

Other improvements carried out by Mayor Gold include the widening and repaving of Madison street and Roosevelt road, the resurfacing of village streets and repairing of sidewalks, erection of the new village incinerator, and the beautification of the Chicago and North Western railroad yards.

EARL BURTNETT, DUKE ELLINGTON COMING TO W-G-N

West Coast Favorites to Make Bow Wednesday.

Earl Burtnett and his orchestra, an outstanding dance aggregation of the west coast, and Duke Ellington's orchestra, the current toast of New York City, will be heard exclusively this summer through W-G-N, THE TRIBUNE station, from the Lincoln Tavern on Dempster road.

Earl Burtnett's orchestra has played for five years at the Biltmore hotel in Los Angeles and will be heard for the first time locally when the Lincoln Tavern opens next Wednesday evening.

His band will be augmented by a new rumba section and the famous vocal trio which has appeared with the orchestra in scores of talking pictures, including "The Broadway Melody," "Gold Diggers of Broadway," "Viennese Nights," "Puttin' on the Ritz," Mary Pickford's "Coquette," and Doug Fairbanks' "Reaching for the Moon." In the middle west the orchestra is best known through mechanical appearances—on the records and in the talkies.

Station W-G-N will present Earl Burtnett and his big band every night between midnight and 12:30 and between 1 o'clock and 1:30 in the morning, and, more importantly, at various times during the early evening programs every night in the week.

Duke Ellington Coming.

During the month of July the orchestra will be succeeded by Duke Ellington's orchestra, the most sensational success in the last two years. They captured New York City last year, were signed up for night club appearances, doubled in Ziegfeld's production "Show Girl," then were featured in the talking picture "Check and Double Check," and lately were called back for five weeks of return engagements at the Oriental theater in Chicago. They will remain until Sept. 1, giving radio listeners of the middle west ultra modern treatments and arrangements of dance music.

A memorial day program featuring the W-G-N Symphony orchestra and David Pritchard, baritone, will be given from W-G-N at 8 o'clock next Saturday evening. In addition to a memorial day tribute civil war songs and marches will be presented by the symphony and Mr. Pritchard will sing "In Flanders Fields" "The Light Brigade" and Elgar's "Land of Hope and Glory."

Two baseball games between the Chicago White Sox and the St. Louis Browns will also be broadcast on Memorial day. The morning games start at 10:30 and the afternoon broadcast at the regular hour, 2:45. Bob Elson will be at the microphone giving the play by play report.

Program for Mystery Fans.

Other programs of outstanding entertainment will be offered during the coming week. Mystery story fans and devotees of Sherlock Holmes will hear a dramatization of Conan Doyle's story "The Adventures of the Six Napoleons" tomorrow night at 9 o'clock on the "Adventures with Sherlock Holmes" hour. Richard Gordon will be on the air again in the rôle of the famous detective.

The W-G-N staff will again present their minstrel show at 9 o'clock Tuesday evening. Stars from other highlight programs of the week take part—Marlin Hurt of the Tom, Dick, and Harry trio is one of the end men and Hal Gilles, famous as the Weasel in Louie's Hungry Five is the other. Henry [Hank] Moeller, Herr Louie himself, is the interlocutor.

"In Modern Mood" Wednesday.

Featured for Wednesday night will be the W-G-N orchestra with Leroy Maule conducting through rhythms of the latest dance hits aptly named "In Modern Mood." New and unusual arrangements by the conductor add sparkle to the program.

Thursday night at 8:40 the W-G-N orchestra will be heard in a different mood with modern dance numbers in symphonic arrangement and purely symphonic numbers under the baton of Gaston Du Moulin. The Clef Barons, Negro quartet will also be heard Thursday evening. Popular tunes and favorite spirituals will be included in their program.

Various musical themes from the cheerful to the sombre will be contrasted on the program at 7:30 o'clock Friday night followed by Quin Ryan at 8:10 with a half hour of radio reminiscences. At 9:45 Del Owen and Allen Grant will give a double piano concert featuring old familiar ballads.

And every day—except Sunday—the Singing Lady program comes from W-G-N at 5:15 with entertainment and instruction for the younger children. The Singing Lady not only sings but teaches the children how to sing. Some of the melodies are original compositions of Allen Grant who accompanies her.

PADRAIC COLUM, SENATOR DILL TO TALK OVER SEA

Two speakers will be heard from abroad today in Columbia's international series. Padriac Colum, author of many books and plays dealing with ancient lore of Ireland, will represent his country in the last of a series of four travelogs on the British isles. He will speak at 11:30 a. m. United States Senator Charles C. Dill of Washington will speak from London at 11:45 a. m. Senator Dill, co-author of the radio act of 1927 and sponsor of additional radio legislation, is touring Europe to discover methods of broadcasting control used in other countries.

Olaf Hjorth, Tenor, Wins Favor on Morning Hour

A young tenor, Olaf Hjorth, well known in Scandinavian musical circles in Chicago, is delighting W-G-N listeners with his Monday morning programs. Mr. Hjorth came to this country from Bergen, Norway, in 1917.

Concerts for Sick.

Special radio concerts for the sick in public and private hospitals are now broadcast every Sunday evening in Brussels, Belgium.

START DRIVE TO ROUT OUTLAW RADIO STATIONS

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The federal radio police have been instructed to clean up the outlaw radio stations along the Atlantic coast and the Gulf of Mexico which are reported to be aiding rum runners and other smugglers to dodge coast guardsmen and revenue agents in entering this country.

William E. Downey, acting director of the radio division of the department of commerce, this week estimated that there are scores of such unlicensed radio stations in operation, using both voice and code, and usually utilizing high frequencies.

Although occasionally a licensed station is found to be aiding rum runners, Mr. Downey said, practically all of the offenses are committed by outlaw stations. He recalled the recent action of the federal radio commission in revoking the amateur license of Charles Andres Jr. of New Orleans following his admission of aiding rum runners.

Whenever evidence is uncovered of unlicensed operation of radio stations it is turned over to the department of justice for seizure and prosecution.

The radio police division has been operating under the handicap of insufficient personnel, it is reported, although congress has permitted it to expand gradually. Only about fifty inspectors are engaged in keeping constant check on the operations of all United States broadcasting stations, as well as commercial, government, and ship radio stations.

In the case of the land stations, the checks may be made by stationary monitoring equipment or by the mobile radio police cars, but the ship transmitters and receivers must be inspected first hand.

Outlaw stations will probably be detected more easily and quickly after July 1, when the central frequency monitoring station, which has been under construction for almost two years at Grand Island, Neb., is expected to begin full operations.

While the district monitoring stations are usually limited to their immediate territories, the Grand Island station will have strength to test any station in this country and many abroad.

Medical Help to Ships.

The federal post authorities of Germany, together with the federal health authorities, have inaugurated a special wireless service giving medical advice to all ships on the high seas which are equipped with radio but have no physician on board.

SOPRANO

Olive Kline, soprano, who will be heard as guest artist on the program which will be broadcast through W-G-N and the coast to coast NBC network tomorrow evening at 8:30 p. m.

W-G-N PLAYERS ARE PIONEERS OF RADIO DRAMA

"Divorcons" to Be Given Tonight.

Between 7 and 8 o'clock, this evening the W-G-N Players will present Sardou's comedy, "Divorcons." The play was written for radio presentation by Jean Conover, W-G-N playwright, and will be played by Patricia O'Brien, Nina Lawrence, Douglas Hope, Eugene McGillan, and E. M. Johnstone and Frank Harrington. On next Sunday evening, at the same time, "Oliver Twist" will be played.

Since the institution of the station, in 1924, W-G-N has pioneered in the dramatic form of radio entertainment. In that year, Quin Ryan originated the "Play Shop," a series of programs dramatized from original stories. In 1926, the radio comic strip, a new dramatic form, was born at station W-G-N in the feature "Sam 'n' Henry," now known as "Amos 'n' Andy." On the heels of this came the ever popular comic interlude, "Louie's Hungry Five."

Then, in 1930, another radio dramatic form was inaugurated at station W-G-N—the radio comic srip presenting the familiar characters of the newspaper comic strips. Three of these are presented nightly by station W-G-N—"Harold Teen," "Gasoline Alley," and "Little Orphan Annie," the latter being given to a national network in addition.

Revive Musical Comedies.

Early in 1928, the program department of W-G-N conceived the idea of reviving the old La Salle theater musical comedies which were a national vogue a generation ago. New dramatic and light operatic companies were organized under the direction of Harry W. Spingold, assisted by Reed Myers, both veteran show men, and the series of plays was adapted for radio presentation by Delos Owen.

The first presentation, the "Girl Question," presented with full cast and chorus, met with instantaneous success.

This was followed by revivals of such well remembered hits as "The Honeymoon Trail," "A Stubborn Cinderella," "Prince of Tonight," "The Flirting Princess," "The Time, the Place, and the Girl," "Miss Nobody," and "The Girl at the Helm." The company then delved further into the old repertoires and produced "Robin Hood," "In Old Vienna," "The Chimes of Normandy," "Pirates of Penzance," "The Mikado," "S. S. Pinafore," "The Beggar Student," "The Purple Towers," and "Betty Jane."

Miss Conover Adapts Play.

When the presentation of famous plays from the dramatic stage was considered, Miss Jean Conover, a foremost scenario writer from the movie world, was brought from New York to adapt them for radio production.

During 1929 and 1930, the W-G-N Players presented "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Rip Van Winkle," "Under Two Flags," "Sign of the Four," "Michael Strogoff," "Lena Rivers," "Napoleon and Josephine," "Two Orphans," "Streets of New York," "Midnight Rose," "Anthony and Cleopatra," "The Courtship of Miles Standish," and "The Romance of Preston Manor."

Next came a series of comedy dramas including "Enter Mary Jones," "Call of the Woods," "End of the Lane," "Looks Like Rain," "Civil Service," "Path Across the Hill," "The Shakeup," "The Runaway," "Mr. Jerry Weston," and "Romance, Ltd."

Present Dramatized Operas.

Beginning with the Chicago Civic Opera season of 1930-'31, the W-G-N Players presented 26 one-hour musical plays dramatized from the opera librettos, as follows: "Pagliacci," "The Masked Ball," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Faust," "Rigoletto," "Il Trovatore," "Carmen," "Camille," "The Elixir of Love," "Fra Diavolo," "Aida," "Martha," "William Tell," "The Bohemian Girl," "Lohengrin," "Tanhausser," "Lakme," "The Barber of Seville," "Samson and Delilah," "Mignon," "Lucia di Lammermoor," "La Giocanda," and "The Queen of Sheba."

The summer program, now under way, will see the revival of old familiar plays, including "Under Two Flags," "The Count of Monte Cristo," "Amy of the Circus," "Rip Van Winkle," "When Lindy Ran Away," "The Road Agent," "The Man of Destiny," "The Dancer, and "The Dagger," and "Under Arizona Skies."

ROSA PONSELLE TO SING FROM LONDON JUNE 1

Rosa Ponselle, American born prima donna soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, will be heard over CBS from 2 to 2:45 Monday afternoon, June 1, when a part of a performance of Verdi's opera, "La Forza del Destino," is relayed to this country from the stage of the Royal Opera house, Covent Garden, London.

Miss Ponselle's portrayal of the rôle of Leonora in "La Forza del Destino" is considered one of her greatest achievements and has won her wide acclaim. It was in this rôle that she made her operatic debut opposite Caruso in 1918.

TOSCHA SEIDEL WILL BE HEARD ON CBS TODAY

Toscha Seidel, famous violin virtuoso, accompanied by a symphonic orchestra and by Ossip Giskin, cellist of the Continental string quartet, will play the second and third movements from Brahms' "Concerto for Violin and Cello," during the Symphonic hour to be broadcast over CBS from 2 to 3 this afternoon.

Melodies of Old Favorites Heard on Fireside Hour

Old melodies from favorite operettas and musical comedies still holds first place in the hearts of many radio listeners. It is for this audience that Fireside Melodies on W-G-N at 8:20 o'clock Saturday night was inaugurated. In this program one may hear the numbers of such operas as "The Bohemian Girl" and "Martha" and such musical comedy successes as "The Red Mill" and "Chocolate Soldier."

COMING TO W-G-N

Earl Burtnett, who is to be heard with his famed west coast band from the Lincoln tavern through W-G-N nightly, beginning next Wednesday.

HENRIETTA TEDRO OF "ORPHAN ANNIE" REAL DAUGHTER OF STAGE

A real daughter of the stage is Henrietta Tedro, who plays the rôle of Mrs. Silo in "Little Orphan Annie" in the radio sketch of that name which comes every week day from W-G-N. Left an orphan when a baby she was reared by her grandparents. Her grandfather being an employé of the Empire theater in Cincinnati, she began to do child rôles when only three years of age. At 14 she was an experienced actress and went on the road touring the country from coast to coast.

HENRIETTA TEDRO.

At 16 Miss Tedro was in New York and playing in the then popular Mort Singer musical comedies, where she remained for six seasons. Then followed appearances in "The Velvet Lady," and the "Girl in the Private Room" and two seasons on the Orpheum circuit with Vera Gordon, star of "Humoresque." Then came the rôle of the divorcée in "Lightnin'," a part in which she toured the Pacific coast.

Chicagoans know Miss Tedro best for her excellent work in the Harry Minturn stock company, where she played character parts for four years. Two years ago Miss Tedro came to W-G-N and joined the W-G-N players and has played many characters rôles in the dramatizations of grand opera produced by that group. Besides her rôle of Mrs. Silo in "Little Orphan Annie" Miss Tedro is heard in other W-G-N sketches and programs.

130 EXHIBITORS SIGN FOR TRADE SHOW ON JUNE 8

In attendance and exhibits, another successful RMA convention and trade show at Chicago during Radio week, beginning June 8, is assured, according to final reports on plans for the annual radio industry gathering which were received by the board of directors of the Radio Manufacturers' association at their meeting May 14 at Briarcliff lodge, New York.

More new radio products, including television, will be exhibited in the trade show at the Stevens hotel in Chicago than ever before in one year, according to reports to the RMA board. President Morris Metcalf of Springfield, Mass., presided and received reports from Maj. H. H. Frost of New York, chairman of the association's show committee, and Leslie F. Muter of Chicago, chairman of the convention committee.

Of the leading radio manufacturers, 130 will have exhibits in the trade show for which nearly 24,000 square feet of exhibit space already has been assigned, with more applications being received. The large exhibition hall and grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel will be required to take care of the many exhibits. A larger proportion of manufacturers of the RMA will have exhibit space than ever before at any RMA trade show for the last three years.

HOOVER TO SPEAK AT VALLEY FORGE MEMORIAL DAY

George Bernard Shaw to Be Heard.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Special Memorial day broadcasts and several international programs will be highlights of this radio week.

President Hoover will deliver a Memorial day address at historic Valley Forge at approximately 9:30 o'clock next Saturday morning to be broadcast over both of the major networks. Military bands will salute the President as he speaks from Washington's headquarters of the winter of 1777-'78.

Capt. Charles W. Lockwood, who at 88 years is the last man of Minnesota's famed "Last Man's club," will speak over CBS at 10 a. m. on Memorial day from Washington. Capt. Lockwood last year opened the bottle of the rare old Burgundy wine as the last and privileged survivor of a company of Minnesota volunteers in accordance with a pledge made many years before.

George Bernard Shaw, who still insists he won't visit America, will however speak to the United States by radio for the second time from 3:20 to 3:40 over CBS on Memorial day, the 500th anniversary of the martyrdom of Joan of Arc.

Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley will speak on the question of armament reduction at 8:30 Saturday evening.

The prince of Wales is to be heard again this week. The hour is 3:20 on Thursday over CBS when the Prince speaks at a dinner in London to help raise funds for the blind.

As reported in this column several weeks ago the nation's leaders are trying to find a suitable word to apply to television spectators. For those who don't read the New Yorker we present its suggestion of "televictims."

"At least 50 per cent more eggs will be produced for market if the poultry farmer offers his hens the same opportunity to hear good radio programs that he extends to his family," said O. H. Caldwell, former radio commissioner, recently. Does Mr. Caldwell include the well known toothpaste program and "Consider Your Adam's Apple" hour?

If all the words broadcast by a single big radio station during a week were laid end to end they would reach all of the way through Theodore Dreiser's "American Tragedy" and into a bottle of aspirin [100 tablets], with a few hundred thousand left over. That makes a total of about 700,000 words.

Installation and operation of all radio broadcasting in Ecuador is to be controlled by the Durham corporation, an American firm, which has just made a 25 year contract with the South American government. The first station is to be built at Quito, the capital.

The ancient and sacred Guild of Former Pipe Organ Pumpers, holding its 49th annual fiscal meeting and bicentennial hard times party recently elected the NBC organist, Archer Gibson, as chief tremolo.

DR. S. S. DRURY TO ADDRESS SUNDAY EVENING SESSION

"While Daylight Lasts" is to be Dr. Samuel S. Drury's subject when he addresses the Chicago Sunday Evening club tonight at Orchestra hall. Dr. Drury is associated with St. Paul's school in Concord, N. H. The program will be broadcast through WMAQ, beginning at 7:30 p. m.

Clifford W. Barnes, president of the club, will open the services with another of his informal talks on "The Trail of the Pathfinder." Following this will be an organ recital by Stanley Martin. Besides being heard in "Hail Bright Abode," the entire choir will unite in singing "The Lost Chord," a request number.

A solo will be sung by Mrs. Mabel Sharp-Herdien. Another of the numbers on the musical program is to be a quartet arrangement of "Christ in Flanders."

MERLE ALCOCK TO BE HEARD ON W-G-N TONIGHT

The famed "Kashmiri" song will be among the featured selections in the program of Merle Alcock, contralto of the Metropolitan Opera company, when she is heard at 8:15 p. m. tonight over W-G-N and NBC. The concert orchestra will present a special arrangement of the popular "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers," made by its director, Josef Pasternack.

BLUES SINGER

RUTH ETTING.
[White Studio Photo.]

Ruth Etting, Ziegfeld star, will sing with Rudy Vallee and his Connecticut Yankees on their next program to be broadcast at 7 o'clock Thursday evening through W-G-N and NBC. Numbers which Miss Etting will sing include "Were You Sincere?", "Say, a Little Prayer for Me," and "Out of Nowhere." Rudy and his band will be heard in a program composed of several of the latest songs and a number of new arrangements of old favorites.

VOICE OF LISTENER

Winona, Minn., May 13.—My dear Mr. Ryan: THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE surely does everything on a wonderful scale. The boxing tournaments have been very interesting and extremely thrilling, thanks to your power of description and your very exciting voice. The announcing last night must have been wearing and exhausting. All of us "out in the sticks" are more than interested in the crowd, the scenery and all the celebrities. It is our only contact with big things, really. You make things so real and so startling over the radio that we immediately get into the spirit of things with you.

Chicago was cold last night and Winona was warm, but you convinced me that I was freezing with the crowd and you. I put on my coat, opened the drafts in the furnace and actually froze with you until that last wonderful round was over!

Your announcing was clever, quick and lovely, and thanks a lot for an enjoyable evening. I wouldn't go to see a fight anywhere, but would listen to you describe one any time with joy.

Sincerely,
MRS. G. B. DOUD,
360 Harriet street.

Opening Attractions.

..., with that settled, this is as good ... time as any to tell briefly the story of "William Tell," which will be the opening attraction of the Ravinia season.

Rossini wrote this opera of the liberation of Switzerland in a fairly international setting. That is, the story ... Schiller had come into Paris through translations of the writer's works, and the first libretto was written in French by Jouy and Bis. It was produced at the Grand Opera in Paris in 1832 with Nourrit as the original Arnoldo in what was then known as "Guillaume Tell." In 1831 it was presented in Lucca, Italy, as "Guglielmo Tell." London saw in ... at Drury lane in English and in ... at His Majesty's in Italian.

There seems to have been a New York production in English in 1831, as well as a production in New Orleans in 1842 and an American tour in ... with Karl Formes in the title ... Tenors who have sung Arnoldo ... Mierzwinski, Tamagno, Marconi and Lauri-Volpi at the Metropolitan, and John O'Sullivan at the Chicago Opera in 1918-'19. The opera was written in five acts, cut down to ... by omitting the third act and ... the fourth and fifth into ... and was then rearranged into ... the form it now holds.

Story of a Brave Swiss.

William Tell is a Swiss patriot of the thirteenth century who yearns to free his people from the hated Austrian yoke represented by the tyrant, Gessler. He fears the younger folk will forget former freedom in the habit of servitude. So, the story opens on a ... morning when a patriarch ... young couples in love. His ... son, Arnoldo, does not ask this ..., for he loves Matilde, daughter of Gessler. The festival is halted by a fugitive seeking refuge from Gessler's men, one of whom he has ... to protect his daughter. Tell ... the ... storm to row him across the lake to safety.

Gessler arrives, and in vengeance ... the town and condemns the patriarch to death. Meanwhile, Arnoldo and Matilde have pledged their love, but when the young man learns of the death of his father, he joins Tell in the conspiracy of the cantons to overthrow the tyrant.

Then comes the famous market place scene, in which Gessler presides over the holiday by forcing the people to make obeisance to his hat, which is stuck atop a pole. This Tell refuses to do, and Gessler, knowing him an expert archer, orders him to shoot an apple from his son's head. The shot succeeds, but Tell drops a second arrow and, questioned, tells Gessler that had he killed his son, the second shaft would have gone to the heart of Gessler. Tell and the boy are condemned to death, but intervention of Matilde saves the boy while the uprisen Swiss free Tell, and an avenging arrow removes Gessler from an otherwise peaceful picture.

In the Ravinia production, Giovanni Martinelli sings Arnoldo, Elisabeth Rethberg is Matilde, Giuseppe Danise is Tell, Margery Maxwell is the boy, and Alfredo Gandolfi is Gessler.

"The Science of Voice."

"The Science of Voice," by Douglas Stanley, M. S., A. C. G. I., reprinted in pamphlet form from the Journal of the Franklin Institute of Pennsylvania, would seem to be an abbreviation of a book with the same title and by the same author issued ... years ago by Carl Fischer, Inc. At least, it takes up the same thesis. He holds that the field of voice culture is still a good deal a matter of witchcraft, of secret methods, and mysterious arts, that practically every theory heretofore held is wrong, and that true principles of the art can only arise from the sum total of the sciences of acoustics, anatomy, physiology, psychology, and the laws of music. What these principles are he proceeds to set forth in detail.

Whether they are the true principles or not cannot be told without trial. Certainly they cannot be told from this desk without it. As one whose peculiar mode of life makes it obligatory to listen to dozens and scores of incompletely developed young voices every season, I am not always in the mood to rush to the defense of the embattled singing teachers. But the pamphlet, also the larger book, contains this statement in all the emphasis of capitalized letters:

"The range of every properly produced voice should be at least three octaves, and sometimes nearly four may be reached."

Critic Makes Offer.

Like Paolo in his famous literary ... with Francesca da Rimini, in ... book I read no more that day. ... years ago I made an offer. I ... renew it. If Mr. Stanley will ... a public demonstration in my ... of a small group, say half a ... average pupils trained in his ... and with an effective, musical ... vocal range of three octaves, I ... to it that he gets the publicity such an exploit deserves. I ... not ask for the exceptional cases ... nearly four octaves. Just three ... be enough.

After a lifetime of listening to singers, you, I, anyone, can count upon ... fingers the number that can go ... three octaves. They are as rare ... directors who permit a musical phrase to be finished after the ... is up. In the meantime, much as I should like to believe that the vocal situation is going to be transformed by Mr. Stanley's researches, I am inclined to issue what in certain legal actions is called a certificate of reasonable doubt.

"Carmen" to Be Heard Here.

"Carmen" is to be returned to the répertoire of the Chicago Civic Opera company, next season, it was announced last week by the management. Conchita Supervia, mezzo-soprano from La Scala, and the Madrid and Barcelona operas, has been engaged for guest performances of the title rôle. Mme. Supervia, who is of Spanish birth, has the distinction of having made her debut at the early age of 14. At 15 she sang her first important operatic rôle, Carmen, and while still in her early teens was a member of the Chicago Opera association for one season.

She was chosen by Richard Strauss to create the rôle of Octavion in "Der Rosenkavalier" in its first performance in Rome and later interpreted this rôle at La Scala with Toscanini conducting. She was a member of the La Scala company under Toscanini for six years and appeared for several seasons at the Royal Opera in Madrid and the Liceo in Barcelona. She took Paris by storm in the summer of 1928 when she participated in the Rossini cycle at the Théâtre des Champs-Elysées in Paris. She was engaged immediately for the Opera and Opera Comique, and during the last winter has been appearing in concert also in London, Paris, and Germany.

Fifty Events Listed.

Sunday, Oct. 18, would seem to be the day that Miss Bertha Ott will begin concert operations for the new season. At least, John McCormack is booked at the Civic Opera house and Sergei Rachmaninoff at Orchestra hall on that date under her management.

Miss Ott is prompt in making and announcing her commitments. About fifty events are already scheduled under her name, though this is by no means the total that will probably have her name at the head of their programs. Some of the more important are these:

Singers—Florence Austral, Beniamino Gigli, Yvonne Gall, Roland Hayes, Isa Kremer, Lotte Lehman, Juliette Lippe, John McCormack, Sigrid Onegin, Paul Robeson, Tito Schipa, Lawrence Tibbett, Reinald Werrenrath, Richard Tauber. The last named is rated as Germany's best tenor. At any rate, he is good.

Violinists — Mischa Elman, Fritz Kreisler, Frank Kneisel.

Pianists — Josef Lhevinne, Myra Hess, Mischa Levitzki, Elly Ney, Sergei Rachmaninoff.

Cellists—Hans Hess, Gregor Piatigorsky, Felix Salmond.

Dancers—Leila Bederkhan, La Argentina, Ted Shawn and company, Mary Wigman.

Combinations, vocal or instrumental —"The Blue Bird," a Russian revue; Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson; Gaylord Browne and Gibson Walters; Don Cossack male chorus; Kedroff quartet; Kneisel string quartet: London Singers with John Goss; Minneapolis Symphony orchestra.

Other engagements will be made and announced later. They will all be heard variously at the Studebaker, the Civic theater, and the Playhouse, with some of the larger ones at the Civic Opera house and Orchestra hall.

Late Season Concerts.

As spring burgeons, concert appearances fade away. Paula Schlueter, soprano, will give a song recital at the Playhouse this afternoon, Yetta Sokolow a piano recital at the Chicago Woman's club. Robert Macdonald will appear in an organ recital at the Oak Park First Baptist church this evening, assisted by Lillian Knowles, contralto. Maria Matyas, mezzo-soprano, and Rudolph Magnus, baritone, will give a joint song recital at Kimball hall tomorrow night, and on Wednesday the Friends of Music of Chicago will close the season with a performance at the Bal Tabarin.

This last will enlist the services of Irene Pavloska, mezzo-soprano of the Civic Opera company, also Sylvia Lo... der Stone, Bessie Kaplan Nelson, Benjamin Landsman, Lillyan Sacks, Sara Rose Wexler, and Louis Jacobson. The program will be in large part operatic.

The German Grand Opera company is to make its fourth American tour next winter. The season will be of eight weeks, beginning Jan. 18, and the repertoire will be mainly Wagnerian. In fact, Eugen d'Albert's "Tiefland" is the only non-Wagnerian work to be announced. "Lohengrin" and "Tannhäuser" are to be added to the list. The others will be the four items of the "Ring des Nibelungen," "Tristan und Isolde," and "Der Fliegende Holländer."

Dr. Max von Schillings has been reengaged as musical director, and the principal sopranos will be Johanna Gadski and Margarethe Baumer. Mme. Gadski sends word of a contest for young American women singers, the winner to be engaged as a member of this tour, with salary and expenses guaranteed by Mme. Gadski personally. Voice is the only requisite. Operatic experience will not be required. Applicants are requested to write to the German Grand Opera company, 11 West 42d street, New York.

"The Legend of the Piper," the opera by Mrs. Eleanor Everest Freer of Chicago, is to be sung at Sacramento, Cal., under the auspices of the board of education of that city and the direction of George Sims, superintendent of recreation. The date will be June 6 and the company will number over forty. The work will be remembered as being in the repertoire of the American Opera company, an inspiriting organization which for the last year has been only an inspiriting memory.

Other news of "Peter Ibbetson," to be sung at Ravinia this summer, is that it will be conducted by Wilfrid Pelletier, and the word is that he was chosen at the express wish of Deems Taylor, composer of the work. Mr. Pelletier is to go, at the end of the Ravinia season, to San Francisco and Los Angeles, where he will conduct "Carmen" and "Marouf." He conducted a late night performance of "Romeo and Juliet" in Montreal recently, with Edward Johnson and Queena Mario in the name parts. The performance began at midnight and ended some time after three o'clock in the morning.

TO SING CARMEN

CONCHITA SUPERVIA.

THIS mezzo-soprano from Spain is returning to the Chicago Opera next season and, because she is returning, "Carmen" is to be revived for her appearance in the name part. She was a member of the company years ago when the late Cleofonte Campanini was general director, and she sang as Carmen then. She was very young at that time, however. For that matter, she is by no means old yet, and maturity has brought her an enviable reputation in many of the most noted European opera houses.

Debussy Music, Springtime Go Hand in Hand

Two Nocturnes Recorded in Paris.

By Edward Moore.

SPRINGTIME and Debussy's music somehow seem to go together rather well, so it is more than commonly to the purpose that Brunswick is issuing some of Debussy's best. Two of the three nocturnes for orchestra, "Nuages" (Clouds) and "Festivals," two sides each, numbers 90158 and 90159, are played by the Orchestre de l'Association des Concerts Lamoureux of Paris under the direction of Albert Wolff.

They are first class examples of what recorders can do when they set themselves out to reproduce some of the less frequently heard music, that which is usually confined to the elect of concert givers. In the first place, the performance is excellent. Conductor Wolff and the orchestra are thoroughly in the Debussy spirit with the light touch and flexibility and color which does not in the least stifle a great amount of exultant energy.

Next, the recording is as good as can be. It is not only that the qualities of string and wind instruments are faithfully recorded, but how many, or rather, how few years is it since tympani could be put upon a record to sound like anything more than a vague, muffled noise? In this case, they sound like tympani.

A Favorite Number.

Orchestral music of an older and consequently more conventional and possibly more popular type is also well presented by Victor in number 9733, where Mendelssohn's "Ruy Blas" overture is played by a symphony orchestra conducted by Malcolm Sargent, another European recording. The story of Ruy Blas ranks among the stirring melodramas of dramatic history, but both the period and the personal nature of Mendelssohn kept him out of musical turgidness or anything except frank, lively melody.

This overture used to be a favorite number in both popular orchestral and band concerts, and there is no reason why it should not continue in that enviable position for years to come. At least, this record makes a strong argument.

Once again it is a little amusing to see the recording companies duplicating each other at the same time. This example is Handel's famous and so called Largo, whose proper title is "Ombra mai fu" from the opera, "Xerxes." Columbia and Brunswick are both issuing it, Columbia through the voice of Jo van Yzer-Vincent, soprano, with organ and violin accompaniment, number 50282-D; Brunswick through Emmi Leisner, contralto, with orchestral accompaniment, number 90160.

You can pretty well take your choice which one you will prefer. Both are in Italian, and both voices are well fitted for the purpose. Mme. van Yzer-Vincent sings in a key which reproduces as G. Mme. Leisner approximately D. Mme. Leisner's accompaniment is a bit the better, since the violin for Mme. van Yzer-Vincent does not register as quite ideal perfection of tone.

Reverse Sides Vary.

The solo is short, taking only one side of a record, and the reverse sides are different. Columbia presents Theodora Versteegh, mezzo-soprano, in Cesar Franck's sacred song, "Panis Angelicus," again with organ and violin, which, together with "Ombrai mai fu" will be remembered as high spots in John McCormack's repertoire. The Brunswick reverse is another by Mme. Leisner and another by Handel, the solo cantata with instruments, "Dank Sei Dir, Herr." Rather curiously, it is much in the same musical mood as "Ombrai mai fu," even to the leisurely three-four rhythm. It is perhaps unnecessary to add that both of these disks are imported recordings.

Two records that cannot be slighted by any admirer of one of the foremost of German leider are of the ten inch size from Brunswick. They are made by the great baritone, Heinrich Schlusnus, and they display him at the top of his voice and form. 85001 presents Hugo Wolf's "Heimweh" and Richard Strauss' "Heimliche Aufforderung"; 85003 has Schumann's "Es zogen zwei rust'ge Gesellen" and Humperdinck's "Am Rhein." Both are confidently and earnestly recommended, particularly 85001. Franz Rupp plays the piano accompaniment for all.

Coincidences

Your strange coincidence will be printed if you will submit it to Strange Coincidences, Chicago Tribune.

Sensed Boy Friend's Accident.

A girl friend and I were walking home from work Tuesday at 5 p. m. We were talking about the danger of working around machinery. She told me about her boy friend, who worked on a tractor. She had the strange feeling, she said, that she could picture him on the tractor riding along and the next moment he lay on the ground, badly hurt. I told her that was because she was always thinking of the worst. We then dropped the subject.

She arrived home at 5:30 p. m., and at a quarter of 6 she received a telephone call stating that her boy friend was painfully scalded about the face and chest. The radiator on the tractor had cracked and the steam had scalded him.

When she told me the next day what had happened I considered it a strange coincidence. A. M. P.

A Pleasant Occurrence.

About one month before the Golden Gloves tournament my husband purchased two tickets.

At the last minute my two brothers were given tickets for the bouts. We intended to call each other and find out where our seats were so that we might meet afterward. However, in our rushing around, we neglected to do so.

Imagine our great surprise to find that out of those thousands of seats, our seats were not only the same row as theirs but right next to them! M. O. H.

Cripples, True and False.

We were playing "tag" after school. When we got tired I suggested that we limp instead of run. We had been limping for about five minutes when we saw a cripple limping in the same manner as we were. The cripple, thinking that we were imitating him, whirled his cane at us. I ran and fell. That ended my childhood days. H. W. M.

Army Planes Keep Newsreel Cameras Busy

taken over Manhattan. The first of the two was snapped last winter. The picture ship was cruising over New Jersey when a sudden shift in the wind swept in a blanket of fog. The ship wheeled and headed for its home port on Long Island. As it swung across the bay the camera man noticed the towers of dozens of the skyscrapers sticking up through the fog like white candles atop a birthday cake. He waved to the pilot to fly over the city, and roaring above the thick clouds the photographer cranked away at a unique sight. The plane eventually got down, but it was nip and tuck with old man bad weather.

Movie Houses Turn Automat.

The newest things in the way of movie houses are the Translux theaters in Manhattan. Two new ones have just opened on Broadway. They are under the same roof, but show different types of programs. These are the "automats" of the picture house world. The auditoriums are small, there are no ushers—one just drops his quarter in the slot, enters, and takes a seat.

The house is lighted at all times—almost to daylight brilliancy. A new method of projection makes this possible, and the lighted auditorium is popular with every one except those couples who go to the movies to be alone. News pictures are being shown in one of the Broadway houses, and feature shorts make up the bill at the other.

Foreign Language Talkies.

One hears a lot, these days, about the problem of making Hollywood and Long Island movies for foreign distribution. England is making a lot of its own pictures, these days, and then, too, there is no language obstacle to hurdle in that country. In France the old picture quarrel, which has been going through an armistice, probably will be renewed this summer. American film men, members of the French government, and United States embassy officials in Paris will meet to draft a new film quota agreement. The talkies have come along since the original row and the United States producers probably will have to promise the French pictures in their own language.

The making of foreign language talkies should be profitable, for there is a demand for them right here in our own country. I have seen and heard talkies in at least four different languages in New York City, and in the Rio Grande country every Texas town has its picture house that caters to the Mexican population by showing Spanish language pictures.

If film trade agreements with foreign countries can be worked out on a satisfactory basis there is no reason why the foreign language talkie industry should not be one of the biggest gold mines in the cinema manufacturing Eldorado.

DREAMS

Have you ever had a dream which later came true? If you care to see it in print address Dreams, Chicago Tribune.

Received Death Warning.

I have for years been forewarned of any approaching troubles by dreams, but am not always able to interpret the meaning or place the ones involved.

However, on April 13, 1931, I had a confused dream. I seemed to have to cross over a stream of muddy water which reached up to my mouth. The shock, for my dream was so real, wakened me. I was as awake as I am this moment, and I heard a voice say, "your dream is a warning of death." Naturally, I slept very little that night.

I was so worried I told some friends about it the next morning. Two days later I received word that my brother in Portland, Ore., had been operated on the night of my dream, and that there was little hope he would recover. He died five days later. R. J. C.

Dream Brought Good Luck.

I was one of the unemployed for some time. One day I answered a blind ad in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. That same night I dreamed that I was granted an interview by a small concern in the suburbs for 3 o'clock.

The next day I got a call to be at the office of a concern in the surburbs at 3 o'clock. The interviewer was just the man in my dream and I landed the job. F. J. P.

Kid Gloves Restored.

Sometime ago I missed two pairs of kid gloves. I looked through dresser drawers and every place I could think of. I have a couple of bags in which I put things that I don't use. I even looked there, but no kid gloves, so I gave them up for lost.

That night, lying in bed, I racked my brains trying to think where I could have put them. I went to sleep and dreamed that I found them in one of my bags. I told the family about it, and they told me to look there again.

I did. I too keverything out, and, sure enough, there were the gloves. M. B.

Found Pen in Purse Lining.

Recently, as I was on my way to the city, I couldn't find my fountain pen, which I always carried in my purse. I decided that I had left it at home. On returning I did not find it at home. I could not believe I had lost my pen and kept talking about it. That night a member of the family said to me, "I hope you dream about your pen and that the dream will tell you where it is."

I remembered the next morning that I had dreamed that my pen was in my purse. I looked, but failed to find it. The following day a little girl at school asked me to change some money for her and in putting my hand into the inside purse attached to my purse I felt it through the lining, for it had slipped behind this pocket. Then I realized that my dream had come true. E. M.

Memorial Day Originated by Georgia Women

First Formal Exercises Held April 26, 1866.

COLUMBUS, Ga.—(AP)—Memorial day, now set aside in every state in the Union each year, and in many foreign countries, for honoring the dead, had its inception here nearly 65 years ago.

It was on April 26, 1866, that Mrs. John Tyler of Columbus called together a group of her friends for the purpose of forming a Ladies' Memorial association.

Four southern states still hold their Memorial day exercises April 26. They are Georgia, Florida, Mississippi and Alabama. Alabama was the first state officially to observe Memorial day, and New York the first state to declare it a legal holiday.

First Formal Ceremony.

Mrs. Tyler and her friends pledged themselves to "perpetuate as a religious custom to wreathe annually the graves of our martyred dead." With the vow recorded, they went to Linwood cemetery in Columbus and held formal exercises.

Many memorial associations were organized throughout the south, and the spirit of the movement soon seized the people of the north. One New York newspaper observed:

"The women of Columbus have shown themselves impartial in their offerings to the memory of the dead. They strewed flowers alike on the graves of the Confederate and National soldiers."

Idea Sponsored in North.

Gen. John A. Logan, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, gave impetus to the idea in the north. He issued an order May 30, 1868, that every post should hold appropriate exercises and place flowers on the graves of dead comrades.

When the day ultimately became a legal holiday, most states observed it on May 30.

Besides the four states already mentioned which observe "Confederate Memorial day," April 26, the other exceptions are: North and South Carolina, celebrating on May 10, and Louisiana on June 3.

Pulitzer Prize Play Provokes Hot Argument

"Alison's House" Is Bad Choice, Critics Assert.

By Charles Collins.

[and Miss Dickinson, too, for that heroine of this play [she has been dead eighteen years] as something more than an alias for a special case of poetic genius. Alison for me matter] represents a type of American character that used to be prevalent before females became emancipated.

Many a family has had an Alison Stanhope without the posthumous poems. Many an American household has sheltered a sensitive girl who, for some inscrutable reason, has withdrawn from life, shut herself away from all social contacts, and let the years roll by until she withered into eccentric spinsterhood and crumbled silently away. There must have been many thousands of them, although they were too shy to come to the attention of statistics takers. They were the "queer" aunts of the old homesteads, known best to the children of the household. They were the nuns of puritanism.

In "Alison's House" this character finds her place in American drama. The play ought to stimulate a searching of many attics after the papers that "queer" aunts may have left behind. Perhaps there are new Emily Dickinsons to be discovered.

Past Prize Winners.

The controversy over "Alison's House" has caused me to refresh my memory of past Pulitzer prize winners. They were: 1918, "Why Marry?" by Jesse Lynch Williams; 1919, no award because of inferior material; 1920, "Beyond the Horizon," by Eugene O'Neill; 1921, "Miss Lulu Bett," by Zona Gale; 1922, "Anna Christie," by Eugene O'Neill; 1923, "Icebound," by Owen Davis; 1924, "Hell Bent for Heaven," by Hatcher Hughes; 1925, "They Knew What They Wanted," by Sidney Howard; 1926, "Craig's Wife," by George Kelly; 1927, "In Abraham's Bosom," by Paul Green; 1928, "Strange Interlude," by Eugene O'Neill; 1929, "Street Scene," by Elmer Rice; 1930, "The Green Pastures," by Marc Connelly.

I am not convinced that the Pulitzer prize committee was lamentably in error when it added "Alison's House" to this list.

For Sharpshooters.

Writers who deal with the theater arts [including music critics] make frequent use of the word "diction"; and often draw the fire of sharpshooters who insist that the correct word for the intended idea is "enunciation." In order to settle the point for all time, so far as this department is concerned, and to assert my right to write "diction" when I mean diction I shall refer the sharpshooting population to the following definition, which is to be found in Funk & Wagnalls New Standard Dictionary.

"Diction: 1. The use of words or the manner of using them either in literature, oratory, or song; the manner with which anything is expressed in words. It includes articulation, pronunciation, intonation, declamation, and punctuation. 2. Specif. That department of rhetoric which deals with the choice and arrangement of words and modes of expression."

This ought to persuade all of the sharpshooters in the "diction" brigade to abandon their rifle pits.

French Tribute to Belasco

HENRY BERNSTEIN, author of "Melo," French dramatist now making his first visit to this country, has issued a statement regarding the death of David Belasco as representative of the French Society of Authors and Composers. He says:

"The Society of French Authors and Composers, which is the most powerful association of writers in the world and also the most powerful association of theater professionals, has been very deeply moved on hearing of David Belasco's death. Our society wishes to express publicly the profound sympathy of its members for America's loss of the great Belasco.

"We do not forget that David Belasco presented with all his skill and his deep sense of beauty those French plays he deemed worthy of the American public's interest. All who love the theater and seek its greatness should hope to find in every country servants of its art as efficient and inspired as David Belasco."

How Mr. Belasco Died in Harness; Gotham Theaters

Mr. Leiber Wants Stars for Next Season.

NEW YORK, May 23.—[Special.]—The late David Belasco was engrossed in theatrical plans almost until the day of his death, May 14, according to tomorrow's Broadway gossip in the New York Times. On Friday, May 8, six days before the end of his career, he purchased the rights to "The Night Remembers," by Martha Madison, co-author of "Subway Express." He was looking forward joyously to a birthday celebration next July in Atlantic City, for it was his custom to make this anniversary coincide with the tryout of a new production. His office declares, however, that reports that he had a score of plays or more on hand are unfounded.

Max Faetkenheur, business manager of the Chicago Civic Shakespeare company, is in New York with great plans for next season seething in his mind. The Times will say tomorrow:

"On a star hunt through these sections is an agent provocateur for the Chicago Civic Shakespeare society whose plan is to arouse persons of stellar importance to appear in the Fritz Leiber company next season. The search will be carried to London, if necessary, to find for Mr. Leiber some support more lustrous than he has been in the habit of receiving."

A story is going the rounds of Broadway which illustrates in a grotesque manner the economic difficulties of the stage, so far as "the road" is concerned. A play whose "properties" consist only of one barrel and one revolver will not be able to travel, merely because three stage hands, at salaries of $115 a week, would have been required, under union rules, to handle these articles. Efforts to persuade the union to moderate its rules covering this point were unsuccessful; and so the affair has been called off.

Chester Erskin, who staged "He" for the Theater Guild, may put on another play for that organization before he joins the Erlanger forces for full time duty next fall. At least he mentioned this possibility before sailing for Europe last Tuesday. The play in question is "Mother and Son," by Leonard Atlas, author of "The House We Live In." Herman Shumlin was once interested in this manuscript. . . . This Mr. Shumlin, incidentally, is said to be losing his affection for "Pariser Platz, 13," by Vicki Baum, author of "Grand Hotel." He may decide to permit his lien on the American rights to lapse.

Rudy Vallee informed the ladies and gentlemen of the radio audience a few nights ago that he and his fellow musicians will contribute to the program of the forthcoming "Scandals." This summer revue goes into rehearsal two weeks hence.

Jane Cowl will end her season in "Art and Mrs. Bottle" with a week in the New York suburbs, beginning June 8. One of her managers, Joseph Verner Reed, has sailed for England to inspect "Lean Harvest" and "Autumn Crocus," and to decide whether or not these London plays should be seen in America. It's easy to imagine how the Broadway wise crackers will bear down on the word "crocus" if that play doesn't meet with their approval.

Earl Carroll is shopping for celebrities to appear in his next "Vanities," which will dedicate his new theater. Eddie Cantor is said to have rejected an offer of $7,500 a week. Mr. Carroll is negotiating with the four Marx brothers, who collectively want $10,000 a week.

Encouraged by the success of "Meet My Sister," the Shuberts have acquired another musical piece of this intimate, no chorus type. It is called "Cocktail," and is now pleasing the patrons of the Komödienhaus in Berlin. Ralph Benatzky, composer of "Meet My Sister," wrote the score. Its story deals with a childless queen, a king who wants an heir, and a third party.

New in Chicago: Operetta, Guild Play, 'The Rap'

"MEET MY SISTER," a musical comedy which has had a long run in New York, began an engagement at the Grand Opera house last night. It is an adaptation of a piece which has had a marked success upon the lyric stage in Europe. The score is by Ralph Benatsky, and the libretto, which deals with a romance between a spirited girl of noble family and a shy, humble professor, has been adapted by Henry Wagstaffe Gribble.

The cast includes Bettina Hall, formerly of "Three Little Girls"; Walter Slezak, son of the opera singer, Leo Slezak, and originator of the rôle of the professor in Germany; Harry Welsh, the comedian who appeared here a year ago in "A Wonderful Night"; David Hutcheson, last seen in "Sons o' Guns"; Olive Olsen, Kay McKay, Boyd Davis, Donald Campbell, Ronald Brown, and several others. "Meet My Sister" is described as an intimate musical play which has no chorus to interrupt its flow of comedy.

"He," a comedy from the French of Alfred Savoir, will have a première at the Illinois theater tomorrow night under the auspices of the Theater Guild. This production is being offered to the Guild's Chicago subscribers and patrons prior to its showing in New York, and marks the final chapter of the Guild's season in this city. The engagement is for three weeks.

"He" derives its title from a mystifying character who appears at a convention of atheists in a Swiss hotel and announces himself to be God. He meets with derision, but his stay is accompanied by a sequence of events which strike the atheists as miraculous. The play tells an unusual story in a vein of lightly satiric comedy.

For the interpretation of "He" the Guild has assembled a notable cast which includes Tom Powers, in the title rôle; Claude Rains, Violet Kemble Cooper, Pedro de Cordoba, Edward Rigby, Edith Meiser, Viola Frayne, Victor Killian, William Gargan, and Robert Su LeSueur. The stage settings were designed by Aline Bernstein.

"The Rap," a play which is described as a mystery melodrama, will begin an engagement at the Studebaker theater next Saturday night, May 30. It comes directly from New York, where it has had a nine weeks' run at the Avon theater. John Peter Leister is the author; Leonard Bergman and Raymond Payton are the producers. The former is a nephew of the late A. L. Erlanger.

The story of "The Rap" is based upon recent exposés in New York of alliances between politics and the criminal classes. The cast includes Helen Tenney, Paul Harvey, Jack Marvin, Ernest Anderson, Robert Shayne, Kenneth Bradshaw, Richard Gregg, and Edwin Vickery.

B'way Openings

NEW YORK, May 23.—[Special.]—Only one première is announced for the Gotham stage next week. The other items recorded below come under the heading of miscellaneous and incidental stage activities:

"Gasoline Gypsies"—Opens Wednesday night at the Lyric. This is a comedy by Charles Conger Stewart; acting in it will be Gene Byron, Dorothy Randall, Gertrude Flynn and Emmett Lynn among others.

"The Legend of the Golem"—Tuesday night at the theater of the New School for Social Research. A play, in the most constructive manner, of medieval religious conflict. Boris S. Glagolin, a Russian director, has staged it, and there will be 25 actors, a troupe of dancers and a choir. The performance will be repeated on Wednesday and Thursday and on June 1, 2 and 3.

"Precedent"—Tuesday night at the Bijou theater. The I. J. Golden play, which has to do with the Mooney-Billings case, will move uptown from the Provincetown theater, where it has been providing fireworks of a sort since mid-April. The original cast, including Clyde Franklin, Royal Dana Tracy, William Bonelli and Kirk Brown, will continue to play it. The settings will be new.

Critic Writes a Last Tribute to David Belasco

Master Showman Was Shy at Heart.

Admired Catholic Ceremony.

Belasco must always have admired the form and ceremony of the Catholic church. I recall an afternoon, nearly twenty years ago, when he took me on a personally conducted tour of what was then his famous studio atop the Belasco theater.

We had been through one room, 15x15, I should say, filled with his Napoliana. We had seen the collection of rock crystal, the frieze of spears, the paintings and the cabinets of objet d'art. We had sat for a moment at the old English dining room table, imported by Stanford White from a collection handed down by a feudal lord. And we turned suddenly around a pillar and started down what had the appearance of being the chancel of a church in miniature. David walked in front and every foot or two he would press a hidden button and another section would burst into light.

At the end of a fifteen or twenty foot walk we came to a wall shrine. He opened the doors and the interior was flooded with light. A handsome figure of a madonna was the central object and on the wall about the madonna were possibly a hundred rosaries of every conceivable hue and quality—jade and jet, polished ebony and teakwood, ivory and coral.

Showing them, David would stand back with shining eyes and drink in the surprise of the beholder, and then explain: "These were my daughter's [his youngest daughter, Augusta, who was the wife of William Elliott and who had died but a year or so before]; I was a collector and she wanted to be a collector, so she collected these.

"I put them here after she died."

This was the Augusta for whom he ordered that a candle be kept burning in her tomb, because she was always afraid of the dark.

Longed to Die in Harness.

I didn't believe David was afraid of the dark. He had pondered the mysteries and put much of what he had come to believe in "The Return of Peter Grimm." He will come back, if he can, for he loved life. But not for long. He will be ever so curious about the way they are staging things farther on.

His one great wish was, as he often said, to die in harness. He was a little jealous of Sir Henry Irving for having died on the stage. He wanted to be carried out of his theater to the mortician's parlor.

He did not die in harness, but he had his harness polished and ready, hanging on his bedroom wall. He had been reading plays for weeks. He had found one or two he thought something might be done with. He was just about to get the harness down and set to work on a play by Martha Madison and Eva K. Flint, who wrote "Subway Express." "The Night Remembers" was the tentative title.

Not many of us will come that close to getting our last wish.

It is difficult to stop writing about Belasco, once you start, if you have lived the last thirty years of your life in the theater. I came to admire him sincerely, after several years of distrust and suspicion. Not for the plays he produced so much as for the way he produced them and for the standards he set for other showmen to shoot at.

There are many fine entertainments in the Belasco list of plays, and probably not a single fine play in the literary sense. They acted superbly, but they read quite badly. He was, so long as he lived, our master showman. His influence was marked. He was, I think, the last great showman of his and our time.

* *

"If Booth Had Missed."

Which leaves but little room for my report of the week to you. Fortunately, there is but little to report.

The most interesting new play is one called "If Booth Had Missed," by Arthur Goodman. It won the $1,000 prize offered by Samuel French to the annual little theater tournament for long plays.

Originally, you will remember, this tournament was devoted to one-act pieces by amateur groups. This year the one-act play contest was abandoned because of the depression, but five long plays were tried by four home groups and one from Lapeer, Mich. They were the Wigwam players and offered a three-acter called "Side Show."

The Lincoln play starts with the night in Ford's theater, April 14, 1865, when Booth's aim was true. This time his gun arm is thrown up by a colored porter and Lincoln lives.

Thereafter the martyred one is set upon and finally taken, even as his successor, Andrew Johnson, was treated. His own party opposes his reconstruction program. The military heads want an army dictatorship. Grant deserts him. Lincoln finally asks the resignation of Stanton [as Johnson did] and Stanton refuses to resign.

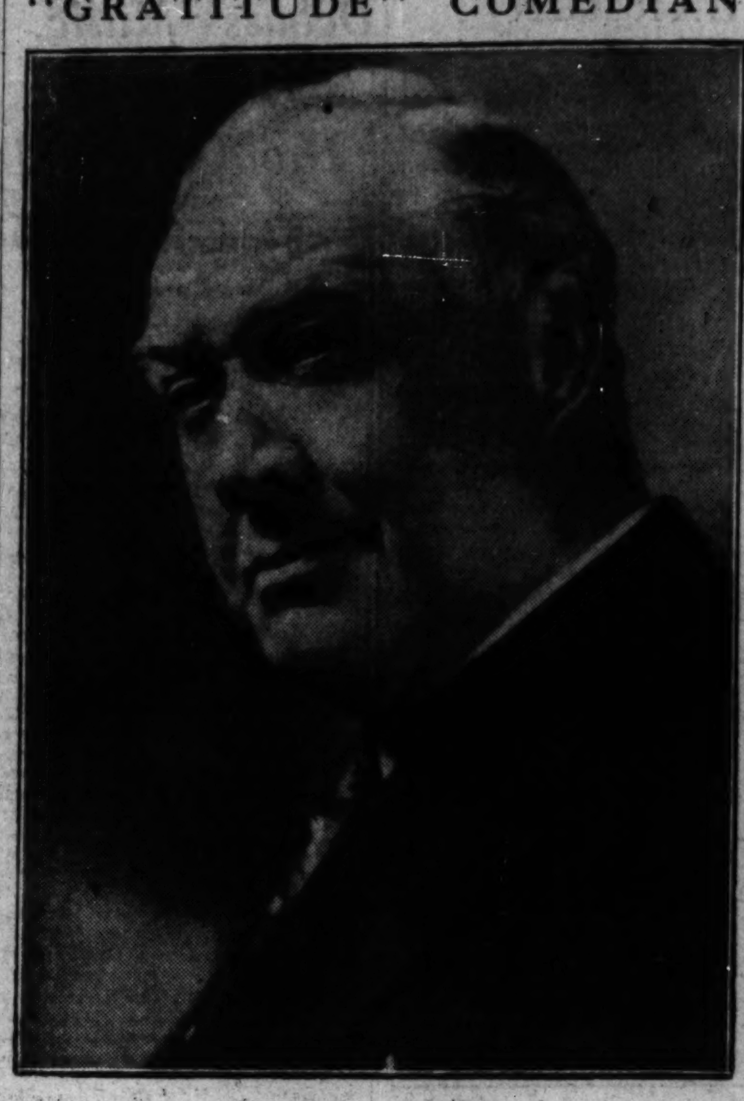
Lincoln is, as Johnson was, thereupon impeached for a violation of the tenure of office act. In a final scene in the senate Lincoln is saved from impeachment by a single vote, after he pleads his own case, but as he rises to thank his supporters a Senator Tilton rises, and crying, "The penalty of treason is death!" shoots him dead.

The play has its dramatic moments, as any Lincoln play must have, and the amateurs did it fairly well. They represented the Morningside players of Columbia university, who also won last season's prize with a piece called "The New Freedom." Nothing has come of that, either.

Saturday Night Premieres.

Apropos the opening of "Meet My Sister" last night at the Grand Opera house, the Messrs. Shubert say that they hope to establish Saturday night openings as regular events for next season, for their musical plays. They feel that there is as much of a demand for gala first nights on Saturday as on Sunday.

"GRATITUDE" COMEDIAN



GEORGE W. BARBIER.

THIS veteran comedian is one of the reasons why "That's Gratitude" is having a long run at the Blackstone theater. His character study of a soft-hearted and soft-headed business man of the middle west is mellow with humor. When he finishes with this play he will go into "pictures"; but next season will probably find him on the legitimate stage again, with the rank of a star.

Old School of Stage Producers Almost Extinct

NEW YORK, May 23.—(AP)—William A. Brady remains as the leader of the old guard of producers with the passing of David Belasco. Nearly all except Brady are gone now—Belasco, Charles Frohman, Klaw and Erlanger, and the others.

Brady still remains active, working as hard as he did in the days when he managed prize fighters in the daytime and rehearsed shows at night. He produces and directs—and even as recently as 1927 he acted the leading rôle in "A Free Soul." Two seasons ago he made a fortune off "Street Scene."

Belasco's death ended the school of realistic producers. When he had a play calling for a drawing room, he actually built a drawing room. There would be actual books in the book cases, real flowers in the vases, and good, solid furniture in the room.

The newer schools of production, headed by Robert Edmond Jones and Lee Simonson, are not so much for realism as for suggestivism. For instance, in "Miracle at Verdun" a cenotaph and a dozen crosses suggested a huge cemetery. Belasco would have built an actual cemetery on the stage.

The two Broadway premières of this week were an Irish comedy and a revue. Arthur Sinclair and Marie O'Neill, veterans of the Dublin stage, returned in the comedy, "Old Man Murphy." It is the work of Patrick Kearney and Harry Wagstaff Gribble.

Billy Rose brings out his second revue in "Crazy Quilt," with Phil Baker, Ted Healy and Fannie Brice as stars. It is a smart summer show, and rarely does it drop down among the mediocre and dull.

"Tom" Show for Benefit.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" will be acted at the Goodman theater tomorrow night by the University of Chicago Dramatic association. The performance will be for the benefit of the University Settlement. This famous old play, which has passed into American folklore, has become practically extinct on the professional stage.

Play Festival

BLANCHE YURKA, Tom Powers, Violet Heming and Martha Graham have been engaged for a dramatic festival to be held at the Lydia Mendelssohn theater, Ann Arbor, Mich., from May 25 to June 27. Robert Henderson, in association with George Coulouris, will stage the program of six plays.

Miss Yurka will appear in Sophocles' "Electra" and will take Lynn Fontanne's rôle in "Caprice." Mr. Powers and Miss Heming have been cast for the principal rôles in Noel Coward's "Private Lives" and "The Way of the World," by Congreve. Mr. Powers will be seen also as Bluntschli in Shaw's "Arms and the Man." The sixth play will be Strindberg's "The Father."

Succeeds Eva Le Gallienne.

Gale Sondergaard has replaced Eva Le Gallienne in the cast of Susan Glaspell's "Alison's House," in New York. This is the second time Miss Sondergaard has stepped into a Pulitzer prize play in the midst of its engagement. She replaced Judith Anderson in "Strange Interlude" when Miss Anderson left the cast of O'Neill's play in the middle of the Chicago run. She is the wife of Herbert Biberman, stage director with the Theater Guild.

Star Willingly Lends Name to Business Firm

Commercial Enterprises Swell Film Salary.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Discoveries of oil at the seaside resort community of Venice have made wealthy people of several picture stars. Foremost among these are Mae Murray, Lewis Stone, and Madge Bellamy. Mae Murray now has five wells spouting liquid gold on her beach property. A casual drive about the outskirts of the little town not far from Hollywood reveals huge derricks and oil tanks where formerly the stars used to bask in the sun and swim in the gentle breakers of the Pacific.

A Sunday afternoon drive is bound to be well sprinkled with signs advertising this and that commercial enterprise of film celebrities. Practically all of the stars are willing to lend their names to enterprises that will return them some value commercially.

In Cahuenga pass one sees an elaborate modernistic sign on the roof of a much fussed up and fancy shop beauty parlor. Esther Ralston owns it and her name appears in big letters over the combination beauty parlor, Turkish bath, swimming tank, and gymnasium enterprise.

Noah Beery Trout Club.

Along Vine street and also around the corner on Hollywood boulevard are signs advertising the Noah Beery trout club. Little fish, big speckled fish, and various crustaceans flounder around in an outdoor water tank with glass sides, used as an ad for the trout club.

Out Wilshire boulevard one finds many picture names in a few blocks. Mary Pickford's name is over a miniature golf club furnished with modernistic trees, and tables, and chairs. A few blocks further on is the Jackie Coogan golf course.

Ruth Roland's Trout Fishing club occupies a whole block. It is landscaped with huge cataracts and pools in which the passer-by may catch trout, which will be broiled at a little restaurant on the club grounds.

A traveler passing down the ocean highway towards Laguna is confronted with Hallam Cooley's name in large letters. Cooley is in the real estate business down that way.

Raymond Griffith has developed a big "Drive In" open air market where you may buy anything edible, and such fancies as floor wax, mops, brooms, clothes line, soap, and shoe polish.

Recently Raised Prices.

Ronald Colman and Lew Cody both have money invested in tonsorial parlors. Lew also owns a drug store. Charles Bickford owns a huge garage, filling station, and parking station opposite the M-G-M studios in Culver City. It is doing so well he recently raised prices.

Belle Bennett presides with a motherly air, no longer in demand on the screen, at "Grandma's Farm," out on Ventura boulevard, where you can get choice fried chicken. Bill Haines has a charming and profitable antique shop on La Brea, just off Hollywood boulevard.

Jetta Goudal and her husband, Harold Grieve, are doing very well in the interior decorating business. Jetta is to make a picture at Fox soon, the first in a long time.

Corinne Griffith recently opened her Victor Hugo market in Beverly Hills with a regular movie première.

Charles Chaplin will never lack for a meal as long as his friend and fellow actor, Henry Bergman, runs Henry's restaurant on Hollywood boulevard. Charlie has stock in it.

To Open First Automat.

Howard Hughes has added another industry to his oil, tool business, motion picture producing, and theater constructing enterprises. He and Harold Franklin have approved plans for the construction and opening of the first automatic restaurant in the west. It will be built on Vine street, Hollywood. With so many actors out of work an automat should become the most popular eating house on the boulevard.

The financial clouds that hovered over Eugene V. Brewster and Corliss Palmer ever since they came to Hollywood from New York to launch Miss Palmer on a film career lowered again recently. The Brewster's auctioned off a residence on Hollywood drive which they had bought three years ago in more prosperous times. The results of the sale, Brewster sadly announced, produced little more than required to pay taxes on that and another little piece of property here which he still holds.

The Brewsters have moved into a small cottage on Selma avenue. Through, or maybe because of, adversity the one time multimillionaire publisher and the beautiful Macon, Ga., girl whom he took as a protégée remain as devotedly in love as during the heyday of their romance.

Embarrassing Moments

What was the most embarrassing moment of your life? If you care to have it published address Embarrassing Moments, Chicago Tribune. Please write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

A Mistake in Identity.

One rainy day I got off the train, opened up my trusty old umbrella, and started for home. Just a few feet ahead of me I spied the familiar shuffling figure of my uncle. Catching up to him, I tapped him on the back and said, "Uncle Alex, you dear old man, aren't you afraid of getting wet? You had better walk under my umbrella."

At the sound of my voice the old gentleman turned around, and to my horror and embarrassment I saw that he was a stranger. I mumbled something about "making a mistake" and hurried away as fast as I could.

Perfumed Eggs for the Guest.

Not long ago I had a sample of a new kind of cold cream given me. Wanting the jar I put the cream in a cup, which somehow got in the ice box and was forgotten.

One Sunday morning, having a guest whom I was eager to impress with my culinary ability, I decided to fry the eggs in butter. Noticing that my efforts seemed to be going unrewarded I began to look for the reason.

Imagine my chagrin when I found that I had used face cream and the eggs were highly perfumed.

F. B.

Impressing the Boy Friend.

Recently I purchased some sweet rolls. After returning to the office I proceeded to wrap them more securely in order to carry them home. While so doing my fingers became quite sticky from the sugar and cinnamon.

In the meantime a young man on whom I had tried to make a good impression in the past, and whom I had not seen for some time, came into the office, a fact of which I was unaware at the time. I started out to wash my hands when he jumped up and jokingly held out his to me. There was nothing else for me to do but politely grasp it, with my sticky paw. He said nothing, but I still wonder what he thought. That was my most embarrassing moment.

H. J.

A Jovial Recognition.

One afternoon I came to Chicago on the elevated. As we neared the city a drunken man boarded the same car. I have been told that I look very much like President Hoover—as a matter of fact my friends call me "Herbie."

This intoxicated man finally noted the resemblance and in a voice so loud all the occupants of the car could hear him, called attention to me by saying: "Why, just look at that fellow. He looks like Hoover. I'll bet he is one of his relations."

Imagine my embarrassment with all the people gazing at me and the drunken man talking on and on until his station was called.

H. O. T

Harsh Words for Minnie.

I had spent most of a hot spring afternoon in my garden, spading and planting. Feeling quite proud of myself, I went out after supper to view the result of my labor. What a picture met my sight! There in the middle of one bed was "Minnie," our little boy's pet chicken, and seed and soil were flying in every direction.

Just then beyond the fence I saw our neighbor in her garden. And the look she gave me! Her name was Minnie. I turned and fled, too embarrassed for explanations.

A. L. G.

Due to a Slight Misunderstanding.

A lady belonging to our church phoned one day and, as I understood her, said: "Will you bake two jelly cakes this week?" I unhesitatingly agreed.

Imagine my feeling when just in the midst of the baking she arrived and said: "Here are the two delegates you were so kind as to take in your home this week and keep for us."

Typing Was Perfect.

I experienced my most embarrassing moment shortly after I got a position with a real estate firm. My employer came to my desk one afternoon with three gentlemen and gave me an important form to be filled out in quadruplicate. They were in a hurry for it and I was told to be careful in filling it out, as there could be no erasures.

I arranged the papers in my machine and after fifteen minutes of careful typing according to the dictation of my employer, while the others stood at my desk and waited, I carefully took the sheets out, delighted that due to my care I hadn't made a single mistake. But my delight soon changed to terrible embarrassment—I had placed the carbon paper wrong side up and the printing appeared on the back of each sheet instead of on the front.

Italian Scions Plan to Follow Fathers' Lives

Prince and Mussolini's Son Train for Power.

ROME.—(AP)—In marked contradiction to the United States, President's sons go to business school and scions of banking families are orchestra leaders, the sons of most Italian leaders plan lives like those of their fathers.

Prince Umberto and Bruno Mussolini, Italy's most famous sons of famous fathers, are treading the exact footsteps their parents took before them.

The prince, who will one day rule Italy from the throne of his father, King Victor Emmanuel, is getting a thorough training in court and military life.

Holds Colonel's Office.

He is a full colonel of a line regiment, stationed at Turin, and will fill, as a practical officer, the post of commander in chief of the Italian armies. His career was cut out for him at birth, as was his father's.

Bruno, 13 year old son of the duce, has embraced early the same career that led his father to his post as head of the Italian government and founder and leader of Fascism.

Already he is an editor. A short time ago he founded a paper, the Boys' Pen, which has a growing circulation among Fascist youths.

He is getting a sound background of Fascist political thought and will undoubtedly hold a governmental post when he grows older.

Carving Political Career.

Another example is the career of Galeazzo Ciano, son of the minister of communications and son-in-law of Mussolini. While not yet holding a portfolio, he is carving a career in his government's service. He has chosen diplomacy and is at present stationed at Shanghai.

Other cases of sons following their fathers into the government are somewhat harder to find, since most of Mussolini's aids are young men, well on the sunny side of 50, and their sons, if they have them, are still in the romper stage.

Berlin Dancers Halt as Fiddler Collects His Pay

BERLIN.—(AP)—The wild wave of dancing that swept Germany after the war, reaching its crest about the time one dollar could buy four trillion marks, has now sunk to a ripple.

Just a few months ago there still was life in the old cry "On with the dance!" But 1931 really is "economy year" in Germany, and millions of people, instead of dancing, are paying the fiddler.

Ballrooms seldom are packed any more, and the frothier side of the nation's amusement industry has wilted under the high luxury taxes like a paper flower in the rain.

Latest among the pleasure palaces to go into bankruptcy is the Palais de Danse, rendezvous of Berlin's snobbiest set before war.

After the revolution is became an expensive place of relaxation for any one who had the money, and even after few Germans felt they could afford to visit it tourist gold from other lands kept it going. But now that isn't enough to pay the overhead.

And there are other flashy establishments of the sort that look empty enough these nights to suggest that they, too, will have to turn off the glittering lights and fire the jazz orchestra.

Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or aged complexion is one fair to look upon? Nature causes the normal skin to peel off in tiny, unseen, flour-like particles, a little each day, renewing the complexion of youth naturally, but there comes a time when this skin shedding slows up. Worry, overwork, sickness, inactivity are reasons that cause the face to be blotchy, discolored, pimply and old looking. The thing to do, if you wish to look your prettiest at all times, is to assist nature in the process of absorption by using pure Mercolized Wax. Get an ounce at any drug store or beauty counter and use as directed. It gently but surely peels away the outer scarf skin, removing freckles, pimples, blackheads or a muddy complexion. The underneath skin, now in evidence, is clear, pink, fresh and velvety, and the entire face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty. To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines we recommend a face lotion of unusual merit. One ounce powdered saxolite and one-half pint witch hazel.

Japanese Wives Arrange Code for Husbands

Urge Quieter Manipulation of Chopsticks.

TOKIO. — (AP) — Japanese women have grown weary of the old, old custom of "yesing" their men folk all day long. In the new order of affairs the formerly demure, kimono clad wife has become so bold that she even dares to give her husband advice now and then.

The Fujokai or Women's World, in its stand for more rights for the housewife, has compiled a code of laws for husbands, covering jealousy, finance, home administration, health clothing, food, children, and other subjects.

Some of the "don'ts" for husbands, as arranged by the women staff members of the Fujokai, follow:

"Don't be a killjoy all your life. Crack a joke once in a while, even if it isn't very funny. Why confine your wisecracks to your friends?

* *

Suggested Attentions.

"Don't crack your chopsticks against the bowl while eating. You're apt to get on your wife's nerves.

"Don't ignore her wishes. If she suggests that you go together to a department store, go, even though you can think of nothing quite so boring. On the way back, stop for something to eat or drink. She'll like that.

"No matter how much you love your wife, give her a vacation from you now and then. Never loaf about the house all day, you may be in the way.

"If she happens to look pretty, don't forget to tell her so. If she isn't particularly pretty, tell her so anyhow. It won't hurt you.

* *

Celebration for Birthdays.

"Don't forget her birthday. Stage a little celebration of it each year.

"Don't reprimand her bitterly when she has simply forgotten to sew a missing button on your clothes. She'll snap back at you and then something is bound to happen.

"Never lie to your wife. You mustn't get her in the habit of disbelieving you. Some day you may really want her to believe you.

"Remember that your wife has a right to an opinion, too. Of course, it may be wrong, but it's hers, anyhow."

Soviet and British Build Brisk Trade Around Galoshes

MOSCOW.—(AP)—Galoshes, 42,500,000 pair of them, are on this year's program of the soviet rubber trust. The schedule also calls for 800,000 automobile tires and tubes.

The raw rubber for these products will come from English concerns, but the government is experimenting with rubber plantations in the southern Caucasus near Batum, and hopes some day to be independent of outside sources.

Until then the British will be the winner in both the import and export part of the trade. While every one in Russia seems to have a pair of galoshes, and they are absolute necessities in this climate, large quantities are exported.

In fact Russian galoshes sell in England for about $2.50 a pair whereas this winter at the shop here where only foreigners may trade, the price was around $16.

France Votes $100,000 to Build Foch's Tomb

PARIS.—(AP)—A credit of $100,000 has been voted for a tomb for Marshal Foch, who led the allies to victory in the world war.

The tomb will be in the Invalides, close to the resting place of Napoleon. It will measure 12 feet in height and will take two years to complete.

ARMCHAIR PLAYGOER

By Fanny Butcher.

LONDON has been excited about a dramatization of "Dark Hester," Anne Douglas Sedgwick's novel of 1929. It was done by Walter Ferris, who did the final adaptation of "Death Takes a Holiday," which, by the way, is having a revival in New York. The revival started last Monday night.

ANNE DOUGLAS SEDGWICK.

You may read the acting version of the Casella play, if you missed it when it played here, or if you want to live over that excellent second act. The last act and the first act read less well than they play. The second has a good deal of the thrill of the action in its printed word.

But to come back to "Dark Hester." The acting version isn't promised for publication, but the novel is waiting for every one. It is a study of the clash of two temperaments, that of the mother and the wife of a young man. The mother is "Victorian," as the wife calls her, only in the sense that she has certain delicacies of thought, manner and ideals which are completely alien to the wife who, as the mother thinks her, is hard, cold, often bitter, "dark," as her mother-in-law believes her to be.

They are as opposite in temperament as any two women could possibly be, and yet neither one is really right about the other. The mother worked to support her son, was independent in days when independence for women was almost a career in itself. Her daughter-in-law considers her tact and her gentleness weakness, and fails to see the strength which made her face a difficult life.

The daughter-in-law, "Dark Hester," has an honesty of outlook, a fairness in dealing with her husband and her child and her life which, to the older woman, is incomprehensibly cold. There you are.

The novel would have been a better novel if the author hadn't made her readers feel all along that she was being so fair with her characters that she was determined her readers should learn the lesson that there would be less misery in the world if people tried harder to understand one another.

As a record of a classic struggle between the two women who love a man it is memorable. The play has not elicited unqualified praise, although two scenes—one in which the mother and the son quarrel about the wife, and one in which the wife says good-by to the man who had once been her lover, were hailed as great emotional drama.

Australia Changes Code.

CANBERRA. — (AP) — Because confidential cable messages between Prime Minister Scullin, when he was in London, and members of his ministry in Australia mysteriously found their way into the newspapers Australia's cable code has been changed.

THE PENALTY of GRAY HAIR

Gray hair—age—slipping. All these unpleasant ideas seem to go together. Yet, it is not at all necessary. Gray Hair often comes to a young head and people who have it are neither old nor incapable. But how often you hear people say, "Why, she has gray hair!" and—she is on the shelf.

This penalty need no longer handicap the woman who uses Canute Water. This is a clear, spring-like water, of wonderful properties which actually restore hair to its original girlhood color. No complicated "color plan"; no danger of getting brunette shade when your hair is blonde. Not only the one kind but the one bottle is enough. It really is surprisingly what successful, youthifying results it gives.

Apply Canute Water yourself, in the privacy of your own home. Many women in town are doing the same thing; they simply do not mention it. You need not mention it either. Just buy a bottle from any good druggist—and get rid of the "age-penalty" in gray hair. Canute Water is so safe, so scientific and sure that your dealer knows it will satisfy you; if not, he will refund your money. Sold and recommended by Boston Store, The Fair, Owl or Walgreen's, or your own druggist. — The Canute Co., Milwaukee, Wis.—Adv.

VOICE OF THE FAN

If you would like your letters printed in this column please write on ONE side of the paper ONLY. If you want a personal answer send stamped, self-addressed envelope—PLEASE.

Wastes No Money on Garbo.

Dear Mae Tinée: Wouldn't this world be a sad place instead of the funny one it is, if we all liked the same things? Go on, Mae, darlin', leave your Garbo in peace and pat her back all you want to. I like you, like your reviews and your style, but I do not like Garbo or her so-called style which, to me, is nothing but an affected, insincere pose, and I know right well that you don't expect me to swallow her as art just because you like her.

She bored me enough in "A Woman of Affairs" to last my whole life. So many years ago that was, yet, I have never spent a cent to see her since and never will. Of course, I cannot always escape the advance screen advertising the coming of another of her bromides, so I have heard her supposed to be ravishing voice. It falls as raucously on my old ears as that of a New York stevedore cussing the far away grower who inadvertently shipped a big tarantula in the bunch of bananas he's unloading. What? You've never heard one? Well, you've heard a dozen of peddlers yell "strawberries" or "ice" up and down Chicago alleys, haven't you? Garbo's voice is exactly that melodious [?] to me.

So, "Disgusted Reader" who plays at hating you, and I, who sincerely admire you and dote on the reviews in despise, have a good deal in common after all. Only, I'm willing that those who like Garbo, rave and spend their four bits over her all they please. That, to my notion, is their business, and I wouldn't waste good postage to tell her I wish M. G. M. would tie a can to her posing. Life's too short to get that hot and bothered over things not directly my business.

C. W.

Editor's note: You are a broad woman, I see [I mean, mentally].

Still the Mythical Kingdom.

Dear Miss Tinée: In your review of "The Front Page" I noticed that you wrote, "In other cities and in the ... the background is still unhesitatingly mentioned as the 'Windy City.'" This town I am temporarily located in probably comes under the category of "the sticks," but when "The Front Page" was shown here the mythical kingdom note was shown with it and Chicago was not mentioned.

I should like to comment on Mrs. M. L. S.'s letter. In my opinion (contrary to hers) you do not criticize pictures harshly enough. What the movies in general need more than anything else is more analytical, challenging criticism. Good pictures and good actors can bear it—the other ones deserve no better. Sincerely.

L. A. L.

Editor's note: Thanks for the information and your interest in general.

Synopsis for German Talkies.

My dear Miss Tinée: German talkies seem to be becoming quite the thing, yet you regret that you do not understand them. Why don't you use your influence to have the theaters prefix a synopsis of the whole thing or of each part?

Yours truly, M. J. Fink.

Editor's note: When I get some, I will.

Valentino's Successor.

Mae Dear: Too bad you are not still using stars. You could pick out one little star for your write up about "Daybreak." Why not use numbers and give Ramon about ten? Do not forget he might go to a monastery, and he aspires to Valentino's crown. He has all the late lamented Italian had—plus a delightful sense of humor. He can talk and sing—well, maybe not as well as some of our grand opera boys, but he seems to please a few of us ordinary beings. And really, Mae, I think he is just as good looking.

One of Your Ex-Admirers.

[Until I was razzed because I thought you could "critic."]

Editor's note: Who dared to razz our Mama 'pank!

How the Cards Are Stacked.

Dear Miss Tinée: I know that you get a pleasant kick out of publishing the courteous appeal of the mother who signs herself "Mrs. M. L. S." for more decent pictures that can be viewed by children, and then turning the page over and praising a filthy gangster picture and branding as "art" the work of the director in bringing into the film things that have no place in any picture which you simply term as "coarseness."

If Mrs. M. L. S. knew how the cards are stacked against her, she would waste no time in appealing to you for aid in the renovation of the movie industry. Mrs. M. L. S. does not know that the "review" published in THE TRIBUNE is the best advertising that any picture can get in Chicago and that no important movie house would permit you to give an unfavorable write up of a picture they have booked.

It perhaps never occurred to Mrs. M. L. S. that a drink of gin and a twenty dollar note would bring praise through the "review" column of any picture and that some of them are actually written by the press agents of "stars" and advertising agents of the studios. Very respectfully.

"Cimarron"—A Great Picture.

Dear Mae: If it must be "on one side of the paper only"—here goes. Give M. T. a pat on the back for "There's my sentiments," too, for "Cimarron." I've seen it three times, and I felt the same thrill run through me each time as it unfolded before my eyes.

It is THE picture of the year—of all years. Richard Dix's performance stands in my mind all the rest of his life. I can never forget Yancey ... I was so blinded by tears when I saw "Cimarron" that I hardly saw him die.

I'd call him "the Finest Actor on the Screen Today."

well till the time comes to shoo it out into the open.

Photography and sound are commendable and you get the illusion of traveling underground. I read somewhere that the subway stations aren't the lifelike reproductions they might be, but I don't know, being an infrequent visitor to New York. They suited me, all right.

"The Subway Express" isn't one of the world's greatest mystery thrillers, but it is passing fair, and ISN'T a gangster picture. It'll keep you guessing—that's a cinch.

Banner Musical Show.

With last Thursday's performance, "Fine and Dandy," at the Erlanger theater, reached the 300 mark. The show opened at the Colonial theater, Boston, on Sept. 1, 1930, and after two weeks in that city played in New York until May 2 of this year. At the time of its departure from Broadway it was the longest run musical show on the street. Over this long period "Fine and Dandy" has averaged a weekly business slightly in excess of $30,000, which is an undisputed record for the current theatrical season. "Three's a Crowd," its nearest competitor, will end its New York run on June 6, about a dozen performances short of the "Fine and Dandy" record.

THERE are three new theatrical productions for the week in Chicago: "He," with Tom Powers, opening at the Illinois tomorrow night; "Meet My Sister," with Bettina Hall, which opened at the Grand last night, and "The Rap," with Helen Tenney, opening at the Studebaker Saturday night.

Pulitzer Prize Play Provokes Hot Argument

"Alison's House" Is Bad Choice, Critics Assert.

By Charles Collins.

THIS is the time of year when almost every dramatic critic and stage connoisseur rises from his cultural throne to utter a vigorous protest against the Pulitzer prize award. Last season was an exception to the rule—every one agreed that "The Green Pastures" deserved the ribbon and the cash honorarium. The merry Maytime of 1931, however, has revived the grand old custom of booing the umpires, and Susan Glaspell's "Alison's House," recently proclaimed as the best play of the season from the point of view of the committee on Pulitzer awards, is receiving a hearty razzing.

The New York critics, in particular, seem thoroughly understood that "Alison's House" is not the people's choice. They are not in agreement upon the better play that should have received the honor, but their ex post facto nominations include "Green Grow the Lilacs," "Elizabeth the Queen," "Tomorrow and Tomorrow," "Five Star Final," and "Once in a Lifetime." A voice in the wilderness has even been heard crying out loud in favor of Channing Pollock's "The House Beautiful," but since it does not come from a member of the dramatic critics' union it may be disregarded.

Voice of the Times.

J. Brooks Atkinson of the New York Times, sound writer and sympathetic observer of the American stage, may be quoted on the subject. He saw virtues in "Alison's House" that his colleagues missed when the first nighters made their hegira from Broadway to Fourteenth street to report upon Eva Le Gallienne's staging of Miss Glaspell's drama; but he bluntly refuses to grant the work a Pulitzer laurel. He says:

"Miss Glaspell is one of our most gifted writers, particularly of novels, and 'Alison's House' is a play with a respectable theme. But to select it as the best play of the season is to show how meagerly the committee esteems the current American drama and the annual prize it helps bestow. Every few years this committee insists upon publishing its ignorance. . . .

"It is a play of flat statements—of emotions, of sentimentally literary flourishes and of perfunctory characterizations. No matter how earnestly its characters talk, in a strangely stereotyped prose, the image of Alison never appears for an instant. . . . Everything that might be conceivably dramatic in the narrative is consistently crowded off the stage, so that it never disturbs the rigid dullness of the spoken word.

"Prize committees are always unpopular and under suspicion; all cultural authority is accepted on sufferance. But sometimes, as in the case of 'Alison's House,' the drama committee for the Pulitzer prize goes out of its way to make its glory hollow."

Reading the Play.

All of which has piqued my curiosity and stimulated my zeal for research. "Alison's House" will not be a matter of playgoing attention in this region until next season, when it will figure on the subscription program of the Dramatic league; but I said to myself, "This affair seems to be an atrocity that should be investigated without delay." So I settled down to read "Alison's House," after hastily borrowing Fanny Butcher's copy of the printed text.

Strangely enough, I enjoyed the experience. The chore I had expected turned out to be an hour of recreation. I liked "Alison's House." I found its theme interesting; its atmosphere friendly; its characters persuasively American; its story quietly stirring. It may easily be a play for reading rather than for acting, for it is gray and demure of tone, and its scenes are not high-lighted with action. Still, I found pleasure in "Alison's House" under the lamp. What I think about it as revealed before the footlights will be another story, and I hope that nothing I have said as a play reader shall be held against me when I sit in judgment upon this bone of contention as a first nighter.

Lares and Penates.

I found in "Alison's House," among other things, a feeling for American family life that is rare in the theater. In most plays kinship between the characters is merely an assumption of the author and a line of type upon the program. It is a matter of fortune, and the audience is expected to take the blood-relationship, home and tribal spirit for granted. In "Alison's House," however, this elusive quality is caught and communicated, without waste of dialogue. I call it no slight achievement. It brings Miss Glaspell, the American, into association with Tchekhoff, the Russian, as a minor magician for the evocation of domestic moods and background.

This play, as nearly every one has been told, relates to the discovery, many years after her death, that a New England spinster and recluse named Emily Dickinson was a poet who had left important, strikingly original contributions to American letters. She had lived as an unknown, isolated contemporary of the literary giants of the nineteenth century. She came out of that old-fashioned past to astound the radicals of modernism. It is a famous story among literary folk, and Miss Glaspell has followed it closely, changing the name of Emily Dickinson to Alison Stanhope, and the environment from Amherst, Mass., to the Iowa shore of the Mississippi.

"Inner" Annals.

The denouncers of the Pulitzer award are inclined to argue that the interest of "Alison's House" is predicated upon one's familiarity with the inside story of Emily Dickinson. I prefer, however, to regard the unseen

Critic Writes a Last Tribute to David Belasco

Master Showman Was Shy at Heart.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—David Belasco would have approved a visualization of his own death and the ceremonies attending it, I think. It was, without stress being placed on making it so, sufficiently theatrical to have pleased the master showman to whom all life was a show.

He might have added the item of lying in state, though I doubt it. David had failed greatly, the last several weeks. He was white and drawn and, being a proud man, I doubt if he would have approved the idea of his cold corpse being stared at by a curious multitude.

He had a sense of dignity. He was a sensitive soul, really, and rather shy, though his showman's impulse overcame both these characteristics as frequently as it gave way to them. People said he was an old cheater when he backed away from curtain calls and pulled his forelock. They said it was quite noticeable that he was always there, in the wings, waiting to be dragged on to the stage by one of his new made stars or to split the honors with a Warfield or a Carter, a Starr, or an Ulric.

This is true. He was a showman. He never denied that. He knew, none knew better than he, the value of publicity. He could absorb salutes as greedily as any be-medaled general in the National Guard. But the actual doing of the thing that would gain him the publicity he wanted and the applause for which he hungered; the physical transference of himself to the front of the procession or out upon a stage to face a grinning, applauding audience was not easy for him.

Not Without Enemies.

Much of the talk of the week, naturally, has been about Belasco and his way. He was not without enemies in the sense that many people distrusted him and many accused him of being the author of certain of their misfortunes—actors he had fired, or hired at low salaries; playwrights whose royalties he had cut into deeply after helping them rewrite their scripts; ambitious players to whom he had, they say, given his word as to future preferment and then forgotten.

For a few days kindly things were said, and eloquent tributes paid, as is the old human custom. But once the wasted body was laid in the tomb, out popped tributes with a reverse English. Which is natural. Any man of many contacts with sensitive, vain, child minded people is bound to make such enemies.

A good many have asked me about his affectation of wearing clerical garb. What was that but a kind of cheap showmanship, they have asked. And what was the cause for it?

I don't know. I suspect it could be traced, first, to a sort of infant fixation. A part of his impressionable youth was spent in study with a Catholic priest, Father MacGuire of Victoria, B. C., where, incidentally, David made his first appearances on the stage as the child in "Pizzaro" and again as the child in "Metamora."

He may have admired the good father so much that he copied his choker, or it may be that his love of the theatrical prompted his trying the priest's garb. Finding that it both became him and attracted attention, he probably clung to it as a sort of trademark—as Louis Mann clung to the huge, batwing collars, and as Dan-

Army Planes Keep Newsreel Cameras Busy

And Give Film Producers Food for Thought.

By Tom Pettey.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—These "million dollar air thrillers" from Hollywood hereafter will be just so much celluloid to this movie goer. I have seen the real thing. Ten days with the army airmen—days filled with aircraft thrills—make shadow pictures seem futile things. More than 600 planes, fifteen million dollars' worth of fighting ships, roaring through the skies is a spectacle for the film makers to shoot at with their heaviest bank accounts.

The newsreel men, however, have profited greatly through the army's biggest air show. The "Battle of Dayton," the "Capture of Chicago" and the "Destruction of New York City" will flicker on many news screens for weeks to come. The air maneuvers have been field days for the newsreel men. . . .

In Dayton, the concentration point for training for the two weeks of mimic war, movie sound trucks were parked deep in the flying field out past the farthest ship. No such pictures have ever been made, for nobody except the army has so many airplanes to play at war with.

* *

Camera Planes Numerous.

The camera planes have become as much a part of battle formations as the fighting ships. In the next real war the movie machine is going to play an increasingly important part. Its eye never falters and out of the dark room after the "battle" comes the real story of what happened.

A camera man standing erect in the rear cockpit of a speeding biplane has become a familiar sight to those who followed this year's greatest air maneuvers. I talked to several of the picture men and obtained a story from each movie maker.

The best "shots" just happen, they say. One young English war captain, now a flying photographer, told me of two remarkable air pictures

High Schools' Chorus of 346 Will Give Concert Wednesday

By Edward Moore.

WHAT the Chicago high schools are doing in music will be set out in the form of a concert at Orchestra hall next Wednesday evening. A chorus of 346 picked from all the high schools of the city will sing, a selected high school orchestra will play, and Dr. J. Lewis Browne, director of music of the Chicago public schools, will conduct. Oscar W. Anderson will act as assistant conductor.

Dr. Browne has given time, thought, and erudition to the program. It is to be a historical program, beginning with some of the earliest music that has come down to us and ending with some of the present era. The first song, "Sirath Hayyam," is an ancient Sephardic melody, how old no one knows, but bearing a legendary theory that it was the song sung by Miriam and her companions in the biblical story. It will be sung in Hebrew.

A Greek work, the Hymn to Apollo, sung in ancient Greek, is one of the few works of its kind to have been deciphered from inscriptions in Greece. Its date of composition is placed about 278 B. C. It was discovered some forty years ago by the French Archæological school in Athens. From thence the old music goes to an Ambrosian chant of the fourth century in the first mode, a Gregorian chant of the eighth century in the eighth mode, and works by Palestrina and Cruger of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

The rest of the program will be modern—choruses by Franck, Gounod, and some Chicago composers and a few specimens of Americana. The orchestra will play Brahms' "Academic Festival" Overture and a movement from the Mozart Symphony in G minor. William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools, will make an address.

News of Ravinia Artists.

Most of the artists of the coming Ravinia season have been getting ready for the season by standing by, although they admit nationalities variously of the United States, Canada, Spain, Italy, Germany, Russia, France, Poland, Scandinavia, and Belgium. Giovanni Martinelli and Virgilio Lazzari are taking short vacations in Italy, Giuseppe Danise has gone to Switzerland to put his children in school there, Ina Bourskaya has returned to Russia for the first time since she left that mysterious land, Marek Windheim is in Poland, Louis Hasselmans is in France, and Julia Claussen is visiting her daughters in England.

But Lucrezia Bori prefers republican America to republican Spain—she has received decorations from the ex-royal family of the orders of Isabel la Catolica and Alfonso XII.—and Elisabeth Rethberg has remained on this side for the first spring in a number of years. Yvonne Gall has been singing in Europe this winter, but will soon be here. Others that have stayed here are Edward Johnson, Mario

Suspense Keeps You Guessing in This Thriller

Underground Railway Has Strange Murder.

"THE SUBWAY EXPRESS."

The subway train was speeding on,
As subway trains do do. (Yes, two "do's," copyreader.)
When some one murdered Tracy!
AND—the question then was—
WHO?????

Produced by Columbia. Directed by Fred Newmeyer. Presented at the Palace theater.

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

Who killed Mr. Tracy on the subway express, between two stations of the underground railway?

The train is full of passengers, any one of whom MIGHT be the murderer and most of whom probably aren't. It is up to Inspector Killian to solve the mystery.

Called to make an investigation, Killian puts every one through a process of questioning. For a long time his efforts to locate the killer are fruitless. Then—BING! Killian triumphant! With promotion undoubtedly flirting with him from the offing! [Here's ONE time when Mr. Jack Holt gets a break!]

The action of the picture takes place almost entirely in one car, with shots of stations along the tracks. The passengers conduct themselves and respond to the volley of questions fired at them in varied fashion. Fred Kelsey, as a bonehead cop, furnishes the low comedy—and they could have left him out for all of me—but Ethel Wales, Julianne Leighton, Mason Williams and others, provide real amusements.

A Polished Performance.

Mr. Holt, as usual, gives a polished performance. As Officer Killian, he is shrewd, determined, unguilible. Aileen Pringle [who has gone permanently blond, I'm afraid] does well the little she has to do. The same may be said for other members of the cast.

I won't spoil the story for you by giving leads re: the answer to its question, but I will say that the piece is quite suspenseful and hides its secret

Principal Keeps Farragut Active in Its Community

Realizes Ideals Near His Boyhood Home.

By Ruth De Young.

PETER B. RITZMA has made Farragut Junior High school an important civic, educational, and social center in the community it serves. Believing strongly in the importance of linking the work of the school with that of the neighborhood, this tall, blue eyed Dutchman has gone far to realize his ideal in the three years he has directed Farragut.

PETER B. RITZMA.

No better illustration of the scope or benefits of this program can be offered than in the activities of the last fortnight. It was the Farragut community council, organized by Mr. Ritzma with a membership of more than forty leading men of the Lawndale community, that sponsored the Youth week assembly last Tuesday evening, attended by hundreds of residents of the district. Two evenings earlier, Farragut students took charge of the program at the Sunday evening service of the Millard Congregational church, and on more than one occasion they contributed to the Jubilee celebrations in the Lawndale district.

Mayor Cermak served on the community council for more than two years, and it was in recognition of this work that William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools, appointed Mr. Ritzma a member of the superintendent's advisory council on community service.

Back to Childhood Home.

Perhaps at least part of his interest in relating the school to the community lies in the fact that Mr. Ritzma has returned to the neighborhood in which he spent several of his early years. Born at 17th and Throop streets, he moved shortly to his grandfather's home, on a farm bounded by Ogden avenue and 21st street, Crawford and Central Park avenues, and there he spent his first six years.

Interesting it is to note that when Mr. Ritzma became principal of Burns school, 26th street and Central Park avenue, in after years, he was returning to his grandfather's farm. Today his father, Benjamin Ritzma, is operating the Monarch Coal and Supply company on a corner of the old farm site, at 22d street and Crawford avenue.

Following his early preparation in the Lemont public schools and at Joliet Township High school, Mr. Ritzma passed the Cook county teachers' examination. His first charge was a rural school, near Orland, where he served in every capacity from principal to janitor. After two years in this position he moved to the principalship of the Oak Lawn public school, and thence to Chicago.

Combines Theory and Practice.

"Four years' experience in the country qualified me for entrance into the Chicago public school system without examination in those days," explained Mr. Ritzma. "The next six years were strenuous, for I continued teaching and at the same time took the degree of bachelor of philosophy at the University of Chicago, studying afternoons, Saturdays, and summer quarters. I'm glad I combined the two, however, for it correlated the practical and theoretical. I also knew better what I needed for the course I intended to follow."

Mr. Ritzma taught at Emerson school, Walnut street and Paulina avenue, while studying. In 1917, a year before he received his degree, he was advanced to Sexton Junior High school when it was opened as one of three junior high schools in Chicago.

"This was my introduction to the junior high school movement," continued Mr. Ritzma, "and from the beginning I was impressed with a plan which segregated boy and girls during the seventh, eighth, and ninth grades when they are passing through the adolescent period. I wasn't to stay long in the junior high school at this period, however, for as soon as I received my university degree in 1918 and passed the principals' examination I went to Schurz High school as teacher of mathematics and science. While at Schurz I was also in charge of the branch high school in the Kelvyn park building."

At Farragut Since 1928.

Then came the first principalship in Chicago at Froebel school, 21st street and Damen avenue, followed by the mastership of Burns school. In September, 1928, Mr. Ritzma returned to the junior high school as principal of Farragut, three years after the school was founded.

"One thing that has impressed me particularly in the junior high school is the opportunity to group pupils according to their particular interest and aptitudes," explained Mr. Ritzma. "This is impossible in the elementary school. By so doing we can develop the 'success' attitude in a child far more than when he is thrown in contact with students who perhaps have a considerably higher I. Q."

At Farragut Mr. Ritzma has placed emphasis on the extra curricular program. The music department is very active, especially since many of the students, foreign born or of foreign descent, are lovers of music. Farragut boasts the only musical saw band in the city schools, as well as an orchestra, band, girls' and boys' glee club, and a drum and bugle corps.

One of Mr. Ritzma's favorite projects is the camp cooking club for boys which he organized.

Character training and Braille work are two more interesting Farragut projects. One home room period each week is devoted to character education by means of questions and discussion of simple problems that arise in the ordinary course of a day.

VOICE of the WEST SIDE

Charming Naperville to Celebrate Close of Its First Century

Naperville, planning for the celebration of its 100th anniversary early in June, has a rare opportunity to take stock of much that has been worth while in its past and preserving it in the life of the modern era. The town is not without its landmarks that speak of a pioneer period when sociability was perhaps at its highest peak. Early settlers were then obliged to struggle on a common basis. Without the exchange of genuine hospitality, life in the raw country would have been unbearable.

Progress brought its economic changes to Illinois communities. Social distinctions followed. The handshake did not disappear, but it became more perfunctory as inhabitants depended less upon their neighbors. Sophistication tended to develop restraint.

After a century of existence, during which Naperville has taken its place among Chicago's modern suburbs, public spirited residents feel the desire to look back over the years as a basis for planning the future. Scenic beauties that lured the founders down "by the old mill stream" find new appreciation in the eyes of the present generation possessed of privileges of which their forerunners never dreamed.

Modern Naperville, however, realizes that the old timers experienced a contentment and happiness which depended on something besides invention or material progress. Pageantry will feature the anniversary program, but old fashioned fellowship will be the keynote that will make the celebration delightful.

SAFETY WEEK.

Those who believe that the setting apart of special days or special weeks for this and that has been overdone should certainly have no objection to Safety week, just observed by the eight western suburbs forming the Western Gateways association. A study of statistics points to the necessity of motorists observing such a week fifty-two times a year.

With a safety lane located in the business section of La Grange, the Western Gateways association has offered an opportunity for free testing of mechanical equipment of motor cars. Many drivers discovered to their surprise that brakes, lights, wheel alignment, steering apparatus, and rear view mirrors were not all that they should be. Constant increase in the number of automobiles on the highways demands perfect performance at critical moments if accidents are to be avoided.

It speaks well for the attitude of motorists that the safety lane in La Grange was a busy place throughout last week. This mechanical checkup, supplemented with safety talks in the churches and schools, served to make the community danger conscious. A survey of accidents fixes the blame where it belongs. The speeder and the road hog are still abroad. Excuses and regrets continue to offer little solace to those who are maimed for life.

The Western Gateways association, with its intensive Safety week program has demonstrated that it is not only interested in better highways, but in the education of motorists who use them.

AWARDS AS INSPIRATION.

As commencement time approaches various west side high schools recognize student achievements of many kinds. Those who received the awards as inspiration to further progress rather than as an end to effort are to be congratulated for victories thus achieved early in their careers.

Said Edmund Burke: "God has implanted in man a sense of ambition and a satisfaction arising from the contemplation of his excelling his fellows in something deemed valuable among them." It is best that ambition reveal itself in youth, for it is far less apt to stir the pulses when bodily energy begins to wane and the problems of existence interfere. Statistics do not show that the honor student always continues to pass his fellows in later life. There are legends of those who, after giving little promise in the school room, have turned out to be geniuses. Teachers of long experience, however, have had few surprises of this kind. That ambition sometimes does flicker out along the way is one of life's tragedies, but it is no cause for disparagement of commencement honors won at a time when such distinctions carry keenest pleasure.

Every school graduate has the satisfaction of knowing that persistence has resulted in reaching a first set goal of importance. All graduates cannot be honor students, but, in finishing a task begun, all of them have demonstrated a fiber of character essential to success.

THE NEIGHBORHOOD'S HEROES.

The fact that Chicago is a city of neighborhoods, each with its own patriotic organizations, means much toward the observance of Memorial day in a manner that makes the remembrance of the soldier dead definite and doubly impressive.

Thanks to the posts of the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the United Spanish War Veterans, and the Grand Army of the Republic, the graves of Chicago's soldier dead have been carefully marked. Thus wreaths are placed not only in memory of comrades in arms but of former neighbors and personal acquaintances. In death, as in life, the division of the great city into many communities has overcome that lack of human sympathy which might otherwise caharacterize the metropolis with its millions.

Certainly, in fixing the date for Memorial day, the founders could not have chosen better so far as the Chicago setting is concerned. Between the city and many of the cemeteries lie forest preserves which, as if conscious of their part in the floral remembrance, just now present a riot of color in blossoms.

The passing of years finds no passing of the Chicago spirit to pause in reverence for its soldier dead. Memorial day brings out a fine expression of the great city's soul.

River Forest Building Writ Case Up Tomorrow

A mandamus suit filed by George S. Forbes to compel the village of River Forest to grant him a permit to erect apartment and business structures on his land at Harlem and Chicago avenues will be heard tomorrow in the Circuit court of Cook county, George P. Foster, former village attorney, announced yesterday. The land in question is now zoned for single family residences.

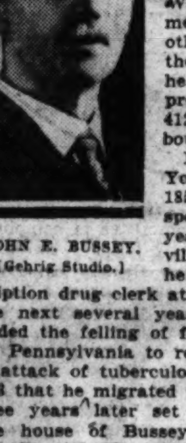
WHO'S WHO ON WEST SIDE

John E. Bussey, known as "Pop" Bussey to his friends and associates on the west side, has been identified with the civic, business, and fraternal interests of this district for more than 40 years. Well does he remember the one other house in the block when he purchased his present home at 4122 Washington boulevard in 1891.



JOHN E. BUSSEY. [Gehrig Studio.]

Born in New York state in 1856, Mr. Bussey spent his early years in Titusville, Pa., where he was a prescription drug clerk at the age of 16. The next several years he superintended the felling of forests in western Pennsylvania to recuperate from an attack of tuberculosis. It was in 1883 that he migrated to Chicago and three years later set up the furniture house of Bussey & Briggs at 4010 West Madison street.

Today he is reputed to be the oldest furniture salesman on the road, selling in more than one instance to the fourth generation. Mr. Bussey takes an active interest in the projects of the Garfield park district and also devotes considerable time to the Knights Templar, Columbia commandery, and Medinah temple.

Best of all, however, he likes to get out his fishing rod up at his summer home on Long lake, Phelps, Wis. Mr. Bussey can tell more than one fish story about the bass he has caught.

WEST SIDE SOLON THROWS A SCARE INTO COLLEAGUE

Coia Frightens Doyle on "Pushcart" Bill.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., May 23.—[Special.]—Charles Coia, veteran Democratic Italian legislator who is serving his sixth term as a representative of the 17th district in Chicago, threw a scare into a downstate assemblyman this week and, with his colleague, Rep. Anthony Pintozzi, had a lot of fun with the members for a few hours.

The downstater was Rep. Howard Doyle [Dem., Decatur], who is serving his first term. Doyle spoke in behalf of a bill sponsored by Rep. John M. Peffers [Rep., Aurora], which would license the itinerant or transient merchant—the pushcart peddler—before he could peddle his wares. By the terms of the bill, which passed the house, the peddler would be required to file a $500 bond with the treasurer of the county in which he wished to operate and pay a license fee of $25.

Doyle harangued the house in a speech for the measure, visioning the streets of every hamlet "filled with foreign cart peddlers." It passed.

Coia Musters Stern Tone.

Unknown to Doyle, Coia marked the the speech and conferred secretly with Pintozzi. When the bill was disposed of the pair approached Doyle, in the presence of a handful of other Democratic assemblymen. In a stern tone Coia addressed him:

"Mr. Doyle, unwittingly, perhaps, you have offered a severe slight to the people of our district, the 17th. You have aided a piece of legislation which is designed to interfere with some of our humble constituents who make their living by peddling wares from door to door. I shall do what I can, but I fear that the hand of Camorra may seek you."

"The Italian Curse."

"The Italian curse!" added Pintozzi quietly.

"The what?" asked Doyle, in a hardly audible voice.

"The insult, supreme!" explained Pintozzi coldly.

Other members who heard the conversation managed to keep straight faces while Doyle moved uneasily away from Coia and Pintozzi and they watched with hands hiding their smiles as the Decaturite moved from friend to friend asking advice. It was only when he tried apology that the situation became too comical and the joke dawned upon him.

TRIBUNE OFFERS CASH FOR BEST SPRING PHOTOS

Spring is sprung! Wandering among the daffodils may inspire the young photographer to make some snappy shots. The Tribune continues its offer of $5, $3 and $2 as weekly prizes for the best amateur photographs received. All subjects are eligible to be treated in the photos for this contest, but we suggest that they be in keeping with the season. Photographers must be, as heretofore, of amateur standing. An amateur photographer is one who has not sold photographs for commercial gain.

Lakes, ponds, rivers, the new spring bonnet, the children, unusual views, the woods, the meadows, the streets, and, in fact anything indoors or out is a legitimate subject for an amateur photographer.

Send your best photo to the Photo Contest, Metropolitan Section, The Tribune. Three prizes will be awarded each week in your own metropolitan section, north, west, or south. The full name and address of the person submitting the picture should be printed clearly on the back of each entry, with the full name and address of each person appearing in the picture, left to right.

MAYOR GOLD TO STRESS ECONOMY IN FOREST PARK

Police Courtesy Drive Is Started.

Mayor George R. Gold, elected to office again in the spring election in Forest Park, announced yesterday that during his new term he would follow the policies of his last four years of incumbency, with additional stress, however, on an economy program. Organized under the commission form of government candidates in Forest Park run independently for the village offices.

GEORGE R. GOLD. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

"My main object will be to keep Forest Park clean as I have endeavored to do in the past," said Mayor Gold.

Stresses Police Courtesy.

"I want Forest Park to be a village that visitors enjoy coming to and are loath to leave," the mayor continued. "Right now we are stressing courtesy on the part of all the village officers, especially the members of the police department who contact the public every day.

"Finances do not permit of further improvements at the present time so economy is to strike the keynote of the next four years. Forest Park is $13,009 short in the amount, due it from the county treasurer on the 1928 tax levy and the 1929 taxes are slower in coming in than those of the former year."

Mayor Gold is a native Forest Parker, having been born and reared in the western suburb. With Mrs. Gold, their three sons and daughter, he resides at 512 Hannah avenue. He is associated in business with the Shoenrofen company, manufacturers of soft drinks.

Known as Hard Worker.

Other Forest Park officials point out that Mayor Gold has, no doubt, given more actual hours to the position of mayor than any former incumbent. He is frequently at his office at 7:30 in the morning and it is not unusual to also find him there at 10 or 11 o'clock in the evening.

During his former term of office, the mayor made it his business to see that all village employés received their salary checks promptly, there having been numerous complaints in this regard.

Before his election to office the first time the installation of a new street lighting system had been voted but it fell to Mayor Gold and the commissioners to see that it was installed.

Other improvements carried out by Mayor Gold include the widening and repaving of Madison street and Roosevelt road, the resurfacing of village streets and repairing of sidewalks, erection of the new village incinerator, and the beautification of the Chicago and North Western railroad yards.

HOLSTEIN LEADS PARK RACE FOR JAMES TROPHY

Award of Cup Will Be Made in December.

Holstein park recreation center, 2200 North Oakley avenue, is leading the annual race for the William R. James silver trophy. This announcement was made last week when the season of indoor activities in the west parks closed. Award of the cup will be made next December following the grading of the year's activities in all of the west park centers. Anthony DeJulio, Miss Frances Stewart and Avis Overfield are instructors at Holstein park.

"Mr. DeJulio, men's gymnasium instructor, is now in possession of the boys' division A banner, turned over to the park having accumulated the largest number of points at the end of each sport," said William J. H. Schultz, superintendent of small parks and playgrounds, yesterday. "Indoor baseball has just been completed, and preparations are now under way for outdoor sports which will begin with playground baseball, and continue with track and field meets, swimming meets, tennis tournaments, horseshoe pitching tournaments, soccer, touch football, and volley ball tournaments."

Holstein Leads Pulaski.

Miss Frances Stewart, woman's gymnasium instructor at Holstein park, and Avis Overfield, recreation instructor, have also captured the girls' division A banner and a recreation banner for this center. The grand total of points accumulated by Holstein in the three departments amounts to 1717.25, giving the park a lead of 301 points over Pulaski park for the cup.

Eckhart park holds one leg of the cup for having accumulated the largest number of points during 1930, the first time the cup was awarded. The park accumulating the largest number of points at the end of 1931 wins a leg on this trophy, and the park winning three legs in the trophy keeps it permanently.

Harrison Boosts Standing.

Mr. Schultz pointed out yesterday that Harrison park, 18th and Wood streets, has bettered its standing considerably since the west park board built a community fieldhouse with a gymnasium for boys and men and another for girls and women. Previously there were no facilities for practice indoors.

The playground baseball tournament for both boys and girls and men and women will be held in all the recreation centers on June 6. There will be junior and intermediate divisions for the boys and men and junior and senior division for the girls and women. A golf driving contest was held yesterday morning on the Douglas park ball field with three entrants taking part in the junior and intermediate divisions.

Rehearse for Music Festival.

Plans are now under way for the annual music festival sponsored by the west park board to be held June 27 and 28 at the Municipal pier. The musical organizations at Austin Town hall will present "The Rose Maiden" on June 28 under the direction of Carl Lagerquist.

Miss Roslyn Harry, Miss Edna Thiele, Miss Hattie Laparsky, Mrs. F. E. Viol, Mrs. Rose Sorensen, and G. Edward Kelin wil sing the solo parts. Rehearsals are being held at 7:30 every Thursday evening at Austin Town hall.

OAK PARK GIRL AWARDED $500 SCHOLARSHIP

Miss Henrietta Komerek, a senior at Oak Park and River Forest Township High school, is the recipient of the 1931 Pen-Hellenic scholarship. Miss Komerek is the seventh student to benefit from this fund raised annually by the West Suburban Pan-Hellenic association. With an average of 92.6 for four years, Miss Komerek has also taken a prominent part in student activities. Mrs. Arthur M. Houser Jr., chairman of the committee on selection made on the basis of scholarship, character, leadership, and service, announced yesterday that the award was for $500 and entitles the student to enter a college or university of her own choice.

2 MORTON HIGH PLAYWRIGHTS TO STAR IN COMEDY

Country Store Drama to Be Presented.

Three acts of hilarious laughter, written, directed and produced by students of J. Sterling Morton High school, Cicero, will be presented in three performances Friday and Saturday evenings at the Berwyn Masonic temple, 3310 South Oak Park avenue. The production "The Duke's 'Osses" will be given at 8:30 each evening with a late performance at 11:30 on May 30.

The co-authors, Robert Dillon and Robert Dunlop, prominent in student dramatics at Morton, will also play the leading rôles. Dillon will play the part of a lackadaisical store owner and Dunlop will take the rôle of an unruly clerk. Two acts of the comedy take place in the country store where the farmers furnish much of the amusement.

The Heroine Elopes.

In the first act the sheriff, enacted by Clyde Schroeder, announces that two insane axe murderers have escaped from the state house for the criminally insane. The two maniacs, Benjamin Swartz and Charles Baum, furnish many a hair raising thrill in madcap fooleries before the capture.

Miss Marie Horna, the heroine, elopes in the stillness of the night and is believed to have fallen prey to the lunatics. Finally she is rescued by the blond hero, Jack Dee.

Members of the supporting cast include Miss Mildred Tesar, the village gossip; Miss Lillian Tesar, the flirt; Richard Wasz, the villian, and Albert Putris, the minister. During the intermissions the members of the cast will present a vaudeville specialty number. The Tesar sisters are scheduled to do a dance number, and Mr. Dillon and Mr. Dunlop will do a skit. Mr. Dee and Mr. Schroeder will furnish a group of musical selections.

Offer First Summer Courses.

Morton High school will conduct a summer school this year for the first time, Harry Victor Church, superintendent, announced yesterday.

Because of the limited number of courses to be offered, registration for the summer quarter will close June 13. Subjects in which instruction will be given include senior American history, modern history, first and second year mathematics, first year Latin, and the first year of shorthand and typewriting. If enough students request other courses they will be added, Mr. Church said. The summer course in history, mathematics, and Latin will cover a year's work, while those in shorthand and typing will only cover one semester's work.

The tuition fee for two subjects for the course starting June 15 and closing July 24 will be $20. R. U. Hutchins, a member of the Morton faculty, is conducting registration for the history, shorthand, and typing courses, while W. R. Willas is to be consulted on mathematics and Latin. Miss Louise Wilmot is dean of the summer school.

WEST SUBURBAN LEAGUES OPEN ART EXHIBITIONS

Painters Need Money, President Says.

The Austin, Oak Park, and River Forest Art league opened an exhibition of paintings by local artists last week at the store of John A. Colby & Sons, 1140 Lake street, Oak Park, to continue through June 13. All of the pictures on display are for sale, according to Mrs. F. H. Bartholomew, president of the league.

"Depression in the business world has been particularly felt by painters," said Mrs. Bartholomew yesterday, "and now is the time when our own artists may be helped by villagers interested in purchasing paintings. We have in the west suburban communities many artists who are recognized not alone in Chicago but throughout the American art world. Pictures included in this exhibit have been selected by a jury of four leading Chicago artists. Each of them is the work of one of the eighty members of the league."

Picture to Be Bought for Schools.

Mrs. Georgia Leigh Caldwell, Oak Park artist and prominently identified with Chicago art circles, will be on hand each day to handle the sale of pictures and to give information concerning them. The art league has voted to purchase one picture, not to exceed $200 in price, to add to the collection of pictures now in circulation among the public schools of Oak Park and River Forest. Twenty-four paintings are now included in this group. The new picture will be selected by a vote of the members of the league.

The Maywood Art league, a branch of the Oak Park and River Forest organization, has also placed several pictures in the collection under the direction of E. T. Grigware. At a meeting last week Mrs. M. B. Murray was reëlected president of the Maywood organization. James D. Dowdakin was named vice president; Edward E. Kibbee, recording secretary; Mrs. John E. McCullough, corresponding secretary; and Frank J. Ulrich, treasurer. The new board of directors includes D. C. Donaldson, Mrs. Wilbur Coons, Ivan Beard, and Mrs. J. D. Dowdakin.

Officers to Be Hostesses.

Officers of the parent league will be present at the exhibit and sale as hostesses. They include Mrs. Bartholomew; Mrs. Ralph Weyburn, first vice president; Mrs. Robert Kerr, second vice president; Mrs. Alfred Pohlman, recording secretary, and Miss Maud Wilson, corresponding secretary.

Neighborhood Theaters

Paul Ash features the bill this week at the Paradise theater. Paul is bringing some new ideas in stage show presentation from his recent engagement at the Publix Paramount theaters in New York and Brooklyn.

Robert Montgomery of the reckless smile and dreamy eyes appears on the screen at the west side movie house in the film "Shipmates." This is the first time that Mr. Montgomery has starred in a production and we predict, not the last. He is a fresh young seaman employed on an oiler. It's the admiral's daughter whom he meets, loves, and wins—only after service on a flagship, however, which brings out the real man in him.

Hobart Bosworth contributes a noteworthy characterization as the admiral. Ernest Torrence, Dorothy Jordan, and Cliff Edwards are all in the supporting cast.

Double Bill at Marbro.

There's a double bill at the Marbro theater this week with "City Streets" and "Daybreak" as the two attractions. The first picture is another film dealing with the beer racket. Gary Cooper and Sylvia Sidney make an appealing pair as "the Kid" and "the man." They're young and smart and not really bad—just the victims of circumstance. Paul Lukas contributes an interesting note to the performance.

"Daybreak," a movie made from the book by Arthur Schnitzler, is a film well worth your time. It is a swift running story with an undercurrent of tragedy and humor as well. Ramon Novarro is the carefree lieutenant of the Austrian Imperial guard. A rogue and a darling, real love also proves him to be a truly worthwhile person. Helen Chandler is the wistful music teacher who bowls over the debonair young soldier.

2 Films at Crawford.

"Single Sin" and "Conquering Horde" are the two attractions at the Crawford theater. The first picture deals with the life of a lovely lady whose deeply regretted past almost succeeds in ruining a happy present and a promising future. It's a good cast with Kay Johnson and Bert Lytell in the leads.

Richard Arlen and Fay Wray star in the western film "Conquering Horde." Fay is the beautiful owner of a ranch and 5,000 head of cattle in Texas just after the civil war when cattle went begging and confidence men were buying up the lands of impoverished ranchers at a few cents an acre. Arlen is the hard riding, hard fighting youth who sees her through her difficulties.

Skinner in "Kismet"

"Kismet" shares the bill at the Byrd theater with "Stepping Out." The first attraction shows Otis Skinner in the talking version of his greatest stage hit, first produced 19 years ago. He spends a rapid 24 hours casting aside his rags as beggar of Bagdad for royal raiment. Able support is provided by Loretta Young, David Manners, Mary Duncan, Sidney Blackmer, and Ford Sterling.

"Dracula" At Lamar.

"Dracula" is the attraction tomorrow and Tuesday at the Lamar theater, Oak Park. The lead is played well by Bela Lugosi. Edward Van Sloan presents a nice characterization of the doctor. Helen Chandler and David Manners are two young stars in the cast.

EARL BURTNETT, DUKE ELLINGTON COMING TO W-G-N

West Coast Favorites to Make Bow Wednesday.

Earl Burtnett and his orchestra, an outstanding dance aggregation of the west coast, and Duke Ellington's orchestra, the current toast of New York City, will be heard exclusively this summer through W-G-N, THE TRIBUNE station, from the Lincoln Tavern on Dempster road.

Earl Burtnett's orchestra has played for five years at the Biltmore hotel in Los Angeles and will be heard for the first time locally when the Lincoln Tavern opens next Wednesday evening.

His band will be augmented by a new rumba section and the famous vocal trio which has appeared with the orchestra in scores of talking pictures, including "The Broadway Melody," "Gold Diggers of Broadway," "Viennese Nights," "Puttin' on the Ritz," Mary Pickford's "Coquette," and Doug Fairbanks' "Reaching for the Moon." In the middle west the orchestra is best known through mechanical appearances—on the records and in the talkies.

Station W-G-N will present Earl Burtnett and his big band every night between midnight and 12:30 and between 1 o'clock and 1:30 in the morning, and, more importantly, at various times during the early evening programs every night in the week.

Duke Ellington Coming.

During the month of July the orchestra will be succeeded by Duke Ellington's orchestra, the most sensational success in the last two years. They captured New York City last year, were signed up for night club appearances, doubled in Ziegfeld's production "Show Girl," then were featured in the talking picture "Check and Double Check," and lately were called back for five weeks of return engagements at the Oriental theater in Chicago. They will remain until Sept. 1, giving radio listeners of the middle west ultra modern treatments and arrangements of dance music.

A memorial day program featuring the W-G-N Symphony orchestra and David Pritchard, baritone, will be given from W-G-N at 8 o'clock next Saturday evening. In addition to a memorial day tribute civil war songs and marches will be presented by the symphony and Mr. Pritchard will sing "In Flanders Fields" "The Light Brigade" and Elgar's "Land of Hope and Glory."

Two baseball games between the Chicago White Sox and the St. Louis Browns will also be broadcast on Memorial day. The morning games start at 10:30 and the afternoon broadcast at the regular hour, 2:45. Bob Elson will be at the microphone giving the play by play report.

Program for Mystery Fans.

Other programs of outsanding entertainment will be offered during the coming week. Mystery story fans and devotees of Sherlock Holmes will hear a dramatization of Conan Doyle's story "The Adventures of the Six Napoleons" tomorrow night at 9 o'clock on the "Adventures with Sherlock Holmes" hour. Richard Gordon will be on the air again in the rôle of the famous detective.

The W-G-N staff will again present their minstrel show at 9 o'clock Tuesday evening. Stars from other highlight programs of the week take part —Marlin Hurt of the Tom, Dick, and Harry trio is one of the end men and Hal Gilles, famous as the Weasel in Louie's Hungry Five is the other. Henry [Hank] Moeller, Herr Louie himself, is the interlocutor.

"In Modern Mood" Wednesday.

Featured for Wednesday night will be the W-G-N orchestra with Leroy Maule conducting through rhythms of the latest dance hits aptly named "In Modern Mood." New and unusual arrangements by the conductor add sparkle to the program.

Thursday night at 8:40 the W-G-N orchestra will be heard in a different mood with modern dance numbers in symphonic arrangement and purely symphonic numbers under the baton of Gaston Du Moulin. The Clef Barons, Negro quartet will also be heard Thursday evening. Popular tunes and favorite spirituals will be included in their program.

Various musical themes from the cheerful to the sombre will be contrasted on the program at 7:30 o'clock Friday night followed by Quin Ryan at 8:10 with a half hour of radio reminiscences. At 9:45 Del Owen and Allen Grant will give a double piano concert featuring old familiar ballads.

And every day—except Sunday—the Singing Lady program comes from W-G-N at 5:15 with entertainment and instruction for the younger children. The Singing Lady not only sings but teaches the children how to sing. Some of the melodies are original compositions of Allen Grant who accompanies her.

Melodies of Old Favorites Heard on Fireside Hour

Old melodies from favorite operettas and musical comedies still holds first place in the hearts of many radio listeners. It is for this audience that Fireside Melodies on W-G-N at 8:20 o'clock Saturday night was inaugurated. In this program one may hear the numbers of such operas as "The Bohemian Girl" and "Martha" and such musical comedy successes as "The Red Mill" and "Chocolate Soldier."

Radios Scarce in Wyoming.

Wyoming is still a fertile field for radio manufacturers, according to the census bureau tabulations just released. Only 34 per cent of the state's family, numbering 57,218, on April 1, 1930, reported radio receivers. The average number of persons in a household was 3.9, while the number possessing sets was 19,482.

Besides being heard in "Hail Bright Abode," the entire choir will unite in singing "The Lost Chord," a request number.

A solo will be sung by Mrs. Mabel Sharp-Herdien. Another of the numbers on the musical program is to be a quartet arrangement of "Christ in Flanders."

TOSCHA SEIDEL WILL BE HEARD ON CBS TODAY

Toscha Seidel, famous violin virtuoso, accompanied by a symphonic orchestra and by Ossip Giskin, cellist of the Continental string quartet, will play the second and third movements from Brahms' "Concerto for Violin and Cello," during the Symphonic hour to be broadcast over CBS from 2 to 3 this afternoon.

Ruth Etting, Ziegfeld star, will sing with Rudy Vallee and his Connecticut Yankees on their next program to be broadcast at 7 o'clock Thursday evening through W-G-N and NBC. Numbers which Miss Etting will sing include "Were You Sincere?", "Say a Little Prayer for Me," and "Out of Nowhere." Rudy and his band will be heard in a program composed of several of the latest songs and a number of new arrangements of old favorites.

W-G-N PLAYERS ARE PIONEERS OF RADIO DRAMA

"Divorcons" to Be Given Tonight.

Between 7 and 8 o'clock, this evening the W-G-N Players will present Sardou's comedy, "Divorcons." The play was written for radio presentation by Jean Conover, W-G-N playwright, and will be played by Patricia O'Brien, Nina Lawrence, Douglas Hope, Eugene McGillan, and E. M. Johnstone and Frank Harrington. On next Sunday evening, at the same time, "Oliver Twist" will be played.

Since the institution of the station, in 1924, W-G-N has pioneered in the dramatic form of radio entertainment. In that year, Quin Ryan originated the "Play Shop," a series of programs dramatized from original stories. In 1926, the radio comic strip, a new dramatic form, was born at station W-G-N in the feature "Sam 'n' Henry," now known as "Amos 'n' Andy." On the heels of this came the ever popular comic interlude, "Louie's Hungry Five."

Then, in 1930, another radio dramatic form was inaugurated at station W-G-N—the radio comic srip presenting the familiar characters of the newspaper comic strips. Three of these are presented nightly by station W-G-N—"Harold Teen," "Gasoline Alley," and "Little Orphan Annie," the latter being given to a national network in addition.

Revive Musical Comedies.

Early in 1928, the program department of W-G-N conceived the idea of reviving the old La Salle theater musical comedies which were a national vogue a generation ago. New dramatic and light operatic companies were organized under the direction of Harry W. Spingold, assisted by Reed Myers, both veteran show men, and the series of plays was adapted for radio presentation by Delos Owen.

The first presentation, the "Girl Question," presented with full cast and chorus, met with instantaneous success.

This was followed by revivals of such well remembered hits as "The Honeymoon Trail," "A Stubborn Cinderella," "Prince of Tonight," "The Flirting Princess," "The Time, the Place, and the Girl," "Miss Nobody," and "The Girl at the Helm." The company then delved further into the old repertoires and produced "Robin Hood," "In Old Vienna," "The Chimes of Normandy," "Pirates of Penzance," "The Mikado," "S. S. Pinafore," "The Beggar Student," "The Purple Towers," and "Betty Jane."

Miss Conover Adapts Play.

When the presentation of famous plays from the dramatic stage was considered, Miss Jean Conover, a foremost scenario writer from the movie world, was brought from New York to adapt them for radio production.

During 1929 and 1930, the W-G-N Players presented "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Rip Van Winkle," "Under Two Flags," "Sign of the Four," "Michael Strogoff," "Lena Rivers," "Napoleon and Josephine," "Two Orphans," "Streets of New York," "Midnight Rose," "Anthony and Cleopatra," "The Courtship of Miles Standish," and "The Romance of Preston Manor."

Next came a series of comedy dramas including "Enter Mary Jones," "Call of the Woods," "End of the Lane," "Looks Like Rain," "Civil Service," "Path Across the Hill," "The Shakeup," "The Runaway," "Mr. Jerry Weston," and "Romance, Ltd."

Present Dramatized Operas.

Beginning with the Chicago Civic Opera season of 1930-'31, the W-G-N Players presented 26 one-hour musical plays dramatized from the opera librettos, as follows: "Pagliacci," "The Masked Ball," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Faust," "Rigoletto," "Il Trovatore," "Carmen," "Camille," "The Elixir of Love," "Fra Diavolo," "Aida," "Martha," "William Tell," "The Bohemian Girl," "Lohengrin," "Tanhausser," "Lakme," "The Barber of Seville," "Samson and Delilah," "Mignon," "Lucia di Lammermoor," "La Giocanda," and "The Queen of Sheba."

The summer program, now under way, will see the revival of old familiar plays, including "Under Two Flags," "The Count of Monte Cristo," "Amy of the Circus," "Rip Van Winkle," "When Lindy Ran Away," "The Road Agent," "The Man of Destiny," "The Dancer, and "The Dagger," and "Under Arizona Skies."

KNX, Failing to Use High Power, Loses It

While more than a score of broadcasters are fighting over places on the 50,000 watt cleared channels, station KNX of Los Angeles has forfeited its right to construct a transmitter capable of using the maximum power, thus making one more vacancy for the other applicants. The federal radio commission announced Saturday that the KNX permit had been canceled because of the failure of the station to take advantage of it. The Los Angeles station has held the permit to raise its power from 5,000 to 50,000 watts for two years and has obtained frequent extensions of three month periods.

SOPRANO

Olive Kline, soprano, who will be heard as guest artist on the program which will be broadcast through W-G-N and the coast to coast NBC network tomorrow evening at 8:30 p. m.

HENRIETTA TEDRO OF "ORPHAN ANNIE" REAL DAUGHTER OF STAGE

A real daughter of the stage is Henrietta Tedro, who plays the rôle of Mrs. Silo in "Little Orphan Annie" in the radio sketch of that name which comes every week day from W-G-N. Left an orphan when a baby she was reared by her grandparents. Her grandfather being an employé of the Empire theater in Cincinnati, she began to do child rôles when only three years of age. At 14 she was an experienced actress and went on the road touring the country from coast to coast.

HENRIETTA TEDRO.

At 16 Miss Tedro was in New York and playing in the then popular Mort Singer musical comedies, where she remained for six seasons. Then followed appearances in "The Velvet Lady," and the "Girl in the Private Room" and two seasons on the Orpheum circuit with Vera Gordon, star of "Humoresque." Then came the rôle of the divorcée in "Lightnin'," a part in which she toured the Pacific coast.

Chicagoans know Miss Tedro best for her excellent work in the Harry Minturn stock company, where she played character parts for four years. Two years ago Miss Tedro came to W-G-N and joined the W-G-N players and has played many characters rôles in the dramatizations of grand opera produced by that group. Besides her rôle of Mrs. Silo in "Little Orphan Annie" Miss Tedro is heard in other W-G-N sketches and programs.

ROSA PONSELLE TO SING FROM LONDON JUNE 1

Rosa Ponselle, American born prima donna soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, will be heard over CBS from 2 to 2:45 Monday afternoon, June 1, when a part of a performance of Verdi's opera, "La Forza del Destino," is relayed to this country from the stage of the Royal Opera house, Covent Garden, London.

Miss Ponselle's portrayal of the rôle of Leonora in "La Forza del Destino" is considered one of her greatest achievements and has won her wide acclaim. It was in this rôle that she made her operatic debut opposite Caruso in 1918.

MERLE ALCOCK TO BE HEARD ON W-G-N TONIGHT

The famed "Kashmiri" song will be among the featured selections in the program of Merle Alcock, contralto of the Metropolitan Opera company, when she is heard at 8:15 p. m. tonight over W-G-N and NBC. The concert orchestra will present a special arrangement of the popular "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers," made by its director, Josef Pasternack.

HOOVER TO SPEAK AT VALLEY FORGE MEMORIAL DAY

George Bernard Shaw to Be Heard.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Special Memorial day broadcasts and several international programs will be highlights of this radio week.

President Hoover will deliver a Memorial day address at historic Valley Forge at approximately 9:30 o'clock next Saturday morning to be broadcast over both of the major networks. Military bands will salute the President as he speaks from Washington's headquarters of the winter of 1777-'78.

Capt. Charles W. Lockwood, who at 88 years is the last man of Minnesota's famed "Last Man's club," will speak over CBS at 10 a. m. on Memorial day from Washington. Capt. Lockwood last year opened the bottle of the rare old Burgundy wine as the last and privileged survivor of a company of Minnesota volunteers in accordance with a pledge made many years before.

George Bernard Shaw, who still insists he won't visit America, will however speak to the United States by radio for the second time from 3:20 to 3:40 over CBS on Memorial day, the 500th anniversay of the martyrdom of Joan of Arc.

Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley will speak on the question of armament reduction at 8:30 Saturday evening.

The prince of Wales is to be heard again this week. The hour is 3:20 on Thursday over CBS when the Prince speaks at a dinner in London to help raise funds for the blind.

As reported in this column several weeks ago the nation's leaders are trying to find a suitable word to apply to television spectators. For those who don't read the New Yorker we present its suggestion of "televictims."

"At least 50 per cent more eggs will be produced for market if the poultry farmer offers his hens the same opportunity to hear good radio programs that he extends to his family," said O. H. Caldwell, former radio commissioner, recently. Does Mr. Caldwell include the well known toothpaste program and "Consider Your Adam's Apple" hour?

If all the words broadcast by a single big radio station during a week were laid end to end they would reach all of the way through Theodore Dreiser's "American Tragedy" and into a bottle of aspirin [100 tablets], with a few hundred thousand left over. That makes a total of about 700,000 words.

Installation and operation of all radio broadcasting in Ecuador is to be controlled by the Durham corporation, an American firm, which has just made a 25 year contract with the South American government. The first station is to be built at Quito, the capital.

The ancient and sacred Guild of Former Pipe Organ Pumpers, holding its 49th annual fiscal meeting and bicentennial hard times party recently elected the NBC organist, Archer Gibson, as chief tremolo.

130 EXHIBITORS SIGN FOR TRADE SHOW ON JUNE 8

In attendance and exhibits, another successful RMA convention and trade show at Chicago during Radio week, beginning June 8, is assured, according to final reports on plans for the annual radio industry gathering which were received by the board of directors of the Radio Manufacturers' association at their meeting May 14 at Briarcliff lodge, New York.

More new radio products, including television, will be exhibited in the trade show at the Stevens hotel in Chicago than ever before in one year, according to reports to the RMA board. President Morris Metcalf of Springfield, Mass., presided and received reports from Maj. H. H. Frost of New York, chairman of the association's show committee, and Leslie F. Muter of Chicago, chairman of the convention committee.

Of the leading radio manufacturers, 130 will have exhibits in the trade show for which nearly 24,000 square feet of exhibit space already has been assigned, with more applications being received. The large exhibition hall and grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel will be required to take care of the many exhibits. A larger proportion of manufacturers of the RMA will have exhibit space than ever before at any RMA trade show for the last three years.

Chamlee, Florence Macbeth, Gennaro Papi, Wilfred Pelletier, Mario Basiola, Edith Page, Leon Rothier, Louis D'Angelo, and the newcoming tenor, Frederick Jagel, who has been putting in the spring knitting a broken leg, and has just recovered in time to take a few spring festival engagements.

Opening Attractions.

So, with that settled, this is as good a time as any to tell briefly the story of "William Tell," which will be the opening attraction of the Ravinia season.

Rossini wrote this opera of the liberation of Switzerland in a fairly international setting. That is, the story by Schiller had come into Paris through translations of the writer's works, and the first libretto was written in French by Jouy and Bis. It was produced at the Grand Opera in Paris in 1829 with Nourrit as the original Arnoldo in what was then known as "Guillaume Tell." In 1831 it was presented in Lucca, Italy, as "Guglielmo Tell." London saw in 1830 at Drury lane in English and in 1839 at His Majesty's in Italian.

There seems to have been a New York production in English in 1831, as well as a production in New Orleans in 1843 and an American tour in 1857 with Karl Formes in the title role. Tenors who have sung Arnoldo include Mierzwinski, Tamagno, Martinelli and Lauri-Volpi at the Metropolitan, and John O'Sullivan at the Chicago Opera in 1918-'19. The opera was written in five acts, cut down to three by omitting the third act and combining the fourth and fifth into one, and was then rearranged into four acts, the form it now holds.

Story of a Brave Swiss.

William Tell is a Swiss patriot of the thirteenth century who yearns to free his people from the hated Austrian yoke represented by the tyrant, Gessler. He fears the younger folk will forget former freedom in the habit of servitude. So, the story opens on a May morning when a patriarch blesses young couples in love. His own son, Arnoldo, does not ask this blessing, for he loves Matilde, daughter of Gessler. The festival is halted by a fugitive seeking refuge from Gessler's men, one of whom he has slain to protect his daughter. Tell braves the coming storm to row him across the lake to safety.

Gessler arrives, and in vengeance burns the town and condemns the patriarch to death. Meanwhile, Arnoldo and Matilde have pledged their love, but when the young man learns of the death of his father, he joins Tell in the conspiracy of the cantons to overthrow the tyrant.

Then comes the famous market place scene, in which Gessler presides over the holiday by forcing the people to make obeisance to his hat, which is stuck atop a pole. This Tell refuses to do, and Gessler, knowing him an expert archer, orders him to shoot an apple from his son's head. The shot succeeds, but Tell drops a second arrow and, questioned, tells Gessler that had he killed his son, the second shaft would have gone to the heart of Gessler. Tell and the boy are condemned to death, but intervention of Matilde saves the boy while the uprisen Swiss free Tell, and an avenging arrow removes Gessler from an otherwise peaceful picture.

In the Ravinia production, Giovanni Martinelli sings Arnoldo, Elisabeth Rethberg is Matilde, Giuseppe Danise is Tell, Margery Maxwell is the boy, and Alfredo Gandolfi is Gessler.

"The Science of Voice."

"The Science of Voice," by Douglas Stanley, M. S., A. C. G. I., reprinted in pamphlet form from the Journal of the Franklin Institute of Pennsylvania, would seem to be an abbreviation of a book with the same title and by the same author issued two years ago by Carl Fischer, Inc. At least, it takes up the same thesis. He holds that the field of voice culture is still a good deal a matter of witchcraft, of secret methods, and mysterious arts, that practically every theory heretofore held is wrong, and that true principles of the art can only arise from the sum total of the laws of acoustics, anatomy, physiology, psychology, and the laws of music. What these principles are he proceeds to set forth in detail.

Whether they are the true principles or not cannot be told without them. Certainly they cannot be told from this desk without it. As one whose peculiar mode of life makes it obligatory to listen to dozens and dozens of incompletely developed young voices every season, I am not always in the mood to rush to the defense of the embattled singing teachers. But the pamphlet, also the larger book, contains this statement in all the emphasis of capitalized letters:

"The range of every properly produced voice should be at least three octaves, and sometimes nearly four may be reached."

Critic Makes Offer.

Like Paolo in his famous literary session with Francesca da Rimini, in that book I read no more that day. Two years ago I made an offer. I renew it. If Mr. Stanley will give a public demonstration in my presence of a small group, say half a dozen average pupils trained in his principles and with an effective, musical range of three octaves, I will see to it that he gets the publicity such an exploit deserves. I do not ask for the exceptional cases of nearly four octaves. Just three will be enough.

After a lifetime of listening to singers, you, I, anyone, can count upon the fingers the number that can go over three octaves. They are as rare as the radio directors who permit a musical phrase to be finished after the time is up. In the meantime, much as I should like to believe that the vocal situation is going to be transformed by Mr. Stanley's researches, I am inclined to issue what in certain legal actions is called a certificate of reasonable doubt.

"Carmen" to Be Heard Here.

"Carmen" is to be returned to the répertoire of the Chicago Civic Opera company, next season, it was announced last week by the management. Conchita Supervia, mezzo-soprano from La Scala, and the Madrid and Barcelona operas, has been engaged for guest performances of the title rôle. Mme. Supervia, who is of Spanish birth, has the distinction of having made her debut at the early age of 14. At 15 she sang her first important operatic rôle, Carmen, and while still in her early teens was a member of the Chicago Opera association for one season.

She was chosen by Richard Strauss to create the rôle of Octavion in "Der Rosenkavalier" in its first performance in Rome and later interpreted this rôle at La Scala with Toscanini conducting. She was a member of the La Scala company under Toscanini for six years and appeared for several seasons at the Royal Opera in Madrid and the Liceo in Barcelona. She took Paris by storm in the summer of 1928 when she participated in the Rossini cycle at the Théâtre des Champs-Elysées in Paris. She was engaged immediately for the Opera and Opera Comique, and during the last winter has been appearing in concert also in London, Paris, and Germany.

Fifty Events Listed.

Sunday, Oct. 18, would seem to be the day that Miss Bertha Ott will begin concert operations for the new season. At least, John McCormack is booked at the Civic Opera house and Sergei Rachmaninoff at Orchestra hall on that date under her management.

Miss Ott is prompt in making and announcing her commitments. About fifty events are already scheduled under her name, though this is by no means the total that will probably have her name at the head of their programs. Some of the more important are these:

Singers—Florence Austral, Beniamino Gigli, Yvonne Gall, Roland Hayes, Isa Kremer, Lotte Lehman, Juliette Lippe, John McCormack, Sigrid Onegin, Paul Robeson, Tito Schipa, Lawrence Tibbett, Reinald Werrenrath, Richard Tauber. The last named is rated as Germany's best tenor. At any rate, he is good.

Violinists — Mischa Elman, Fritz Kreisler, Frank Kneisel.

Pianists — Josef Lhevinne, Myra Hess, Mischa Levitzki, Elly Ney, Sergei Rachmaninoff.

Cellists—Hans Hess, Gregor Piatigorsky, Felix Salmond.

Dancers—Leila Bederkhan, La Argentina, Ted Shawn and company, Mary Wigman.

Combinations, vocal or instrumental—"The Blue Bird," a Russian revue; Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson; Gaylord Browne and Gibson Walters; Don Cossack male chorus; Kedroff quartet; Kneisel string quartet; London Singers with John Goss; Minneapolis Symphony orchestra.

Other engagements will be made and announced later. They will all be heard variously at the Studebaker, the Civic theater, and the Playhouse, with some of the larger ones at the Civic Opera house and Orchestra hall.

Late Season Concerts.

As spring burgeons, concert appearances fade away. Paula Schlueter, soprano, will give a song recital at the Playhouse this afternoon, Yetta Sokolow a piano recital at the Chicago Woman's club. Robert Macdonald will appear in an organ recital at the Oak Park First Baptist church this evening, assisted by Lillian Knowles, contralto. Maria Matyas, mezzo-soprano, and Rudolph Magnus, baritone, will give a joint song recital at Kimball hall tomorrow night, and on Wednesday the Friends of Music of Chicago will close the season with a performance at the Bal Tabarin.

This last will enlist the services of Irene Pavloska, mezzo-soprano of the Civic Opera company, also Sylvia Loder Stone, Bessie Kaplan Nelson, Benjamin Landsman, Lillyan Sacks, Sara Rose Wexler, and Louis Jacobson. The program will be in large part operatic.

The German Grand Opera company is to make its fourth American tour next winter. The season will be of eight weeks, beginning Jan. 18, and the repertoire will be mainly Wagnerian. In fact, Eugen d'Albert's "Tiefland" is the only non-Wagnerian work to be announced. "Lohengrin" and "Tannhäuser" are to be added to the list. The others will be the four items of the "Ring des Nibelungen," "Tristan und Isolde," and "Der Fliegende Holländer."

Dr. Max von Schillings has been reengaged as musical director, and the principal sopranos will be Johanna Gadski and Margarethe Baumer. Mme. Gadski sends word of a contest for young American women singers, the winner to be engaged as a member of this tour, with salary and expenses guaranteed by Mme. Gadski personally. Voice is the only requisite. Operatic experience will not be required. Applicants are requested to write to the German Grand Opera company, 11 West 42d street, New York.

"The Legend of the Piper," the opera by Mrs. Eleanor Everest Freer of Chicago, is to be sung at Sacramento, Cal., under the auspices of the board of education of that city and the direction of George Sims, superintendent of recreation. The date will be June 6 and the company will number over forty. The work will be remembered as being in the repertoire of the American Opera company, an inspiriting organization which for the last year has been only an inspiriting memory.

Other news of "Peter Ibbetson," to be sung at Ravinia this summer, is that it will be conducted by Wilfrid Pelletier, and the word is that he was chosen at the express wish of Deems Taylor, composer of the work. Mr. Pelletier is to go, at the end of the Ravinia season, to San Francisco and Los Angeles, where he will conduct "Carmen" and "Marouf." He conducted a late night performance of "Romeo and Juliet" in Montreal recently, with Edward Johnson and Queena Mario in the name parts. The performance began at midnight and ended some time after three o'clock in the morning.

TO SING CARMEN

CONCHITA SUPERVIA.

THIS mezzo-soprano from Spain is returning to the Chicago Opera next season and, because she is returning, "Carmen" is to be revived for her appearance in the name part. She was a member of the company years ago when the late Cleofonte Campanini was general director, and she sang as Carmen then. She was very young at that time, however. For that matter, she is by no means old yet and maturity has brought her an enviable reputation in many of the most noted European opera houses.

Coincidences

Your strange coincidence will be printed if you will submit it to Strange Coincidences, Chicago Tribune.

Sensed Boy Friend's Accident.

A girl friend and I were walking home from work Tuesday at 5 p. m. We were talking about the danger of working around machinery. She told me about her boy friend, who worked on a tractor. She had the strange feeling, she said, that she could picture him on the tractor riding along and the next moment he lay on the ground, badly hurt. I told her that was because she was always thinking of the worst. We then dropped the subject.

She arrived home at 5:30 p. m., and at a quarter of 6 she received a telephone call stating that her boy friend was painfully scalded about the face and chest. The radiator on the tractor had cracked and the steam had scalded him.

When she told me the next day what had happened I considered it a strange coincidence. A. M. P.

A Pleasant Occurrence.

About one month before the Golden Gloves tournament my husband purchased two tickets.

At the last minute my two brothers were given tickets for the bouts. We intended to call each other and find out where our seats were so that we might meet afterward. However, in our rushing around, we neglected to do so.

Imagine our great surprise to find that out of those thousands of seats, our seats were not only the same row as theirs but right next to them! M. O. H.

Cripples, True and False.

We were playing "tag" after school. When we got tired I suggested that we limp instead of run. We had been limping for about five minutes when we saw a cripple limping in the same manner as we were. The cripple, thinking that we were imitating him, whirled his cane at us. I ran and fell. That ended my childhood days. H. W. M.

Debussy Music, Springtime Go Hand in Hand

Two Nocturnes Recorded in Paris.

By Edward Moore.

SPRINGTIME and Debussy's music somehow seem to go together rather well, so it is more than commonly to the purpose that Brunswick is issuing some of Debussy's best. Two of the three nocturnes for orchestra, "Nuages" (Clouds) and "Festivals," two sides each, numbers 90158 and 90159, are played by the Orchestre de l'Association des Concerts Lamoureux of Paris under the direction of Albert Wolff.

They are first class examples of what recorders can do when they set themselves out to reproduce some of the less frequently heard music, that which is usually confined to the elect of concert givers. In the first place, the performance is excellent. Conductor Wolff and the orchestra are thoroughly in the Debussy spirit with the light touch and flexibility and color which does not in the least stifle a great amount of exultant energy.

Next, the recording is as good as can be. It is not only that the qualities of string and wind instruments are faithfully recorded, but how many, or rather, how few years is it since tympani could be put upon a record to sound like anything more than a vague, muffled noise? In this case, they sound like tympani.

A Favorite Number.

Orchestral music of an older and consequently more conventional and possibly more popular type is also well presented by Victor in number 9733, where Mendelssohn's "Ruy Blas" overture is played by a symphony orchestra conducted by Malcolm Sargent, another European recording. The story of Ruy Blas ranks among the stirring melodramas of dramatic history, but both the period and the personal nature of Mendelssohn kept him out of musical turgidness or anything except frank, lively melody.

This overture used to be a favorite number in both popular orchestral and band concerts, and there is no reason why it should not continue in that enviable position for years to come. At least, this record makes a strong argument.

Once again it is a little amusing to see the recording companies duplicating each other at the same time. This example is Handel's famous and so called Largo, whose proper title is "Ombra mai fu" from the opera, "Xerxes." Columbia and Brunswick are both issuing it, Columbia through the voice of Jo van Yzer-Vincent, soprano, with organ and violin accompaniment, number 50282-D; Brunswick through Emmi Leisner, contralto, with orchestral accompaniment, number 90160.

You can pretty well take your choice which one you will prefer. Both are in Italian, and both voices are well fitted for the purpose. Mme. van Yzer-Vincent sings in a key which reproduces as G. Mme. Leisner approximately D. Mme. Leisner's accompaniment is a bit the better, since the violin for Mme. van Yzer-Vincent does not register as quite ideal perfection of tone.

Reverse Sides Vary.

The solo is short, taking only one side of a record, and the reverse sides are different. Columbia presents Theodora Versteegh, mezzo-soprano, in Cesar Franck's sacred song, "Panis Angelicus," again with organ and violin, which, together with "Ombrai mai fu" will be remembered as high spots in John McCormack's repertoire. The Brunswick reverse is another by Mme. Leisner and another by Handel, the solo cantata with instruments, "Dank Sei Dir, Herr." Rather curiously, it is much in the same musical mood as "Ombrai mai fu," even to the leisurely three-four rhythm. It is perhaps unnecessary to add that both of these disks are imported recordings.

Two records that cannot be slighted by any admirer of one of the foremost of German leider are of the ten inch size from Brunswick. They are made by the great baritone, Heinrich Schlusnus, and they display him at the top of his voice and form. 85001 presents Hugo Wolf's "Heimweh" and Richard Strauss' "Heimliche Aufforderung"; 85003 has Schumann's "Es zogen zwei rust'ge Gesellen" and Humperdinck's "Am Rhein." Both are confidently and earnestly recommended, particularly 85001. Franz Rupp plays the piano accompaniment for all.

Army Planes Keep Newsreel Cameras Busy

taken over Manhattan. The first of the two was snapped last winter. The picture ship was cruising over New Jersey when a sudden shift in the wind swept in a blanket of fog. The ship wheeled and headed for its home port on Long Island. As it swung across the bay the camera man noticed the towers of dozens of the skyscrapers sticking up through the fog like white candles atop a birthday cake. He waved to the pilot to fly over the city, and roaring above the thick clouds the photographer cranked away at a unique sight. The plane eventually got down, but it was nip and tuck with old man bad weather.

It is a dangerous business, this aerial shutter snapping. For every foot of pictured thrills at least two men must risk their lives. Sometimes they get spilled, but usually they get their pictures.

Movie Houses Turn Automat.

The newest things in the way of movie houses are the Translux theaters in Manhattan. Two new ones have just opened on Broadway. They are under the same roof, but show different types of programs. These are the "automats" of the picture house world. The auditoriums are small, there are no ushers—one just drops his quarter in the slot, enters, and takes a seat.

The house is lighted at all times—almost to daylight brilliancy. A new method of projection makes this possible, and the lighted auditorium is popular with every one except those couples who go to the movies to be alone. News pictures are being shown in one of the Broadway houses, and feature shorts make up the bill at the other.

Foreign Language Talkies.

One hears a lot, these days, about the problem of making Hollywood and Long Island movies for foreign distribution. England is making a lot of its own pictures, these days, and then, too, there is no language obstacle to hurdle in that country. In France the old picture quarrel, which has been going through an armistice, probably will be renewed this summer. American film men, members of the French government, and United States embassy officials in Paris will meet to draft a new film quota agreement. The talkies have come along since the original row and the United States producers probably will have to promise the French pictures in their own language.

The making of foreign language talkies should be profitable, for there is a demand for them right here in our own country. I have seen and heard talkies in at least four different languages in New York City, and in the Rio Grande country every Texas town has its picture house that caters to the Mexican population by showing Spanish language pictures.

If film trade agreements with foreign countries can be worked out on a satisfactory basis there is no reason why the foreign language talkie industry should not be one of the biggest gold mines in the cinema manufacturing Eldorado.

DREAMS

Have you ever had a dream which later came true? If you care to see it in print address Dreams, Chicago Tribune.

Received Death Warning.

I have for years been forewarned of any approaching troubles by dreams, but am not always able to interpret the meaning or place the ones involved.

However, on April 13, 1931, I had a confused dream. I seemed to have to cross over a stream of muddy water which reached up to my mouth. The shock, for my dream was so real, wakened me. I was as awake as I am this moment, and I heard a voice say, "your dream is a warning of death." Naturally, I slept very little that night.

I was so worried I told some friends about it the next morning. Two days later I received word that my brother in Portland, Ore., had been operated on the night of my dream, and that there was little hope he would recover. He died five days later. R. J. C.

Dream Brought Good Luck.

I was one of the unemployed for some time. One day I answered a blind ad in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. That same night I dreamed that I was granted an interview by a small concern in the suburbs for 3 o'clock.

The next day I got a call to be at the office of a concern in the surburbs at 3 o'clock. The interviewer was just the man in my dream and I landed the job. F. J. P.

Kid Gloves Restored.

Sometime ago I missed two pairs of kid gloves. I looked through dresser drawers and every place I could think of. I have a couple of bags in which I put things that I don't use. I even looked there, but no kid gloves, so I gave them up for lost.

That night, lying in bed, I racked my brains trying to think where I could have put them. I went to sleep and dreamed that I found them in one of my bags. I told the family about it, and they told me to look there again.

I did. I too keverything out, and, sure enough, there were the gloves. M. B.

Found Pen in Purse Lining.

Recently, as I was on my way to the city, I couldn't find my fountain pen, which I always carried in my purse. I decided that I had left it at home. On returning I did not find it at home. I could not believe I had lost my pen and kept talking about it. That night a member of the family said to me, "I hope you dream about your pen and that the dream will tell you where it is."

I remembered the next morning that I had dreamed that my pen was in my purse. I looked, but failed to find it. The following day a little girl at school asked me to change some money for her and in putting my hand into the inside purse attached to my purse I felt it through the lining, for it had slipped behind this pocket. Then I realized that my dream had come true. E. M.

Memorial Day Originated by Georgia Women

First Formal Exercises Held April 26, 1866.

COLUMBUS, Ga.—(AP)—Memorial day, now set aside in every state in the Union each year, and in many foreign countries, for honoring the dead, had its inception here nearly 65 years ago.

It was on April 26, 1866, that Mrs. John Tyler of Columbus called together a group of her friends for the purpose of forming a Ladies' Memorial association.

Four southern states still hold their Memorial day exercises April 26. They are Georgia, Florida, Mississippi and Alabama. Alabama was the first state officially to observe Memorial day, and New York the first state to declare it a legal holiday.

* *

First Formal Ceremony.

Mrs. Tyler and her friends pledged themselves to "perpetuate as a religious custom to wreathe annually the graves of our martyred dead." With the vow recorded, they went to Linwood cemetery in Columbus and held formal exercises.

Many memorial associations were organized throughout the south, and the spirit of the movement soon seized the people of the north. One New York newspaper observed:

"The women of Columbus have shown themselves impartial in their offerings to the memory of the dead. They strewed flowers alike on the graves of the Confederate and National soldiers."

Idea Sponsored in North.

Gen. John A. Logan, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, gave impetus to the idea in the north. He issued an order May 30, 1868, that every post should hold appropriate exercises and place flowers on the graves of dead comrades.

When the day ultimately became a legal holiday, most states observed it on May 30.

Besides the four states already mentioned which observe "Confederate Memorial day," April 26, the other exceptions are: North and South Carolina, celebrating on May 10, and Louisiana on June 3.

Pulitzer Prize Play Provokes Hot Argument

"Alison's House" Is Bad Choice, Critics Assert.

By Charles Collins.

[and Miss Dickinson, too, for that heroine of this play [she has been dead eighteen years] as something more than an alias for a special case of poetic genius. Alison for me matter] represents a type of American character that used to be prevalent before females became emancipated.

Many a family has had an Alison Stanhope without the posthumous poems. Many an American household has sheltered a sensitive girl who, for some inscrutable reason, has withdrawn from life, shut herself away from all social contacts, and let the years roll by until she withered into eccentric spinsterhood and crumbled silently away. There must have been many thousands of them, although they were too shy to come to the attention of statistics takers. They were the "queer" aunts of the old homesteads, known best to the children of the household. They were the nuns of puritanism.

In "Alison's House" this character finds her place in American drama. The play ought to stimulate a searching of many attics after the papers that "queer" aunts may have left behind. Perhaps there are new Emily Dickinsons to be discovered.

Past Prize Winners.

The controversy over "Alison's House" has caused me to refresh my memory of past Pulitzer prize winners. They were: 1918, "Why Marry?" by Jesse Lynch Williams; 1919, no award because of inferior material; 1920, "Beyond the Horizon," by Eugene O'Neill; 1921, "Miss Lulu Bett," by Zona Gale; 1922, "Anna Christie," by Eugene O'Neill; 1923, "Icebound," by Owen Davis; 1924, "Hell Bent for Heaven," by Hatcher Hughes; 1925, "They Knew What They Wanted," by Sidney Howard; 1926, "Craig's Wife," by George Kelly; 1927, "In Abraham's Bosom," by Paul Green; 1928, "Strange Interlude," by Eugene O'Neill; 1929, "Street Scene," by Elmer Rice; 1930, "The Green Pastures," by Marc Connelly.

I am not convinced that the Pulitzer prize committee was lamentably in error when it added "Alison's House" to this list.

For Sharpshooters.

Writers who deal with the theater arts [including music critics] make frequent use of the word "diction"; and often draw the fire of sharpshooters who insist that the correct word for the intended idea is "enunciation." In order to settle the point for all time, so far as this department is concerned, and to assert my right to write "diction" when I mean diction I shall refer the sharpshooting population to the following definition, which is to be found in Funk & Wagnalls New Standard Dictionary.

"Diction: 1. The use of words or the manner of using them either in literature, oratory, or song; the manner with which anything is expressed in words. It includes articulation, pronunciation, intonation, declamation, and punctuation. 2. Specif. That department of rhetoric which deals with the choice and arrangement of words and modes of expression."

This ought to persuade all of the sharpshooters in the "diction" brigade to abandon their rifle pits.

French Tribute to Belasco

HENRY BERNSTEIN, author of "Melo," French dramatist now making his first visit to this country, has issued a statement regarding the death of David Belasco as representative of the French Society of Authors and Composers. He says:

"The Society of French Authors and Composers, which is the most powerful association of writers in the world and also the most powerful association of theater professionals, has been very deeply moved on hearing of David Belasco's death. Our society wishes to express publicly the profound sympathy of its members for America's loss of the great Belasco.

"We do not forget that David Belasco presented with all his skill and his deep sense of beauty those French plays he deemed worthy of the American public's interest. All who love the theater and seek its greatness should hope to find in every country servants of its art as efficient and inspired as David Belasco."

How Mr. Belasco Died in Harness; Gotham Theaters

Mr. Leiber Wants Stars for Next Season.

NEW YORK, May 23.—[Special.]—The late David Belasco was engrossed in theatrical plans almost until the day of his death, May 14, according to tomorrow's Broadway gossip in the New York Times. On Friday, May 8, six days before the end of his career, he purchased the rights to "The Night Remembers," by Martha Madison, co-author of "Subway Express." He was looking forward joyously to a birthday celebration next July in Atlantic City, for it was his custom to make this anniversary coincide with the tryout of a new production. His office declares, however, that reports that he had a score of plays or more on hand are unfounded.

Max Faetkenheur, business manager of the Chicago Civic Shakespeare company, is in New York with great plans for next season seething in his mind. The Times will say tomorrow:

"On a star hunt through these sections is an agent provocateur for the Chicago Civic Shakespeare society whose plan is to arouse persons of stellar importance to appear in the Fritz Leiber company next season. The search will be carried to London, if necessary, to find for Mr. Leiber some support more lustrous than he has been in the habit of receiving."

A story is going the rounds of Broadway which illustrates in a grotesque manner the economic difficulties of the stage, so far as "the road" is concerned. A play whose "properties" consist only of one barrel and one revolver will not be able to travel, merely because three stage hands, at salaries of $115 a week, would have been required, under union rules, to handle these articles. Efforts to persuade the union to moderate its rules covering this point were unsuccessful; and so the affair has been called off.

Chester Erskin, who staged "He" for the Theater Guild, may put on another play for that organization before he joins the Erlanger forces for full time duty next fall. At least he mentioned this possibility before sailing for Europe last Tuesday. The play in question is "Mother and Son," by Leonard Atlas, author of "The House We Live In." Herman Shumlin was once interested in this manuscript. . . . This Mr. Shumlin, incidentally, is said to be losing his affection for "Pariser Platz, 13," by Vicki Baum, author of "Grand Hotel." He may decide to permit his lien on the American rights to lapse.

Rudy Vallee informed the ladies and gentlemen of the radio audience a few nights ago that he and his fellow musicians will contribute to the program of the forthcoming "Scandals." This summer revue goes into rehearsal two weeks hence.

Jane Cowl will end her season in "Art and Mrs. Bottle" with a week in the New York suburbs, beginning June 8. One of her managers, Joseph Verner Reed, has sailed for England to inspect "Lean Harvest" and "Autumn Crocus," and to decide whether or not these London plays should be seen in America. It's easy to imagine how the Broadway wise crackers will bear down on the word "crocus" if that play doesn't meet with their approval.

Earl Carroll is shopping for celebrities to appear in his next "Vanities," which will dedicate his new theater. Eddie Cantor is said to have rejected an offer of $7,500 a week. Mr. Carroll is negotiating with the four Marx brothers, who collectively want $10,000 a week.

Encouraged by the success of "Meet My Sister," the Shuberts have acquired another musical piece of this intimate, no chorus type. It is called "Cocktail," and is now pleasing the patrons of the Komödienhaus in Berlin. Ralph Benatzsky, composer of "Meet My Sister," wrote the score. Its story deals with a childless queen, a king who wants an heir, and a third party.

New in Chicago: Operetta, Guild Play, 'The Rap'

"MEET MY SISTER," a musical comedy which has had a long run in New York, began an engagement at the Grand Opera house last night. It is an adaptation of a piece which has had a marked success upon the lyric stage in Europe. The score is by Ralph Benatsky, and the libretto, which deals with a romance between a spirited girl of noble family and a shy, humble professor, has been adapted by Henry Wagstaffe Gribble.

The cast includes Bettina Hall, formerly of "Three Little Girls"; Walter Slezak, son of the opera singer, Leo Slezak, and originator of the rôle of the professor in Germany; Harry Welsh, the comedian who appeared here a year ago in "A Wonderful Night"; David Hutcheson, last seen in "Sons o' Guns"; Olive Olsen, Kay McKay, Boyd Davis, Donald Campbell, Ronald Brown, and several others. "Meet My Sister" is described as an intimate musical play which has no chorus to interrupt its flow of comedy.

"He," a comedy from the French of Alfred Savoir, will have a première at the Illinois theater tomorrow night under the auspices of the Theater Guild. This production is being offered to the Guild's Chicago subscribers and patrons prior to its showing in New York, and marks the final chapter of the Guild's season in this city. The engagement is for three weeks.

"He" derives its title from a mystifying character who appears at a convention of atheists in a Swiss hotel and announces himself to be God. He meets with derision, but his stay is accompanied by a sequence of events which strike the atheists as miraculous. The play tells an unusual story in a vein of lightly satiric comedy.

For the interpretation of "He" the Guild has assembled a notable cast which includes Tom Powers, in the title rôle; Claude Rains, Violet Kemble Cooper, Pedro de Cordoba, Edward Rigby, Edith Meiser, Viola Frayne, Victor Killian, William Gargan, and Robert Su LeSueur. The stage settings were designed by Aline Bernstein.

"The Rap," a play which is described as a mystery melodrama, will begin an engagement at the Studebaker theater next Saturday night, May 30. It comes directly from New York, where it has had a nine weeks' run at the Avon theater. John Peter Leister is the author; Leonard Bergman and Raymond Payton are the producers. The former is a nephew of the late A. L. Erlanger.

The story of "The Rap" is based upon recent exposés in New York of alliances between politics and the criminal classes. The cast includes Helen Tenney, Paul Harvey, Jack Marvin, Ernest Anderson, Robert Shayne, Kenneth Bradshaw, Richard Gregg, and Edwin Vickery.

B'way Openings

NEW YORK, May 23.—[Special.]—Only one première is announced for the Gotham stage next week. The other items recorded below come under the heading of miscellaneous and incidental stage activities:

"Gasoline Gypsies"—Opens Wednesday night at the Lyric. This is a comedy by Charles Conger Stewart; acting in it will be Gene Byron, Dorothy Randall, Gertrude Flynn and Emmett Lynn among others.

"The Legend of the Golem"—Tuesday night at the theater of the New School for Social Research. A play, in the most constructive manner, of medieval religious conflict. Boris S. Glagolin, a Russian director, has staged it, and there will be 25 actors, a troupe of dancers and a choir. The performance will be repeated on Wednesday and Thursday and on June 1, 2 and 3.

"Precedent"—Tuesday night at the Bijou theater. The I. J. Golden play, which has to do with the Mooney-Billings case, will move uptown from the Provincetown theater, where it has been providing fireworks of a sort since mid-April. The original cast, including Clyde Franklin, Royal Dana Tracy, William Bonelli and Kirk Brown, will continue to play it. The settings will be new.

Critic Writes a Last Tribute to David Belasco

Master Showman Was Shy at Heart.

By Burns Mantle.

iel Frohman clings to band collars as high as a fence.

Admired Catholic Ceremony.

Belasco must always have admired the form and ceremony of the Catholic church. I recall an afternoon, nearly twenty years ago, when he took me on a personally conducted tour of what was then his famous studio atop the Belasco theater.

We had been through one room, 15x15, I should say, filled with his Napoliana. We had seen the collection of rock crystal, the frieze of spears, the paintings and the cabinets of objet d'art. We had sat for a moment at the old English dining room table, imported by Stanford White from a collection handed down by a feudal lord. And we turned suddenly around a pillar and started down what had the appearance of being the chancel of a church in miniature. David walked in front and every foot or two he would press a hidden button and another section would burst into light.

At the end of a fifteen or twenty foot walk we came to a wall shrine. He opened the doors and the interior was flooded with light. A handsome figure of a madonna was the central object and on the wall about the madonna were possibly a hundred rosaries of every conceivable hue and quality—jade and jet, polished ebony and teakwood, ivory and coral.

Showing them, David would stand back with shining eyes and drink in the surprise of the beholder, and then explain: "These were my daughter's [his youngest daughter, Augusta, who was the wife of William Elliott and who had died but a year or so before]; I was a collector and she wanted to be a collector, so she collected these.

"I put them here after she died."

This was the Augusta for whom he ordered that a candle be kept burning in her tomb, because she was always afraid of the dark.

Longed to Die in Harness.

I didn't believe David was afraid of the dark. He had pondered the mysteries and put much of what he had come to believe in "The Return of Peter Grimm." He will come back, if he can, for he loved life. But not for long. He will be ever so curious about the way they are staging things farther on.

His one great wish was, as he often said, to 'die in harness. He was a little jealous of Sir Henry Irving for having died on the stage. He wanted to be carried out of his theater to the mortician's parlor.

He did not die in harness, but he had his harness polished and ready, hanging on his bedroom wall. He had been reading plays for weeks. He had found one or two he thought something might be done with. He was just about to get the harness down and set to work on a play by Martha Madison and Eva K. Flint, who wrote "Subway Express." "The Night Remembers" was the tentative title.

Not many of us will come that close to getting our last wish.

It is difficult to stop writing about Belasco, once you start, if you have lived the last thirty years of your life in the theater. I came to admire him sincerely, after several years of distrust and suspicion. Not for the plays he produced so much as for the way he produced them and for the standards he set for other showmen to shoot at.

There are many fine entertainments in the Belasco list of plays, and probably not a single fine play in the literary sense. They acted superbly, but they read quite badly. He was, so long as he lived, our master showman. His influence was marked. He was, I think, the last great showman of his and our time.

* *

"If Booth Had Missed."

Which leaves but little room for my report of the week to you. Fortunately, there is but little to report.

The most interesting new play is one called "If Booth Had Missed," by Arthur Goodman. It won the $1,000 prize offered by Samuel French to the annual little theater tournament for long plays.

Originally, you will remember, this tournament was devoted to one-act pieces by amateur groups. This year the one-act play contest was abandoned because of the depression, but five long plays were tried by four home groups and one from Lapeer, Mich. They were the Wigwam players and offered a three-acter called "Side Show."

The Lincoln play starts with the night in Ford's theater, April 14, 1865, when Booth's aim was true. This time his gun arm is thrown up by a colored porter and Lincoln lives.

Thereafter the martyred one is set upon and finally taken, even as his successor, Andrew Johnson, was treated. His own party opposes his reconstruction program. The military heads want an army dictatorship. Grant deserts him. Lincoln finally asks the resignation of Stanton [as Johnson did] and Stanton refuses to resign.

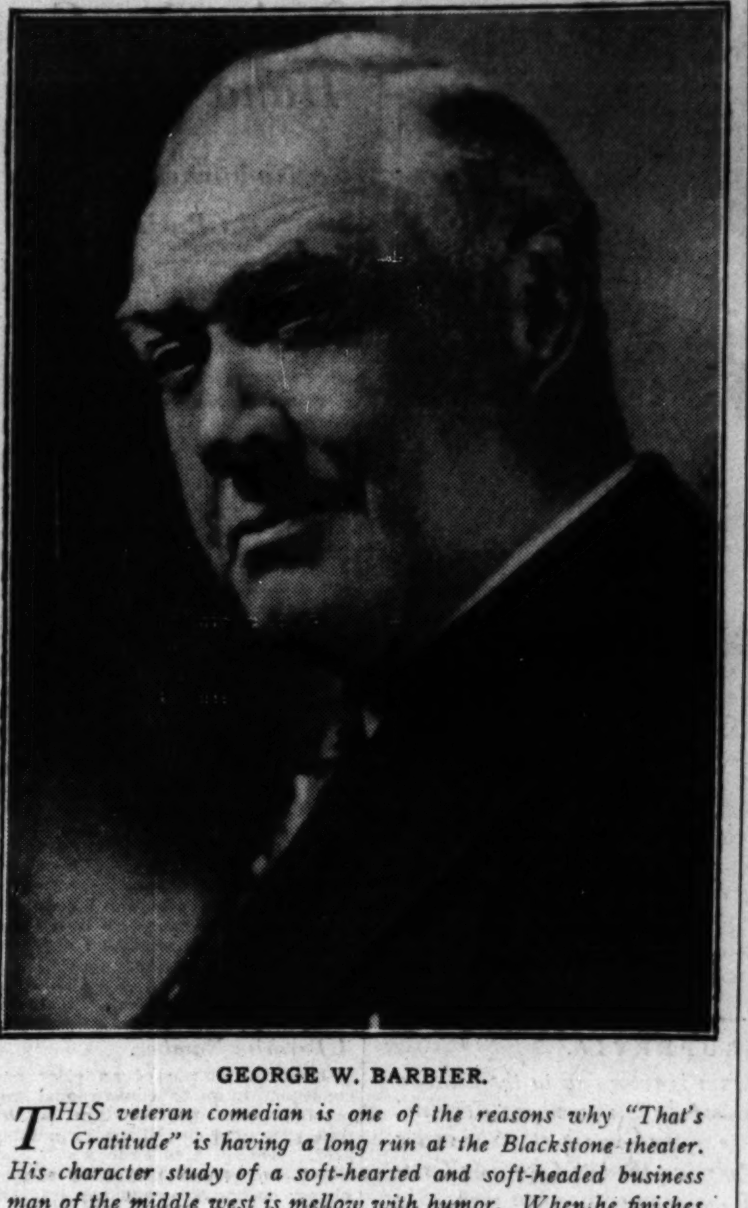
Lincoln is, as Johnson was, thereupon impeached for a violation of the tenure of office act. In a final scene in the senate Lincoln is saved from impeachment by a single vote, after he pleads his own case, but as he rises to thank his supporters a Senator Tilton rises, and crying, "The penalty of treason is death!" shoots him dead.

The play has its dramatic moments, as any Lincoln play must have, and the amateurs did it fairly well. They represented the Morningside players of Columbia university, who also won last season's prize with a piece called "The New Freedom." Nothing has come of that, either.

Saturday Night Premieres.

Apropos the opening of "Meet My Sister" last night at the Grand Opera house, the Messrs. Shubert say that they hope to establish Saturday night openings as regular events for next season, for their musical plays. They feel that there is as much of a demand for gala first nights on Saturday as on Sunday.

"GRATITUDE" COMEDIAN



GEORGE W. BARBIER.

THIS veteran comedian is one of the reasons why "That's Gratitude" is having a long run at the Blackstone theater. His character study of a soft-hearted and soft-headed business man of the middle west is mellow with humor. When he finishes with this play he will go into "pictures"; but next season will probably find him on the legitimate stage again, with the rank of a star.

Old School of Stage Producers Almost Extinct

NEW YORK, May 23.—(AP)—William A. Brady remains as the leader of the old guard of producers with the passing of David Belasco. Nearly all except Brady are gone now—Belasco, Charles Frohman, Klaw and Erlanger, and the others.

Brady still remains active, working as hard as he did in the days when he managed prize fighters in the daytime and rehearsed shows at night. He produces and directs—and even as recently as 1927 he acted the leading rôle in "A Free Soul." Two seasons ago he made a fortune off "Street Scene."

Belasco's death ended the school of realistic producers. When he had a play calling for a drawing room, he actually built a drawing room. There would be actual books in the book cases, real flowers in the vases, and good, solid furniture in the room.

The newer schools of production, headed by Robert Edmond Jones and Lee Simonson, are not so much for realism as for suggestivism. For instance, in "Miracle at Verdun" a cenotaph and a dozen crosses suggested a huge cemetery. Belasco would have built an actual cemetery on the stage.

The two Broadway premières of this week were an Irish comedy and a revue. Arthur Sinclair and Marie O'Neill, veterans of the Dublin stage, returned in the comedy, "Old Man Murphy." It is the work of Patrick Kearney and Harry Wagstaff Gribble.

Billy Rose brings out his second revue in "Crazy Quilt," with Phil Baker, Ted Healy and Fannie Brice as stars. It is a smart summer show, and rarely does it drop down among the mediocre and dull.

"Tom" Show for Benefit.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" will be acted at the Goodman theater tomorrow night by the University of Chicago Dramatic association. The performance will be for the benefit of the University Settlement. This famous old play, which has passed into American folklore, has become practically extinct on the professional stage.

Play Festival

BLANCHE YURKA, Tom Powers, Violet Heming and Martha Graham have been engaged for a dramatic festival to be held at the Lydia Mendelssohn theater, Ann Arbor, Mich., from May 25 to June 27. Robert Henderson, in association with George Coulouris, will stage the program of six plays.

Miss Yurka will appear in Sophocles' "Electra" and will take Lynn Fontanne's rôle in "Caprice." Mr. Powers and Miss Heming have been cast for the principal rôles in Noel Coward's "Private Lives" and "The Way of the World," by Congreve. Mr. Powers will be seen also as Bluntschli in Shaw's "Arms and the Man." The sixth play will be Strindberg's "The Father."

Succeeds Eva Le Gallienne.

Gale Sondergaard has replaced Eva Le Gallienne in the cast of Susan Glaspell's "Alison's House," in New York. This is the second time Miss Sondergaard has stepped into a Pulitzer prize play in the midst of its engagement. Star Willingly Lends Name to Business Firm

Commercial Enterprises Swell Film Salary.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Discoveries of oil at the seaside resort community of Venice have made wealthy people of several picture stars. Foremost among these are Mae Murray, Lewis Stone, and Madge Bellamy. Miss Murray now has five wells spouting liquid gold on her beach property. A casual drive about the environs of the little town not far from Hollywood reveals huge derricks and oil tanks where formerly the stars used to bask in the sun and swim in the gentle breakers of the Pacific.

A Sunday afternoon drive is bound to be well sprinkled with signs advertising this and that commercial enterprise of film celebrities. Practically all of the stars are willing to lend their names to enterprises that will return them some value commercially.

In Cahuenga pass one sees an elaborate modernistic sign on the front of a much fussed up and fancy tiled beauty parlor. Esther Ralston owns it and her name appears in big letters over the combination beauty parlor, Turkish bath, swimming tank, and gymnasium enterprise.

Noah Beery Trout Club.

Along Vine street and also around the corner on Hollywood boulevard are signs advertising the Noah Beery trout club. Little fish, big speckled fish, and various crustaceans flounder around in an outdoor water tank with glass sides, used as an ad for the trout club.

On Wilshire boulevard one finds many picture names in a few blocks. Mary Pickford's name is over a miniature golf club furnished with modernistic trees, and tables, and chairs. A few blocks further on is the Jackie Coogan golf course.

Ruth Roland's Trout Fishing club occupies a whole block. It is landscaped with huge cataracts and pools in which the passer-by may catch trout, which will be broiled at a little restaurant on the club grounds.

A traveler passing down the ocean highway towards Laguna is confronted with Hallam Cooley's name in huge letters. Cooley is in the real estate business down that way.

Raymond Griffith has developed a big "Drive In" open air market where you may buy anything edible, and such fancies as floor wax, mops, brooms, clothes line, soap, and shoe polish.

Recently Raised Prices.

Ronald Colman and Lew Cody both have money invested in tonsorial parlors. Lew also owns a drug store. Charles Bickford owns a huge garage, filling station, and parking station opposite the M-G-M studios in Culver City. It is doing so well he recently raised prices.

Belle Bennett presides with a motherly air, no longer in demand on the screen, at "Grandma's Farm," out on Ventura boulevard, where you can get choice fried chicken. Bill Haines has a charming and profitable antique shop on La Brea, just off Hollywood boulevard.

Jetta Goudal and her husband, Harold Grieve, are doing very well in the interior decorating business. Jetta is to make a picture at Fox soon, the first in a long time.

Corinne Griffith recently opened her Victor Hugo market in Beverly Hills with a regular movie première.

Charles Chaplin will never lack for a meal as long as his friend and fellow actor, Henry Bergman, runs Henry's restaurant on Hollywood boulevard. Charlie has stock in it.

To Open First Automat.

Howard Hughes has added another industry to his oil, tool business, motion picture producing, and theater constructing enterprises. He and Harold Franklin have approved plans for the construction and opening of the first automatic restaurant in the west. It will be built on Vine street, Hollywood. With so many actors out of work an automat should become the most popular eating house on the boulevard.

The financial clouds that hovered over Eugene V. Brewster and Corliss Palmer ever since they came to Hollywood from New York to launch Miss Palmer on a film career lowered again recently. The Brewster's disposed of a residence on Hollywood drive which they had bought five years ago in more prosperous days. The results of the sale, Brewster sadly announced, produced little more than required to pay debts on that and another little piece of property here which he still holds.

The Brewsters have moved into a small cottage on Selma avenue. Through, or maybe because of, adversity the one time multimillionaire publisher and the beautiful Macon, Ga., girl whom he took as a protégée are as devotedly in love as during the heyday of their romance.

Embarrassing Moments

What was the most embarrassing moment of your life? If you care to have it published address Embarrassing Moments, Chicago Tribune. Please write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

A Mistake in Identity.

One rainy day I got off the train, opened up my trusty old umbrella, and started for home. Just a few feet ahead of me I spied the familiar shuffling figure of my uncle. Catching up to him, I tapped him on the back and said, "Uncle Alex, you dear old man, aren't you afraid of getting wet? You had better walk under my umbrella."

At the sound of my voice the old gentleman turned around, and to my horror and embarrassment I saw that he was a stranger. I mumbled something about "making a mistake" and hurried away as fast as I could.

Perfumed Eggs for the Guest.

Not long ago I had a sample of a new kind of cold cream given me. Wanting the jar I put the cream in a cup, which somehow got in the ice box and was forgotten.

One Sunday morning, having a guest whom I was eager to impress with my culinary ability, I decided to fry the eggs in butter. Noticing that my efforts seemed to be going unrewarded I began to look for the reason.

Imagine my chagrin when I found that I had used face cream and the eggs were highly perfumed.

F. B.

Impressing the Boy Friend.

Recently I purchased some sweet rolls. After returning to the office I proceeded to wrap them more securely in order to carry them home. While so doing my fingers became quite sticky from the sugar and cinnamon.

In the meantime a young man on whom I had tried to make a good impression in the past, and whom I had not seen for some time, came into the office, a fact of which I was unaware at the time. I started out to wash my hands when he jumped up and jokingly held out his to me. There was nothing else for me to do but politely grasp it, with my sticky paw. He said nothing, but I still wonder what he thought. That was my most embarrassing moment.

H. J.

A Jovial Recognition.

One afternoon I came to Chicago on the elevated. As we neared the city a drunken man boarded the same car. I have been told that I look very much like President Hoover—as a matter of fact my friends call me "Herbie."

This intoxicated man finally noted the resemblance and in a voice so loud all the occupants of the car could hear him, called attention to me by saying: "Why, just look at that fellow. He looks like Hoover. I'll bet he is one of his relations."

Imagine my embarrassment with all the people gazing at me and the drunken man talking on and on until his station was called.

H. O. T

Harsh Words for Minnie.

I had spent most of a hot spring afternoon in my garden, spading and planting. Feeling quite proud of myself, I went out after supper to view the result of my labor. What a picture met my sight! There in the middle of one bed was "Minnie," our little boy's pet chicken, and seed and soil were flying in every direction.

Just then beyond the fence I saw our neighbor in her garden. And the look she gave me! Her name was Minnie. I turned and fled, too embarrassed for explanations.

A. L. G.

Due to a Slight Misunderstanding.

A lady belonging to our church phoned one day and, as I understood her, said: "Will you bake two jelly cakes this week?" I unhesitatingly agreed.

Imagine my feeling when just in the midst of the baking she arrived and sai "Here are the two delegates you were so kind as to take in your home this week and keep for us."

O. M.

Typing Was Perfect.

I experienced my most embarrassing moment shortly after I got a position with a real estate firm. My employer came to my desk one afternoon with three gentlemen and gave me an important form to be filled out in quadruplicate. They were in a hurry for it and I was told to be careful in filling it out, as there could be no erasures.

I arranged the papers in my machine and after fifteen minutes of careful typing according to the dictation of my employer, while the others stood at my desk and waited, I carefully took the sheets out, delighted that due to my care I hadn't made a single mistake. But my delight soon changed to terrible embarrassment—I had placed the carbon paper wrong side up and the printing appeared on the back of each sheet instead of on the front.

Italian Scions Plan to Follow Fathers' Lives

Prince and Mussolini's Son Train for Power.

ROME.—(AP)—In marked contradiction to the United States, President's sons go to business school and scions of banking families are orchestra leaders, the sons of most Italian leaders plan lives like those of their fathers.

Prince Umberto and Bruno Mussolini, Italy's most famous sons of famous fathers, are treading the exact footsteps their parents took before them.

The prince, who will one day rule Italy from the throne of his father, King Victor Emmanuel, is getting a thorough training in court and military life.

Holds Colonel's Office.

He is a full colonel of a line regiment, stationed at Turin, and will fill, as a practical officer, the post of commander in chief of the Italian armies. His career was cut out for him at birth, as was his father's.

Bruno, 13 year old son of the duce, has embraced early the same career that led his father to his post as head of the Italian government and founder and leader of Fascism.

Already he is an editor. A short time ago he founded a paper, the Boys' Pen, which has a growing circulation among Fascist youths.

He is getting a sound background of Fascist political thought and will undoubtedly hold a governmental post when he grows older.

Carving Political Career.

Another example is the career of Galeazzo Ciano, son of the minister of communications and son-in-law of Mussolini. While not yet holding a portfolio, he is carving a career in his government's service. He has chosen diplomacy and is at present stationed at Shanghai.

Other cases of sons following their fathers into the government are somewhat harder to find, since most of Mussolini's aids are young men, well on the sunny side of 50, and their sons, if they have them, are still in the romper stage.

Berlin Dancers Halt as Fiddler Collects His Pay

BERLIN.—(AP)—The wild wave of dancing that swept Germany after the war, reaching its crest about the time one dollar could buy four trillion marks, has now sunk to a ripple.

Just a few months ago there still was life in the old cry "On with the dance!" But 1931 really is "economy year" in Germany, and millions of people, instead of dancing, are paying the fiddler.

Ballrooms seldom are packed any more, and the frothier side of the nation's amusement industry has wilted under the high luxury taxes like a paper flower in the rain.

Latest among the pleasure palaces to go into bankruptcy is the Palais de Danse, rendezvous of Berlin's snobbiest set before war.

After the revolution is became an expensive place of relaxation for any one who had the money, and even after few Germans felt they could afford to visit it tourist gold from other lands kept it going. But now that isn't enough to pay the overhead.

And there are other flashy establishments of the sort that look empty enough these nights to suggest that they, too, will have to turn off the glittering lights and fire the jazz orchestra.

Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or aged complexion is one fair to look upon? Nature causes the normal skin to peel off in tiny, unseen, flour-like particles, a little each day, renewing the complexion of youth naturally, but there comes a time when this skin shedding slows up. Worry, overwork, illness, inactivity are reasons that cause the face to be blotchy, discolored, pimply and old looking. The thing to do, if you wish to look your prettiest at all times, is to assist nature in the process of absorption by using pure Mercolized Wax. Get an ounce at any drug store or beauty counter and use as directed. It gently but surely peels away the outer scarf skin, removing freckles, pimples, blackheads or a muddy complexion. The underneath skin, now in evidence, is clear, pink, fresh and velvety, and the entire face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty. To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines we recommend a face lotion of unusual merit. One ounce powdered saxolite and one-half pint witch hazel.

Japanese Wives Arrange Code for Husbands

Urge Quieter Manipulation of Chopsticks.

TOKIO. — (AP) — Japanese women have grown weary of the old, old custom of "yesing" their men folk all day long. In the new order of affairs the formerly demure, kimono clad wife has become so bold that she even dares to give her husband advice now and then.

The Fujokai or Women's World, in its stand for more rights for the housewife, has compiled a code of laws for husbands, covering jealousy, finance, home administration, health clothing, food, children, and other subjects.

Some of the "don'ts" for husbands, as arranged by the women staff members of the Fujokai, follow:

"Don't be a killjoy all your life. Crack a joke once in a while, even if it isn't very funny. Why confine your wisecracks to your friends?

* *

Suggested Attentions.

"Don't crack your chopsticks against the bowl while eating. You're apt to get on your wife's nerves.

"Don't ignore her wishes. If she suggests that you go together to a department store, go, even though you can think of nothing quite so boring. On the way back, stop for something to eat or drink. She'll like that.

"No matter how much you love your wife, give her a vacation from you now and then. Never loaf about the house all day, you may be in the way.

"If she happens to look pretty, don't forget to tell her so. If she isn't particularly pretty, tell her so anyhow. It won't hurt you.

* *

Celebration for Birthdays.

"Don't forget her birthday. Stage a little celebration of it each year.

"Don't reprimand her bitterly when she has simply forgotten to sew a missing button on your clothes. She'll snap back at you and then something is bound to happen.

"Never lie to your wife. You mustn't get her in the habit of disbelieving you. Some day you may really want her to believe you.

"Remember that your wife has a right to an opinion, too. Of course, it may be wrong, but it's hers anyhow."

Soviet and British Build Brisk Trade Around Galoshes

MOSCOW.—(AP)—Galoshes, 42,500,000 pair of them, are on this year's program of the soviet rubber trust. The schedule also calls for 800,000 automobile tires and tubes.

The raw rubber for these products will come from English concerns, but the government is experimenting with rubber plantations in the southern Caucasus near Batum, and hopes some day to be independent of outside sources.

Until then the British will be the winner in both the import and export part of the trade. While every one in Russia seems to have a pair of galoshes, and they are absolute necessities in this climate, large quantities are exported.

In fact Russian galoshes sell in England for about $2.50 a pair whereas this winter at the shop here where only foreigners may trade, the price was around $10.

France Votes $100,000 to Build Foch's Tomb

PARIS.—(AP)—A credit of $100,000 has been voted for a tomb for Marshal Foch, who led the allies to victory in the world war.

The tomb will be in the Invalides, close to the resting place of Napoleon. It will measure 12 feet in height and will take two years to complete.

ARMCHAIR PLAYGOER

By Fanny Butcher.

LONDON has been excited about a dramatization of "Dark Hester," Anne Douglas Sedgwick's novel of 1929. It was done by Walter Ferris, who did the final adaptation of "Death Takes a Holiday," which, by the way, is having a revival in New York. The revival started last Monday night.

ANNE DOUGLAS SEDGWICK.

You may read the acting version of the Casella play, if you missed it when it played here, or if you want to live over that excellent second act. The last act and the first act read less well than they play. The second has a good deal of the thrill of the action in its printed word.

But to come back to "Dark Hester." The acting version isn't promised for publication, but the novel is waiting for every one. It is a study of the clash of two temperaments, that of the mother and the wife of a young man. The mother is "Victorian," as the wife calls her, only in the sense that she has certain delicacies of thought, manner and ideals which are completely alien to the wife who, as the mother thinks her, is hard, cold, often bitter, "dark," as her mother-in-law believes her to be.

They are as opposite in temperament as any two women could possibly be, and yet neither one is really right about the other. The mother worked to support her son, was independent in days when independence for women was almost a career in itself. Her daughter-in-law considers her tact and her gentleness weakness, and fails to see the strength which made her face a difficult life.

The daughter-in-law, "Dark Hester," has an honesty of outlook, a fairness in dealing with her husband and her child and her life which, to the older woman, is incomprehensibly cold. There you are.

The novel would have been a better novel if the author hadn't made her readers feel all along that she was being so fair with her characters that she was determined her readers should learn the lesson that there would be less misery in the world if people tried harder to understand one another.

As a record of a classic struggle between the two women who love a man it is memorable. The play has not elicited unqualified praise, although two scenes—one in which the mother and the son quarrel about the wife, and one in which the wife says good-by to the man who had once been her lover, were hailed as great emotional drama.

Australia Changes Code.

CANBERRA. — (AP) — Because confidential cable messages between Prime Minister Scullin, when he was in London, and members of his ministry in Australia mysteriously found their way into the newspapers Australia's cable code has been changed.

THE PENALTY of GRAY HAIR

Gray hair—age—slipping. All these unpleasant ideas seem to go together. Yet, it is not at all necessary. Gray Hair often comes to a young head and people who have it are neither old nor incapable. But how often you hear people say, "Why, she has gray hair!" and—she is on the shelf.

This penalty need no longer handicap the woman who uses Canute Water. This is a clear, spring-like water, of wonderful properties which actually restore hair to its original girlhood color. No complicated "color plan"; no danger of getting brunette shade when your hair is blonde. Not only the one kind but the one bottle is enough. It really is surprisingly what successful, youthifying results it gives.

Apply Canute Water yourself, in the privacy of your own home. Many women in town are doing the same thing; they simply do not mention it. You need not mention it either. Just buy a bottle from any good druggist—and get rid of the "age-penalty" in gray hair. Canute Water is so safe, so scientific and sure that your dealer knows it will satisfy you; if not, he will refund your money. Sold and recommended by Boston Store, The Fair, Owl or Walgreen's, or your own druggist. — The Canute Co., Milwaukee, Wis.—Adv.

VOICE OF THE FAN

If you would like your letters printed in this column please write on ONE side of the paper ONLY. If you want a personal answer send stamped, self-addressed envelope—PLEASE.

Wastes No Money on Garbo.

Dear Mae Tinée: Wouldn't this world be a sad place instead of the funny one it is, if we all liked the same things? Go on, Mae, darlin', love your Garbo in peace and pat her back all you want to, I like you, and your reviews and your style, but I do not like Garbo or her so-called style which, to me, is nothing but an affected, insincere pose, and I know right well that you don't expect me to swallow her as art just because you like her.

She bored me enough in "A Woman of Affairs" to last my whole life. So many years ago that was, yet, I have never spent a cent to see her since and never will. Of course, I cannot always escape the advance trailers advertising the coming of another of her bromides, so I have heard her supposed to be ravishing voice. It falls as raucously on my pink ears as that of a New York stevedore cussing the far away grower who inadvertently shipped a big tarantula in the bunch of bananas he's unloading. What? You've never heard one? Well, you've heard a dozen of peddlers yell "strawberries" or "ice" up and down Chicago alleys, haven't you? Garbo's voice is exactly that melodious [?] to me.

So, "Disgusted Reader" who plays at hating you, and I, who sincerely admire you and dote on the reviews in between, have a good deal in common after all. Only, I'm willing that those who like Garbo, rave and spend their four bits over her all they please. That, to my notion, is their business, and I wouldn't waste good postage to tell her I wish M. G. M. would tie a can to her posing. Life's too short to get that hot and bothered over things not directly my business.

C. W.

Editor's note: You are a broad woman, I see [I mean, mentally].

Still the Mythical Kingdom.

Dear Miss Tinée: In your review of "The Front Page" I noticed that you wrote, "In other cities and in the sticks the background is still unhesitatingly mentioned as the 'Windy City.'" This town I am temporarily located in probably comes under the category of "the sticks," but when "The Front Page" was shown here the mythical kingdom note was shown with it and Chicago was not mentioned.

I would like to comment on Mrs. M. L. S.'s letter. In my opinion (contrary to hers) you do not criticize pictures harshly enough. What the movies in general need more than anything else is more analytical, challenging criticism. Good pictures and good actors can bear it—the other sort of course're no better. Sincerely.

L. A. L.

Editor's note: Thanks for the information and your interest in general.

Synopsis for German Talkies.

My dear Miss Tinée: German talkies seem to be becoming quite the thing. And you regret that you do not understand them. Why don't you use your influence to have the theaters prefix a synopsis of the whole thing or of each part?

Yours truly, M. J. FINK.

Editor's note: When I get some, I will.

Valentino's Successor.

Mae Dear: Too bad you are not still using stars. You could pick out a cute little star for your write up about "Daybreak." Why not use hundreds and give Ramon about ten? Do not forget he might go to a monastery, and he aspires to Valentino's crown. He has all the late lamented Italian had—plus a delightful sense of humor. He can talk and sing—well, maybe not as well as some of our grand opera boys, but he seems to please a few of us ordinary beings. And really, Mae, I think he is just as good looking.

ONE OF YOUR EX-ADMIRERS.

[Still I was razzed because I thought you could "critic."]

Editor's note: Who dared to razz you? Mama 'pank!

How the Cards Are Stacked.

Dear Miss Tinée: I know that you get a pleasant kick out of publishing the courteous appeal of the mother who signs herself "Mrs. M. L. S." for more decent pictures that can be viewed by children, and then turning the page over and praising a filthy gangster picture and branding as "smart" the work of the director in bringing into the film things that have no place in any picture which you mildly term as "coarseness."

If Mrs. M. L. S. knew how the cards are stacked against her, she would waste no time in appealing to you for aid in the renovation of the movie industry. Mrs. M. L. S. does not know that the "review" published in THE TRIBUNE is the best advertising that any picture can get in Chicago and that no important movie house would permit you to give an unfavorable write up of a picture they have booked.

It perhaps never occurred to Mrs. M. L. S. that a drink of gin and a twenty dollar note would bring praise through the "review" column of any picture and that some of them are actually written by the press agents of "stars" and advertising agents of the theater. Very respectfully.

NOT A "FAN"

Editor's Note: Are you proud of yourself?

Dear Mae: If it must be "on one side of the paper only"—here goes. Give M. T. a pat on the back for me. "Them's my sentiments," too, about "Cimarron." I've seen it three times, and I felt the same thrill run through me each time as it unfolded before my eyes.

It is THE picture of the year—of the age. Richard Dix's performance will live in my mind all the rest of my life. I can never forget Yancey Cravat. I was so blinded by tears each time I saw "Cimarron" that I hardly really saw him die.

I would call him "the Finest Actor on the Screen Today."

ELEANOR CLARK.

Editor's Note: Wonder if Richard's reading this!

Suspense Keeps You Guessing in This Thriller

Underground Railway Has Strange Murder.

By Mae Tinee.

well till the time comes to shoo it out into the open.

Photography and sound are commendable and you get the illusion of traveling underground. I read somewhere that the subway stations aren't the lifelike reproductions they might be, but I don't know, being an infrequent visitor to New York. They suited me, all right.

"The Subway Express" isn't one of the world's greatest mystery thrillers, but it is passing fair, and ISN'T a gangster picture. It'll keep you guessing—that's a cinch.

Also according to this weekly, The Gencho Report, 56 American movies have been shown in Japan since Jan. 1 as against 9 European productions and 1 from Soviet Russia . . . . HELEN HAYES is to play in the screen version of Edward Knoblock's play, "Lullaby" . . . . WILL ROGERS' next picture will be "The Plutocrat," based on Booth Tarkinton's story. . . . "Once in a Lifetime" is to be filmed by Universal. CARL LAEMMLE SR., announces that "a way will be found to retain all the comedy value of the piece without ridiculing the motion picture industry" . . . CLARK GABLE, that splendid young actor with the bonhomie and the dimples, has been given the principal male rôle opposite Greta Garbo in "Susan Lennox." You saw him as a reporter in "The Secret Six." Banner Musical Show.

With last Thursday's performance, "Fine and Dandy," at the Erlanger theater, reached the 300 mark. The show opened at the Colonial theater, Boston, on Sept. 1, 1930, and after two weeks in that city played in New York until May 2 of this year. At the time of its departure from Broadway it was the longest run musical show on the street. Over this long period "Fine and Dandy" has averaged a weekly business slightly in excess of $30,000, which is an undisputed record for the current theatrical season. "Three's a Crowd," its nearest competitor, will end its New York run on June 6, about a dozen performances short of the "Fine and Dandy" record.

HELEN TENNEY.

TOM POWERS

BETTINA HALL.

JOHN HALLIDAY, KAY JOHNSON.

SPENCER TRACY and UNA MERKEL.

AILEEN PRINGLE.

RICARDO CORTEZ and LORETTA YOUNG.

THERE are three new theatrical productions for the week in Chicago: "He," with Tom Powers, opening at the Illinois tomorrow night; "Meet My Sister," with Bettina Hall, which opened at the Grand last night, and "The Rap," with Helen Tenney, opening at the Studebaker Saturday night.

New photoplays include: "Subway Express," with Aileen Pringle, at the Palace; "Six Cylinder Love," with Spencer Tracy and Una Merkel at the Woods; "Big Business Girl," with Ricardo Cortez and Loretta Young, at the Oriental, and "The Spy," with John Halliday and Kay Johnson, at the Castle.

Pulitzer Prize Play Provokes Hot Argument

"Alison's House" Is Bad Choice, Critics Assert.

By Charles Collins.

THIS is the time of year when almost every dramatic critic and stage connoisseur rises from his cultural throne to utter a vigorous protest against the Pulitzer prize award. Last season was an exception to the rule—every one agreed that "The Green Pastures" deserved the blue ribbon and the cash honorarium. The merry Maytime of 1931, however, has revived the grand old custom of booing the umpires, and Susan Glaspell's "Alison House," recently proclaimed as the best play of the season from the point of view of the committee on Pulitzer awards, is receiving a hearty razzing.

The New York critics, in particular, make it thoroughly understood that "Alison's House" is not the people's choice. They are not in agreement upon the better play that should have received the honor, but their ex post facto nominations include "Green Grow the Lilacs," "Elizabeth the Queen," "Tomorrow and Tomorrow," "Five Star Final," and "Once in a Lifetime." A voice in the wilderness has even been heard crying out loud in favor of Channing Pollock's "The House Beautiful," but since it does not come from a member of the dramatic critics' union it may be disregarded.

Voice of the Times.

J. Brooks Atkinson of the New York Times, sound writer and sympathetic observer of the American stage, may be quoted on the subject. He saw virtues in "Alison's House" that his colleagues missed when the first nighters made their hegira from Broadway to Fourteenth street to report upon Eva Le Gallienne's staging of Miss Glaspell's drama; but he bluntly refuses to grant the work a Pulitzer position. He says:

"Miss Glaspell is one of our most gifted writers, particularly of novels, and 'Alison's House' is a play with a respectable theme. But to select it as the best play of the season is to show how meagerly the committee esteems the current American drama and the annual prize it helps bestow. Every few years this committee insists upon publishing its ignorance. . . .

"It is a play of flat statements—of emotions, of sentimentally literary business and of perfunctory characterizations. No matter how earnestly the characters talk, in a strangely stereotyped prose, the image of Alison never appears for an instant . . . Everything that might be conceivably dramatic in the narrative is consistently crowded off the stage, so that it never disturbs the rigid dullness of the spoken word.

"Prize committees are always unpopular and under suspicion; all cultural authority is accepted on sufferance. But sometimes, as in the case of 'Alison's House,' the drama committee for the Pulitzer prize goes out of its way to make its glory hollow."

Reading the Play.

All of which has piqued my curiosity and stimulated my zeal for research. "Alison's House" will not be a matter of playgoing attention in this region until next season, when it will figure on the subscription program of the Dramatic league; but I said to myself, "This affair seems to be an atrocity that should be investigated without delay." So I settled down to read "Alison's House," after kindly borrowing Fanny Butcher's copy of the printed text.

Strangely enough, I enjoyed the experience. The chore I had expected turned out to be an hour of recreation. I liked "Alison's House." I found its theme interesting; its atmosphere friendly; its characters persuasively American; its story quietly stirring. It may easily be a play for reading rather than for acting, for it is gray and demure of tone, and its scenes are not high-lighted with action. Still, I found pleasure in "Alison's House" under the lamp. What I think about it as revealed before the footlights will be another story, and I hope that nothing I have said as a play reader shall be held against me when I sit in judgment upon this bone of contention as a first nighter.

Lares and Penates.

I found in "Alison's House," among other things, a feeling for American family life that is rare in the theater. In most plays kinship between the characters is merely an assumption of the author and a line of type upon the program. It is a matter of form, and the audience is expected to take the blood-relationship, home and tribal spirit for granted. In "Alison's House," however, this elusive quality is caught and communicated without waste of dialogue. I call it no slight achievement. It brings Miss Glaspell, the American, into association with Tchekhoff, the Russian, as a magician for the evocation of domestic moods and background.

The play, as nearly every one has been told, relates to the discovery, many years after her death, that a New England spinster and recluse named Emily Dickinson was a poet who had left important, strikingly original contributions to American letters. She had lived as an unknown, unrecognized contemporary of the literary galaxy of the nineteenth century. She came out of that old-fashioned era to astound the radicals of modern verse. It is a famous story among bookish folk, and Miss Glaspell has followed it closely, changing the name of Emily Dickinson to Alison Stanhope and the environment from Amherst, Mass., to the Iowa shore of the Mississippi.

"Inner" Aunts.

The denouncers of the Pulitzer award are inclined to argue that the appeal of "Alison's House" is predicated upon one's familiarity with the life story of Emily Dickinson. I am inclined, however, to regard the unseen

Critic Writes a Last Tribute to David Belasco

Master Showman Was Shy at Heart.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—David Belasco would have approved a visualization of his own death and the ceremonies attending it, I think. It was, without stress being placed on making it so, sufficiently theatrical to have pleased the master showman to whom all life was a show.

He might have added the item of lying in state, though I doubt it. David had failed greatly, the last several weeks. He was white and drawn and, being a proud man, I doubt if he would have approved the idea of his cold corpse being stared at by a curious multitude.

He had a sense of dignity. He was a sensitive soul, really, and rather shy, though his showman's impulse overcame both these characteristics as frequently as it gave way to them. People said he was an old cheater when he backed away from curtain calls and pulled his forelock. They said it was quite noticeable that he was always there, in the wings, waiting to be dragged on to the stage by one of his new made stars or to split the honors with a Warfield or a Carter, a Starr, or an Ulric.

This is true. He was a showman. He never denied that. He knew, none knew better than he, the value of publicity. He could absorb salutes as greedily as any be-medaled general in the National Guard. But the actual doing of the thing that would gain him the publicity he wanted and the applause for which he hungered; the physical transference of himself to the front of the procession or out upon a stage to face a grinning, applauding audience was not easy for him.

Not Without Enemies.

Much of the talk of the week, naturally, has been about Belasco and his way. He was not without enemies in the sense that many people distrusted him and many accused him of being the author of certain of their misfortunes—actors he had fired, or hired at low salaries; playwrights whose royalties he had cut into deeply after helping them rewrite their scripts; ambitious players to whom he had, they say, given his word as to future preferment and then forgotten.

For a few days kindly things were said, and eloquent tributes paid, as is the old human custom. But once the wasted body was laid in the tomb, out popped tributes with a reverse English. Which is natural. Any man of many contacts with sensitive, vain, child minded people is bound to make such enemies.

A good many have asked me about his affectation of wearing clerical garb. What was that but a kind of cheap showmanship, they have asked. And what was the cause for it?

I don't know. I suspect it could be traced, first, to a sort of infant fixation. A part of his impressionable youth was spent in study with a Catholic priest, Father MacGuire of Victoria, B. C., where, incidentally, David made his first appearances on the stage as the child in "Pizzaro" and again as the child in "Metamora."

He may have admired the good father so much that he copied his choker, or it may be that his love of the theatrical prompted his trying the priest's garb. Finding that it both became him and attracted attention, he probably clung to it as a sort of trademark—as Louis Mann clung to the huge, batwing collars, and as Dan-

Army Planes Keep Newsreel Cameras Busy

And Give Film Producers Food for Thought.

By Tom Pettey.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—These "million dollar air thrillers" from Hollywood hereafter will be just so much celluloid to this movie goer. I have seen the real thing. Ten days with the army airmen—days filled with aircraft thrills—make shadow pictures seem futile things. More than 600 planes, fifteen million dollars' worth of fighting ships, roaring through the skies is a spectacle for the film makers to shoot at with their heaviest bank accounts.

The newsreel men, however, have profited greatly through the army's biggest air show. The "Battle of Dayton," the "Capture of Chicago" and the "Destruction of New York City" will flicker on many news screens for weeks to come. The air maneuvers have been field days for the newsreel men.

In Dayton, the concentration point for training for the two weeks of mimic war, movie sound trucks were parked deep in the flying field out past the farthest ship. No such pictures have ever been made, for nobody except the army has so many airplanes to play at war with.

* *

Camera Planes Numerous.

The camera planes have become as much a part of battle formations as the fighting ships. In the next real war the movie machine is going to play an increasingly important part. Its eye never falters and out of the dark room after the "battle" comes the real story of what happened.

A camera man standing erect in the rear cockpit of a speeding biplane has become a familiar sight to those who followed this year's greatest air maneuvers. I talked to several of the picture men and obtained a story from each movie maker.

The best "shots" just happen, they say. One young English war captain, now a flying photographer, told me of two remarkable air pictures

High Schools' Chorus of 346 Will Give Concert Wednesday

By Edward Moore.

WHAT the Chicago high schools are doing in music will be set out in the form of a concert at Orchestra hall next Wednesday evening. A chorus of 346 picked from all the high schools of the city will sing, a selected high school orchestra will play, and Dr. J. Lewis Browne, director of music of the Chicago public schools, will conduct. Oscar W. Anderson will act as assistant conductor.

Dr. Browne has given time, thought, and erudition to the program. It is to be a historical program, beginning with some of the earliest music that has come down to us and ending with some of the present era. The first song, "Sirath Hayyam," is an ancient Sephardic melody, how old no one knows, but bearing a legendary theory that it was the song sung by Miriam and her companions in the biblical story. It will be sung in Hebrew.

A Greek work, the Hymn to Apollo, sung in ancient Greek, is one of the few works of its kind to have been deciphered from inscriptions in Greece. Its date of composition is placed about 278 B. C. It was discovered some forty years ago by the French Archæological school in Athens. From thence the old music goes to an Ambrosian chant of the fourth century in the first mode, a Gregorian chant of the eighth century in the eighth mode, and works by Palestrina and Cruger of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

The rest of the program will be modern—choruses by Franck, Gounod, and some Chicago composers and a few specimens of Americana. The orchestra will play Brahms' "Academic Festival" Overture and a movement from the Mozart Symphony in G minor. William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools, will make an address.

News of Ravinia Artists.

Most of the artists of the coming Ravinia season have been getting ready for the season by standing by, although they admit nationalities variously of the United States, Canada, Spain, Italy, Germany, Russia, France, Poland, Scandinavia, and Belgium. Giovanni Martinelli and Virgilio Lazzari are taking short vacations in Italy, Giuseppe Danise has gone to Switzerland to put his children in school there, Ina Bourskaya has returned to Russia for the first time since she left that mysterious land, Marek Windheim is in Poland, Louis Hasselmans is in France, and Julia Claussen is visiting her daughters in England.

But Lucrezia Bori prefers republican America to republican Spain—she has received decorations from the ex-royal family of the orders of Isabel la Catolica and Alfonso XII.—and Elisabeth Rethberg has remained on this side for the first spring in a number of years. Yvonne Gall has been singing in Europe this winter, but will soon be here. Others that have stayed here are Edward Johnson, Mario

Suspense Keeps You Guessing in This Thriller

Underground Railway Has Strange Murder.

"THE SUBWAY EXPRESS."

The subway train was speeding on,
As subway trains do do. (Yes, two "do's," copyreader.)
When some one murdered Tracy!
AND—the question then was—
WHO?????

Produced by Columbia. Directed by Fred Newmeyer. Presented at the Palace theater.

THE CAST.

Killian	Jack Holt
Dale Tracy	Aileen Pringle
Kearney	Fred Kelsey
Tracy	Alan Roscoe
Bordon	Jason Robards
Stevens	Sidney Bracy
Mason	Selmer Jackson
Mr. Cotton	William Humphrey
Mrs. Cotton	Ethel Wales
Mrs. Mullins	Julianne Leighton
Mulvaney	James Goss
Prizefighter	Mason Williams

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

Who killed Mr. Tracy on the subway express, between two stations of the underground railway?

The train is full of passengers, any one of whom MIGHT be the murderer and most of whom probably aren't. It is up to Inspector Killian to solve the mystery.

Called to make an investigation, Killian puts every one through a process of questioning. For a long time his efforts to locate the killer are fruitless. Then—BING! Killian triumphant! With promotion undoubtedly flirting with him from the offing! [Here's ONE time when Mr. Jack Holt gets a break!]

The action of the picture takes place almost entirely in one car, with shots of stations along the tracks. The passengers conduct themselves and respond to the volley of questions fired at them in varied fashion. Fred Kelsey, as a bonehead cop, furnishes the low comedy—and they could have left him out for all of me—but Ethel Wales, Julianne Leighton, Mason Williams and others, provide real amusements.

A Polished Performance.

Mr. Holt, as usual, gives a polished performance. As Officer Killian, he is shrewd, determined, ungullible. Aileen Pringle [who has gone permanently blond, I'm afraid] does well the little she has to do. The same may be said for other members of the cast.

I won't spoil the story for you by giving leads re: the answer to its question, but I will say that the piece is quite suspenseful and hides its secret

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know

DOGS had their day in both Roseland and South Chicago last week-end when youngsters of the two communities were invited to enter their prize canines in dog parades as part of the Chicago Jubilee celebration. Some 311 dogs—and masters—were reported on hand at the South Chicago celebration and another 200 odd at Roseland. Lorraine Lang's dog was adjudged the best looking and Billy Frederick's the most novel in Roseland. Some 19 bow wows received prizes in South Chicago, and even that didn't satisfy our friend David Day, who awarded dollar bills to five more canines himself!

A youthful Our Towner, who has made her mark is Miss Mary Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Moore of 310 West 15th street, Chicago Heights. She was among those singled out on Honors day at the University of Illinois as being in the first 3 per cent of her class. She is a sophomore in the college of commerce.

* *

A proud granddad these days is J. J. O'Rourke, veteran resident of Harvey. Jane Vance, you'll recall, recently was chosen as Chicago's fairest co-ed by a group of Chicago artists. And Jane is Jerry's granddaughter. Northwestern is Jane's alma mater.

* *

The south end's champion bridge players, as indicated by the Calumet Commercial club's six weeks tournament, at last have been decided. Dr. A. Teninga is the champion champ, but he stands only one point ahead of Mrs. B. E. Nelson. John Berg and Mrs. Ralph Becker are the other blue ribbon players.

* *

Yet another youth who is casting credit on the younger generation of Our Town is Stanley Tome. The faculty of Pullman free school of manual training voted him the student who has been of most value to the school this year. To cap the climax, Roseland American Legion post gave him its annual medal. Miss Ruth Spivak came into her share of honors, too, when she received the Hostrawser medal for her work in Pullman Tech's musical organizations.

* *

WITH a trip to Europe or a scholarship to any American university to choose from Wallace Blackford of Morgan Park High school probably will take a scholarship to Armour institute or Purdue university. Wallace recently proved himself the crack salesman of Chicago in a radio company's contest and this award was the result.

Tony Volcanoe of 10240 Indiana avenue was the cause of a joke in Judge John J. Lupe's South Chicago court the other day. Tony failed to answer a court summons for speeding and as the judge issued a warrant for his arrest, he was heard to observe, "Another eruption of a volcano!"

* *

Here's a message of comfort to Our Towners on the sick list! The Ingalls School of Nursing connected with Ingalls Memorial hospital, Harvey, graduated a charming crop of nurses on Tuesday evening. Miss Georgia Gore of Harvey, Miss Ruth Soderberg of Chicago Heights, Miss Edith Dengler of Riverdale and Miss Catherine Erffmeyer of Dolton were among those who received diplomas from Frederick A. Ingalls himself.

Good news for the June crop of brides and grooms! Mr. and Mrs. George C. Gibbon of 316 West 107th street add their testimonial to indorsements of the marriage institution. They celebrated their golden wedding anniversary the other day with a reception to 30 relatives and friends. The couple was married in England, but have lived in Roseland for 32 years.

BELIEVING that the first 25 years are the hardest, Mr. and Mrs. John Donnellan of 4523 South Union avenue recently celebrated their silver wedding anniversary with a family theater party.

Back after a fortnight in Cuba are Mr. and Mrs. Abel De Haan, 9422 Vernon avenue. A forced landing in Cleveland on a plane flight to Chicago was the only untoward incident in the trip. The Cornelius Teningas likewise are back again in the family domicile at 10714 Normal avenue after a tour of the east and south.

May is moving time in Chesterfield. Friends who look for the Mike McGlynns at 611 East 88th place will find instead Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Sieglinger, formerly of 457 East 89th place. The McGlynns have moved to 701 East 90th street. The Daniel Hogan family also have joined the ranks of movers, setting up their Lares and Penates at 827 East 90th place.

Comings and goings in Beverly Hills: Mr. and Mrs. Richard W. Norris have moved from 8122 South Peoria street to 9907 Charles street. The W. S. Rodkeys, their twin daughters, Betty and Marjorie, and son, Bud, have moved to 9742 Prospect avenue from 8052 Loomis street. The Herman Saatmans have left their home at 10627 Hale avenue for new quarters at 7217 Wabash avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Kopf have leased their home at 9742 South Wood street and are living with a daughter in Maywood.

* *

Messages of sympathy and flowers are pouring into the Reid M. Bennett home at 9060 Pleasant avenue, for Mrs. Bennett and her son, Reid Jr., have fallen victims to scarlet fever. Mrs. Bennett is the new president of the Beverly Hills Woman's club and an active member of the Vanderpoel Parent-Teacher association, and her neighbors and co-workers are missing her mightily!

Principal Holds Three Beacons Before Pupils

And Greatest of These Is Happiness.

By Betty Browning.

HAPPINESS, health, helpfulness—these are the three beacons by which Miss Gretta M. Brown, principal of Henderson school, 5650 South Lincoln street, guides the steps of her thousand pupils along the path of knowledge. With Henderson, they make four capital H's, and so they are linked in the mind of every child at the school.

MISS GRETTA M. BROWN.
[Moffett Photo.]

Happiness should come first, in school and out, for the other objectives, health and helpfulness, depend on it in large measure, Miss Brown believes.

"A happy child is nearly always a healthy child, and a happy child wants to be helpful," she pointed out. "Therefore we try to make our school a happy place. To begin with, we have a beautiful building, and we encourage the children to contribute to make it more beautiful.

Movies Used in Courses.

"Then our teachers introduce into the class work all sorts of pleasant activities which the children really enjoy. Take our lantern room, for instance, where we have a lantern and a motion picture machine. Every teacher has at least one period a week when she takes her class there and shows them pictures in connection with their work, whether it's science, history, or geography. The children love it!

"Then, too, the children are encouraged to bring their interests and amusements into the school. We have assemblies where pupils recite their own poetry, sing their own songs written to their own music. The pet and hobby show we held last week is an example of what we are doing."

Training in helpfulness, in initiative and self-reliance, is a particularly important adjunct of modern schooling, Miss Brown believes.

"So much has been done for the modern child that frequently there has been a tendency to paralyze his initiative," Miss Brown commented. "With all the wonderful equipment provided in the up to date school, I feel there is a good deal in Mark Hopkins' ideal school—the teacher on one end of a log, the pupil on the other, and not too much in between."

Pupils Beautify Building.

"Wherever possible, responsibility is given the children. They have helped beautify the school, themselves planting the tulips given by the Parent-Teacher association, earning the money to buy pictures for the school. They have taken over the responsibility of our new library of 1,300 volumes. Every room has a library period once a week, and the pupil librarians see that the right books are accessible and later return them to the shelves and put the place in order.

"We have no real student government in the sense that there is an elaborate organization, but we have groups of children always ready to help the teachers with the management of school affairs. Boy monitors regulate the traffic in the corridors between classes. And, of course, we have the patrol boys who guard dangerous crossings."

Departmental teaching is of value in promoting independence, Miss Brown believes, and she has introduced it as an experiment into the seventh and eighth grades at Henderson school. Its advantages do not outweigh its disadvantages below the seventh grade, Miss Brown feels.

"By calling together my teachers and talking it over with them I was able to provide for each subject in the curriculum without calling in a single extra teacher," Miss Brown said. "I'm exceptionally fortunate in the teachers I have at my school. So far they have felt that better results are obtained by departmental teaching than by the old method. It seems to be better preparation for high school work."

Responsible for Activities.

On extra-curricular activities, however, Miss Brown places the greatest reliance in teaching independence.

"We like the children to feel that the success or failure of their clubs depends on their own efforts. Of course, the teacher helps them, but she stays in the background. There is a marionette club, members of which write their own plays and present them by their own efforts, even to making the puppets.

"An art club undertakes to buy pictures for the school; children taking manual training make things and sell them to buy pictures. Children in the Travel club give talks on countries they are interested in. Then we have a library club, which stimulates an interest in reading, a harmonica club, and an orchestra of 30 pieces, which supplies much of the music for school affairs."

Believing that close relationship between the school and the home is of prime importance to the child, Miss Brown was instrumental in organizing the Henderson Parent-Teacher association last November. The new organization has already done a great deal for the school, she said, playing a large part in the beautification of building and grounds.

Miss Brown was born in Kansas, but was brought up in Englewood, where she attended Lewis Champlin school and Englewood High school. Kate Starr Kellogg, principal of Lewis Champlin school, was a follower of Col. Francis W. Parker, and later Miss Brown was to study teaching under followers of Dr. John Dewey at the University of Chicago elemen-

VOICE of the SOUTHWEST SIDE

This Principal Puts Awe Inspiring Qualities in Their Place—Outside

"I have heard of principals of whom every one stands in awe, but I have never understood how they could run a school," observed Miss Mary T. Maroney, principal of Graham Junior High school.

Fortunately, the faculty for creating an atmosphere of awe is fast being recognized as a refuge for hiding frailties rather than a sign of ability. "Snobbery," says Berton Braley, "is the pride of those who are not sure of their position." Kings and czars with little to justify their importance resorted to the awe method, but in recent years there has been a passing of puppets whose power depended on accidents of birth. The world has discovered that one of the chief characteristics of its truly great men and women is simplicity.

Teachers who are properly prepared and wholly in sympathy with their tasks need not fear lack of respect because the relations between them and their pupils are friendly. Young folk in the midst of developing their personalities have cause to be particularly grateful toward a teacher to whom they feel free to discuss their problems.

If visitors at Graham Junior High school are impressed by the lack of self-consciousness shown by the pupils of many backgrounds, much of the answer is to be found in the personality and methods of the guiding spirit.

HARVEY'S SAFETY WEEK.

Harvey has just concluded the observance of Safety week with an earnestness that, it is hoped, will make its influence felt throughout the other weeks of the year. While accidents in the home and the place of business were given due consideration, statistics on motor accidents are so alarming that this phase of the program was naturally emphasized.

With a safety lane operated in coöperation with the garages of the city, an opportunity was offered for the testing of mechanical equipment of motor cars. Many drivers discovered to their surprise that brakes, lights, wheel alignment, steering apparatus, and rear view mirrors were not all that they should be. Constant increase in the number of automobiles on the highways demands perfect performance at critical moments if accidents are to be avoided.

It speaks well for the attitude of motorists that the safety lane in Harvey was a busy place throughout last week. This mechanical checkup, supplemented with safety talks in the churches and schools, served to make the community danger conscious. A survey of accidents fixes the blame where it belongs. The speeder and the road hog are still abroad. Excuses and regrets continue to offer little solace to those who are maimed for life.

Harvey, with its intensive Safety week program, has demonstrated that it is not only interested in better highways, but in the education of motorists who use them.

THE NEIGHBORHOOD'S HEROES.

The fact that Chicago is a city of neighborhoods, each with its own patriotic organizations, means much toward the observance of Memorial day in a manner that makes the remembrance of the soldier dead definite and doubly impressive.

Thanks to the posts of the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the United Spanish War Veterans, and the Grand Army of the Republic, the graves of Chicago's soldier dead have been carefully marked. Thus wreaths are placed not only in memory of comrades in arms but of former neighbors and personal acquaintances. In death, as in life, the division of the great city into many communities has overcome that lack of human sympathy which might otherwise caharacterize the metropolis with its millions.

Certainly, in fixing the date for Memorial day, the founders could not have chosen better so far as the Chicago setting is concerned. Between the city and many of the cemeteries lie forest preserves which, as if conscious of their part in the floral remembrance, just now present a riot of color in blossoms.

The passing of years finds no passing of the Chicago spirit to pause in reverence for its soldier dead. Memorial day brings out a fine expression of the great city's soul.

WHAT AWARDS MEAN.

As commencement time approaches various south side high schools recognize student achievements of many kinds. Those who receive the awards as inspiration to further progress rather than as an end to effort are to be congratulated for victories thus achieved early in their careers.

Said Edmund Burke: "God has implanted in man a sense of ambition and a satisfaction arising from the contemplation of his excelling his fellows in something deemed valuable among them." It is best that ambition reveal itself in youth, for it is far less apt to stir the pulses when bodily energy begins to wane and problems of existence interfere. Statistics do not show that the honor student always continues to pass his fellows in later life. There are legends of those who, having given little promise in the schoolroom, later turned out to be geniuses. Teachers of long experience, however, have had few surprises of this kind. That ambition sometimes does flicker out along the way is one of life's tragedies, but it is no cause for disparagement of commencement honors won at a time when such distinctions carry keenest pleasure.

Every school graduate has the satisfaction of knowing that persistence has resulted in reaching a first set goal of importance. All graduates cannot be honor students but, in finishing a task begun, all of them have demonstrated a fiber of character essential to success.

VETS TO LEAD IN S. SIDE TRIBUTES TO SOLDIER DEAD

Two Legion Posts to Hold Services Today.

All the south side, led by veterans' organizations, will pay tribute to the soldier dead with memorial services this week, most of them on Saturday. Church services, parades, school programs and other special events will be held as part of the yearly observance.

Members of Hyde Park post, No. 34, of the American Legion and auxiliary unit will attend memorial services this morning at the Church of the Messiah, 83d street and Dante avenue. The service, beginning at 11 o'clock, will be conducted by the pastor, the Rev. Nicholas B. Clinch, chaplain of Hyde Park post for ten years.

Hyde Park unit last Tuesday night held an informal reception for its mothers, Gold Star mothers and past presidents. The Gold Star mothers of the unit are Mrs. Clyde Day, Mrs. Annie G. Dorian, Mrs. Laura Evans, Mrs. Katherine Milliken, Mrs. George Wood, and Mrs. F. M. Kaiser. Past presidents are Mrs. Harry Boon, Mrs. George M. Kellogg Jr., Mrs. O. W. Rest, Mrs. I. B. Swigart, Mrs. Margaret Wahls, Mrs. Claude D. Baber, and Mrs. Paul Atchison. Mrs. Lyle A. Henry is now president of the unit.

Members of Roseland post, No. 49, again have been assigned to carry a Memorial day message to the pupils of the 14 schools of the district. If the weather is fair Friday the children will be massed in front of their schools, otherwise the talks will be given in the assembly halls.

Chipilly post, No. 310, today will pay its tribute to the deceased members of the post and to the members of the 131st infantry, A. E. F., buried in and about Cook county. In 1930 the post had only 84 graves. The total has now risen to 114.

Square post and auxiliary will hold memorial services tonight in Drexel Park Presbyterian church, 64th street and Marshfield avenue. The Rev. Clinton C. Cox, pastor, will give the address.

Square post, with veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic, will hold Memorial day services at 10 o'clock Saturday morning at Oakwoods cemetery. Auxiliaries of the organizations will assist.

Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom will be the guest speaker. The program will also include talks by William Wright and Charles Oakley of the Chicago Memorial association; numbers by glee clubs from the Englewood and Hyde Park high schools, and music by the Square post drum and bugle corps. The firing squad will be under the direction of Past Commander William Roberts. Paul G. Armstrong is the chairman of arrangements.

At the close of the service members of Square post unit will scatter flowers over the graves of the dead comrades.

Next Sunday will be American Legion Aviation day at Curtiss-Wright airport, Glenview. This first air show of the local season will be held under the joint auspices of Evanston post, No. 42, W. C. Bechtold, commander, and Niles Township post, No. 134, Irving Dilg, commander. Beginning at 11 a. m. and continuing throughout the afternoon there will be a series of events similar to those that made Chicago's national air races of 1930 an epochal event in aviation history. Starting with a boys' model airplane contest, the program will include a ten mile race, parachute jumping contests, stunt flying, balloon bursting contests, and numerous other features. A glider exhibition will feature entries by the Chicago Glider club.

The 13th national convention of the American Legion will be held in Detroit Sept. 21 to 24, inclusive. On the first day of the convention Mayor Cermak of Chicago will address the legionnaires and will invite the Legion 1933 national convention to Chicago. The mayor will travel aboard the Chicagoan-Legion special with Chef de Train Fred L. Boissy of the 40 and 8 in charge. Mr. Boissy will be assisted by Thomas Burns, secretary of the 33d Division Veterans' association; Edward H. Felt, athletic officer of the Legion; A. P. Boyle, past district commander; Dr. Elmer W. Mosley, senior vice commander of Chicago Police post, and Elmer Taylor, ranking officer of the 40 and 8 in Illinois.

Invitations have been sent to men famed in the world of aviation and to prominent officials of the American Legion. The list includes Rear Admiral Byrd, Lieut. Jimmy Doolittle, Maj. Reed Landis, National Commander O'Neil, and State Commander Poorman. Nationally known stunt flyers will entertain the spectators and army planes from the Sixth Corps area will take part.

Admission will be free, but the Legion posts sponsoring the program are conducting an advance sale of special tickets at $1 each, these tickets entitling the holder to parking, admission to the grand stand, and a credit of $1 on a $3 ride.

Charles W. Hadley, chairman of the Illinois commerce commission, will speak at the meeting tomorrow of Advertising Men's post at the Hotel Sherman. Mr. Hadley's subject will be "Organization and Work of Illinois Commerce Commission."

The Third district council will meet Wednesday at the Saddle and Sirloin club, Stock Yards inn, 41st and Halsted streets. Stock Yards, Swift, and Armour posts will be hosts. Dinner to delegates and alternates will be served at 6 o'clock.

Scion of Marquette park's first family is Brendan M. O'Connell, president of Marquette Park Lions club. His mother, Mrs. Rose O'Connell, is the oldest resident of the community, and the old family house at 6347 South Western avenue served as postoffice of the Town of Lake when Mr. O'Connell's grandfather was postmaster. The O'Connells now live at 6406 South Artesian avenue.

For 18 years he has been connected with the Marquette Park State bank, of which he is now vice president and cashier.

Mr. O'Connell has been a member of the Marquette Park Lions club since its organization and served as treasurer until his election to the presidency. He organized St. Rita council, Knights of Columbus, eleven years ago and was first grand knight. Mr. O'Connell also is a member of the Elks. tary school, so that she came at an early age under the influence of Chicago's two greatest educators, as she pointed out.

After one year at Northwestern university, while she was still 16 years old, Miss Brown went to Table Rock, Neb., to visit a brother, and there she was persuaded to teach the local school for one year.

Learns About Country Schools.

"It was a short year, from September to May, but packed with valuable experience for a future pedagogue," Miss Brown reminisced. "It was a real country school, with 35 pupils of all ages, whom I taught single handed. The school wasn't well constructed and snow was always blowing in through a hole in one wall. There was a stove which kept two of the boys busy feeding it corncobs. Quite a departure from Lewis Champlin and Englewood, the model schools I had previously known!"

The next four years Miss Brown attended the University of Chicago, taking a varied course of study, which she described as having made her a jack of all trades. She specialized in history and languages her first two years and in education the last two, always including much work in English.

On graduating she first taught Latin and history at the high school in La Salle, Ill.; then at Hartford City, Ind. Her next position was in one of the early platoon schools of Gary; then she became a critic teacher in a normal school in Duluth, Minn.

Teacher at Hyde Park High.

Her first post in Chicago was at Hyde Park High school, where she taught English and journalism and sponsored the school paper, directing it when it received its first state award. She is still interested in writing in the schools, is chairman of the middle grades curriculum committee on composition, and is preparing a textbook on the teaching of composition.

After 11 years at Hyde Park she became principal of Whittier school, where she remained five years. After a year's sabbatical year, during which she traveled around the world, Miss Brown went to Henderson school a year and a half ago.

VISIONS HARVEY AS SKY, WATER, AND RAIL CENTER

Mayor Predicts a Great Future for Town.

Harvey and the entire southern portion of Cook county are on the threshold of the greatest era in their history. This statement was made yesterday by Frank W. Bruggemann, mayor of Harvey, as he reviewed the activities of his administration during the last four years and sketched the general outline of his program for the four years ahead.

FRANK W. BRUGGEMANN.

Two projects which he expects to see mature during the next few years were named by Mayor Bruggemann as prime factors in the southern area's future development. These are the Calumet waterway project converting the Calumet and the Little Calumet rivers into barge canals and the construction of an airport south of Harvey.

"The need of a waterway is self-evident and I feel confident that we will get it," Mayor Bruggemann asserted. "We have had several hearings with the war department and surveys of the Calumet and Little Calumet have been completed by the engineers. With all the towns and all the industries from Michigan City to Chicago Heights uniting to demand the waterway, something certainly will be done."

Pictures Aviation Center.

The aviation field, while still a paper project, will undoubtedly work out into one of the largest in the country, Mayor Bruggemann declared. Transcontinental airlines will be able to avoid flying over Chicago, yet passengers will be nearer the loop through Illinois Central service than at other ports, he said.

With the future development of water and air transportation in the region Mayor Bruggemann linked the great railroad yards at Markham, destined, he said, to be among the largest in the world.

Expects Cleanup of River.

Another project which Mayor Bruggemann is looking forward to seeing realized shortly is the cleaning up of the Little Calumet river.

"Probably this is the last summer that residents along the Little Calumet will be troubled by the condition of the stream," Mayor Bruggemann said. "The clear streams committee, drawn from all the towns along the Little Calumet, have secured an injunction requiring Chicago Heights and Lansing to construct adequate sewage disposal plants within the year.

"The return of this stream to normal is of great importance to Harvey. The Little Calumet has been one of the beauty spots of the area, and now, with the growth of population in towns on its banks, the inadequate sewage arrangements and the cutting down of the water supply at its headwaters, the Little Calumet is fast becoming a menace to health. Property values already are seriously affected by its condition."

Seeks Intercepting Sewer.

Getting the sanitary district to construct an intercepting sewer is another objective which Mayor Bruggeman hopes to see attained during his administration. He has worked in his previous administration to get the improvement put through in coöperation with the Harvey Chamber of Commerce and the Clear Streams association. The intercepting sewer likewise will contribute to purify the Little Calumet.

Safeguarding of Harvey's water supply by the construction of a tunnel under the Little Calumet to bring the water from Chicago is a measure which Mayor Bruggemann plans to complete this year. At present the water is brought by pipes which lie in the river bed of the Little Calumet, a method which is said to make it liable to pollution.

Crossing Situation Improves.

Mayor Bruggemann expressed himself as optimistic about the grade elevation situation in Harvey. The Grand Trunk railroad, he declared, has been steadily improving its protection of such dangerous intersections as Wood street and Governor's highway by the installation of signal lights. Probably the elevation ordinance passed by the city council will be rescinded in view of these improvements, he said.

"Harvey is one of the best home centers in the county; people who love their homes live here, because they find the things necessary for bringing up children, churches, fine schools, a junior college, a library, and parks. The electrification of the Illinois Central has brought Harvey nearer the loop than 63d and Halsted street, for example. We have efficient police and fire protection, our streets and alleys are well kept up, the city is kept clean." Our tax rate is among the lowest in the county, $0.93, including city taxes, library, parks, public benefits and bonds.

ENGLEWOOD BUILDING ALL RENTED 2 MONTHS BEFORE COMPLETION

The two story stone building being erected on the southeast corner of 63d and Green streets abutting the Chicago City Bank and Trust company will be ready for occupancy by stores and offices on July 15, according to Frank C. Rathje, president of the bank. Mr. Rathje also announced that all space has been rented nearly two months before the opening, indicating a rise in Englewood business conditions. The building will have a 60 foot frontage on 63d street and will extend back 156 feet on Green street. The John Lind Construction company has the general contract for $140,000. The space occupied by the new building has been utilized as a parking lot for customers of the bank until a few weeks ago when the construction began.

HIGHWAY BRINGS NEW EPOCH TO VILLAGE OF 1834

Orland Park Sees Self in Relation to Chicago.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

As the Southwest highway, nearing completion, has awakened other villages along its route to their place in the Greater Chicago picture, so it has given new life to Orland Park.

A visitor to this little town grown old, situated at the southern end of the present Southwest highway, observes the mingling of modern architecture with the landmarks of what, for many years, was the trading center of a quiet farming community. The world has builded concrete paths to Orland's doors and the inhabitants are conscious that there has been a decided change in the community.

Roy A. Loeb, secretary-treasurer of the Southwest Town Chamber of Commerce, which includes Orland in its list of towns, has supplied some of the history of the community where he makes his home.

First Settler in 1834.

The first settler is reported to have come to Orland township in 1834, at which time the territory was known as York precinct. The town of Orland was organized in 1850 and in 1880 the village of Orland Park was incorporated. This was about the time of the completion of the Wabash railway and the name of the station first was Sedgwick. Four miles east was East Orland, where a postoffice was kept by Louis Grosskoff, but there is little left of that settlement today.

As a village on the railroad, Orland Park grew rapidly under the guidance of its first mayor, John Humphrey. Boasting 250 residents, it was a trading center with a shirt factory, creamery, a general store, and several saloons. Mayor Humphrey was popular and in 1886 he was elected to the state senate. Orland took great pride in the further honors that came to its first mayor.

There followed a period of calm up until the time of the world war, when several subdivisions were opened in the vicinity and many new homes built. Then came the concrete roads to crisscross the countryside. Kean avenue was built to Orland Park and 143d street was paved.

Highway Marks Era.

It was not, however, until the Southwest highway was begun and there was promise of lake developments in the nearby forest preserve that Orland Park really began to see itself as part of Greater Chicago.

Two lakes have been proposed for the vicinity. One is located in Humphrey woods to the north of the village on a site covering 225 acres. The other is located two miles east of Orland on the John Klein estate. Both of these projects have been pronounced feasible by forest preserve engineers and at one time an appropriation was made to begin work on the first of these lakes.

Residents of Orland Park have been given a new appreciation of the treasures of beauty close by and have taken steps to insure an orderly growth of the village. Last winter a zoning ordinance was passed by the council and a movement has been started toward a plan commission. Efforts to beautify the village are being aided by the annual cleanup campaign organized by the Lions club, of which J. F. Schmeadeke is president.

Fire Department Modernized.

Under the leadership of Mayor Ralph C. Jennings, many improvements have been made in the village. The fire department has been reorganized and equipped with a modern truck, the water department has been developed, and the village streets are being oiled.

A most important project developing in the forest preserves which surround the village is the Forty and Eight convalescent camp sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

Orland has its own newspaper, three churches, a newly organized American Legion post, and a two year high school. Many graduates of the school attend Englewood or Lindblom High schools on the south side.

Tilden Tech Will Be Host to School Guards

Students and guard marshals of Calumet, Fenger, Lindblom, Bowen and Englewood High schools will be guests of Tilden Technical High school's guards at a dance in the Tilden gymnasium at 8:30 o'clock Thursday evening. The dance committee includes John Sumner, Philip Laughborough and William Ellis, orchestra; Frank Harley, William Stuart, John Long, Henry Baldwin and George Bartz, decoration, and Leslie Battle, publicit.

Ridge Civic Council to Close Season Tomorrow

The Ridge Civic council will hold its final meeting of the year at 8 o'clock tomorrow evening at Ridge Park fieldhouse, 96th street and Longwood drive. William Bethke, new president, will announce appointments of chairmen and standing committees. At the final meeting of the board of trustees it was voted to indorse the bill to lengthen the aldermen's term of office from two to four years.

Music Revue to Benefit Lady of Solace Church

A springtime frolic and dance will be held at 8:30 Wednesday evening at the West Englewood Masonic temple, 64th and Green streets, for the benefit of Our Lady of Solace church, 63d and Sangamon streets. Louis B. Butts Rounds Out 50 Years with I. C.

He is Louis B. Butts, 8244 Kenwood avenue, now auditor of freight receipts. The gifts of his associates included a watch, a gladstone bag, and two baskets of roses.

DEMAND START ON FIELDHOUSE IN FOSTER PARK

The construction of Foster Park fieldhouse will be pushed as a pressing need of the West Auburn park area. This was decided Wednesday evening at the West Auburn community civic council's meeting at Mount Zion church, 81st and May streets.

A committee including Walter Jensen, John H. Clausen, Edmund A. Martin, Dr. R. I. Pisle and Max Fenneman was appointed to work on the project. They are expected to confer with the south park commissioners shortly. Work has been going on in the park, but the fieldhouse has not been started.

The West Highland Improvement association, the Westchester Highlands Improvement association, the Beverly Gardens Improvement association, all of which have previously coöperated in fighting for the Foster park fieldhouse, were admitted to membership in the council with the Calvary Methodist Episcopal church. A constitution presented by Mr. Clausen was adopted.

John Roth and Walter Jensen were appointed a committee to secure copies of bills 1042 and 574 now before the legislature and report on them at a meeting of the council June 17.

CHICAGO HEIGHTS C. OF C. CLIMAXES INDUSTRIAL DRIVE

Chamber Plans Dinner for Tuesday.

Climaxing a week of activity which has included the launching of a drive for industrial expansion and the annual election of trustees, the Chicago Heights Chamber of Commerce will hold its annual dinner and business meeting at 6:30 o'clock Tuesday evening at the Elks club, Chicago Heights. Charles M. Thompson, dean of the college of commerce and business administration at the University of Illinois, will be the principal speaker.

An event of the dinner will be the reading of the annual report of the chamber's activities by W. M. M. Davis, president of the First National Bank of Chicago Heights. The inauguration of the campaign for Chicago Heights' industrial expansion last Thursday will be among the matters discussed in the report.

Presentation of Trustees.

Presentation of the new trustees, elected last Tuesday, also will take place. The program is in charge of Floyd Goodier, chairman of the forum committee, and of John P. Ephgrave, chairman of the civic council.

What was termed by chamber officials an industrial raid opened the drive to develop Chicago Heights' manufacturing interests last Thursday. A score of Chicago Heights business men and civic leaders staged a "raid" on the Chicago loop, each man visiting the small industries in a certain block assigned to him by the committee in charge.

The purpose of the raid, according to W. G. Bonvouloir, secretary of the chamber, was to obtain names of industries with other available data, such as names of officials, products manufactured, and condition of the industry, in order to be able to approach desirable concerns with an invitation to locate in Chicago Heights.

Point Out Advantages.

The advantages offered an industry by taxation and labor conditions at Chicago Heights should attract a large number of industries interested in a favorable location in the Chicago area, Mr. Bonvouloir declared. Each man who joined the raid on Thursday will check and tabulate his information and subsequently write or call on his list of prospects to present the advantage of a site in Chicago Heights, Mr. Bonvouloir said.

The raid Thursday culminated in a dinner at the Midland club when workers gave brief preliminary reports of what they had accomplished. George Heisterman, industrial development engineer for the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois, and Luther B. Fuller, general industrial and agricultural agent for the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad, were the guest speakers.

Leaders in Campaign.

Among those who took part in the raid were Mayor Daniel P. Bergin, R. H. Bradley, A. J. West, A. R. Jensen, W. W. Lahnhard, Bert Yanson, Jack Jones, W. E. Williams Jr., George E. Flemming, Mr. Ephgrave, P. H. Knusman, R. B. Hollingsworth, Irwin Ruge, W. E. McEldowney, C. C. Donovan, C. L. Jones, Robert M. Booth, E. H. Ashdown, Dr. A. H. Pennenborg, Mr. Bonvouloir, and Robert A. Meier, who as chairman of the industrial committee directed the drive.

New trustees of the chamber are Homer Abbott, C. P. Berolzheimer, Mr. Booth, D. T. McClure, Mr. Williams, Mr. Goodier, John Gravelot, and Charles Meyers. A. Kline, Justin D. Whelan, John S. Jansen Jr., Mr. Ephgrave, A. J. West, and Mr. McEldowney are trustees whose terms of office hold over.

INITIATOR

Miss Lee E. Dulso, 8142 South Sangamon street, as national president of Sigma Kappa Pi sorority, will officiate at the initiation of twenty girls this evening at the Blackstone hotel.

MARQUETTE BODY RESIGNS FROM THE SOUTH SIDE UNION

The Marquette Community association has withdrawn from membership in the South Side Federation of Improvement associations and its resignation has been accepted. The break came last winter over the question of approval of the proposal of the south parks to widen Marquette road. The federation, except for the Marquette group, favored the project but trimmed its sails and supported its member. The federation, however, has refused to join the Marquette association in efforts to block the widening since it was approved by the voters.

BOYS WAIT WEST WIND FOR KITE RACE OVER LAKE

Jubilee Contest Turns Out Success.

The wind was not in the west last Sunday, and so the usually fascinating kite race over Lake Michigan had to be postponed. However, the kite tourney in Washington park the day previous, carded by the south parks as part of the Chicago Jubilee program, was a success, despite the fact that a change in that will-o'-the-wisp breeze caused a last minute change in the course. Boys from the south park playgrounds entered 294 kites of their own making in the contests.

No new date has been set for the lake race yet, as Director Ralph Pierce has not received definite word as to a Saturday or Sunday when the necessary west wind will be on hand.

Arthur Jansky Wins Dash.

Arthur Jansky of Bessemer park won the "100 yard dash" with Lawrence Koranda of Cornell second and Sam Fatovitch of Armour third. This event draws its name from being judged on the basis of speed in getting out 100 yards of string and then winding the kite in again.

Dan Kovecevic caught the Jubilee spirit with his kite named "Jubilee," which depicted the Chicago skyline, but was forced to be content with third place in the novelty kite contest. He represented Calumet park. Peter Gilgenberg of Tuley was the winner with a kite in the shape of three birds strung together. Second place went to Bill Mueller of Grand Crossing for his dragon, while Frank Ivers of Fuller was fourth with a fresh air taxicab.

Ship Shaped Kite Wins.

A full rigged ship, made and flown by Benjamin Ascencoa of Bessemer, caught the judges' eyes to win the contest for the most artistic kite. Jack McCann of Ogden was second, Charles Clock of Sherman was third with a futuristic craft of vari-colored circles. Sam Fatovitch was fourth with a pirate kite.

Park honors went to Bessemer with 14 points for its two first place winners. Tuley was second with 7 points, and Cornell, Ogden, and Grand Closing tied for third with 5. Armour's total was 4, Sherman and Calumet each scored 3 points, and Fuller broke into the point column with a single marker.

Balloon Race Coming

After the playground ball field days, being held in each playground this week, there will be a break in the program until June 11, when the girls' balloon race will start at the Jackson park beachhouse. More than 500 gas filled balloons are released each year by the girls in what is considered one of the most colorful park events. Two years ago, with a favorable wind, several traveled to the Blue Ridge mountains of Virginia. One of these went 800 miles.

Events on the playground ball field day tests are fungo hitting, circling bases, throwing for distance, pitching through a three foot ring, and throwing around the bases. The best marks in all the parks will be sent in for the intercity contest held each year.

FENGER HIGH TO PRESENT GRAND OPERA 'MARTHA'

Glee Clubs Will Furnish Tuneful Music.

The glee clubs of Fenger High school will present Von Flotow's opera, "Martha," Thursday and Friday evenings in the school auditorium. This will be in the nature of a request showing, since it was presented at Fenger three years ago with such success that many have asked that it be repeated this spring.

First produced in Vienna in 1847, "Martha" has to do with the Merrie England of the days of Queen Anne. Lady Henrietta [Martha] is bored with her humdrum existence of ease and, with Nancy, goes to the Richmond fair in peasant garb over vociferous protests of the outlandish character, Sir Tristam. There they meet two farmers, one of them Lionel, who has a certain refinement of dress and manner out of keeping with his station. From there the would-be romance between peasant and noble springs up for both Nancy and Martha.

Abounds in Tuneful Music.

"Martha" is an opera abounding in tuneful music, its two best known songs being "The Last Rose of Summer" and "Like a Dream." There is much action but none involving blood.

Miss Lydia Ostarello and Miss Marcella Vanderbilt have been cast in the title rôle of Martha for Thursday and Friday, respectively, while Miss Clara Christiansen and Miss Marie Isherwood will play as Nancy in the same order.

The tenor lead of Lionel will be sung by Rodger Bragg, while Norman Wilhelmson will be in the baritone rôle of the other farmer, Plunkett. Wilhelmson is a veteran of Fenger operas, including "Lotta," "Zara," and "The Marriage of Nanette," while Robert Brotherson, as Sir Tristam, had a lead in the latter opera. Adolph Kasper will play the sheriff.

Girls in Gypsy Dance.

Miss Winifred Verbeek, Miss Verna Johnson, and Miss Margaret Coughlin have been selected as the three maids, while Leslie Bodnar and Carl Nitz appear as two farmers in secondary leads. Girls in the gypsy dance are Miss Mary Barker, Miss Eleanor Henrickson, Miss Ruth Jackman, Miss Florence La Croix, Miss Sarah Stumpf, Miss Thelma Mae Winters, and Miss Louise Worth. They are being coached by Mrs. Ruth Blackadder of the Fenger gymnastics department.

Members of the choruses of maids and farmers' wives include the following:

Genevieve Abasoris	Evelyn Johnson
Juliet Anderson	La Verne Johnson
Harriet Bouma	Gladys Kramer
Louise Bult	Viola Lofquist
Leona Bock	Hazel Noenick
Marcella Becker	Agnes McCrone
Lillian Bloomstrom	Vera Marsin
Mary Barker	Ruth Malmstrom

Jennie Currier	Frieda Nelson
Johanna Essenburg	Viola Palmquist
Isabelle Frosberg	Elsie Palmquist
Jeanette Fleischman	Ruth Perry
Mildred Faucett	Marion Swindle
Jeanette Herbison	Sarah Stumpf
Bernice Johnson	Thelma Winters

Folk dancers being groomed under the supervision of Mrs. Jessie Anderson are:

Jane Carnegie	Dolores Rack
Patricio Dobbins	Ferneda Schinmel
Hannah Jackson	Dorothy Thulles
Muriel Lamble	Winifred Verbeek
Bessie May McFarlane	Charlotte Werkman
Olga Mishkin

Charles Rosseau, director of the glee clubs, has charge of the direction of the opera. He now is a vocal teacher at the Chicago Conservatory of Music and formerly sang baritone leads with the Chicago Opera company.

DINERS FORGET POLITICS, TRADE; BAN SPEECHES

So Officials, Business Men Have Pleasant Time.

A picture almost unique was presented at the south side banquet and jamboree of business men, civic leaders, and public officials in Hotel Shoreland Monday evening. There were no speeches. Toastmaster William McDonnell was the only person privileged to impose his voice on the assemblage of 400 men, and his speechmaking was confined to introducing officials and public celebrities. The rest of the program was entertainment.

It was a general hobnobbing session, and all were gathered for a good time. All business problems and politics were tossed into the discard for the evening, with the exception of Mr. McDonnell's gibe that any looking for jobs need look no further than the speakers' table to obtain one.

The banquet hall presented a picture of a south side who's who in the flesh—both of the men it has contributed to city, county, state, and national officialdom and the men who are fighting day in and day out, year in and year out, for the improvement of their neighborhoods.

Around the Speechless Table.

Justice Frederic R. De Young, Chicago's lone representative on the state supreme court bench; State's Attorney Swanson; President Emmett Whealan of the county board, State Treasurer Edward J. Barrett, City Treasurer James A. Kearns, Congressman Edward Kelly [2d], Howard E. Moore, sanitary district trustee; Supt. George T. Donoghue of the south parks; State Senator Thomas O'Grady, recently elected alderman of the Fourteenth ward, and former Sheriff John Traeger were among those seated at the "speakers'" table.

Seated also at this table was Leonard Fish, president of the Englewood Business Men's association and guiding spirit of the fête by south side civic leaders for south siders in officialdom. Mr. Fish was enthusiastic over the benefits derived from this sort of gathering in promoting a better understanding between the civic leaders and their public servants.

South side contributions to the municipal and Superior court benches, aldermen, state representatives, ward committeemen and superintendents, and police and fire department leaders of the district were all on hand and introduced. Two men, one a member of a tax commission and the other in the internal revenue department, came in for a round share of kidding by the good natured gathering. Other officials got off with a minimum of kidding.

Eight Aldermen Attend.

The eight alderman on hand included Irving Schreiber [5th], John F. Healy [6th], David Sutton [8th], Sheldon W. Govier [9th], William A. Rowan [10th], Terence Moran [16th], Frank J. Corr [18th], and O. E. Northrup [19th]. State Representatives John C. Garriott and John Lee were there.

Superior court judges were John J. Sullivan, William J. Lindsey, and Walter Stanton. South side municipal judges on hand were Theodore Ehler, Thomas Green, Donald S. McKinlay, Matthew Hartigan, John Lupe, and Harold Connell. Several others were kept away by illness and sent regrets.

Some of the civic leaders on hand, to mention only a few of those seen milling about while the entertainment was going on, were William G. Donne, former Chatham Fields Improvement association head, nominated for president of the Englewood Business Men's association; Cornelius J. Kelly of Tri Parks Business Men; Walter Roy of the South End Chamber of Commerce; Harry Himmel of the Englewood Civic and Commercial club, D. Gordon Ramsay of the 55th Street Business Men's association, Larry Jones of the South Chicago Chamber of Commerce, Eugene J. Mooney and P. J. Bassett of the South Woodlawn Chamber of Commerce, and Sidney Wenner and Harry Levinson.

South Side Art Group to Give Musical Today

The South Side Art association will hold a musical at 3 o'clock this afternoon on the mezzanine floor of the Hotel Sherman to celebrate the opening of its seventh annual exhibition of members' painting and sculpture. Richard Cody, baritone, and Oscar Chausow, violinist, will present the program. Mrs. Albion Headburg, president, will head the group of officers receiving guests.

BRING ON YOUR BASEBALL TEAM

Frank Righton, 6453 South Seeley avenue, caught Buddy Reohr of the same address on his way to the first baseball game of the season and persuaded him to pose for this week's $5 first prize picture in The Tribune's photo contest.

"Eight Lips Among the Tulips" is the title Miss Sally Rand of 6126 Kimbark avenue gave to this picture of Miss Mabel Dunaetz, Miss Bernice Dref, Miss Thelma Frydus, and Miss Pauline Dunaetz, all of the same address, which brought her the second prize of $3.

The third prize of $2 was won by R. Martin, 208 East 26th street, with this picture of Miss Bernadine Kennedy, entitled "Bringing the Orient to Jackson Park."

ICE COMPANY AND FOES TO FIGHT IT OUT TOMORROW

Aldermen to Hear Both Sides on Ordinance.

Property owners protesting against operation of the Chicago Lawn Pure Ice company's manufacturing plant and the ice company itself will take their respective arguments before the city council committee on buildings and zoning at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow.

Two pieces of legislation are to be considered by the committee. The first is an ordinance rezoning the block bounded by 58th place, 59th street, Central Park, and Lawndale avenues from residential to commercial buildings, and the other measure is one recently introduced by Ald. James F. Kovarik [15th], revoking a temporary permit issued to the ice company to operate its plant. The permit was issued on the motion of Ald. Louis B. Anderson [2d] at the council meeting of March 18.

More than 200 protesting residents of Chicago Lawn attended a hearing held last December on the rezoning ordinance, and a protest petition bearing 3,100 signatures was placed in evidence.

Backed by Old Committee.

Despite these indications of public sentiment against the rezoning, the old council committee's previous report was favorable, and only the assurance of Ald. James B. Bowler [25th] that a compromise might be reached by delaying action prevented the committee recommendation from being presented to the council at the last meeting under the former administration, when the rezoning was set to pass.

Opponents of the ice company have declared that the plant, erected at 3604 West 59th street, is in violation of the city zoning ordinance, inasmuch as it is an ice manufacturing plant and is within 125 feet of property zoned for residential buildings only. Thus, they declare, the property facing the plant, on the other side of 59th street, must be rezoned for commercial building before the plant may operate. They further allege that the plant was built on a permit for an ice storage plant, whereas it is an ice manufacturing plant. The latest action of the opponents of the plant has been to file injunction proceedings to prevent its operation on the temporary permits.

Ald. Kovarik expressed hope that the pleas of the protesting property owners will not fall on deaf ears at tomorrow's committee hearings.

Sees Breach of Faith.

"We have a better chance than under the former lineup," he declared. "The committee, as it now stands, is likely to listen to reasonable and just objections to the operation of this plant. To allow it to operate would be a flagrant breach of faith with the property owners of Chicago Lawn, who were assured when their town was annexed to Chicago that their residential rights would be protected."

Among the civic leaders who have fought the ice company and are expected to attend tomorrow's hearings are William F. Stelzer, president of the Lawn Civic association of 1,500 members; J. N. Zimring, executive secretary of the West Lawn Improvement association of 4,000 members; and M. A. Seymour, secretary of the Southwest federation of eighteen civic groups.

Francis X. Busch, now corporation counsel, appeared as attorney for the ice company at the previous hearings.

WRITE SPRING POEM WITH CAMERA AND WIN TRIBUNE CASH PRIZE

Spring is sprung! Wandering among the daffodils may inspire the young photographer to make some snappy shots. The Tribune continues its offer of $5, $3 and $2 as weekly prizes for the best amateur photographs received. All subjects are eligible to be treated in the photos for this contest, but we suggest that they be in keeping with the season. Photographers must be, as heretofore, of amateur standing. Lakes, ponds, rivers, the new spring bonnet, the children, unusual views, the woods, the meadows, the streets, and, in fact anything indoors or out is a legitimate subject for an amateur photographer.

Send your best photo to the Photo Contest, Metropolitan Section, The Tribune. Three prizes will be awarded each week in your own metropolitan section, north, west, or south. The full name and address of the person submitting the picture should be printed clearly on the back of each entry, with the full name and address of each person appearing in the picture, left to right.

SCHATZ EXHIBIT OF ART SHOW AT SINAI TEMPLE

A special exhibit of Hebrew art by Boris Schatz and his son, Bezalel, is being shown at Sinai temple, 4600 South park way. This was opened Thursday and is heralded as the finest of its kind ever shown in Chicago. Bronze reliefs and miniatures in ivory are included as well as paintings.

Mr. Schatz founded the Bezalel Art school at Jerusalem 25 years ago and was called by the late Israel Zangwill as one of the "dreamers of the ghetto." The exhibit is described by S. D. Schwartz, secretary of Sinai, as a "unique display of art permeated with the spirit that has driven the Jew to seek once more a home in the land of his fathers."

Admission is free and the general public is invited to attend.

Vera Aldous Takes Lead in Sorority Presentation

DEMAND BETTER LIGHTS, TRAFFIC SIGNAL ON 55TH

Business Body Backed by Alderman.

The 55th Street Business Men's association has launched a drive for two improvements for their district which it failed to obtain under the former city hall régime.

A stop and go signal light has been sought for the intersection of 55th street and Woodlawn avenue for more than three years, but all that has ever come of it is "promises, and plenty of them," according to Arthur Bourgeau Jr., chairman of the association's public affairs committee. The last promise, made just a week before the city election, was that the signal light would be installed within 30 days. Better treatment is expected from the present administration.

Demand Better Lighting.

The second project being pushed is one which would provide better illumination of 55th street between Lake Park and Cottage Grove avenues. The business men installed a string of ornamental lights on either side of the street a few years ago and maintain them, but they are turned out at 11 o'clock each evening, leaving arc lamps on every other street car trolley post on the north side of the street as the sole illumination.

The businessmen have asked for a similar string of arc lamps on the south side of the street. This, it is pointed out, would give the street the same illumination as is now on Lake Park avenue between 51st and 55th streets.

Members of the committee working on the lights include Charles W. Hoff and Lewis J. Harris. They also hope to close in the two gaps remaining in the business men's strings of lights this year. The two gaps are between Cottage Grove and Maryland avenues (both sides of the street) and the north side of 55th street between Kenwood avenue and midway between Kimbark and Woodlawn avenues.

Backed by New Alderman.

Ald. Irving J. Schreiber [5th], newly elected, has pledged his support to both projects of the organization. He said the 55th and Woodlawn stop and go light will go in as the first in his ward.

Working with Mr. Bourgeau in pushing the case for the stop and go signal are D. Gordon Ramsay, president of the businessmen, and Dr. W. S. Kelley. Mr. Bourgeau preceded Mr. Ramsay as president of the organization and was instrumental in starting the move for the signals.

"The congestion at 55th and Woodlawn is so great that there is no question as to the need for lights there," asserted Mr. Bourgeau, and he dug out a copy of the survey made by the city in April, 1928. "Since this was made traffic has been increased further by the extension of the outer drive and the connections with it at 39th and 55th streets. The danger is increased even more by the fact that pupils of St. Thomas the Apostle school must cross the street."

HEGEWISCH CALL ON SOUTH PARKS BRINGS RESULTS

Promised Improvements on Mann Park.

Hegewisch came to Washington park en masse Wednesday afternoon to call on the south park commissioners. Almost 200 men and women made up the automobile parade, which included representatives of the chamber of commerce, ministers of all faiths, members of athletic clubs, and a band. Their mission was to get an answer on improvements for Mann park. They received their answer and it was favorable.

Supt. George T. Donoghue was directed by the board to have plans completed for the first unit of the fieldhouse within 30 days. Mr. Donoghue stated Thursday that it should be built this summer. The unit is to contain a combination assembly hall and gymnasium, with locker and shower rooms adjoining.

Ald. William A. Rowan [10th] was the principal spokesman for the Hegewisch group. Joseph Sowa, president of the chamber of commerce, was on hand but did not speak. After the meeting William B. Anderson, secretary, announced that the group would return at the next meeting of the commissioners just to make sure that the plans have been drawn and that Wednesday's promise is not "just another promise."

Marquette Group Heard.

Another delegation came to present arguments on behalf of the Marquette Community association and others opposed to the park's plan to widen Marquette road, as provided in the recent bond issue. Although more than the 60 days given them by the board to prepare alternate plans had elapsed, they were heard and the plans taken for study.

It is considered unlikely, however, that the board will approve the suggestions of the objectors because of the physical obstacles. One alternative suggested was making 71st street a one way drive to pair with Marquette road, but its distance from Marquette road and the fact that it has street car tracks between Cottage Grove and Vincennes avenues as well as between Western and California avenues is held objectionable.

The most logical one way streets, as put forward by the delegation, were 67th and either 66th or 65th streets. At present Marquette road follows 66th street from Jackson park to Vernon avenue, and 67th street from there west. The difficulties here are street car tracks on 67th street from Rhodes avenue to South Shore drive, and the fact that subways would have to be built under railroad tracks at two points, Ogden park would have to be cut in two, and a piece sliced off White City to carry 65th or 66th streets through as a boulevard.

Park Row Is Reopened.

The location of the 7th ward park, tentatively settled last month, has been thrown wide open again and the whole question is back at the beginning as a result of protests from the South Bryn Mawr Improvement association and local property owners, who appeared at the board meeting. A principal objection seems to be the closing of 76th street.

The board voted to rebuild the 31st street bathing beach lockers, which recently were destroyed by fire, and received a request from the Jackson Park Yacht club, asking that it be given additional facilities in plans for extending the outer drive.

Knights Templar Plan Trianon Ball Tomorrow

Under the joint auspices of Chevalier Bayard, Montjoie, and Woodlawn commanderies of Knights Templar a ball will be held tomorrow evening at Trianon ballroom, 62d street and Cottage Grove avenue. William Leslie Sharpe, grand master of Knights Templar of the United States, and officers of the grand commandery of Illinois will be among the guests. Chairmen of the affair are Edward G. Bildhauser, Woodlawn commandery; H. J. Coleman, Montjoie commandery, and J. C. McClurkin, Chevalier Bayard commandery.

Woodlawn Kiwanis Group Will Mark Memorial Day

The Woodlawn Kiwanis club will hold a Memorial day program and Grandfather's day at their meeting in the Wedgewood hotel at 12:15 o'clock Wednesday.

Neighborhood Theaters

A gangster from the sticks who came to the big city, saw and conquered, is "Little Caesar," hero of the picture which is showing this week at the Capitol theater. Audiences will find him probably the worst villain who has graced the screen in many a moon, and the picture probably the most exciting gangster film of the spring crop.

Edward Robinson, who specializes in thoroughly evil characterizations, does his best for "Little Caesar." Douglas Fairbanks Jr. plays the young dancer who comes to the city with the gangster, gets a job in a night club, and tries to go straight. Glenda Farrell has the rôle of his dancing partner, and George E. Stone and William Collier Jr. are others in the cast. The picture was filmed from W. B. Burnett's novel.

Hair Raising Murder.

"Charlie Chan Carries On" is a hair raising film of murder on a round the world tour, with death stalking members of the tour one by one, and the murderer known to be some one in the party. Numerous murders and near murders keep the audience on its toes to the end of the film, and Warner Oland and Marguerite Churchill contribuate to the interest of the picture. The film is showing today and tomorrow at the Peoples theater.

Old Play with New Life.

That immortal melodrama of the '60s, "East Lynne," again proves its power to draw tears in the talkie version showing Tuesday at the Highway and Marquette theaters. Ann Harding is charming as the heroine who through no fault of her own is divorced, separated from her child and cast out into the cruel world. Clive Brook as the lover and Conrad Nagel as the husband manage to make their rôles and rather grandiloquent speeches convincing. Frank Lloyd's direction likewise helps give the old play new life.

"Strangers May Kiss."

Norma Shearer and Robert Montgomery as a combination are enough to make almost any picture good entertainment, and they score again in "Strangers May Kiss," which comes Wednesday to the Stratford theater for a four day run. The film tells of a modern miss who believes in love without marriage. Robert Montgomery has the rôle of a college boy admirer, and Neil Hamilton plays a newspaper man who shares the heroine's modern ideas. Irene Rich and Marjorie Rambeau also contribute to the picture.

Elliot Nugent at R. K. O.

"A Virtuous Husband," talkie version of the play "Apron Strings," will be shown Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday at the Englewood R. K. O. theater. Elliot Nugent has the rôle of Daniel Curtiz, whose mother has left him a legacy of letters to be opened at various crises in his career, advising him how to act. Jean Arthur plays the lucky girl who has to deal with this situation. Betty Compson does her bit toward contributing to the humor and suspense of the film.

Mrs. William P. Carroll will remain in office as president of the St. Philip Neri Woman's club another year following the recent election. New officers include first vice president, Mrs. John A. Breen; secretary, Mrs. M. J. Kelley; civics and legislation chairman, Mrs. John T. Bombaugh; home and education chairman, Mrs. William J. Att: Metropolitan Advertising

Gentlemen:

Two years ago this month we placed our first ad in the Sunday Tribune Metropolitan Section which circulates on the South Side.

The first week's results convinced us. There was no mistaking what brought us so many new customers. From then on we decided to advertise on a regular weekly basis and our sales showed a steady increase.

In August, 1929, we opened a second and much larger store on the North side featuring the same high quality line of juvenile furniture, carriages and clothing that we offered through our South side store. We then began using the North side Metropolitan Section.

Now with these two locations we are making use of the North and South Metropolitan Sections practically every Sunday. Our business has continued to show steady increases. We get mail orders from many places in Illinois, Wisconsin, and Indiana.

We are using no other form of advertising and we do not hesitate to say that the rapid growth of this business owes a great deal to the advertising we have done in the Tribune Metropolitan Section.

Sincerely yours,
Louis Rubin
SLUMBER-LAND
Juvenile Department Stores

Advertising in the Tribune Metropolitan Section draws customers from all parts of the North side and the suburbs to this Slumberland Juvenile department store at 1542 Devon avenue.

"There was no mistaking what brought us so many new customers"

IN MARCH, 1929, the "Slumber-Land" Juvenile Department Store, 2211 E. 71st street, decided to give the Tribune Metropolitan Section a chance to show what it could do. They placed an advertisement in the Metropolitan Section of the Sunday Tribune which reaches 11 out of every 14 families living on Chicago's great South side.

"The first week's results convinced us," writes Louis Rubin, General Manager. "There was no mistaking what brought us so many new customers. From then on we decided to advertise on a regular weekly basis and our sales showed a steady increase.

"In August, 1929, we opened a second and much larger store on the North side, featuring the same high quality line of juvenile furniture, carriages and clothing that we offered through our South side store. We then began using the North side Metropolitan Section.

"We are using no other form of advertising and we do not hesitate to say that the rapid growth of this business owes a great deal to the advertising we have done in the Tribune Metropolitan Section."

Advertising in the Tribune Metropolitan Section has increased sales and boosted profits for scores of Chicago merchants and retailers. Large and small stores alike have cashed in on Sunday Tribune pulling power.

Don't decide that your business can't take advantage of Metropolitan Section advertising until you have examined the complete facts. A Tribune man will be glad to give them to you, without obligating you in any way whatever.

Call Superior 0100 tomorrow. Simply say that you would like to have more information about advertising in the Metropolitan Section.

OLDEST CHURCH WILL DEDICATE PORTER PLAQUE

Presbyterians to Honor Dr. Porter.

A bronze plaque in memory of Jeremiah Porter, Chicago religious pioneer who founded the First Presbyterian church just previous to the incorporation of the city, will be dedicated this morning at the present church edifice, 64th street and Kimbark avenue, by Dr. William H. Boddy, pastor of the church for the last eight years.

The plaque is a gift of James Porter, 93 year old son of the founder, who still retains membership in the church, though now living at La Mesa, Cal. It has been placed on the outside wall at the right side of the main door of the $750,000 stone edifice of Gothic architecture, which was dedicated in 1928.

Recalls Pioneer Days.

Just as the beam from old Fort Dearborn in the ceiling of the church's interior, so does the plaque serve to recall the stirring conditions of the founding of this, Chicago's first church. The scene was the carpenter shop of Fort Dearborn; the date was 1833. The Rev. Jeremiah Porter had been called from Detroit to form a church for the folks who were soon to become Chicagoans. After discussion it was decided that the church should be of Presbyterian faith, and the Rev. Mr. Porter served as the minister until 1835. The first house of worship was dedicated in 1834 at the corner of Clark and Lake streets. Since this time the course of the church has been steadily southward until the union with the Woodlawn Presbyterian church in 1926.

Likeness of Fort Dearborn.

The head of the plaque bears a likeness of old Fort Dearborn, which is becoming a familiar sight again in the World's Fair replica along Leif Ericson drive. Below it is the following inscription which tells the story:

FIRST
PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH
Was Organized with Twenty-six
Members in the Carpenter
Shop of Fort Dearborn
June 26, 1833.
Rev. Jeremiah Porter,
Founder.

Below this on the plaque is a panel bearing the name of the present minister, Dr. Boddy, and then comes the list of the church services.

The trustees, in accepting the memorial, have announced that it shall be a permanent part of the church and will be moved to any subsequent buildings which may be erected. D. K. Compton is president of the board of trustees, Sheridan E. Fry is vice president, and Maxwell S. Green is secretary.

EARL BURTNETT, DUKE ELLINGTON COMING TO W-G-N

West Coast Favorites to Make Bow Wednesday.

Earl Burtnett and his orchestra, an outstanding dance aggregation of the west coast, and Duke Ellington's orchestra, the current toast of New York City, will be heard exclusively this summer through W-G-N, THE TRIBUNE station, from the Lincoln Tavern on Dempster road.

Earl Burtnett's orchestra has played for five years at the Biltmore hotel in Los Angeles and will be heard for the first time locally when the Lincoln Tavern opens next Wednesday evening.

His band will be augmented by a new rumba section and the famous vocal trio which has appeared with the orchestra in scores of talking pictures, including "The Broadway Melody," "Gold Diggers of Broadway," "Viennese Nights," "Puttin' on the Ritz," Mary Pickford's "Coquette," and Doug Fairbanks' "Reaching for the Moon." In the middle west the orchestra is best known through mechanical appearances—on the records and in the talkies.

Station W-G-N will present Earl Burtnett and his big band every night between midnight and 12:30 and between 1 o'clock and 1:30 in the morning, and, more importantly, at various times during the early evening programs every night in the week.

Duke Ellington Coming.

During the month of July the orchestra will be succeeded by Duke Ellington's orchestra, the most sensational success in the last two years. They captured New York City last year, were signed up for night club appearances, doubled in Ziegfeld's production "Show Girl," then were featured in the talking picture "Check and Double Check," and lately were called back for five weeks of return engagements at the Oriental theater in Chicago. They will remain until Sept. 1, giving radio listeners of the middle west ultra modern treatments and arrangements of dance music.

A memorial day program featuring the W-G-N Symphony orchestra and David Pritchard, baritone, will be given from W-G-N at 8 o'clock next Saturday evening. In addition to a memorial day tribute civil war songs and marches will be presented by the symphony and Mr. Pritchard will sing "In Flanders Fields" "The Light Brigade" and Elgar's "Land of Hope and Glory."

Two baseball games between the Chicago White Sox and the St. Louis Browns will also be broadcast on Memorial day. The morning games start at 10:30 and the afternoon broadcast at the regular hour, 2:45. Bob Elson will be at the microphone giving the play by play report.

Program for Mystery Fans.

Other programs of outstanding entertainment will be offered during the coming week. Mystery story fans and devotees of Sherlock Holmes will hear a dramatization of Conan Doyle's story "The Adventures of the Six Napoleons" tomorrow night at 9 o'clock on the "Adventures with Sherlock Holmes" hour. Richard Gordon will be on the air again in the rôle of the famous detective.

The W-G-N staff will again present their minstrel show at 9 o'clock Tuesday evening. Stars from other highlight programs of the week take part—Marlin Hurt of the Tom, Dick, and Harry trio is one of the end men and Hal Gilles, famous as the Weasel in Louie's Hungry Five is the other. Henry [Hank] Moeller, Herr Louie himself, is the interlocutor.

"In Modern Mood" Wednesday.

Featured for Wednesday night will be the W-G-N orchestra with Leroy Maule conducting through rhythms of the latest dance hits aptly named "In Modern Mood." New and unusual arrangements by the conductor add sparkle to the program.

Thursday night at 8:40 the W-G-N orchestra will be heard in a different mood with modern dance numbers in symphonic arrangement and purely symphonic numbers under the baton of Gaston Du Moulin. The Clef Barons, Negro quartet will also be heard Thursday evening. Popular tunes and favorite spirituals will be included in their program.

Various musical themes from the cheerful to the sombre will be contrasted on the program at 7:30 o'clock Friday night followed by Quin Ryan at 8:10 with a half hour of radio reminiscences. At 9:45 Del Owen and Allen Grant will give a double piano concert featuring old familiar ballads.

And every day—except Sunday—the Singing Lady program comes from W-G-N at 5:15 with entertainment and instruction for the younger children. The Singing Lady not only sings but teaches the children how to sing. Some of the melodies are original compositions of Allen Grant who accompanies her.

Ruth Etting Will Sing with Vallee Thursday

Ruth Etting, Ziegfeld star, will sing with Rudy Vallee and his Connecticut Yankees on their next program to be broadcast at 7 o'clock Thursday evening through W-G-N and NBC. Numbers which Miss Etting will sing include "Were You Sincere?", "Say a Little Prayer for Me," and "Out of Nowhere." Rudy and his band will be heard in a program composed of several of the latest songs and a number of new arrangements of old favorites.

Melodies of Old Favorites Heard on Fireside Hour

Old melodies from favorite operettas and musical comedies still holds first place in the hearts of many radio listeners. It is for this audience that Fireside Melodies on W-G-N at 8:20 o'clock Saturday night was inaugurated. In this program one may hear the numbers of such operas as "The Bohemian Girl" and "Martha" and such musical comedy successes as "The Red Mill" and "Chocolate Soldier."

Rosa Ponselle, American born prima donna soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, will be heard over CBS from 2 to 2:45 Monday afternoon, June 1, when a part of a performance of Verdi's opera, "La Forza del Destino," is relayed to this country from the stage of the Royal Opera house, Covent Garden, London.

Miss Ponselle's portrayal of the rôle of Leonora in "La Forza del Destino" is considered one of her greatest achievements and has won her wide acclaim. It was in this rôle that she made her operatic debut opposite Caruso in 1918.

TOSCHA SEIDEL WILL BE HEARD ON CBS TODAY

Toscha Seidel, famous violin virtuoso, accompanied by a symphonic orchestra and by Ossip Giskin, cellist of the Continental string quartet, will play the second and third movements from Brahms' "Concerto for Violin and Cello," during the Symphonic hour to be broadcast over CBS from 2 to 3 this afternoon.

W-G-N PLAYERS ARE PIONEERS OF RADIO DRAMA

"Divorcons" to Be Given Tonight.

Between 7 and 8 o'clock, this evening the W-G-N Players will present Sardou's comedy, "Divorcons." The play was written for radio presentation by Jean Conover, W-G-N playwright, and will be played by Patricia O'Brien, Nina Lawrence, Douglas Hope, Eugene McGillan, and E. M. Johnstone and Frank Harrington. On next Sunday evening, at the same time, "Oliver Twist" will be played.

Since the institution of the station, in 1924, W-G-N has pioneered in the dramatic form of radio entertainment. In that year, Quin Ryan originated the "Play Shop," a series of programs dramatized from original stories. In 1926, the radio comic strip, a new dramatic form, was born at station W-G-N in the feature "Sam 'n' Henry," now known as "Amos 'n' Andy." On the heels of this came the ever popular comic interlude, "Louie's Hungry Five."

Then, in 1930, another radio dramatic form was inaugurated at station W-G-N—the radio comic srip presenting the familiar characters of the newspaper comic strips. Three of these are presented nightly by station W-G-N—"Harold Teen," "Gasoline Alley," and "Little Orphan Annie," the latter being given to a national network in addition.

Revive Musical Comedies.

Early in 1928, the program department of W-G-N conceived the idea of reviving the old La Salle theater musical comedies which were a national vogue a generation ago. New dramatic and light operatic companies were organized under the direction of Harry W. Spingold, assisted by Reed Myers, both veteran show men, and the series of plays was adapted for radio presentation by Delos Owen.

The first presentation, the "Girl Question," presented with full cast and chorus, met with instantaneous success.

This was followed by revivals of such well remembered hits as "The Honeymoon Trail," "A Stubborn Cinderella," "Prince of Tonight," "The Flirting Princess," "The Time, the Place, and the Girl," "Miss Nobody," and "The Girl at the Helm." The company then delved further into the old repertoires and produced "Robin Hood," "In Old Vienna," "The Chimes of Normandy," "Pirates of Penzance," "The Mikado," "S. S. Pinafore," "The Beggar Student," "The Purple Towers," and "Betty Jane."

Miss Conover Adapts Play.

When the presentation of famous plays from the dramatic stage was considered, Miss Jean Conover, a foremost scenario writer from the movie world, was brought from New York to adapt them for radio production.

During 1929 and 1930, the W-G-N Players presented "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Rip Van Winkle," "Under Two Flags," "Sign of the Four," "Michael Strogoff," "Lena Rivers," "Napoleon and Josephine," "Two Orphans," "Streets of New York," "Midnight Rose," "Anthony and Cleopatra," "The Courtship of Miles Standish," and "The Romance of Preston Manor."

Next came a series of comedy dramas including "Enter Mary Jones," "Call of the Woods," "End of the Lane," "Looks Like Rain," "Civil Service," "Path Across the Hill," "The Shakeup," "The Runaway," "Mr. Jerry Weston," and "Romance, Ltd."

Present Dramatized Operas.

Beginning with the Chicago Civic Opera season of 1930-'31, the W-G-N Players presented 26 one-hour musical plays dramatized from the opera librettos, as follows: "Pagliacci," "The Masked Ball," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Faust," "Rigoletto," "Il Trovatore," "Carmen," "Camille," "The Elixir of Love," "Fra Diavolo," "Aida," "Martha," "William Tell," "The Bohemian Girl," "Lohengrin," "Tanhausser," "Lakme," "The Barber of Seville," "Samson and Delilah," "Mignon," "Lucia di Lammermoor," "La Giocanda," and "The Queen of Sheba."

The summer program, now under way, will see the revival of old familiar plays, including "Under Two Flags," "The Count of Monte Cristo," "Amy of the Circus," "Rip Van Winkle," "When Lindy Ran Away," "The Road Agent," "The Man of Destiny," "The Dancer, and "The Dagger," and "Under Arizona Skies."

Olaf Hjorth, Tenor, Wins Favor on Morning Hour

A young tenor, Olaf Hjorth, well known in Scandinavian musical circles in Chicago, is delighting W-G-N listeners with his Monday morning programs. Mr. Hjorth came to this country from Bergen, Norway, in 1917.

SOPRANO

Olive Kline, soprano, who will be heard as guest artist on the program which will be broadcast through W-G-N and the coast to coast NBC network tomorrow evening at 8:30 p. m.

Clifford W. Barnes, president of the club, will open the services with another of his informal talks on "The Trail of the Pathfinder." Following this will be an organ recital by Stanley Martin. Besides being heard in "Hail Bright Abode," the entire choir will unite in singing "The Lost Chord," a request number.

A solo will be sung by Mrs. Mabel Sharp-Herdien. Another of the numbers on the musical program is to be a quartet arrangement of "Christ in Flanders."

MERLE ALCOCK TO BE HEARD ON W-G-N TONIGHT

The famed "Kashmiri" song will be among the featured selections in the program of Merle Alcock, contralto of the Metropolitan Opera company, when she is heard at 8:15 p. m. tonight over W-G-N and NBC. The concert orchestra will present a special arrangement of the popular "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers," made by its director, Josef Pasternack.

Radios Scarce in Wyoming.

Wyoming is still a fertile field for radio manufacturers, according to the census bureau tabulations just released. Only 24 per cent of the state's family, numbering 57,218, on April 1, 1930, reported radio receivers. The average number of persons in a household was 3.9, while the number possessing sets was 19,482.

HOOVER TO SPEAK AT VALLEY FORGE MEMORIAL DAY

George Bernard Shaw to Be Heard.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Special Memorial day broadcasts and several international programs will be highlights of this radio week.

President Hoover will deliver a Memorial day address at historic Valley Forge at approximately 9:30 o'clock next Saturday morning to be broadcast over both of the major networks. Military bands will salute the President as he speaks from Washington's headquarters of the winter of 1777-'78.

Capt. Charles W. Lockwood, who at 88 years is the last man of Minnesota's famed "Last Man's club," will speak over CBS at 10 a. m. on Memorial day from Washington. Capt. Lockwood last year opened the bottle of the rare old Burgundy wine as the last and privileged survivor of a company of Minnesota volunteers in accordance with a pledge made many years before.

George Bernard Shaw, who still insists he won't visit America, will however speak to the United States by radio for the second time from 3:20 to 3:40 over CBS on Memorial day, the 500th anniversay of the martyrdom of Joan of Arc.

Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley will speak on the question of armament reduction at 8:30 Saturday evening.

The prince of Wales is to be heard again this week. The hour is 3:20 on Thursday over CBS when the Prince speaks at a dinner in London to help raise funds for the blind.

"At least 50 per cent more eggs will be produced for market if the poultry farmer offers his hens the same opportunity to hear good radio programs that he extends to his family," said O. H. Caldwell, former radio commissioner, recently. Does Mr. Caldwell include the well known toothpaste program and "Consider Your Adam's Apple" hour?

If all the words broadcast by a single big radio station during a week were laid end to end they would reach all of the way through Theodore Dreiser's "American Tragedy" and into a bottle of aspirin [100 tablets], with a few hundred thousand left over. That makes a total of about 700,000 words.

Installation and operation of all radio broadcasting in Ecuador is to be controlled by the Durham corporation, an American firm, which has just made a 25 year contract with the South American government. The first station is to be built at Quito, the capital.

Opening Attractions.

So, with that settled, this is as good a time as any to tell briefly the story of "William Tell," which will be the opening attraction of the Ravinia season.

Rossini wrote this opera of the liberation of Switzerland in a fairly international setting. That is, the story by Schiller had come into Paris through translations of the writer's works, and the first libretto was written in French by Jouy and—Bis. It was produced at the Grand Opera in Paris in 1892 with Nourrit as the original Arnoldo in what was then known as "Guillaume Tell." In 1831 it was presented in Lucca, Italy, as "Guglielmo Tell." London saw in 1830 at Drury lane in English and in 1839 at His Majesty's in Italian.

There seems to have been a New York production in English in 1831, as well as a production in New Orleans in 1842 and an American tour in 1857 with Karl Formes in the title role. Tenors who have sung Arnoldo include Mierzwinski, Tamagno, Martinelli and Lauri-Volpi at the Metropolitan, and John O'Sullivan at the Chicago Opera in 1918-'19. The opera was written in five acts, cut down to three by omitting the third act and condensing the fourth and fifth into one, and was then rearranged into four acts, the form it now holds.

Story of a Brave Swiss.

William Tell is a Swiss patriot of the thirteenth century who yearns to free his people from the hated Austrian yoke represented by the tyrant, Gessler. He fears the younger folk will forget former freedom in the habit of servitude. So, the story opens on a May morning when a patriarch blesses young couples in love. His own son, Arnoldo, does not ask this blessing, for he loves Matilde, daughter of Gessler. The festival is halted by a fugitive seeking refuge from Gessler's men, one of whom he has slain to protect his daughter. Tell braves the coming storm to row him across the lake to safety.

Gessler arrives, and in vengeance sacks the town and condemns the patriarch to death. Meanwhile, Arnoldo and Matilde have pledged their love, but when the young man learns of the death of his father, he joins Tell in the conspiracy of the Swiss to overthrow the tyrant.

Then comes the famous market place scene, in which Gessler presides over a holiday by forcing the people to make obeisance to his hat, which is perched atop a pole. This Tell refuses to do, and Gessler, knowing him an expert archer, orders him to shoot an apple from his son's head. The shot succeeds, but Tell drops a second arrow and, questioned, tells Gessler that had he killed his son, the second shaft would have gone to the heart of Gessler. Tell and the boy are condemned to death, but intercession of Matilde saves the boy while the uprisen Swiss free Tell, and an avenging arrow removes Gessler from an otherwise peaceful picture.

In the Ravinia production, Giovanni Martinelli sings Arnoldo, Elisabeth Rethberg is Matilde, Giuseppe Danise is Tell, Margery Maxwell is the boy, and Alfredo Gandolfi is Gessler.

"The Science of Voice."

"The Science of Voice," by Douglas Stanley, M. S., A. C. G. I., recently in pamphlet form from the Journal of the Franklin Institute of Pennsylvania, would seem to be an abbreviation of a book with the same title and by the same author issued some years ago by Carl Fischer, Inc. At least, it takes up the same thesis. He holds that the field of voice culture is still a good deal a matter of witchcraft, of secret methods, and mysterious arts, that practically every theory heretofore held is wrong, and that true principles of the art can only arise from the sum total of the laws of acoustics, anatomy, physiology, psychology, and the laws of music. What these principles are he proceeds to set forth in detail.

Whether they are the true principles or not cannot be told without trial. Certainly they cannot be told from this desk without it. As one whose peculiar mode of life makes it obligatory to listen to dozens and dozens of incompletely developed young voices every season, I am not entirely in the mood to rush to the defense of the embattled singing teachers. But the pamphlet, also the larger book, contains this statement in all the emphasis of capitalized letters: "The range of every properly produced voice should be at least three octaves, and sometimes nearly four can be reached."

Critic Makes Offer.

Like Paolo in his famous literary episode with Francesca da Rimini, in that book I read no more that day. Some years ago I made an offer. I renew it. If Mr. Stanley will give a public demonstration in my presence of a small group, say half a dozen average pupils trained in his methods and with an effective, musical vocal range of three octaves, I will see to it that he gets the publicity such an exploit deserves. I do not ask for the exceptional cases of nearly four octaves. Just three will be enough.

In a lifetime of listening to singers, I, anyone, can count upon the fingers the number that can go three octaves. They are as rare as opera directors who permit a musical score to be finished after the finale. In the meantime, much as I should like to believe that the vocal situation is going to be transformed by Mr. Stanley's researches, I am inclined to issue what in certain legal actions is called a certificate of reasonable doubt.

"Carmen" to Be Heard Here.

"Carmen" is to be returned to the répertoire of the Chicago Civic Opera company, next season, it was announced last week by the management. Conchita Supervia, mezzo-soprano from La Scala, and the Madrid and Barcelona operas, has been engaged for guest performances of the title rôle. Mme. Supervia, who is of Spanish birth, has the distinction of having made her debut at the early age of 14. At 15 she sang her first important operatic rôle, Carmen, and while still in her early teens was a member of the Chicago Opera association for one season.

She was chosen by Richard Strauss to create the rôle of Octavion in "Der Rosenkavalier" in its first performance in Rome and later interpreted this rôle at La Scala with Toscanini conducting. She was a member of the La Scala company under Toscanini for six years and appeared for several seasons at the Royal Opera in Madrid and the Liceo in Barcelona. She took Paris by storm in the summer of 1928 when she participated in the Rossini cycle at the Théâtre des Champs-Elysées in Paris. She was engaged immediately for the Opera and Opera Comique, and during the last winter has been appearing in concert also in London, Paris, and Germany.

Fifty Events Listed.

Sunday, Oct. 18, would seem to be the day that Miss Bertha Ott will begin concert operations for the new season. At least, John McCormack is booked at the Civic Opera house and Sergei Rachmaninoff at Orchestra hall on that date under her management.

Miss Ott is prompt in making and announcing her commitments. About fifty events are already scheduled under her name, though this is by no means the total that will probably have her name at the head of their programs. Some of the more important are these:

Singers—Florence Austral, Beniamino Gigli, Yvonne Gall, Roland Hayes, Isa Kremer, Lotte Lehman, Juliette Lippe, John McCormack, Sigrid Onegin, Paul Robeson, Tito Schipa, Lawrence Tibbett, Reinald Werrenrath, Richard Tauber. The last named is rated as Germany's best tenor. At any rate, he is good.

Violinists — Mischa Elman, Fritz Kreisler, Frank Kneisel.

Pianists — Josef Lhevinne, Myra Hess, Mischa Levitzki, Elly Ney, Sergei Rachmaninoff.

Cellists—Hans Hess, Gregor Piatigorsky, Felix Salmond.

Dancers—Leila Bederkhan, La Argentina, Ted Shawn and company, Mary Wigman.

Combinations, vocal or instrumental —"The Blue Bird," a Russian revue; Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson; Gaylord Browne and Gibson Walters; Don Cossack male chorus; Kedroff quartet; Kneisel string quartet; London Singers with John Goss; Minneapolis Symphony orchestra.

Other engagements will be made and announced later. They will all be heard variously at the Studebaker, the Civic theater, and the Playhouse, with some of the larger ones at the Civic Opera house and Orchestra hall.

Late Season Concerts.

As spring burgeons, concert appearances fade away. Paula Schlueter, soprano, will give a song recital at the Playhouse this afternoon, Yetta Sokolow a piano recital at the Chicago Woman's club. Robert Macdonald will appear in an organ recital at the Oak Park First Baptist church this evening, assisted by Lillian Knowles, contralto. Maria Matyas, mezzo-soprano, and Rudolph Magnus, baritone, will give a joint song recital at Kimball hall tomorrow night, and on Wednesday the Friends of Music of Chicago will close the season with a performance at the Bal Tabarin.

This last will enlist the services of Irene Pavloska, mezzo-soprano of the Civic Opera company, also Sylvia Lolder Stone, Bessie Kaplan Nelson, Benjamin Landsman, Lillyan Sacks, Sara Rose Wexler, and Louis Jacobson. The program will be in large part operatic.

The German Grand Opera company is to make its fourth American tour next winter. The season will be of eight weeks, beginning Jan. 18, and the repertoire will be mainly Wagnerian. In fact, Eugen d'Albert's "Tiefland" is the only non-Wagnerian work to be announced. "Lohengrin" and "Tannhäuser" are to be added to the list. The others will be the four items of the "Ring des Nibelungen," "Tristan und Isolde," and "Der Fliegende Holländer."

Dr. Max von Schillings has been reengaged as musical director, and the principal sopranos will be Johanna Gadski and Margarethe Baumer. Mme. Gadski sends word of a contest for young American women singers, the winner to be engaged as a member of this tour, with salary and expenses guaranteed by Mme. Gadski personally. Voice is the only requisite. Operatic experience will not be required. Applicants are requested to write to the German Grand Opera company, 11 West 42d street, New York.

"The Legend of the Piper," the opera by Mrs. Eleanor Everest Freer of Chicago, is to be sung at Sacramento, Cal., under the auspices of the board of education of that city and the direction of George Sims, superintendent of recreation. The date will be June 6 and the company will number over forty. The work will be remembered as being in the repertoire of the American Opera company, an inspiriting organization which for the last year has been only an inspiriting memory.

Other news of "Peter Ibbetson," to be sung at Ravinia this summer, is that it will be conducted by Wilfrid Pelletier, and the word is that he was chosen at the express wish of Deems Taylor, composer of the work. Mr. Pelletier is to go, at the end of the Ravinia season, to San Francisco and Los Angeles, where he will conduct "Carmen" and "Marouf." He conducted a late night performance of "Romeo and Juliet" in Montreal recently, with Edward Johnson and Queena Mario in the name parts. The performance began at midnight and ended some time after three o'clock in the morning.

TO SING CARMEN

CONCHITA SUPERVIA.

THIS mezzo-soprano from Spain is returning to the Chicago Opera next season and, because she is returning, "Carmen" is to be revived for her appearance in the name part. She was a member of the company years ago when the late Cleofonte Campanini was general director, and she sang as Carmen then. She was very young at that time, however. For that matter, she is by no means old yet, and maturity has brought her an enviable reputation in many of the most noted European opera houses.

Coincidences

Your strange coincidence will be printed if you will submit it to Strange Coincidences, Chicago Tribune.

Sensed Boy Friend's Accident.

A girl friend and I were walking home from work Tuesday at 5 p. m. We were talking about the danger of working around machinery. She told me about her boy friend, who worked on a tractor. She had the strange feeling, she said, that she could picture him on the tractor riding along and the next moment he lay on the ground, badly hurt. I told her that was because she was always thinking of the worst. We then dropped the subject.

She arrived home at 5:30 p. m., and at a quarter of 6 she received a telephone call stating that her boy friend was painfully scalded about the face and chest. The radiator on the tractor had cracked and the steam had scalded him.

When she told me the next day what had happened I considered it a strange coincidence. A. M. P.

A Pleasant Occurrence.

About one month before the Golden Gloves tournament my husband purchased two tickets.

At the last minute my two brothers were given tickets for the bouts. We intended to call each other and find out where our seats were so that we might meet afterward. However, in our rushing around, we neglected to do so.

Imagine our great surprise to find that out of those thousands of seats, our seats were not only the same row as theirs but right next to them! M. O. H.

Cripples, True and False.

We were playing "tag" after school. When we got tired I suggested that we limp instead of run. We had been limping for about five minutes when we saw a cripple limping in the same manner as we were. The cripple, thinking that we were imitating him, whirled his cane at us. I ran and fell. That ended my childhood days. H. W. M.

Debussy Music, Springtime Go Hand in Hand

Two Nocturnes Recorded in Paris.

By Edward Moore.

SPRINGTIME and Debussy's music somehow seem to go together rather well, so it is more than commonly to the purpose that Brunswick is issuing some of Debussy's best. Two of the three nocturnes for orchestra, "Nuages" (Clouds) and "Festivals," two sides each, numbers 90158 and 90159, are played by the Orchestre de l'Association des Concerts Lamoureux of Paris under the direction of Albert Wolff.

They are first class examples of what recorders can do when they set themselves out to reproduce some of the less frequently heard music, that which is usually confined to the elect of concert givers. In the first place, the performance is excellent. Conductor Wolff and the orchestra are thoroughly in the Debussy spirit with the light touch and flexibility and color which does not in the least stifle a great amount of exultant energy.

Next, the recording is as good as can be. It is not only that the qualities of string and wind instruments are faithfully recorded, but how many, or rather, how few years is it since tympani could be put upon a record to sound like anything more than a vague, muffled noise? In this case, they sound like tympani.

A Favorite Number.

Orchestral music of an older and consequently more conventional and possibly more popular type is also well presented by Victor in number 9733, where Mendelssohn's "Ruy Blas" overture is played by a symphony orchestra conducted by Malcolm Sargent, another European recording. The story of Ruy Blas ranks among the stirring melodramas of dramatic history, but both the period and the personal nature of Mendelssohn kept him out of musical turgidness or anything except frank, lively melody.

This overture used to be a favorite number in both popular orchestral and band concerts, and there is no reason why it should not continue in that enviable position for years to come. At least, this record makes a strong argument.

Once again it is a little amusing to see the recording companies duplicating each other at the same time. This example is Handel's famous and so called Largo, whose proper title is "Ombra mai fu" from the opera, "Xerxes." Columbia and Brunswick are both issuing it, Columbia through the voice of Jo van Yzer-Vincent, soprano, with organ and violin accompaniment, number 50282-D; Brunswick through Emmi Leisner, contralto, with orchestral accompaniment, number 90160.

You can pretty well take your choice which one you will prefer. Both are in Italian, and both voices are well fitted for the purpose. Mme. van Yzer-Vincent sings in a key which reproduces as G. Mme. Leisner approximately D. Mme. Leisner's accompaniment is a bit the better, since the violin for Mme. van Yzer-Vincent does not register as quite ideal perfection of tone.

Reverse Sides Vary.

The solo is short, taking only one side of a record, and the reverse sides are different. Columbia presents Theodora Versteegh, mezzo-soprano, in Cesar Franck's sacred song, "Panis Angelicus," again with organ and violin, which, together with "Ombrai mai fu" will be remembered as high spots in John McCormack's repertoire. The Brunswick reverse is another by Mme. Leisner and another by Handel, the solo cantata with instruments, "Dank Sei Dir, Herr." Rather curiously, it is much in the same musical mood as "Ombrai mai fu," even to the leisurely three-four rhythm. It is perhaps unnecessary to add that both of these disks are imported recordings.

Two records that cannot be slighted by any admirer of one of the foremost of German leider are of the ten inch size from Brunswick. They are made by the great baritone, Heinrich Schlusnus, and they display him at the top of his voice and form. 85001 presents Hugo Wolf's "Heimweh" and Richard Strauss' "Heimliche Aufforderung"; 85003 has Schumann's "Es zogen zwei rust'ge Gesellen" and Humperdinck's "Am Rhein." Both are confidently and earnestly recommended, particularly 85001. Franz Rupp plays the piano accompaniment for all.

"Record" Attendance.

Army Planes Keep Newsreel Cameras Busy

By Tom Pettey.

taken over Manhattan. The first of the two was snapped last winter. The picture ship was cruising over New Jersey when a sudden shift in the wind swept in a blanket of fog. The ship wheeled and headed for its home port on Long Island. As it swung across the bay the camera man noticed the towers — dozens of the skyscrapers sticking up through the fog like white candles atop a birthday cake. He waved to the pilot to fly over the city, and roaring above the thick clouds the photographer cranked away at a unique sight. The plane eventually got down, but it was nip and tuck with old man bad weather.

Movie Houses Turn Automat.

The newest things in the way of movie houses are the Translux theaters in Manhattan. Two new ones have just opened on Broadway. They are under the same roof, but show different types of programs. These are the "automats" of the picture house world. The auditoriums are small, there are no ushers—one just drops his quarter in the slot, enters, and takes a seat.

The house is lighted at all times—almost to daylight brilliancy. A new method of projection makes this possible, and the lighted auditorium is popular with every one except those couples who go to the movies to be alone. News pictures are being shown in one of the Broadway houses, and feature shorts make up the bill at the other.

Foreign Language Talkies.

One hears a lot, these days, about the problem of making Hollywood and Long Island movies for foreign distribution. England is making a lot of its own pictures, these days, and then, too, there is no language obstacle to hurdle in that country. In France the old picture quarrel, which has been going through an armistice, probably will be renewed this summer. American film men, members of the French government, and United States embassy officials in Paris will meet to draft a new film quota agreement. The talkies have come along since the original row and the United States producers probably will have to promise the French pictures in their own language.

The making of foreign language talkies should be profitable, for there is a demand for them right here in our own country. I have seen and heard talkies in at least four different languages in New York City, and in the Rio Grande country every Texas town has its picture house that caters to the Mexican population by showing Spanish language pictures.

If film trade agreements with foreign countries can be worked out on a satisfactory basis there is no reason why the foreign language talkie industry should not be one of the biggest gold mines in the cinema manufacturing Eldorado.

DREAMS

Have you ever had a dream which later came true? If you care to see it in print address Dreams, Chicago Tribune.

Received Death Warning.

I have for years been forewarned of any approaching troubles by dreams, but am not always able to interpret the meaning or place the ones involved.

However, on April 13, 1931, I had a confused dream. I seemed to have to cross over a stream of muddy water which reached up to my mouth. The shock, for my dream was so real, wakened me. I was as awake as I am this moment, and I heard a voice say, "your dream is a warning of death." Naturally, I slept very little that night.

I was so worried I told some friends about it the next morning. Two days later I received word that my brother in Portland, Ore., had been operated on the night of my dream, and that there was little hope he would recover. He died five days later. R. J. C.

Dream Brought Good Luck.

I was one of the unemployed for some time. One day I answered a blind ad in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. That same night I dreamed that I was granted an interview by a small concern in the suburbs for 3 o'clock. The next day I got a call to be at the office of a concern in the surburbs at 3 o'clock. The interviewer was just the man in my dream and I landed the job. F. J. P.

Kid Gloves Restored.

Sometime ago I missed two pairs of kid gloves. I looked through dresser drawers and every place I could think of. I have a couple of bags in which I put things that I don't use. I even looked there, but no kid gloves, so I gave them up for lost.

That night, lying in bed, I racked my brains trying to think where I could have put them. I went to sleep and dreamed that I found them in one of my bags. I told the family about it, and they told me to look there again.

I did. I too keverything out, and, sure enough, there were the gloves. M. B.

Found Pen in Purse Lining.

Recently, as I was on my way to the city, I couldn't find my fountain pen, which I always carried in my purse. I decided that I had left it at home. On returning I did not find it at home. I could not believe I had lost my pen and kept talking about it. That night a member of the family said to me, "I hope you dream about your pen and that the dream will tell you where it is."

I remembered the next morning that I had dreamed that my pen was in my purse. I looked, but failed to find it. The following day a little girl at school asked me to change some money for her and in putting my hand into the inside purse attached to my purse I felt it through the lining, for it had slipped behind this pocket. Then I realized that my dream had come true. E. M.

Memorial Day Originated by Georgia Women

First Formal Exercises Held April 26, 1866.

COLUMBUS, Ga.—(AP)—Memorial day, now set aside in every state in the Union each year, and in many foreign countries, for honoring the dead, had its inception here nearly 65 years ago.

It was on April 26, 1866, that Mrs. John Tyler of Columbus called together a group of her friends for the purpose of forming a Ladies' Memorial association.

Four southern states still hold their Memorial day exercises April 26. They are Georgia, Florida, Mississippi and Alabama. Alabama was the first state officially to observe Memorial day, and New York the first state to declare it a legal holiday.

* *

First Formal Ceremony.

Mrs. Tyler and her friends pledged themselves to "perpetuate as a religious custom to wreathe annually the graves of our martyred dead." With the vow recorded, they went to Linwood cemetery in Columbus and held formal exercises.

Many memorial associations were organized throughout the south, and the spirit of the movement soon seized the people of the north. One New York newspaper observed:

"The women of Columbus have shown themselves impartial in their offerings to the memory of the dead. They strewed flowers alike on the graves of the Confederate and National soldiers."

Idea Sponsored in North.

Gen. John A. Logan, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, gave impetus to the idea in the north. He issued an order May 30, 1868, that every post should hold appropriate exercises and place flowers on the graves of dead comrades.

When the day ultimately became a legal holiday, most states observed it on May 30.

Besides the four states already mentioned which observe "Confederate Memorial day," April 26, the other exceptions are: North and South Carolina, celebrating on May 10, and Louisiana on June 3.

Pulitzer Prize Play Provokes Hot Argument

"Alison's House" Is Bad Choice, Critics Assert.

By Charles Collins.

[and Miss Dickinson, too, for that heroine of this play [she has been dead eighteen years] as something more than an alias for a special case of poetic genius. Alison for me matter] represents a type of American character that used to be prevalent before females became emancipated.

Many a family has had an Alison Stanhope without the posthumous poems. Many an American household has sheltered a sensitive girl who, for some inscrutable reason, has withdrawn from life, shut herself away from all social contacts, and let the years roll by until she withered into eccentric spinsterhood and crumbled silently away. There must have been many thousands of them, although they were too shy to come to the attention of statistics takers. They were the "queer" aunts of the old homesteads, known best to the children of the household. They were the nuns of puritanism.

In "Alison's House" this character finds her place in American drama. The play ought to stimulate a searching of many attics after the papers that "queer" aunts may have left behind. Perhaps there are new Emily Dickinsons to be discovered.

Past Prize Winners.

The controversy over "Alison's House" has caused me to refresh my memory of past Pulitzer prize winners. They were: 1918, "Why Marry?" by Jesse Lynch Williams; 1919, no award because of inferior material; 1920, "Beyond the Horizon," by Eugene O'Neill; 1921, "Miss Lulu Bett," by Zona Gale; 1922, "Anna Christie," by Eugene O'Neill; 1923, "Icebound," by Owen Davis; 1924, "Hell Bent for Heaven," by Hatcher Hughes; 1925, "They Knew What They Wanted," by Sidney Howard; 1926, "Craig's Wife," by George Kelly; 1927, "In Abraham's Bosom," by Paul Green; 1928, "Strange Interlude," by Eugene O'Neill; 1929, "Street Scene," by Elmer Rice; 1930, "The Green Pastures," by Marc Connelly.

I am not convinced that the Pulitzer prize committee was lamentably in error when it added "Alison's House" to this list.

For Sharpshooters.

Writers who deal with the theater arts [including music critics] make frequent use of the word "diction"; and often draw the fire of sharpshooters who insist that the correct word for the intended idea is "enunciation." In order to settle the point for all time, so far as this department is concerned, and to assert my right to write "diction" when I mean diction I shall refer the sharpshooting population to the following definition, which is to be found in Funk & Wagnalls New Standard Dictionary.

"Diction: 1. The use of words or the manner of using them either in literature, oratory, or song; the manner with which anything is expressed in words. It includes articulation, pronunciation, intonation, declamation, and punctuation. 2. Specif. That department of rhetoric which deals with the choice and arrangement of words and modes of expression."

This ought to persuade all of the sharpshooters in the "diction" brigade to abandon their rifle pits.

French Tribute to Belasco

HENRY BERNSTEIN, author of "Melo," French dramatist now making his first visit to this country, has issued a statement regarding the death of David Belasco as representative of the French Society of Authors and Composers. He says:

"The Society of French Authors and Composers, which is the most powerful association of writers in the world and also the most powerful association of theater professionals, has been very deeply moved on hearing of David Belasco's death. Our society wishes to express publicly the profound sympathy of its members for America's loss of the great Belasco.

"We do not forget that David Belasco presented with all his skill and his deep sense of beauty those French plays he deemed worthy of the American public's interest. All who love the theater and seek its greatness should hope to find in every country servants of its art as efficient and inspired as David Belasco."

How Mr. Belasco Died in Harness; Gotham Theaters

Mr. Leiber Wants Stars for Next Season.

NEW YORK, May 23.—[Special.]—The late David Belasco was engrossed in theatrical plans almost until the day of his death, May 14, according to tomorrow's Broadway gossip in the New York Times. On Friday, May 8, six days before the end of his career, he purchased the rights to "The Night Remembers," by Martha Madison, co-author of "Subway Express." He was looking forward joyously to a birthday celebration next July in Atlantic City, for it was his custom to make this anniversary coincide with the tryout of a new production. His office declares, however, that reports that he had a score of plays or more on hand are unfounded.

Max Faetkenheur, business manager of the Chicago Civic Shakespeare company, is in New York with great plans for next season seething in his mind. The Times will say tomorrow:

"On a star hunt through these sections is an agent provocateur for the Chicago Civic Shakespeare society whose plan is to arouse persons of stellar importance to appear in the Fritz Leiber company next season. The search will be carried to London, if necessary, to find for Mr. Leiber some support more lustrous than he has been in the habit of receiving."

A story is going the rounds of Broadway which illustrates in a grotesque manner the economic difficulties of the stage, so far as "the road" is concerned. A play whose "properties" consist only of one barrel and one revolver will not be able to travel, merely because three stage hands, at salaries of $115 a week, would have been required, under union rules, to handle these articles. Efforts to persuade the union to moderate its rules covering this point were unsuccessful; and so the affair has been called off.

Chester Erskin, who staged "He" for the Theater Guild, may put on another play for that organization before he joins the Erlanger forces for full time duty next fall. At least he mentioned this possibility before sailing for Europe last Tuesday. The play in question is "Mother and Son," by Leonard Atlas, author of "The House We Live In." Herman Shumlin was once interested in this manuscript. . . . This Mr. Shumlin, incidentally, is said to be losing his affection for "Pariser Platz, 13," by Vicki Baum, author of "Grand Hotel." He may decide to permit his lien on the American rights to lapse.

Rudy Vallee informed the ladies and gentlemen of the radio audience a few nights ago that he and his fellow musicians will contribute to the program of the forthcoming "Scandals." This summer revue goes into rehearsal two weeks hence.

Jane Cowl will end her season in "Art and Mrs. Bottle" with a week in the New York suburbs, beginning June 8. One of her managers, Joseph Verner Reed, has sailed for England to inspect "Lean Harvest" and "Autumn Crocus," and to decide whether or not these London plays should be seen in America. It's easy to imagine how the Broadway wisecrackers will bear down on the word "crocus" if that play doesn't meet with their approval.

Earl Carroll is shopping for celebrities to appear in his next "Vanities," which will dedicate his new theater. Eddie Cantor is said to have rejected an offer of $7,500 a week. Mr. Carroll is negotiating with the four Marx brothers, who collectively want $10,000 a week.

Encouraged by the success of "Meet My Sister," the Shuberts have acquired another musical piece of this intimate, no chorus type. It is called "Cocktail," and is now pleasing the patrons of the Komödienhaus in Berlin. Ralph Benatzsky, composer of "Meet My Sister," wrote the score. Its story deals with a childless queen, a king who wants an heir, and a third party.

New in Chicago: Operetta, Guild Play, 'The Rap'

"MEET MY SISTER," a musical comedy which has had a long run in New York, began an engagement at the Grand Opera house last night. It is an adaptation of a piece which has had a marked success upon the lyric stage in Europe. The score is by Ralph Benatsky, and the libretto, which deals with a romance between a spirited girl of noble family and a shy, humble professor, has been adapted by Henry Wagstaffe Gribble.

The cast includes Bettina Hall, formerly of "Three Little Girls"; Walter Slezak, son of the opera singer, Leo Slezak, and originator of the rôle of the professor in Germany; Harry Welsh, the comedian who appeared here a year ago in "A Wonderful Night"; David Hutcheson, last seen in "Sons o' Guns"; Olive Olsen, Kay McKay, Boyd Davis, Donald Campbell, Ronald Brown, and several others. "Meet My Sister" is described as an intimate musical play which has no chorus to interrupt its flow of comedy.

"He," a comedy from the French of Alfred Savoir, will have a première at the Illinois theater tomorrow night under the auspices of the Theater Guild. This production is being offered to the Guild's Chicago subscribers and patrons prior to its showing in New York, and marks the final chapter of the Guild's season in this city. The engagement is for three weeks.

"He" derives its title from a mystifying character who appears at a convention of atheists in a Swiss hotel and announces himself to be God. He meets with derision, but his stay is accompanied by a sequence of events which strike the atheists as miraculous. The play tells an unusual story in a vein of lightly satiric comedy.

For the interpretation of "He" the Guild has assembled a notable cast which includes Tom Powers, in the title rôle; Claude Rains, Violet Kemble Cooper, Pedro de Cordoba, Edward Rigby, Edith Meiser, Viola Frayne, Victor Killian, William Gargan, and Robert Su LeSueur. The stage settings were designed by Aline Bernstein.

"The Rap," a play which is described as a mystery melodrama, will begin an engagement at the Studebaker theater next Saturday night, May 30. It comes directly from New York, where it has had a nine weeks' run at the Avon theater. John Peter Leister is the author; Leonard Bergman and Raymond Payton are the producers. The former is a nephew of the late A. L. Erlanger.

The story of "The Rap" is based upon recent exposés in New York of alliances between politics and the criminal classes. The cast includes Helen Tenney, Paul Harvey, Jack Marvin, Ernest Anderson, Robert Shayne, Kenneth Bradshaw, Richard Gregg, and Edwin Vickery.

B'way Openings

NEW YORK, May 23.—[Special.]—Only one première is announced for the Gotham stage next week. The other items recorded below come under the heading of miscellaneous and incidental stage activities:

"Gasoline Gypsies"—Opens Wednesday night at the Lyric. This is a comedy by Charles Conger Stewart; acting in it will be Gene Byron, Dorothy Randall, Gertrude Flynn and Emmett Lynn among others.

"The Legend of the Golem"—Tuesday night at the theater of the New School for Social Research. A play, in the most constructive manner, of medieval religious conflict. Boris S. Glagolin, a Russian director, has staged it, and there will be 25 actors, a troupe of dancers and a choir. The performance will be repeated on Wednesday and Thursday and on June 1, 2 and 3.

"Precedent"—Tuesday night at the Bijou theater. The I. J. Golden play, which has to do with the Mooney-Billings case, will move uptown from the Provincetown theater, where it has been providing fireworks of a sort since mid-April. The original cast, including Clyde Franklin, Royal Dana Tracy, William Bonelli and Kirk Brown, will continue to play it. The settings will be new.

Critic Writes a Last Tribute to David Belasco

Master Showman Was Shy at Heart.

By Burns Mantle.

iel Frohman clings to band collars as high as a fence.

Admired Catholic Ceremony.

Belasco must always have admired the form and ceremony of the Catholic church. I recall an afternoon, nearly twenty years ago, when he took me on a personally conducted tour of what was then his famous studio atop the Belasco theater.

We had been through one room, 15x15, I should say, filled with his Napoliana. We had seen the collection of rock crystal, the frieze of spears, the paintings and the cabinets of objet d'art. We had sat for a moment at the old English dining room table, imported by Stanford White from a collection handed down by a feudal lord. And we turned suddenly around a pillar and started down what had the appearance of being the chancel of a church in miniature. David walked in front and every foot or two he would press a hidden button and another section would burst into light.

At the end of a fifteen or twenty foot walk we came to a wall shrine. He opened the doors and the interior was flooded with light. A handsome figure of a madonna was the central object and on the wall about the madonna were possibly a hundred rosaries of every conceivable hue and quality—jade and jet, polished ebony and teakwood, ivory and coral.

Showing them, David would stand back with shining eyes and drink in the surprise of the beholder, and then explain: "These were my daughter's [his youngest daughter, Augusta, who was the wife of William Elliott and who had died but a year or so before]; I was a collector and she wanted to be a collector, so she collected these.

"I put them here after she died."

This was the Augusta for whom he ordered that a candle be kept burning in her tomb, because she was always afraid of the dark.

Longed to Die in Harness.

I didn't believe David was afraid of the dark. He had pondered the mysteries and put much of what he had come to believe in "The Return of Peter Grimm." He will come back, if he can, for he loved life. But not for long. He will be ever so curious about the way they are staging things farther on.

His one great wish was, as he often said, to die in harness. He was a little jealous of Sir Henry Irving for having died on the stage. He wanted to be carried out of his theater to the mortician's parlor.

He did not die in harness, but he had his harness polished and ready, hanging on his bedroom wall. He had been reading plays for weeks. He had found one or two he thought something might be done with. He was just about to get the harness down and set to work on a play by Martha Madison and Eva K. Flint, who wrote "Subway Express." "The Night Remembers" was the tentative title.

Not many of us will come that close to getting our last wish.

It is difficult to stop writing about Belasco, once you start, if you have lived the last thirty years of your life in the theater. I came to admire him sincerely, after several years of distrust and suspicion. Not for the plays he produced so much as for the way he produced them and for the standards he set for other showmen to shoot at.

There are many fine entertainments in the Belasco list of plays, and probably not a single fine play in the literary sense. They acted superbly, but they read quite badly. He was, so long as he lived, our master showman. His influence was marked. He was, I think, the last great showman of his and our time.

* *

"If Booth Had Missed."

Which leaves but little room for my report of the week to you. Fortunately, there is but little to report.

The most interesting new play is one called "If Booth Had Missed," by Arthur Goodman. It won the $1,000 prize offered by Samuel French to the annual little theater tournament for long plays.

Originally, you will remember, this tournament was devoted to one-act pieces by amateur groups. This year the one-act play contest was abandoned because of the depression, but five long plays were tried by four home groups and one from Lapeer, Mich. They were the Wigwam players and offered a three-acter called "Side Show."

The Lincoln play starts with the night in Ford's theater, April 14, 1865, when Booth's aim was true. This time his gun arm is thrown up by a colored porter and Lincoln lives.

Thereafter the martyred one is set upon and finally taken, even as his successor, Andrew Johnson, was treated. His own party opposes his reconstruction program. The military heads want an army dictatorship. Grant deserts him. Lincoln finally asks the resignation of Stanton [as Johnson did] and Stanton refuses to resign.

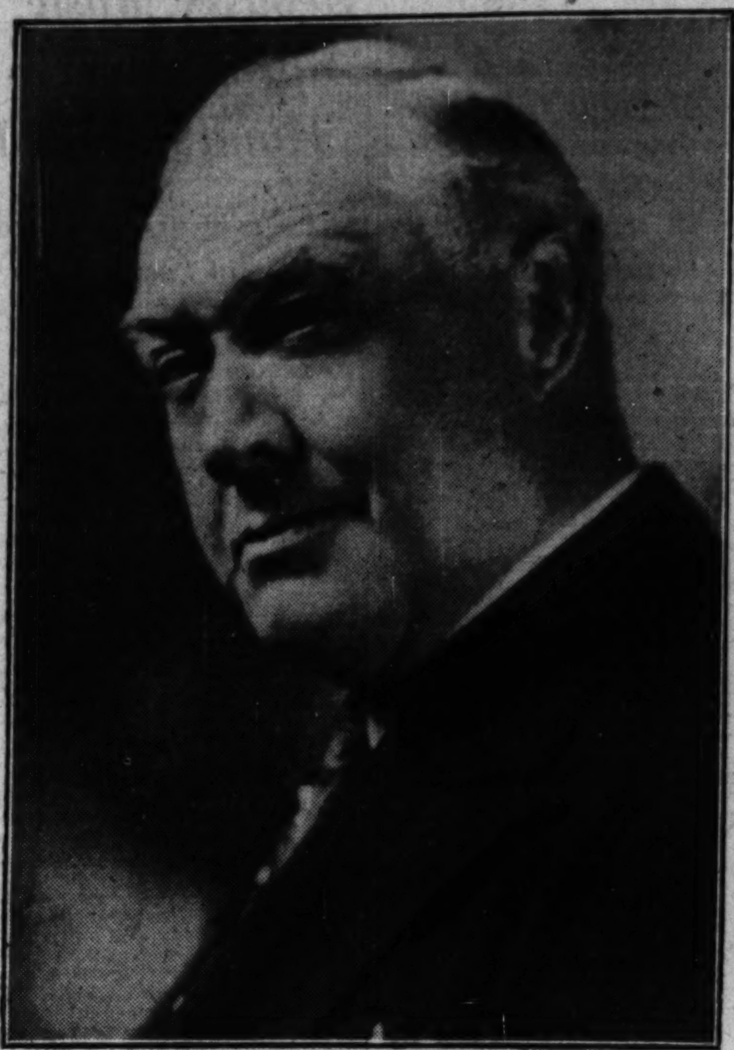
Lincoln is, as Johnson was, thereupon impeached for a violation of the tenure of office act. In a final scene in the senate Lincoln is saved from impeachment by a single vote, after he pleads his own case, but as he rises to thank his supporters a Senator Tilton rises, and crying, "The penalty of treason is death!" shoots him dead.

The play has its dramatic moments, as any Lincoln play must have, and the amateurs did it fairly well. They represented the Morningside players of Columbia university, who also won last season's prize with a piece called "The New Freedom." Nothing has come of that, either.

Saturday Night Premieres.

Apropos the opening of "Meet My Sister" last night at the Grand Opera house, the Messrs. Shubert say that they hope to establish Saturday night openings as regular events for next season, for their musical plays. They feel that there is as much of a demand for gala first nights on Saturday as on Sunday.

"GRATITUDE" COMEDIAN



GEORGE W. BARBIER.

THIS veteran comedian is one of the reasons why "That's Gratitude" is having a long run at the Blackstone theater. His character study of a soft-hearted and soft-headed business man of the middle west is mellow with humor. When he finishes with this play he will go into "pictures"; but next season will probably find him on the legitimate stage again, with the rank of a star.

Old School of Stage Producers Almost Extinct

NEW YORK, May 23.—(AP)—William A. Brady remains as the leader of the old guard of producers with the passing of David Belasco. Nearly all except Brady are gone now—Belasco, Charles Frohman, Klaw and Erlanger, and the others.

Brady still remains active, working as hard as he did in the days when he managed prize fighters in the daytime and rehearsed shows at night. He produces and directs—and even as recently as 1927 he acted the leading rôle in "A Free Soul." Two seasons ago he made a fortune off "Street Scene."

Belasco's death ended the school of realistic producers. When he had a play calling for a drawing room, he actually built a drawing room. There would be actual books in the book cases, real flowers in the vases, and good, solid furniture in the room.

The newer schools of production, headed by Robert Edmond Jones and Lee Simonson, are not so much for realism as for suggestivism. For instance, in "Miracle at Verdun" a cenotaph and a dozen crosses suggested a huge cemetery. Belasco would have built an actual cemetery on the stage.

The two Broadway premières of this week were an Irish comedy and a revue. Arthur Sinclair and Marie O'Neill, veterans of the Dublin stage, returned in the comedy, "Old Man Murphy." It is the work of Patrick Kearney and Harry Wagstaff Gribble.

Billy Rose brings out his second revue in "Crazy Quilt," with Phil Baker, Ted Healy and Fannie Brice as stars. It is a smart summer show, and rarely does it drop down among the mediocre and dull.

"Tom" Show for Benefit.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" will be acted at the Goodman theater tomorrow night by the University of Chicago Dramatic association. The performance will be for the benefit of the University Settlement. This famous old play, which has passed into American folklore, has become practically extinct on the professional stage.

Play Festival

BLANCHE YURKA, Tom Powers, Violet Heming and Martha Graham have been engaged for a dramatic festival to be held at the Lydia Mendelssohn theater, Ann Arbor, Mich., from May 25 to June 27. Robert Henderson, in association with George Coulouris, will stage the program of six plays.

Miss Yurka will appear in Sophocles' "Electra" and will take Lynn Fontanne's rôle in "Caprice." Mr. Powers and Miss Heming have been cast for the principal rôles in Noel Coward's "Private Lives" and "The Way of the World," by Congreve. Mr. Powers will be seen also as Bluntschli in Shaw's "Arms and the Man." The sixth play will be Strindberg's "The Father."

Succeeds Eva Le Gallienne.

Gale Sondergaard has replaced Eva Le Gallienne in the cast of Susan Glaspell's "Alison's House," in New York. This is the second time Miss Sondergaard has stepped into a Pulitzer prize play in the midst of its engagement. She replaced Judith Anderson in "Strange Interlude" when Miss Anderson left the cast of O'Neill's play in the middle of the Chicago run. She is the wife of Herbert Biberman, stage director with the Theater Guild.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Discoveries of oil at the seaside resort community of Venice have made wealthy people of several picture stars. Foremost among these are Mae Murray, Lewis Stone, and Madge Bellamy. Miss Murray now has five wells gushing liquid gold on her beach property. A casual drive about the environs of the little town not far from Hollywood reveals huge derricks and oil tanks where formerly the stars used to bask in the sun and swim in the gentle breakers of the Pacific.

A Sunday afternoon drive is bound to be well sprinkled with signs advertising this and that commercial enterprise of film celebrities. Practically all of the stars are willing to lend their names to enterprises that will return them some value commercially.

In Cahuenga pass one sees an elaborate modernistic sign on the front of a much fussed up and fancy tied beauty parlor. Esther Ralston owns it and her name appears in big letters over the combination beauty parlor, Turkish bath, swimming tank, and gymnasium enterprise.

Noah Beery Trout Club.

Along Vine street and also around the corner on Hollywood boulevard are signs advertising the Noah Beery trout club. Little fish, big speckled fish, and various crustaceans flounder around in an outdoor water tank with glass sides, used as an ad for the trout club.

On Wilshire boulevard one finds many picture names in a few blocks. Mary Pickford's name is over a miniature golf club furnished with modernistic trees, and tables, and chairs. A few blocks further on is the Jackie Coogan golf course.

Ruth Roland's Trout Fishing club occupies a whole block. It is landscaped with huge cataracts and pools in which the passer-by may catch trout, which will be broiled at a little restaurant on the club grounds.

A traveler passing down the ocean highway towards Laguna is confronted with Hallam Cooley's name in large letters. Cooley is in the real estate business down that way.

Raymond Griffith has developed a fine "Drive In" open air market where you may buy anything edible, and such fancies as floor wax, mops, brooms, clothes line, soap, and shoe polish.

Recently Raised Prices.

Ronald Colman and Lew Cody both have money invested in tonsorial parlors. Lew also owns a drug store. Charles Bickford owns a huge garage, filling station, and parking station opposite the M-G-M studios in Culver City. It is doing so well he recently raised prices.

Belle Bennett presides with a motherly air, no longer in demand on the screen, at "Grandma's Farm," out on Ventura boulevard, where you can get choice fried chicken. Bill Haines has a charming and profitable antique shop on La Brea, just off Hollywood boulevard.

Jetta Goudal and her husband, Harold Grieve, are doing very well in the interior decorating business. Jetta is to make a picture at Fox soon, the first in a long time.

Corinne Griffith recently opened her Victor Hugo market in Beverly Hills with a regular movie première.

Charles Chaplin will never lack for food as long as his friend and fellow actor, Henry Bergman, runs Henry's restaurant on Hollywood boulevard. Charlie has stock in it.

To Open First Automat.

Howard Hughes has added another industry to his oil, tool business, motion picture producing, and theater constructing enterprises. He and Harold Franklin have approved plans for the construction and opening of the first automatic restaurant in the west. It will be built on Vine street, Hollywood. With so many actors out of work an automat should become the most popular eating house on the boulevard.

The financial clouds that hovered over Eugene V. Brewster and Corliss Palmer ever since they came to Hollywood from New York to launch Miss Palmer on a film career lowered them recently. The Brewster's auctioned off a residence on Hollywood drive which they had bought three years ago in more prosperous times. The results of the sale, Brewster sadly announced, produced little more than required to pay taxes on that and another little piece of property here which he still holds.

The Brewsters have moved into a small cottage on Selma avenue. Through, or maybe because of, adversity the one time multimillionaire publisher and the beautiful Macon, Ga., girl whom he took as a protégée remain as devotedly in love as during the heyday of their romance.

Embarrassing Moments

What was the most embarrassing moment of your life? If you care to have it published address Embarrassing Moments, Chicago Tribune. Please write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

A Mistake in Identity.

One rainy day I got off the train, opened up my trusty old umbrella, and started for home. Just a few feet ahead of me I spied the familiar shuffling figure of my uncle. Catching up to him, I tapped him on the back and said, "Uncle Alex, you dear old man, aren't you afraid of getting wet? You had better walk under my umbrella."

At the sound of my voice the old gentleman turned around, and to my horror and embarrassment I saw that he was a stranger. I mumbled something about "making a mistake" and hurried away as fast as I could.

Perfumed Eggs for the Guest.

Not long ago I had a sample of a new kind of cold cream given me. Wanting the jar I put the cream in a cup, which somehow got in the ice box and was forgotten.

One Sunday morning, having a guest whom I was eager to impress with my culinary ability, I decided to fry the eggs in butter. Noticing that my efforts seemed to be going unrewarded I began to look for the reason.

Imagine my chagrin when I found that I had used face cream and the eggs were highly perfumed.

Impressing the Boy Friend.

Recently I purchased some sweet rolls. After returning to the office I proceeded to wrap them more securely in order to carry them home. While so doing my fingers became quite sticky from the sugar and cinnamon.

In the meantime a young man on whom I had tried to make a good impression in the past, and whom I had not seen for some time, came into the office, a fact of which I was unaware at the time. I started out to wash my hands when he jumped up and jokingly held out his to me. There was nothing else for me to do but politely grasp it, with my sticky paw. He said nothing, but I still wonder what he thought. That was my most embarrassing moment.

H. J.

A Jovial Recognition.

One afternoon I came to Chicago on the elevated. As we neared the city a drunken man boarded the same car. I have been told that I look very much like President Hoover—as a matter of fact my friends call me "Herbie."

This intoxicated man finally noted the resemblance and in a voice so loud all the occupants of the car could hear him, called attention to me by saying: "Why, just look at that fellow. He looks like Hoover. I'll bet he is one of his relations."

Imagine my embarrassment with all the people gazing at me and the drunken man talking on and on until his station was called.

Harsh Words for Minnie.

I had spent most of a hot spring afternoon in my garden, spading and planting. Feeling quite proud of myself, I went out after supper to view the result of my labor. What a picture met my sight! There in the middle of one bed was "Minnie," our little boy's pet chicken, and seed and soil were flying in every direction.

Just then beyond the fence I saw our neighbor in her garden. And the look she gave me! Her name was Minnie. I turned and fled, too embarrassed for explanations.

A. L. G.

Due to a Slight Misunderstanding.

A lady belonging to our church phoned one day and, as I understood her, said: "Will you bake two jelly cakes this week?" I unhesitatingly agreed.

Imagine my feeling when just in the midst of the baking she arrived and sai "Here are the two delegates you were so kind as to take in your home this week and keep for us."

Typing Was Perfect.

I experienced my most embarrassing moment shortly after I got a position with a real estate firm. My employer came to my desk one afternoon with three gentlemen and gave me an important form to be filled out in quadruplicate. They were in a hurry for it and I was told to be careful in filling it out, as there could be no erasures.

I arranged the papers in my machine and after fifteen minutes of careful typing according to the dictation of my employer, while the others stood at my desk and waited, I carefully took the sheets out, delighted that due to my care I hadn't made a single mistake. But my delight soon changed to terrible embarrassment—I had placed the carbon paper wrong side up and the printing appeared on the back of each sheet instead of on the front.

Italian Scions Plan to Follow Fathers' Lives

Prince and Mussolini's Son Train for Power.

ROME.—(AP)—In marked contradiction to the United States, President's sons go to business school and scions of banking families are orchestra leaders, the sons of most Italian leaders plan lives like those of their fathers.

Prince Umberto and Bruno Mussolini, Italy's most famous sons of famous fathers, are treading the exact footsteps their parents took before them.

The prince, who will one day rule Italy from the throne of his father, King Victor Emmanuel, is getting a thorough training in court and military life.

Holds Colonel's Office.

He is a full colonel of a line regiment, stationed at Turin, and will fill, as a practical officer, the post of commander in chief of the Italian armies. His career was cut out for him at birth, as was his father's.

Bruno, 13 year old son of the duce, has embraced early the same career that led his father to his post as head of the Italian government and founder and leader of Fascism.

Already he is an editor. A short time ago he founded a paper, the Boys' Pen, which has a growing circulation among Fascist youths.

He is getting a sound background of Fascist political thought and will undoubtedly hold a governmental post when he grows older.

Carving Political Career.

Another example is the career of Galeazzo Ciano, son of the minister of communications and son-in-law of Mussolini. While not yet holding a portfolio, he is carving a career in his government's service. He has chosen diplomacy and is at present stationed at Shanghai.

Other cases of sons following their fathers into the government are somewhat harder to find, since most of Mussolini's aids are young men, well on the sunny side of 50, and their sons, if they have them, are still in the romper stage.

Berlin Dancers Halt as Fiddler Collects His Pay

BERLIN.—(AP)—The wild wave of dancing that swept Germany after the war, reaching its crest about the time one dollar could buy four trillion marks, has now sunk to a ripple.

Just a few months ago there still was life in the old cry "On with the dance!" But 1931 really is "economy year" in Germany, and millions of people, instead of dancing, are paying the fiddler.

Ballrooms seldom are packed any more, and the frothier side of the nation's amusement industry has wilted under the high luxury taxes like a paper flower in the rain.

Latest among the pleasure palaces to go into bankruptcy is the Palais de Danse, rendezvous of Berlin's snobbiest set before war.

After the revolution is became an expensive place of relaxation for any one who had the money, and even after few Germans felt they could afford to visit it tourist gold from other lands kept it going. But now that isn't enough to pay the overhead.

And there are other flashy establishments of the sort that look empty enough these nights to suggest that they, too, will have to turn off the glittering lights and fire the jazz orchestra.

Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or aged complexion is one fair to look upon? Nature causes the normal skin to peel off in tiny, unseen, flour-like particles, a little each day, renewing the complexion of youth naturally, but there comes a time when this skin shedding slows up. Worry, overwork, illness, inactivity are reasons that cause the face to be blotchy, discolored, pimply and old looking. The thing to do, if you wish to look your prettiest at all times, is to assist nature in the process of absorption by using pure Mercolized Wax. Get an ounce at any drug store or beauty counter and use as directed. It gently but surely peels away the outer scarf skin, removing freckles, pimples, blackheads or a muddy complexion. The underneath skin, now in evidence, is clear, pink, fresh and velvety, and the entire face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty.

To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines we recommend a face lotion of unusual merit. One ounce powdered saxolite and one-half pint witch hazel.

Japanese Wives Arrange Code for Husbands

Urge Quieter Manipulation of Chopsticks.

TOKIO.—(AP)—Japanese women have grown weary of the old, old custom of "yesing" their men folk all day long. In the new order of affairs the formerly demure, kimono clad wife has become so bold that she even dares to give her husband advice now and then.

The Fujokai or Women's World, in its stand for more rights for the housewife, has compiled a code of laws for husbands, covering jealousy, finance, home administration, health clothing, food, children, and other subjects.

Some of the "don'ts" for husbands, as arranged by the women staff members of the Fujokai, follow:

"Don't be a killjoy all your life. Crack a joke once in a while, even if it isn't very funny. Why confine your wisecracks to your friends?

* *

Suggested Attentions.

"Don't crack your chopsticks against the bowl while eating. You're apt to get on your wife's nerves.

"Don't ignore her wishes. If she suggests that you go together to a department store, go, even though you can think of nothing quite so boring. On the way back, stop for something to eat or drink. She'll like that.

"No matter how much you love your wife, give her a vacation from you now and then. Never loaf about the house all day, you may be in the way.

"If she happens to look pretty, don't forget to tell her so. If she isn't particularly pretty, tell her so anyhow. It won't hurt you.

* *

Celebration for Birthdays.

"Don't forget her birthday. Stage a little celebration of it each year.

"Don't reprimand her bitterly when she has simply forgotten to sew a missing button on your clothes. She'll snap back at you and then something is bound to happen.

"Never lie to your wife. You mustn't get her in the habit of disbelieving you. Some day you may really want her to believe you.

"Remember that your wife has a right to an opinion, too. Of course, it may be wrong, but it's hers anyhow."

Soviet and British Build Brisk Trade Around Galoshes

MOSCOW.—(AP)—Galoshes, 42,500,000 pair of them, are on this year's program of the soviet rubber trust. The schedule also calls for 800,000 automobile tires and tubes.

The raw rubber for these products will come from English concerns, but the government is experimenting with rubber plantations in the southern Caucasus near Batum, and hopes some day to be independent of outside sources.

Until then the British will be the winner in both the import and export part of the trade. While every one in Russia seems to have a pair of galoshes, and they are absolute necessities in this climate, large quantities are exported.

In fact Russian galoshes sell in England for about $2.50 a pair whereas this winter at the shop here where only foreigners may trade, the price was around $10.

France Votes $100,000 to Build Foch's Tomb

PARIS.—(AP)—A credit of $100,000 has been voted for a tomb for Marshal Foch, who led the allies to victory in the world war.

The tomb will be in the Invalides, close to the resting place of Napoleon. It will measure 12 feet in height and will take two years to complete.

ARMCHAIR PLAYGOER

By Fanny Butcher.

LONDON has been excited about a dramatization of "Dark Hester," Anne Douglas Sedgwick's novel of 1929. It was done by Walter Ferris, who did the final adaptation of "Death Takes a Holiday," which, by the way, is having a revival in New York. The revival started last Monday night.

ANNE DOUGLAS SEDGWICK.

You may read the acting version of the Casella play, if you missed it when it played here, or if you want to live over that excellent second act. The last act and the first act read less well than they play. The second has a good deal of the thrill of the action in its printed word.

But to come back to "Dark Hester." The acting version isn't promised for publication, but the novel is waiting for every one. It is a study of the clash of two temperaments, that of the mother and the wife of a young man. The mother is "Victorian," as the wife calls her, only in the sense that she has certain delicacies of thought, manner and ideals which are completely alien to the wife who, as the mother thinks her, is hard, cold, often bitter, "dark," as her mother-in-law believes her to be.

They are as opposite in temperament as any two women could possibly be, and yet neither one is really right about the other. The mother worked to support her son, was independent in days when independence for women was almost a career in itself. Her daughter-in-law considers her tact and her gentleness weakness, and fails to see the strength which made her face a difficult life.

The daughter-in-law, "Dark Hester," has an honesty of outlook, a fairness in dealing with her husband and her child and her life which, to the older woman, is incomprehensibly cold. There you are.

The novel would have been a better novel if the author hadn't made her readers feel all along that she was being so fair with her characters that she was determined her readers should learn the lesson that there would be less misery in the world if people tried harder to understand one another.

As a record of a classic struggle between the two women who love a man it is memorable. The play has not elicited unqualified praise, although two scenes—one in which the mother and the son quarrel about the wife, and one in which the wife says good-by to the man who had once been her lover, were hailed as great emotional drama.

Australia Changes Code.

CANBERRA.—(AP)—Because confidential cable messages between Prime Minister Scullin, when he was in London, and members of his ministry in Australia mysteriously found their way into the newspapers Australia's cable code has been changed.

THE PENALTY of GRAY HAIR

Gray hair—age—slipping. All these unpleasant ideas seem to go together. Yet, it is not at all necessary. Gray Hair often comes to a young head and people who have it are neither old nor incapable. But how often you hear people say, "Why, she has gray hair!" and—she is on the shelf.

This penalty need no longer handicap the woman who uses Canute Water. This is a clear, spring-like water, of wonderful properties which actually restore hair to its original girlhood color. No complicated "color plan"; no danger of getting brunette shade when your hair is blonde. Not only the one kind but the one bottle is enough. It really is surprisingly what successful, youthifying results it gives.

Apply Canute Water yourself, in the privacy of your own home. Many women in town are doing the same thing; they simply do not mention it. You need not mention it either. Just buy a bottle from any good druggist—and get rid of the "age-penalty" in gray hair. Canute Water is so safe, so scientific and sure that your dealer knows it will satisfy you; if not, he will refund your money. Sold and recommended by Boston Store, The Fair, Owl or Walgreen's, or your own druggist.—The Canute Co., Milwaukee, Wis.—Adv.

Wastes No Money on Garbo.

Dear Mae Tinée: Wouldn't this world be a sad place instead of the funny one it is, if we all liked the same things? Go on, Mae, darlin', leave your Garbo in peace and pat her back all you want to, I like you, like your reviews and your style, but I do not like Garbo or her so-called style which, to me, is nothing but an affected, insincere pose, and I know right well that you don't expect me to swallow her as art just because you like her.

She bored me enough in "A Woman of Affairs" to last my whole life. So many years ago that was, yet, I have never spent a cent to see her since and never will. Of course, I cannot always escape the advance trailers advertising the coming of another of her bromides, so I have heard her supposed to be ravishing voice. It falls as raucously on my pink ears as that of a New York stevedore cussing the far away growers who inadvertently shipped a big tarantula in the bunch of bananas he's unloading. What? You've never heard one? Well, you've heard a chorus of peddlers yell "strawberries" or "ice" up and down Chicago alleys, haven't you? Garbo's voice is exactly that melodious [?] to me.

So, "Disgusted Reader" who plays at hating you, and I, who sincerely admire you and dote on the reviews he despises, have a good deal in common after all. Only, I'm willing that those who like Garbo, rave and spend their four bits over her all they please. That, to my notion, is their business, and I wouldn't waste good postage to tell her I wish M. G. M. would tie a can to her posing. Life's too short to get that hot and bothered over things not directly my business.

C. W.

Editor's note: You are a broad woman, I see [I mean, mentally].

Still the Mythical Kingdom.

Dear Miss Tinée: In your review of "The Front Page" I noticed that you wrote, "In other cities and in the sticks the background is still unhesitatingly mentioned as the 'Windy City.'" This town I am temporarily located in probably comes under the category of "the sticks," but when "The Front Page" was shown here the mythical kingdom note was shown with it and Chicago was not mentioned.

I should like to comment on Mrs. M. L. S.'s letter. In my opinion (contrary to hers) you do not criticize pictures harshly enough. What the movies in general need more than anything else is more analytical, challenging criticism. Good pictures and good actors can bear it—the other ones deserve no better. Sincerely.

L. A. L.

Editor's note: Thanks for the information and your interest in general.

Synopsis for German Talkies.

My dear Miss Tineé: German talkies seem to be becoming quite the thing, yet you regret that you do not understand them. Why don't you use your influence to have the theaters prefix a synopsis of the whole thing or of each part?

Yours truly, M. J. FINK.

Editor's note: When I get some, I will.

Valentino's Successor.

Mae Dear: Too bad you are not still using stars. You could pick out a cute little star for your write up about "Daybreak." Why not use numbers and give Ramon about ten? Do not forget he might go to a monastery, and he aspires to Valentino's crown. He has all the late lamented Italian had—plus a delightful sense of humor. He can talk and sing—well, maybe not as well as some of our grand opera boys, but he seems to please a few of us ordinary beings. And really, Mae, I think he is just as good looking.

ONE OF YOUR EX-ADMIRERS.

[Until I was razzed because I thought you could "critic."]

Editor's note: Who dared to razz you? Mama 'pank!

How the Cards Are Stacked.

Dear Miss Tinée: I know that you get a pleasant kick out of publishing the courteous appeal of the mother who signs herself "Mrs. M. L. S." for more decent pictures that can be viewed by children, and then turning the page over and praising a filthy gangster picture and branding as "smart" the work of the director in weaving into the film things that have no place in any picture which you merely term as "coarseness."

If Mrs. M. L. S. knew how the cards are stacked against her, she would waste no time in appealing to you for aid in the renovation of the movie industry. Mrs. M. L. S. does not know that the "review" published in THE TRIBUNE is the best advertising that any picture can get in Chicago and that no important movie house would permit you to give an unfavorable write up of a picture they have booked.

It perhaps never occurred to Mrs. M. L. S. that a drink of gin and a twenty dollar note would bring praise through the "review" column of any picture and that some of them are actually written by the press agents of "stars" and advertising agents of the theater. Very respectfully.

NOT A "FAN"

Editor's Note: Are you proud of yourself?

Dear Mae: If it must be "on one side of the paper only"—here goes. Give M. T. a pat on the back for me. "Them's my sentiments," too, about "Cimarron." I've seen it three times, and I felt the same thrill surge through me each time as it unfolded before my eyes.

It is THE picture of the year—of the ages. Richard Dix's performance will live in my mind all the rest of my life. I can never forget Yancey Cravat. I was so blinded by tears each time I saw "Cimarron" that I barely really saw him die.

I would call him "the Finest Actor on the Screen Today."

ELEANOR CLARK.

Editor's Note: Wonder if Richard's ears are burning!

Suspense Keeps You Guessing in This Thriller

Underground Railway Has Strange Murder.

well till the time comes to shoo it out into the open.

Photography and sound are commendable and you get the illusion of traveling underground. I read somewhere that the subway stations aren't the lifelike reproductions they might be, but I don't know, being an infrequent visitor to New York. They suited me, all right.

"The Subway Express" isn't one of the world's greatest mystery thrillers, but it is passing fair, and ISN'T a gangster picture. It'll keep you guessing—that's a cinch.

Banner Musical Show.

With last Thursday's performance, "Fine and Dandy," at the Erlanger theater, reached the 300 mark. The show opened at the Colonial theater, Boston, on Sept. 1, 1930, and after two weeks in that city played in New York until May 2 of this year. At the time of its departure from Broadway it was the longest run musical show on the street. Over this long period "Fine and Dandy" has averaged a weekly business slightly in excess of $30,000, which is an undisputed record for the current theatrical season. "Three's a Crowd," its nearest competitor, will end its New York run on June 6, about a dozen performances short of the "Fine and Dandy" record.

THERE are three new theatrical productions for the week in Chicago: "He," with Tom Powers, opening at the Illinois tomorrow night; "Meet My Sister," with Bettina Hall, which opened at the Grand last night, and "The Rap," with Helen Tenney, opening at the Studebaker Saturday night.

New photoplays include: "Subway Express," with Aileen Pringle, at the Palace; "Six Cylinder Love," with Spencer Tracy and Una Merkel, at the Woods; "Big Business Girl," with Ricardo Cortez and Loretta Young, at the Oriental, and "The Spy," with John Halliday and Kay Johnson, at the Castle.

Pulitzer Prize Play Provokes Hot Argument

"Alison's House" Is Bad Choice, Critics Assert.

By Charles Collins.

THIS is the time of year when almost every dramatic critic and stage connoisseur rises from his cultural throne to utter a vigorous protest against the Pulitzer prize award. Last season was an exception to the rule—every one agreed that "The Green Pastures" deserved the blue ribbon and the cash honorarium. The merry Maytime of 1931, however, has revived the grand old custom of booing the umpires, and Susan Glaspell's "Alison House," recently presented as the best play of the season from the point of view of the committee on Pulitzer awards, is receiving a hearty razzing.

The New York critics, in particular, with it thoroughly understood that "Alison's House" is not the people's choice. They are not in agreement upon the better play that should have received the honor, but their ex post facto nominations include "Green Grow the Lilacs," "Elizabeth the Queen," "Tomorrow and Tomorrow," "Five Star Final," and "Once in a Lifetime." A voice in the wilderness has even been heard crying out loud in favor of Channing Pollock's "The House Beautiful," but since it does not come from a member of the dramatic critics' union it may be disregarded.

Voice of the Times.

J. Brooks Atkinson of the New York Times, sound writer and sympathetic observer of the American stage, may be quoted on the subject. He saw virtues in "Alison's House" that his colleagues missed when the first nighters made their hegira from Broadway to Fourteenth street to report upon Eva Le Gallienne's staging of Miss Glaspell's drama; but he bluntly refuses to grant the work a Pulitzer function. He says:

"Miss Glaspell is one of our most gifted writers, particularly of novels, and 'Alison's House' is a play with a respectable theme. But to select it as the best play of the season is to show how meagerly the committee esteems the current American drama and the annual prize it helps bestow. Every few years this committee insists upon publishing its ignorance. . . .

"It is a play of flat statements—of emotions, of sentimentally literary fancies and of perfunctory characterizations. No matter how earnestly its characters talk, in a strangely stereotyped prose, the image of Alison never appears for an instant . . . Everything that might be conceivably dramatic in the narrative is consistently crowded off the stage, so that nothing disturbs the rigid dullness of the spoken word.

"Prize committees are always unpopular and under suspicion; all cultural authority is accepted on sufferance. But sometimes, as in the case of 'Alison's House,' the drama committee for the Pulitzer prize goes out of its way to make its glory hollow."

Reading the Play.

All of which has piqued my curiosity and stimulated my zeal for research. "Alison's House" will not be a matter of playgoing attention in this region until next season, when it will figure on the subscription program of the Dramatic league; but I said to myself, "This affair seems to be an atrocity that should be investigated without delay." So I settled down to read "Alison's House," after hastily borrowing Fanny Butcher's copy of the printed text.

Strangely enough, I enjoyed the experience. The chore I had expected turned out to be an hour of recreation. I liked "Alison's House." I found its theme interesting; its atmosphere friendly; its characters persuasively American; its story quietly stirring. It may easily be a play for reading rather than for acting, for it is gray and demure of tone, and its scenes are not high-lighted with action. Still, I found pleasure in "Alison's House" under the lamp. What I think about it as revealed before the footlights will be another story, and I hope that nothing I have said as a play reader shall be held against me when I sit in judgment upon this bone of contention as a first nighter.

Lares and Penates.

I found in "Alison's House," among other things, a feeling for American family life that is rare in the theater. In most plays kinship between the characters is merely an assumption of the author and a line of type upon the program. It is a matter of fortuity, and the audience is expected to take the blood-relationship, home ties and tribal spirit for granted. In "Alison's House," however, this elusive quality is caught and communicated without waste of dialogue. I call it no slight achievement. It brings Miss Glaspell, the American, into association with Tchekhoff, the Russian, that master magician for the evocation of domestic moods and background.

This play, as nearly every one has been told, relates to the discovery, many years after her death, that a New England spinster and recluse named Emily Dickinson was a poet who had left important, strikingly original contributions to American letters. She had lived as an unknown, obscure contemporary of the literary fraternity of the nineteenth century, and she came out of that old-fashioned past to astound the radicals of modern times. It is a famous story among literary folk, and Miss Glaspell has followed it closely, changing the name of Emily Dickinson to Alison Stanhope and the environment from Amherst, Mass., to the Iowa shore of the Mississippi.

"Aunts."

The denouncers of the Pulitzer award are inclined to argue that the success of "Alison's House" is predicated upon one's familiarity with the life story of Emily Dickinson. I am inclined, to regard the unseen

Critic Writes a Last Tribute to David Belasco

Master Showman Was Shy at Heart.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—David Belasco would have approved a visualization of his own death and the ceremonies attending it, I think. It was, without stress being placed on making it so, sufficiently theatrical to have pleased the master showman to whom all life was a show.

He might have added the item of lying in state, though I doubt it. David had failed greatly, the last several weeks. He was white and drawn and, being a proud man, I doubt if he would have approved the idea of his cold corpse being stared at by a curious multitude.

He had a sense of dignity. He was a sensitive soul, really, and rather shy, though his showman's impulse overcame both these characteristics as frequently as it gave way to them. People said he was an old cheater when he backed away from curtain calls and pulled his forelock. They said it was quite noticeable that he was always there, in the wings, waiting to be dragged on to the stage by one of his new made stars or to split the honors with a Warfield or a Carter, a Starr, or an Ulric.

This is true. He was a showman. He never denied that. He knew, none knew better than he, the value of publicity. He could absorb salutes as greedily as any be-medaled general in the National Guard. But the actual doing of the thing that would gain him the publicity he wanted and the applause for which he hungered; the physical transference of himself to the front of the procession or out upon a stage to face a grinning, applauding audience was not easy for him.

Not Without Enemies.

Much of the talk of the week, naturally, has been about Belasco and his way. He was not without enemies in the sense that many people distrusted him and many accused him of being the author of certain of their misfortunes—actors he had fired, or hired at low salaries; playwrights whose royalties he had cut into deeply after helping them rewrite their scripts; ambitious players to whom he had, they say, given his word as to future preferment and then forgotten.

For a few days kindly things were said, and eloquent tributes paid, as is the old human custom. But once the wasted body was laid in the tomb, out popped tributes with a reverse English. Which is natural. Any man of many contacts with sensitive, vain, child minded people is bound to make such enemies.

A good many have asked me about his affectation of wearing clerical garb. What was that but a kind of cheap showmanship, they have asked. And what was the cause for it?

I don't know. I suspect it could be traced, first, to a sort of infant fixation. A part of his impressionable youth was spent in study with a Catholic priest, Father MacGuire of Victoria, B. C., where, incidentally, David made his first appearances on the stage as the child in "Pizzaro" and again as the child in "Metamora."

He may have admired the good father so much that he copied his choker, or it may be that his love of the theatrical prompted his trying the priest's garb. Finding that it both became him and attracted attention, he probably clung to it as a sort of trademark—as Louis Mann clung to the huge, batwing collars, and as Dan-

Army Planes Keep Newsreel Cameras Busy

And Give Film Producers Food for Thought.

By Tom Pettey.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—These "million dollar air thrillers" from Hollywood hereafter will be just so much celluloid to this movie goer. I have seen the real thing. Ten days with the army airmen—days filled with aircraft thrills—make shadow pictures seem futile things. More than 600 planes, fifteen million dollars' worth of fighting ships, roaring through the skies is a spectacle for the film makers to shoot at with their heaviest bank accounts.

The newsreel men, however, have profited greatly through the army's biggest air show. The "Battle of Dayton," the "Capture of Chicago" and the "Destruction of New York City" will flicker on many news screens for weeks to come. The air maneuvers have been field days for the newsreel men.

In Dayton, the concentration point for training for the two weeks of mimic war, movie sound trucks were parked deep in the flying field out past the farthest ship. No such pictures have ever been made, for nobody except the army has so many airplanes to play at war with.

* *

Camera Planes Numerous.

The camera planes have become as much a part of battle formations as the fighting ships. In the next real war the movie machine is going to play an increasingly important part. Its eye never falters and out of the dark room after the "battle" comes the real story of what happened.

A camera man standing erect in the rear cockpit of a speeding biplane has become a familiar sight to those who followed this year's greatest air maneuvers. I talked to several of the picture men and obtained a story from each movie maker.

The best "shots" just happen, they say. One young English war captain, now a flying photographer, told me of two remarkable air pictures

High Schools' Chorus of 346 Will Give Concert Wednesday

By Edward Moore.

WHAT the Chicago high schools are doing in music will be set out in the form of a concert at Orchestra hall next Wednesday evening. A chorus of 346 picked from all the high schools of the city will sing, a selected high school orchestra will play, and Dr. J. Lewis Browne, director of music of the Chicago public schools, will conduct. Oscar W. Anderson will act as assistant conductor.

Dr. Browne has given time, thought, and erudition to the program. It is to be a historical program, beginning with some of the earliest music that has come down to us and ending with some of the present era. The first song, "Sirath Hayyam," is an ancient Sephardic melody, how old no one knows, but bearing a legendary theory that it was the song sung by Miriam and her companions in the biblical story. It will be sung in Hebrew.

A Greek work, the Hymn to Apollo, sung in ancient Greek, is one of the few works of its kind to have been deciphered from inscriptions in Greece. Its date of composition is placed about 278 B. C. It was discovered some forty years ago by the French Archæological school in Athens. From thence the old music goes to an Ambrosian chant of the fourth century in the first mode, a Gregorian chant of the eighth century in the eighth mode, and works by Palestrina and Cruger of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

The rest of the program will be modern—choruses by Franck, Gounod, and some Chicago composers and a few specimens of Americana. The orchestra will play Brahms' "Academic Festival" Overture and a movement from the Mozart Symphony in G minor. William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools, will make an address.

News of Ravinia Artists.

Most of the artists of the coming Ravinia season have been getting ready for the season by standing by, although they admit nationalities variously of the United States, Canada, Spain, Italy, Germany, Russia, France, Poland, Scandinavia, and Belgium. Giovanni Martinelli and Virgilio Lazzari are taking short vacations in Italy, Giuseppe Danise has gone to Switzerland to put his children in school there, Ina Bourskaya has returned to Russia for the first time since she left that mysterious land, Marek Windheim is in Poland, Louis Hasselmans is in France, and Julia Claussen is visiting her daughters in England.

But Lucrezia Bori prefers republican America to republican Spain—she has received decorations from the ex-royal family of the orders of Isabel la Catolica and Alfonso XII.—and Elisabeth Rethberg has remained on this side for the first spring in a number of years. Yvonne Gall has been singing in Europe this winter, but will soon be here. Others that have stayed here are Edward Johnson, Mario

Suspense Keeps You Guessing in This Thriller

Underground Railway Has Strange Murder.

"THE SUBWAY EXPRESS."

The subway train was speeding on,
As subway trains do do. (Yes, two "do's," copyreader.)
When some one murdered Tracy!
AND—the question then was—WHO?????

Produced by Columbia. Directed by Fred Newmeyer. Presented at the Palace theater.

THE CAST.

Killian	Jack Holt
Dale Tracy	Aileen Pringle
Kearney	Fred Kelsey
Tracy	Alan Roscoe
Bordon	Jason Robards
Stevens	Sidney Bracy
Mason	Selmer Jackson
Mr. Cotton	William Humphrey
Mrs. Cotton	Ethel Wales
Mrs. Mullins	Julianne Leighton
Mulvaney	James Goss
Prizefighter	Mason Williams

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

Who killed Mr. Tracy on the subway express, between two stations of the underground railway?

The train is full of passengers, any one of whom MIGHT be the murderer and most of whom probably aren't. It is up to Inspector Killian to solve the mystery.

Called to make an investigation, Killian puts every one through a process of questioning. For a long time his efforts to locate the killer are fruitless. Then—BING! Killian triumphant! With promotion undoubtedly flirting with him from the offing! [Here's ONE time when Mr. Jack Holt gets a break!]

The action of the picture takes place almost entirely in one car, with shots of stations along the tracks. The passengers conduct themselves and respond to the volley of questions fired at them in varied fashion. Fred Kelsey, as a bonehead cop, furnishes the low comedy—and they could have left him out for all of me—but Ethel Wales, Julianne Leighton, Mason Williams and others, provide real amusements.

A Polished Performance.

Mr. Holt, as usual, gives a polished performance. As Officer Killian, he is shrewd, determined, ungullible. Aileen Pringle [who has gone permanently blond, I'm afraid] does well the little she has to do. The same may be said for other members of the cast.

I won't spoil the story for you by giving leads re: the answer to its question, but I will say that the piece is quite suspenseful and hides its secret

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know

DOGS had their day in both Roseland and South Chicago last week-end when youngsters of the two communities were invited to enter their prize canines in dog parades as part of the Chicago Jubilee celebration. Some 311 dogs—and masters—were reported on hand at the South Chicago celebration and another 200 odd at Roseland. Lorraine Lang's dog was adjudged the best looking and Billy Frederick's the most novel in Roseland. Some 19 bow wows received prizes in South Chicago, and even that didn't satisfy our friend David Day, who awarded dollar bills to five more canines himself!

A youthful Our Towner, who has made her mark is Miss Mary Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Moore of 310 West 15th street, Chicago Heights. She was among those singled out on Honors day at the University of Illinois as being in the first 3 per cent of her class. She is a sophomore in the college of commerce.

* *

A proud granddad these days is J. J. O'Rourke, veteran resident of Harvey. Jane Vance, you'll recall, recently was chosen as Chicago's fairest co-ed by a group of Chicago artists. And Jane is Jerry's granddaughter. Northwestern is Jane's alma mater.

* *

The south end's champion bridge players, as indicated by the Calumet Commercial club's six weeks tournament, at last have been decided. Dr. A. Teninga is the champion champ, but he stands only one point ahead of Mrs. B. E. Nelson. John Berg and Mrs. Ralph Becker are the other blue ribbon players.

Yet another youth who is casting credit on the younger generation of Our Town is Stanley Tome. The faculty of Pullman free school of manual training voted him the student who has been of most value to the school this year. To cap the climax, Roseland American Legion post gave him its annual medal. Miss Ruth Spivak came into her share of honors, too, when she received the Hostrawser medal for her work in Pullman Tech's musical organizations.

WITH a trip to Europe or a scholarship to any American university to choose from Wallace Blackford of Morgan Park High school probably will take a scholarship to Armour institute or Purdue university. Wallace recently proved himself the crack salesman of Chicago in a radio company's contest and this award was the result.

Tony Volcanoe of 10240 Indiana avenue was the cause of a joke in Judge John J. Lupe's South Chicago court the other day. Tony failed to answer a court summons for speeding and as the judge issued a warrant for his arrest, he was heard to observe, "Another eruption of a volcano!"

Here's a message of comfort to Our Towners on the sick list! The Ingalls School of Nursing connected with Ingalls Memorial hospital, Harvey, graduated a charming crop of nurses on Tuesday evening. Miss Georgia Gore of Harvey, Miss Ruth Soderberg of Chicago Heights, Miss Edith Dengler of Riverdale and Miss Catherine Erffmeyer of Dolton were among those who received diplomas from Frederick A. Ingalls himself.

Good news for the June crop of brides and grooms! Mr. and Mrs. George C. Gibbon of 316 West 107th street add their testimonial to indorsements of the marriage institution. They celebrated their golden wedding anniversary the other day with a reception to 30 relatives and friends. The couple was married in England, but have lived in Roseland for 32 years.

BELIEVING that the first 25 years are the hardest, Mr. and Mrs. John Donnellan of 4523 South Union avenue recently celebrated their silver wedding anniversary with a family theater party.

Back after a fortnight in Cuba are Mr. and Mrs. Abel De Haan, 9422 Vernon avenue. A forced landing in Cleveland on a plane flight to Chicago was the only untoward incident in the trip. The Cornelius Teningas likewise are back again in the family domicile at 10714 Normal avenue after a tour of the east and south.

May is moving time in Chesterfield. Friends who look for the Mike McGlynns at 611 East 88th place will find instead Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Sieglinger, formerly of 457 East 89th place. The McGlynns have moved to 701 East 90th street. The Daniel Hogan family also have joined the ranks of movers, setting up their Lares and Penates at 827 East 90th place.

Comings and goings in Beverly Hills: Mr. and Mrs. Richard W. Norris have moved from 8132 South Peoria street to 9907 Charles street. The W. S. Rodkeys, their twin daughters, Betty and Marjorie, and son, Bud, have moved to 9742 Prospect avenue from 8052 Loomis street. The Herman Saatmans have left their home at 10627 Hale avenue for new quarters at 7217 Wabash avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Kopf have leased their home at 9742 South Wood street and are living with a daughter in Maywood.

Messages of sympathy and flowers are pouring into the Reid M. Bennett home at 9060 Pleasant avenue, for Mrs. Bennett and her son, Reid Jr., have fallen victims to scarlet fever. Mrs. Bennett is the new president of the Beverly Hills Woman's club and an active member of the Vanderpoel Parent-Teacher association, and her neighbors and co-workers are missing her mightily!

* *

Some new arrivals in Our Town: The seven and a half pound son of Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Davidson, 9506 South Winchester avenue. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Amador Hoffman, 11076 Esmond street. The new daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Perkins, 51 West 151st street, Harvey. The baby boy in the Dory Tobin family at 7715 South Shore drive. Hilbert Kreeger Jr., in the family of Dr. Hilbert Kreeger, 2052 East 69th street.

A Sportswoman, This Principal at Avalon Park

Mrs. Edith Shepherd Is Author, Too.

By Herbert Vedder.

A SPORTSWOMAN and lover of the outdoors is this genial geography author who presides over the affairs of the Avalon Park school, 8045 Kenwood avenue.

Firm of jaw and almost silver of hair, Mrs. Edith P. Shepherd is in no sense the pedagogue of the cartoon. She is a thorough newspaper reader, well informed, and possessed of definite ideas on public affairs and political issues. Her summers are spent in the golden west, where she is happiest whipping a trout stream or hunting, for, you see, Mrs. Shepherd is a former champion among woman trap shooters. Her father was a sportsman and, as she puts it, she was fortunate enough to draw a sportsman for a husband.

Pretty School Yard.

It isn't often that the outsider is privileged to as clear a picture as was the reporter on the summery day he visited Mrs. Shepherd. The pretty school, nestling in its homey south side neighborhood, was running smoothly and one could see that its principal was thinking of the outdoors. Mrs. Shepherd took the reporter out into the yard, immaculately manicured and set off with shrubbery, trees, neat birdhouses, phlox, tulips, and other flowers. At the north end of the spacious grounds is the supervised playground, which operates under floodlights in the evenings as well as during the day.

The tour of the yard was interrupted by two shy little tots who, smiling, brought the message that Mrs. Shepherd was wanted in the kindergarten at once. It was most important, they assured her. And it was.

Give Birthday Party.

There they were—30 bright-eyed youngsters seated in a circle on the floor and all set to give their principal a birthday party. Each little tot brought Mrs. Shepherd a little gift of cardboard and paper art work. A number were pictures of Mrs. Shepherd, but one lad was not satisfied with his drawing and said his was of a "funny lady—and you're not funny." Another wanted to know Mrs. Shepherd's age—"for a special reason." He had drawn a birthday cake and wanted to know how many candles to have on it. He was appeased at being told he wouldn't be able to get all of them on it.

Born in New York.

Back in the privacy of her office, Mrs. Shepherd confided a principle of hers with regard to teaching.

"I'll never be one of those whose names appear in the paper," she related, "cataloged as teachers 70 years old and being retired. That's an age for privacy, and you can believe me that I'll fool them and get out on my own accord before I'm 70—and I've quite a few years yet before I'll have to do that."

From a standpoint of schooling Mrs. Shepherd ranks herself one of the real landmarks of the community. Born in New York state, she came to South Chicago when a little girl and entered the Warren school in the fourth grade. Almost all of the rest of her life has been spent in and around that school. She knew this Avalon district when part of it was but a mud lake, better suited for hunting than for pretty homes and lawns.

Principal to Warren.

After graduation from the old Chicago Normal college she turned to teaching and soon went to the Warren school where she remained as a teacher until elevated to the principalship in 1911. She held this post until 1924 when the Warren school's branch separated from the mother institution to become the Avalon Park school. It was then that Mrs. Shepherd elected to part from the Warren to become principal of its offspring after her many years of mellow experiences there—all but one of her years as a teacher, plus experiences as a pupil there.

"I knew just about everything connected with that school," she chuckled, "including the skeletons in the various closets."

An author in the field of geography, in which she specialized as a teacher, Mrs. Shepherd's hobby is mathematics, and she majored in English at the University of Chicago, because she considered it her weakest subject. Believing such would do her the most good, she felt more than justified at receiving honorable mention when she gained her Bachelor of Philosophy degree in 1921.

Writes Prize Seller.

Mrs. Shepherd is credited with striking a new note with her first volume of "Geography for Beginners" which appeared in 1921. It is rated by the Rand McNally company as its prize seller. Almost a million copies were sold shortly after publication. She believes in education proceeding from the known to the unknown all the way; her way of introducing geography is an example as witness some chapter headings: "Where We Live—Homes," "How Houses Are Built," "Heat and Light," "The Clothing We Wear," "Our Food and Drink," "How People Work for One Another." Her second volume appeared four years ago.

The Avalon Park school is listed as one of the few in the city to have mathematics as an integral part of its first grade work, owing to its principal's interest in this subject for the youngsters.

Assemblies are another hobby with Mrs. Shepherd. Her rule is that the pupils put on at least one each week, and she feels that it makes for a much better school.

The Avalon Park is one of the so-called "decapitated schools," its 7th and 8th grade pupils being taken by Hirsch Junior High school when the latter opened in 1926. And Mrs. Shepherd does not like the idea. While recognizing the advantages of the

VOICE of the SOUTH SIDE

This Principal Puts Awe Inspiring Qualities in Their Place—Outside

"I have heard of principals of whom every one stands in awe, but I have never understood how they could run a school," observed Miss Mary T. Maroney, principal of Graham Junior High school.

Fortunately, the faculty for creating an atmosphere of awe is fast being recognized as a refuge for hiding frailties rather than a sign of ability. "Snobbery," says Berton Braley, "is the pride of those who are not sure of their position." Kings and czars with little to justify their importance resorted to the awe method, but in recent years there has been a passing of puppets whose power depended on accidents of birth. The world has discovered that one of the chief characteristics of its truly great men and women is simplicity.

Teachers who are properly prepared and wholly in sympathy with their tasks need not fear lack of respect because the relations between them and their pupils are friendly. Young folk in the midst of developing their personalities have cause to be particularly grateful toward a teacher to whom they feel free to discuss their problems.

If visitors at Graham Junior High school are impressed by the lack of self-consciousness shown by the pupils of many backgrounds, much of the answer is to be found in the personality and methods of the guiding spirit.

HARVEY'S SAFETY WEEK.

Harvey has just concluded the observance of Safety week with an earnestness that, it is hoped, will make its influence felt throughout the other weeks of the year. While accidents in the home and the place of business were given due consideration, statistics on motor accidents are so alarming that this phase of the program was naturally emphasized.

With a safety lane operated in coöperation with the garages of the city, an opportunity was offered for the testing of mechanical equipment of motor cars. Many drivers discovered to their surprise that brakes, lights, wheel alignment, steering apparatus, and rear view mirrors were not all that they should be. Constant increase in the number of automobiles on the highways demands perfect performance at critical moments if accidents are to be avoided.

It speaks well for the attitude of motorists that the safety lane in Harvey was a busy place throughout last week. This mechanical checkup, supplemented with safety talks in the churches and schools, served to make the community danger conscious. A survey of accidents fixes the blame where it belongs. The speeder and the road hog are still abroad. Excuses and regrets continue to offer little solace to those who are maimed for life.

Harvey, with its intensive Safety week program, has demonstrated that it is not only interested in better highways, but in the education of motorists who use them.

THE NEIGHBORHOOD'S HEROES.

The fact that Chicago is a city of neighborhoods, each with its own patriotic organizations, means much toward the observance of Memorial day in a manner that makes the remembrance of the soldier dead definite and doubly impressive.

Thanks to the posts of the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the United Spanish War Veterans, and the Grand Army of the Republic, the graves of Chicago's soldier dead have been carefully marked. Thus wreaths are placed not only in memory of comrades in arms but of former neighbors and personal acquaintances. In death, as in life, the division of the great city into many communities has overcome that lack of human sympathy which might otherwise caharacterize the metropolis with its millions.

Certainly, in fixing the date for Memorial day, the founders could not have chosen better so far as the Chicago setting is concerned. Between the city and many of the cemeteries lie forest preserves which, as if conscious of their part in the floral remembrance, just now present a riot of color in blossoms.

The passing of years finds no passing of the Chicago spirit to pause in reverence for its soldier dead. Memorial day brings out a fine expression of the great city's soul.

WHAT AWARDS MEAN.

As commencement time approaches various south side high schools recognize student achievements of many kinds. Those who receive the awards as inspiration to further progress rather than as an end to effort are to be congratulated for victories thus achieved early in their careers.

Said Edmund Burke: "God has implanted in man a sense of ambition and a satisfaction arising from the contemplation of his excelling his fellows in something deemed valuable among them." It is best that ambition reveal itself in youth, for it is far less apt to stir the pulses when bodily energy begins to wane and problems of existence interfere. Statistics do not show that the honor student always continues to pass his fellows in later life. There are legends of those who, having given little promise in the schoolroom, later turned out to be geniuses. Teachers of long experience, however, have had few surprises of this kind. That ambition sometimes does flicker out along the way is one of life's tragedies, but it is no cause for disparagement of commencement honors won at a time when such distinctions carry keenest pleasure.

Every school graduate has the satisfaction of knowing that persistence has resulted in reaching a first set goal of importance. All graduates cannot be honor students but, in finishing a task begun, all of them have demonstrated a fiber of character essential to success.

KILL SKYSCRAPER REPEALER LAW FOR OAKLAND

Rezoning Clinched When Foes Fail to Appear.

As a result of a protest by the Oakland Business Men's association the city council committee on buildings and zoning last Monday killed an ordinance zoning back the heart of the newly rezoned area, to small apartmen buildings instead of skyscraper apartments. The ordinance to nullify the rezoning was placed on file by the council committee at the request of Ald. Robert R. Jackson [3d] when no opponents of the skyscraper zoning appeared at the public hearing held Monday.

Ald. Jackson said he had introduced the repeal ordinance at the request of several protesting property owners who were making a campaign issue of the new skyscraper zoning, to prevent their using against him the arguments which they put forward against the skyscrapers. When none of the sponsors of the repeal showed interest in it he refused to push it inasmuch as the Oakland business men were emphatically against repealing the skyscraper act.

Same Restrictions as Loop.

The territory zoned for skyscrapers, which will remain intact due to the committee's refusal to vote the repealer, includes the area between 29th and 47th streets, Cottage Grove avenue, and the Illinois Central right of way besides the block west of Cottage Grove avenue between 39th and 40th streets. A concerted effort on the part of business men in the Second, Third, and Fourth wards, with an ordinance put through the city council by Ald. B. A. Cronson [4th], Ald. Louis B. Anderson [2], and Ald. Jackson, obtained for the area a zoning exactly like that applying to the loop.

Buildings with a sheer rise of 264 feet, and setbacks to still further heights, may be erected according to this zoning. The territory in which the zoning would have been repealed is bounded by 35th street, Cottage Grove avenue, Pershing road, Langley avenue, 40th street, Cottage Grove avenue, 43d street, and the Illinois Central right of way.

Opposition Dead, Dippold Says.

Albert P. Dippold, chairman of the Oakland business men's rezoning committee, expressed satisfaction with the outcome of the public hearing. "Since there was no one in favor of the repeal ordinance, the matter died out, and we did not even have a chance to voice our sentiments against it," Mr. Dippold said. "It is not likely that any one will try to change the zoning laws again, because it is quite evident that the people along the lake front do want skyscrapers when, as, and if they arrive."

Pederson, Ralph Sternberg, and Dennis Nolan.

DEMAND BETTER LIGHTS, TRAFFIC SIGNAL ON 55TH

Business Body Backed by Alderman.

The 55th Street Business Men's association has launched a drive for two improvements for their district which it failed to obtain under the former city hall régime.

A stop and go signal light has been sought for the intersection of 55th street and Woodlawn avenue for more than three years, but all that has ever come of it is "promises, and plenty of them," according to Arthur Bourgeau Jr., chairman of the association's public affairs committee. The last promise, made just a week before the city election, was that the signal light would be installed within 30 days. Better treatment is expected from the present administration.

Demand Better Lighting.

The second project being pushed is one which would provide better illumination of 55th street between Lake Park and Cottage Grove avenues. The business men installed a string of ornamental lights on either side of the street a few years ago and maintain them, but they are turned out at 11 o'clock each evening, leaving arc lamps on every other street car trolley post on the north side of the street as the sole illumination.

The businessmen have asked for a similar string of arc lamps on the south side of the street. This, it is pointed out, would give the street the same illumination as is now on Lake Park avenue between 51st and 55th streets.

Members of the committee working on the lights include Charles W. Hoff and Lewis J. Harris. They also hope to close in the two gaps remaining in the business men's strings of lights this year. The two gaps are between Cottage Grove and Maryland avenues (both sides of the street) and the north side of 55th street between Kenwood avenue and midway between Kimbark and Woodlawn avenues.

Backed by New Alderman.

Ald. Irving J. Schreiber [5th], newly elected, has pledged his support to both projects of the organization. He said the 55th and Woodlawn stop and go light will go in as the first in his ward.

Working with Mr. Bourgeau in pushing the case for the stop and go signal are D. Gordon Ramsay, president of the businessmen, and Dr. W. S. Kelley. Mr. Bourgeau preceded Mr. Ramsay as president of the organization and was instrumental in starting the move for the signals.

"The congestion at 55th and Woodlawn is so great that there is no question as to the need for lights there," asserted Mr. Bourgeau, and he dug out a copy of the survey made by the city in April, 1928. "Since this was made traffic has been increased further by the extension of the outer drive and the connections with it at 39th and 55th streets. The danger is increased even more by the fact that pupils of St. Thomas the Apostle school must cross the street."

junior high's enriched curriculum, she sees disadvantages.

"It is a drawback both for the children taken to the junior high school and for those remaining in the decapitated school," Mrs. Shepherd declared. "That influence of the older pupils on the younger ones is taken away. The younger pupils look forward to the time when they will be the leaders in the 7th and 8th grades. We depend on these older youngsters to help run the school and they are missed by all. And it's so hard for the 5th and 6th graders to step into their places.

"It is a mistake," she continued, "to force a collegiate atmosphere on 11 and 12 year olds. They miss the softening influence of the contact with the kindergarten and younger pupils which has been of inestimable value to many a young roughneck or rowdy boy." As she said this Mrs. Shepherd's voice softened and a far-away look came to her eyes.

Fears Weakening of Structure.

Mrs. Shepherd fears a weakening of the elmentary school structure in this process, for no matter how strong an educational superstructure is built up she feels it will be weak unless it has the sturdiest of foundations.

"If teachers were to be paid on the basis of the difficulty of their work," she commented in this connection, "I should pay the first grade teacher most and the college professor nothing. The first is the most important room and ought to have two teachers. I believe the day is coming when this will be the universal practice. As it is, we usually have our strongest teachers at either end of our curriculum."

Mrs. Shepherd rates her school as all-American in more ways than one. "Its spirit is one of coöperation and fellowship throughout," she stated. "Nobody here is on stilts. We are fortunate in the coöperation of parents in educational problems and in our community which is a fine American neighborhood. It is composed, generally speaking, of a non-fluctuating and home owning group which makes for the best conditions in education."

The Avalon Park school also is favored in that it has no problem of overcrowding, with its 7th and 8th grade pupils taken away. There are just a few more than 800 pupils enrolled in the main building while about 200 more are housed in the branch.

HEGEWISCH CALL ON SOUTH PARKS BRINGS RESULTS

Promised Improvements on Mann Park.

Hegewisch came to Washington park en masse Wednesday afternoon to call on the south park commissioners. Almost 200 men and women made up the automobile parade, which included representatives of the chamber of commerce, ministers of all faiths, members of athletic clubs, and a band. Their mission was to get an answer on improvements for Mann park. They received their answer and it was favorable.

Supt. George T. Donoghue was directed by the board to have plans completed for the first unit of the fieldhouse within 30 days. Mr. Donoghue stated Thursday that it should be built this summer. The unit is to contain a combination assembly hall and gymnasium, with locker and shower rooms adjoining.

Ald. William A. Rowan [10th] was the principal spokesman for the Hegewisch group. Joseph Sowa, president of the chamber of commerce, was on hand but did not speak. After the meeting William B. Anderson, secretary, announced that the group would return at the next meeting of the commissioners just to make sure that the plans have been drawn and that Wednesday's promise is not "just another promise."

Marquette Group Heard.

Another delegation came to present arguments on behalf of the Marquette Community association and others opposed to the park's plan to widen Marquette road, as provided in the recent bond issue. Although more than the 60 days given them by the board to prepare alternate plans had elapsed, they were heard and the plans taken for study.

It is considered unlikely, however, that the board will approve the suggestions of the objectors because of the physical obstacles. One alternative suggested was making 71st street a one way drive to pair with Marquette road, but its distance from Marquette road and the fact that it has street car tracks between Cottage Grove and Vincennes avenues as well as between Western and California avenues is held objectionable.

The most logical one way streets, as put forward by the delegation, were 67th and either 66th or 65th streets. At present Marquette road follows 66th street from Jackson park to Vernon avenue, and 67th street from there west. The difficulties here are street car tracks on 67th street from Rhodes avenue to South Shore drive, and the fact that subways would have to be built under railroad tracks at two points, Ogden park would have to be cut in two, and a piece sliced off White City to carry 65th or 66th streets through as a boulevard.

Park Row Is Reopened.

The location of the 7th ward park, tentatively settled last month, has been thrown wide open again and the whole question is back at the beginning as a result of protests from the South Bryn Mawr Improvement association and local property owners, who appeared at the board meeting. A principal objection seems to be the closing of 76th street.

The board voted to rebuild the 31st street bathing beach lockers, which recently were destroyed by fire, and received a request from the Jackson Park Yacht club, asking that it be given additional facilities in plans for extending the outer drive.

WHO'S WHO ON SOUTH SIDE

D. Gordon Ramsay, now in his second term as president of the 55th Street Business Men's association, has lived on the south side all of his 47 years. In addition to heading the business men, he is vice president of the Woodlawn Kiwanis club and has been a director for several years.

D. GORDON RAMSAY.

He has been the official newspaper carrier for the Hyde Park district since 1920 and has his office at 5435 Woodlawn avenue. Previous to this he was for ten years in a similar position in Englewood, where he also was a member of the Englewood Commercial and Civic association. He twice has been president of the Chicago Newspaper Carriers.

The 55th street leader's dearest interest is his son, Everett—the kid, as he calls him—who is a track and football athlete at the University of Chicago. The Ramsays live at 7320 Euclid avenue. Mr. Ramsay is a member of the Normal Park Masonic lodge.

wrote a letter of protest at the closing of the street. A new angle was injected when one man at the hearing said the park ought to be moved out by 83d street, as the district considered is near Jackson park and has plenty of lawns.

A number of contracts were let by the board, including one item of $100,000 for paving repairs all over the system. Another is for $26,000 for reconstructing the water system on South Park way, between 35th and 51st streets. The parks must be watered, so there was a contract for 30,000 feet of hose for $3,500. Action was deferred, however, on the con-

VETS TO LEAD IN S. SIDE TRIBUTES TO SOLDIER DEAD

Two Legion Posts to Hold Services Today.

All the south side, led by veterans' organizations, will pay tribute to the soldier dead with memorial services this week, most of them on Saturday. Church services, parades, school programs and other special events will be held as part of the yearly observance.

Members of Hyde Park post, No. 34, of the American Legion and auxiliary unit will attend memorial services this morning at the Church of the Messiah, 152d street and Dante avenue. The service, beginning at 11 o'clock, will be conducted by the pastor, the Rev. Nicholas B. Clinch, chaplain of Hyde Park post for ten years.

Hyde Park unit last Tuesday night held an informal reception for its mothers, Gold Star mothers and past presidents. The Gold Star mothers of the unit are Mrs. Clyde Day, Mrs. Annie G. Dorian, Mrs. Laura Evans, Mrs. Katherine Milliken, Mrs. George Reed, and Mrs. F. M. Kaiser. Past presidents are Mrs. Harry Boon, Mrs. George M. Kellogg Jr., Mrs. O. W. ..., Mrs. I. B. Swigart, Mrs. Margaret Wahls, Mrs. Claude D. Baber, and Mrs. Paul Atchison. Mrs. Lyle A. ... is now president of the unit.

Members of Roseland post, No. 49, ... have been assigned to carry a Memorial day message to the pupils of the 14 schools of the district. If the weather is fair Friday the children will be massed in front of their schools, otherwise the talks will be given in the assembly halls.

...ly post, No. 310, today will pay its tribute to the deceased members of the post and to the members of the 131st infantry, A. E. F., buried in and about Cook county. In 1930 the post had only 84 graves. The total has now risen to 114.

...Square post and auxiliary will hold memorial services tonight in Drexel Park Presbyterian church, 64th street and Marshfield avenue. The Rev. ... C. Cox, pastor, will give the address.

...Square post, with veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic, will hold Memorial day services at 10 o'clock Saturday morning at Oakwoods cemetery. Auxiliaries of the organizations will assist.

Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom will be the guest speaker. The program will also include talks by William Wright and Charles Oakley of the Chicago Memorial association; numbers by glee clubs from the Englewood and Hyde Park high schools, and music by the Square post drum and bugle corps. The firing squad will be under the direction of Past Commander William Roberts. Paul G. Armstrong is the chairman of arrangements.

At the close of the service members of Square post unit will scatter flowers over the graves of the dead comrades.

Advertising Men's post, No. 38, will hold Memorial day exercises at Sauganash Community center at 9:30 o'clock Saturday. The Rev. William J. Stephenson, C. S. V., chaplain of the Advertising Men's post and a veteran of two wars, will be the celebrant of a solemn requiem field mass. The Rev. F. A. Ryan, pastor of Sauganash, will be deacon of the mass and will preach the sermon. The Rev. F. J. Dolan will be subdeacon. The Rev. Mathew Canning will be master of ceremonies. North Town post, under the command of H. Soule, with drum and fife corps and rifle squad, will furnish the guard of honor and other military features of the field mass.

St. Viator Boys' choir, under the direction of the Rev. John Kelzer, C. S. V., will render the Gregorian requiem. The Boy Scouts of St. Timothy's parish, under the direction of the Rev. F. J. Dolan, assisted by Scoutmaster Henry Malone, will be ushers.

Details of the annual reunion of marines in Chicago on June 6 at the Auditorium hotel were discussed Monday evening by Marine post. C. D. ..., commander, with a committee has arranged a number of programs and entertainment for the visiting veterans and invitations have been extended to all marines, whether members of veterans' organizations or not, to attend the affair. More than 500 reservations have been made by W. B. Scheurer, 20 West Jackson boulevard.

Next Sunday will be American Legion Aviation day at Curtiss-Wright airport, Glenview. This first air show of the local season will be held under the joint auspices of Evanston post, No. 42, W. C. Bechtold, commander, and Niles Township post, No. 134, Irving Dilg, commander. Beginning at 11 a. m. and continuing throughout the afternoon there will be a series of events similar to those that made Chicago's national air races of 1930 an epochal event in aviation history. Starting with a boys' model airplane contest, the program will include a ... mile race, parachute jumping contests, stunt flying, balloon bursting contests, and numerous other features. A glider exhibition will feature entries by the Chicago Glider club.

The 13th national convention of the American Legion will be held in Detroit Sept. 21 to 24, inclusive. On the first day of the convention Mayor Cermak of Chicago will address the legionnaires and will invite the Legion 1933 national convention to Chicago. The mayor will travel aboard the Chicagoan-Legion special with Chef de Train Fred L. Boissy of the 40 and 8 in charge. Mr. Boissy will be assisted by Thomas Burns, secretary of the ... Division Veterans' association; Edward H. Felt, athletic officer of the Legion; A. P. Boyle, past district commander; Dr. Elmer W. Mosley, senior vice commander of Chicago Police post, and Elmer Taylor, ranking officer of the 40 and 8 in Illinois.

Invitations have been sent to men prominent in the world of aviation and to prominent officials of the American Legion. The list includes Rear Admiral Byrd, Lieut. DINERS FORGET POLITICS, TRADE; BAN SPEECHES

So Officials, Business Men Have Pleasant Time.

A picture almost unique was presented at the south side banquet and jamboree of business men, civic leaders, and public officials in Hotel Shoreland Monday evening. There were no speeches. Toastmaster William McDonnell was the only person privileged to impose his voice on the assemblage of 400 men, and his speechmaking was confined to introducing officials and civic celebrities. The rest of the program was entertainment.

It was a general hobnobbing session, and all were gathered for a good time. All business problems and politics were tossed into the discard for the evening, with the exception of Mr. McDonnell's gibe that any looking for jobs need look no further than the speakers' table to obtain one.

The banquet hall presented a picture of a south side who's who in the flesh—both of the men it has contributed to city, county, state, and national officialdom and the men who are fighting day in and day out, year in and year out, for the improvement of their neighborhoods.

Around the Speechless Table.

Justice Frederic R. De Young, Chicago's lone representative on the state Supreme court bench; State's Attorney Swanson; President Emmett Whealan of the county board, State Treasurer Edward J. Barrett, City Treasurer James A. Kearns, Congressman Edward Kelly [2d], Howard E. Elmore, sanitary district trustee; Supt. George T. Donoghue of the south parks; State Senator Thomas O'Grady, recently elected alderman of the Fourteenth ward, and former Sheriff John Traeger were among those seated at the "speakers'" table.

Seated also at this table was Leonard Fish, president of the Englewood Business Men's association and guiding spirit of the fête by south side civic leaders for south siders in officialdom. Mr. Fish was enthusiastic over the benefits derived from this sort of gathering in promoting a better understanding between the civic leaders and their public servants.

South side contributions to the Municipal and Superior court benches, aldermen, state representatives, ward committeemen and superintendents, and police and fire department leaders of the district were all on hand and introduced. Two men, one a member of a tax commission and the other in the internal revenue department, came in for a round share of booing by the good natured gathering. Other officials got off with a minimum of kidding.

Eight Aldermen Attend.

The eight alderman on hand included Irving Schreiber [5th], John F. Healy [6th], David Sutton [8th], Sheldon W. Govier [9th], William A. Rowan [10th], Terence Moran [16th], Frank J. Corr [18th], and O. E. Northrup [19th]. State Representatives John C. Garriott and John Lee were there.

Superior court judges were John J. Sullivan, William J. Lindsey, and Walter Stanton. South side municipal judges on hand were Theodore Ehler, Thomas Green, Donald S. McKinlay, Matthew Hartigan, John Lupe, and Harold Connell. Several others were kept away by illness and sent regrets.

Some of the civic leaders on hand, to mention only a few of those seen milling about while the entertainment was going on, were William G. Donne, former Chatham Fields Improvement association head, nominated for president of the Englewood Business Men's association; Cornelius J. Kelly of Tri Parks Business Men; Walter Roy of the South End Chamber of Commerce; Harry Himmel of the Englewood Civic and Commercial club, D. Gordon Ramsay of the 55th Street Business Men's association, Larry Jones of the South Chicago Chamber of Commerce, Eugene J. Mooney and P. J. Bassett of the South Woodlawn Chamber of Commerce, and Sidney Wanzer and Harry Levinson.

OLDEST CHURCH WILL DEDICATE PORTER PLAQUE

Presbyterians to Honor Dr. Porter.

A bronze plaque in memory of Jeremiah Porter, Chicago religious pioneer who founded the First Presbyterian church just previous to the incorporation of the city, will be dedicated this morning at the present church edifice, 64th street and Kimbark avenue, by Dr. William H. Boddy, pastor of the church for the last eight years.

The plaque is a gift of James Porter, 93 year old son of the founder, who still retains membership in the church, though now living at La Mesa, Cal. It has been placed on the outside wall at the right side of the main doors of the $750,000 stone edifice of Gothic architecture, which was dedicated in 1928.

Recalls Pioneer Days.

Just as the beam from old Fort Dearborn in the ceiling of the church's cloister, so does the plaque serve to recall the stirring conditions of the founding of this, Chicago's first church. The scene was the carpenter shop of Fort Dearborn; the date was 1833. The Rev. Jeremiah Porter had been called from Detroit to form a church for the folks who were soon to become Chicagoans. After discussion it was decided that the church should be of Presbyterian faith, and the Rev. Mr. Porter served as the minister until 1835. The first house of worship was dedicated in 1834 at the corner of Clark and Lake streets. Since this time the course of the church has been steadily southward until the union with the Woodlawn Presbyterian church in 1926.

Likeness of Fort Dearborn.

The head of the plaque bears a likeness of old Fort Dearborn, which is becoming a familiar sight again in the World's Fair replica along Leif Ericson drive. Below it is the following inscription which tells the story:

FIRST
PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH
Was Organized with Twenty-six
Members in the Carpenter
Shop of Fort Dearborn
June 26, 1833.
Rev. Jeremiah Porter,
Founder.

Below this on the plaque is a panel bearing the name of the present minister, Dr. Boddy, and then comes the list of the church services.

The trustees, in accepting the memorial, have announced that it shall be a permanent part of the church and will be moved to any subsequent buildings which may be erected. D. M. Compton is president of the board of trustees, Sheridan E. Fry is vice president, and Maxwell S. Green is secretary.

Mr. Schatz founded the Bezalel Art school at Jerusalem 25 years ago and was called by the late Israel Zangwill as one of the "dreamers of the ghetto." The exhibit is described by S. D. Schwartz, secretary of Sinai, as a "unique display of art permeated with the spirit that has driven the Jew to seek once more a home in the land of his fathers."

Admission is free and the general public is invited to attend.

ENGLEWOOD BUILDING ALL RENTED 2 MONTHS BEFORE COMPLETION

The two story stone building being erected on the southeast corner of 63d and Green streets abutting the Chicago City Bank and Trust company will be ready for occupancy by stores and offices on July 15, according to Frank C. Rathje, president of the bank. Mr. Rathje also announced that all space has been rented nearly two months before the opening, indicating a rise in Englewood business conditions. The building will have a 60 foot frontage on 63d street and will extend back 156 feet on Green street. The John Lind Construction company has the general contract for $140,000. The space occupied by the new building has been utilized as a parking lot for customers of the bank until a few weeks ago when the construction began.

MARQUETTE BODY RESIGNS FROM THE SOUTH SIDE UNION

The Marquette Community association has withdrawn from membership in the South Side Federation of Improvement associations and its resignation has been accepted. The break came last winter over the question of approval of the proposal of the south parks to widen Marquette road. The federation, except for the Marquette group, favored the project but trimmed its sails and supported its member. The federation, however, has refused to join the Marquette association in efforts to block the widening since it was approved by the voters.

WRITE SPRING POEM WITH CAMERA AND WIN TRIBUNE CASH PRIZE

Spring is sprung! Wandering among the daffodils may inspire the young photographer to make some snappy shots. The Tribune continues its offer of $5, $3 and $2 as weekly prizes for the best amateur photographs received. All subjects are eligible to be treated in the photos for this contest, but we suggest that they be in keeping with the season. Photographers must be, as heretofore, of amateur standing. An amateur photographer is one who has not sold photographs for commercial gain.

Lakes, ponds, rivers, the new spring bonnet, the children, unusual views, the woods, the meadows, the streets, and, in fact anything indoors or out is a legitimate subject for an amateur photographer.

Send your best photo to the Photo Contest, Metropolitan Section, The Tribune. Three prizes will be awarded each week in your own metropolitan section, north, west, or south. The full name and address of the person submitting the picture should be printed clearly on the back of each entry, with the full name and address of each person appearing in the picture, left to right.

27 SOUTH SIDERS CARRY WOES TO DIVORCE COURT

14 Charges of Cruelty, 12 of Desertion.

Twenty-seven south siders filed divorce suits in the Circuit and Superior courts last week. One wife filed a plea for separate maintenance.

Cruelty figured as the outstanding charge in fourteen of the cases, in two of which it was linked with allegations of habitual drunkenness. Twelve of the complainants charged their mates with desertion and one with misconduct. Conviction of a felony was the charge in another case.

In his suit for divorce from Mrs. Hula Janson, Carl A. Janson, Blue Island, accuses his wife of cruelty. He further alleges that she attempted to take his life with gas in one instance and by feeding him ground glass in his coffee on another occasion.

Bring Cruelty Charges.

Other cruelty charges were brought in the cases filed by:

Sherman H. Edwards, 3916 Calumet avenue, against Mrs. Dorothy M. Edwards, 4252 South Park way.

Mrs. Gertrude Spangler, 3410 Rhodes avenue, against Lester Spangler.

Milt Spolar against Mrs. Josephine Spolar.

Mrs. Eliza M. Taylor against Howard Taylor, 4902 Forrestville avenue.

Jacob A. Miedema against Mrs. Gertrude Miedema, 525 West 103d street.

Charges of desertion were also made in the separate maintenance suit filed by Mrs. Effie Williams, 663 East 50th street, against Rayfield Williams. Both Mrs. Elizabeth F. Adams, 927 East 54th street, who is seeking a divorce from Lawrence J. Adams, and Mrs. Eva Shimenas, 6740 South Campbell avenue, in her suit against John Shimenas, 4205 South Maplewood avenue, base their actions on charges of both cruelty and habitual drunkenness.

LEONARDS MARK GOLDEN WEDDING IN EAST CHICAGO

Mr. and Mrs. William Leonard, 4826 Baring avenue, East Chicago, Ind., were surprised Wednesday evening by about 50 relatives and friends who dropped into to wish them well on their 58th wedding anniversary. Mr. Leonard is 77 years old and his wife 76. The Leonards have lived in East Chicago 25 years, having moved there from Muncie, Ind. They have six children, five grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren. The four sons are Howard and Andrew, living at home, Lawrence, 7246 Evans avenue, and Dean Leonard of Hammond. Two daughters, Mrs. Iva Goebel and Mrs. Emma Daniels, make their homes at Youngstown, Ohio.

Loretto Alumnae Plan Summer Formal Dance

Announcement has been made of the annual summer formal dance of the Loretto Woodlawn academy alumnae to be given on June 6 at the Edgewater Beach hotel. Miss Norma Jeria, 8129 Phillips avenue, is chairman of the dance. She is being assisted with plans by Miss Olive Smith, 1539 East 63d street, president of the alumnae; Miss Marie Houle, vice president; Miss Grace Hanrahan, treasurer; Miss Helen Fleming, corresponding secretary, and Miss Mary Ann Haggerty, recording secretary.

Neighborhood Theaters

Though you may not like the ending, you will find the acting unimpeachable in "Strangers May Kiss," the movie being featured the first four days of the week at the Piccadilly theater and through Tuesday night at the Avalon. Norma Shearer is perfect as Lisbeth, her every gesture [even her coiffure] fitting to perfection. Another reason for seeing this show is Robert Montgomery, and if Miss Shearer were not what she is he would carry off the whole show as the dashing, irresponsible, and yet lovable man of the world. Neil Hamilton dons a mustache and the rôle of foreign correspondent with surprising facility, and Marjorie Rambeau is priceless as "maitre" of a beauty salon. Friends of Irene Rich will find her just as sweet and polished as ever, too.

"Strangers May Kiss" is interesting and combines some swift action with slick acting and human appeal. The movie producers bought the name from Authoress Ursula Parrott, but Miss Parrott is not supposed to recognize her piece as well as she might. Anyhow, it's a fine show.

Montgomery Is Star.

"Shipmates" is lighting the Tivoli screen this week—and brilliantly, because it brings us Robert Montgomery's first starring venture. This tall, good looking youth has had a meteoric rise to stardom and most critics agree that it has been deserved. His first starring vehicle does not boast as good a story as it might for, after all, deck hands and such just don't marry the admiral's daughters. But the acting is top stuff, and Montgomery boasts a good supporting cast. Hobart Bosworth does a fine admiral and Dorothy Jordan is charming as ever as his daughter. The other feminine star is Joan Marsh. Inimitable Cliff Edwards and the grizzly Ernest Torrence rate the rest of the male contingent. Also, you probably will find the maneuvers on board ship quite interesting.

Benny Meroff is on the Tivoli stage with Marcelli as the guest conductor.

"East Lynne" at Harper.

Taken from the melodramatic English novel of 70 years go, when marriage was marriage and divorces weren't, "East Lynne" has been brought to the screen with its charm unimpaired. Ann Harding is excellent as the lady divorced and separated from husband and child. Conrad Nagel gives a fine portrayal of the cruel husband and Clive Brook is equally good in the other leading rôle. Honorable mention goes to Beryl Mercer, Cecelia Loftis, and O. P. Heggie. The sets radiate a certain old world charm and the picture is generally well done. You'll find it at the Harper theater today and tomorrow.

Twin Films Offered.

A twin program of "The Conquering Horde" and "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath" will be at the Chelten theater today and tomorrow. The latter also will be on at the Kenwood these two days. "The Conquering Horde" stars Richard Arlen and Fay Wray, but Claude Gillingwater, grand old character actor, almost steals the show from them. It is a western, with Texas after the civil war the locale. Scenery and photography are good stuff. The other show brings us a great pair of comedians—somber faced Buster Keaton and Charlotte Greenwood of stage fame and popularity.

EARL BURTNETT, DUKE ELLINGTON COMING TO W-G-N

West Coast Favorites to Make Bow Wednesday.

Earl Burtnett and his orchestra, an outstanding dance aggregation of the west coast, and Duke Ellington's orchestra, the current toast of New York City, will be heard exclusively this summer through W-G-N, THE TRIBUNE station, from the Lincoln Tavern on Dempster road.

Earl Burtnett's orchestra has played for five years at the Biltmore hotel in Los Angeles and will be heard for the first time locally when the Lincoln Tavern opens next Wednesday evening.

His band will be augmented by a new rumba section and the famous vocal trio which has appeared with the orchestra in scores of talking pictures, including "The Broadway Melody," "Gold Diggers of Broadway," "Viennese Nights," "Puttin' on the Ritz," Mary Pickford's "Coquette," and Doug Fairbanks' "Reaching for the Moon." In the middle west the orchestra is best known through mechanical appearances—on the records and in the talkies.

Station W-G-N will present Earl Burtnett and his big band every night between midnight and 12:30 and between 1 o'clock and 1:30 in the morning, and, more importantly, at various times during the early evening programs every night in the week.

Duke Ellington Coming.

During the month of July the orchestra will be succeeded by Duke Ellington's orchestra, the most sensational success in the last two years. They captured New York City last year, were signed up for night club appearances, doubled in Ziegfeld's production "Show Girl," then were featured in the talking picture "Check and Double Check," and lately were called back for five weeks of return engagements at the Oriental theater in Chicago. They will remain until Sept. 1, giving radio listeners of the middle west ultra modern treatments and arrangements of dance music.

A memorial day program featuring the W-G-N Symphony orchestra and David Pritchard, baritone, will be given from W-G-N at 8 o'clock next Saturday evening. In addition to a memorial day tribute civil war songs and marches will be presented by the symphony and Mr. Pritchard will sing "In Flanders Fields" "The Light Brigade" and Elgar's "Land of Hope and Glory."

The Clef Barons, Negro quartet will also be heard Thursday evening. Popular tunes and favorite spirituals will be included in their program.

It is for this audience that Fireside Melodies on W-G-N at 8:20 o'clock Saturday night was inaugurated. In this program one may hear the numbers of such operas as "The Bohemian Girl" and "Martha" and such musical comedy successes as "The Red Mill" and "Chocolate Soldied."

Olaf Hjorth, Tenor, Wins Favor on Morning Hour

A young tenor, Olaf Hjorth, well known in Scandinavian musical circles in Chicago, is delighting W-G-N listeners with his Monday morning programs. Mr. Hjorth came to this country from Bergen, Norway, in 1917.

Medical Help to Ships.

The federal post authorities of Germany, together with the federal health authorities, have inaugurated a special wireless service giving medical advice to all ships on the high seas which are equipped with radio but have no physician on board.

"Divorcons" to Be Given Tonight.

Between 7 and 8 o'clock, this evening the W-G-N Players will present Sardou's comedy, "Divorcons." The play was written for radio presentation by Jean Conover, W-G-N playwright, and will be played by Patricia O'Brien, Nina Lawrence, Douglas Hope, Eugene McGillan, and E. M. Johnstone and Frank Harrington. On next Sunday evening, at the same time, "Oliver Twist" will be played.

Since the institution of the station in 1924, W-G-N has pioneered in the dramatic form of radio entertainment. In that year, Quin Ryan originated the "Play Shop," a series of programs dramatized from original stories. In 1926, the radio comic strip, a new dramatic form, was born at station W-G-N in the feature "Sam 'n' Henry," now known as "Amos 'n' Andy." On the heels of this came the ever popular comic interlude, "Louie's Hungry Five."

Then, in 1930, another radio dramatic form was inaugurated at station W-G-N—the radio comic srip presenting the familiar characters of the newspaper comic strips. Three of these are presented nightly by station W-G-N—"Harold Teen," "Gasoline Alley," and "Little Orphan Annie," the latter being given to a national network in addition.

Revive Musical Comedies.

Early in 1928, the program department of W-G-N conceived the idea of reviving the old La Salle theater musical comedies which were a national vogue a generation ago. New dramatic and light operatic companies were organized under the direction of Harry W. Spingold, assisted by Reed Myers, both veteran show men, and the series of plays was adapted for radio presentation by Delos Owen.

The first presentation, the "Girl Question," presented with full cast and chorus, met with instantaneous success.

This was followed by revivals of such well remembered hits as "The Honeymoon Trail," "A Stubborn Cinderella," "Prince of Tonight," "The Flirting Princess," "The Time, the Place, and the Girl," "Miss Nobody," and "The Girl at the Helm." The company then delved further into the old repertoires and produced "Robin Hood," "In Old Vienna," "The Chimes of Normandy," "Pirates of Penzance," "The Mikado," "S. S. Pinafore," "The Beggar Student," "The Purple Towers," and "Betty Jane."

Miss Conover Adapts Play.

When the presentation of famous plays from the dramatic stage was considered, Miss Jean Conover, a foremost scenario writer from the movie world, was brought from New York to adapt them for radio production.

During 1929 and 1930, the W-G-N Players presented "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Rip Van Winkle," "Under Two Flags," "Sign of the Four," "Michael Strogoff," "Lena Rivers," "Napoleon and Josephine," "Two Orphans," "Streets of New York," "Midnight Rose," "Anthony and Cleopatra," "The Courtship of Miles Standish," and "The Romance of Preston Manor."

Next came a series of comedy dramas including "Enter Mary Jones," "Call of the Woods," "End of the Lane," "Looks Like Rain," "Civil Service," "Path Across the Hill," "The Shakeup," "The Runaway," "Mr. Jerry Weston," and "Romance, Ltd."

Present Dramatized Operas.

Beginning with the Chicago Civic Opera season of 1930-'31, the W-G-N Players presented 26 one-hour musical plays dramatized from the opera librettos, as follows; "Pagliacci," "The Masked Ball," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Faust," "Rigoletto," "Il Trovatore," "Carmen," "Camille," "The Elixir of Love," "Fra Diavolo," "Aida," "Martha," "William Tell," "The Bohemian Girl," "Lohengrin," "Tanhausser," "Lakme," "The Barber of Seville," "Samson and Delilah," "Mignon," "Lucia di Lammermoor," "La Giocanda," and "The Queen of Sheba."

The summer program, now under way, will see the revival of old familiar plays, including "Under Two Flags," "The Count of Monte Cristo," "Amy of the Circus," "Rip Van Winkle," "When Lindy Ran Away," "The Road Agent," "The Man of Destiny," "The Dancer, and "The Dagger," and "Under Arizona Skies."

HOOVER TO SPEAK AT VALLEY FORGE MEMORIAL DAY

George Bernard Shaw to Be Heard.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Special Memorial day broadcasts and several international programs will be highlights of this radio week.

President Hoover will deliver a Memorial day address at historic Valley Forge at approximately 9:30 o'clock next Saturday morning to be broadcast over both of the major networks. Military bands will salute the President as he speaks from Washington's headquarters of the winter of 1777-'78.

Capt. Charles W. Lockwood, who at 88 years is the last man of Minnesota's famed "Last Man's club," will speak over CBS at 10 a. m. on Memorial day from Washington. Capt. Lockwood last year opened the bottle of the rare old Burgundy wine as the last and privileged survivor of a company of Minnesota volunteers in accordance with a pledge made many years before.

George Bernard Shaw, who still insists he won't visit America, will however speak to the United States by radio for the second time from 3:20 to 3:40 over CBS on Memorial day, the 500th anniversay of the martyrdom of Joan of Arc.

Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley will speak on the question of armament reduction at 8:30 Saturday evening.

The prince of Wales is to be heard again this week. The hour is 3:20 on Thursday over CBS when the Prince speaks at a dinner in London to help raise funds for the blind.

As reported in this column several weeks ago the nation's leaders are trying to find a suitable word to apply to television spectators. For those who don't read the New Yorker we present its suggestion of "televictims."

"At least 50 per cent more eggs will be produced for market if the poultry farmer offers his hens the same opportunity to hear good radio programs that he extends to his family," said O. H. Caldwell, former radio commissioner, recently. Does Mr. Caldwell include the well known toothpaste program and "Consider Your Adam's Apple" hour?

If all the words broadcast by a single big radio station during a week were laid end to end they would reach all of the way through Theodore Dreiser's "American Tragedy" and into a bottle of aspirin [100 tablets], with a few hundred thousand left over. That makes a total of about 700,000 words.

Installation and operation of all radio broadcasting in Ecuador is to be controlled by the Durham corporation, an American firm, which has just made a 25 year contract with the South American government. The first station is to be built at Quito, the capital.

The ancient and sacred Guild of Former Pipe Organ Pumpers, holding its 49th annual fiscal meeting and bicentennial hard times party recently elected the NBC organist, Archer Gibson, as chief tremolo.

TOSCHA SEIDEL WILL BE HEARD ON CBS TODAY

Toscha Seidel, famous violin virtuoso, accompanied by a symphonic orchestra and by Ossip Giskin, cellist of the Continental string quartet, will play the second and third movements from Brahms' "Concerto for Violin and Cello," during the Symphonic hour to be broadcast over CBS from 2 to 3 this afternoon.

Radios Scarce in Wyoming.

Wyoming is still a fertile field for radio manufacturers, according to the census bureau tabulations just released. Only 34 per cent of the state's family, numbering 57,218, on April 1, 1930, reported radio receivers. The average number of persons in a household was 3.9, while the number possessing sets was 19,482.

BLUES SINGER

RUTH ETTING.
[White Studio Photo.]

Ruth Etting, Ziegfeld star, will sing with Rudy Vallee and his Connecticut Yankees on their next program to be broadcast at 7 o'clock Thursday evening through W-G-N and NBC. Numbers which Miss Etting will sing include "Were You Sincere?", "Say a Little Prayer for Me," and "Out of Nowhere." Rudy and his band will be heard in a program composed of several of the latest songs and a number of new arrangements of old favorites.

Opening Attractions.

So, with that settled, this is as good time as any to tell briefly the story of "William Tell," which will be the opening attraction of the Ravinia season.

Rossini wrote this opera of the liberation of Switzerland in a fairly international setting. That is, the story by Schiller had come into Paris through translations of the writer's works, and the first libretto was written in French by Jouy and Bis. It was produced at the Grand Opera in Paris in 1892 with Nourrit as the original Arnoldo in what was then known as "Guillaume Tell." In 1831 it was presented in Lucca, Italy, as "Guglielmo Tell." London saw in 1830 at Drury lane in English and in 1839 at His Majesty's in Italian.

There seems to have been a New York production in English in 1831, as well as a production in New Orleans in 1842 and an American tour in 1857 with Karl Formes in the title role. Tenors who have sung Arnoldo include Mierzwinski, Tamagno, Martinelli and Lauri-Volpi at the Metropolitan, and John O'Sullivan at the Chicago Opera in 1918-'19. The opera was written in five acts, cut down to three by omitting the third act and condensing the fourth and fifth into one, and was then rearranged into four acts, the form it now holds.

Story of a Brave Swiss.

William Tell is a Swiss patriot of the thirteenth century who yearns to free his people from the hated Austrian yoke represented by the tyrant, Gessler. He fears the younger folk will forget former freedom in the habit of servitude. So, the story opens on a May morning when a patriarch blesses young couples in love. His own son, Arnoldo, does not ask this blessing, for he loves Matilde, daughter of Gessler. The festival is halted by a fugitive seeking refuge from Gessler's men, one of whom he has slain to protect his daughter. Tell braves the coming storm to row him across the lake to safety.

Gessler arrives, and in vengeance burns the town and condemns the patriarch to death. Meanwhile, Arnoldo and Matilde have pledged their love, but when the young man learns of the death of his father, he joins Tell in the conspiracy of the cantons to overthrow the tyrant.

Then comes the famous market place scene, in which Gessler presides over the holiday by forcing the people to make obeisance to his hat, which is stuck atop a pole. This Tell refuses to do, and Gessler, knowing him an expert archer, orders him to shoot an apple from his son's head. The shot succeeds, but Tell drops a second arrow and, questioned, tells Gessler that had he killed his son, the second shaft would have gone to the heart of Gessler. Tell and the boy are condemned to death, but intervention of Matilde saves the boy while the uprisen Swiss free Tell, and an avenging arrow removes Gessler from an otherwise peaceful picture.

In the Ravinia production, Giovanni Martinelli sings Arnoldo, Elisabeth Rethberg is Matilde, Giuseppe Danise is Tell, Margery Maxwell is the boy, and Alfredo Gandolfi is Gessler.

"The Science of Voice."

"The Science of Voice," by Douglas Stanley, M. S., A. C. G. I., reprinted in pamphlet form from the Journal of the Franklin Institute of Pennsylvania, would seem to be an abbreviation of a book with the same title and by the same author issued two years ago by Carl Fischer, Inc. At least, it takes up the same thesis. He holds that the field of voice culture is still a good deal a matter of witchcraft, of secret methods, and mysterious arts, that practically every theory heretofore held is wrong, and that true principles of the art can only arise from the sum total of the sciences of acoustics, anatomy, physiology, psychology, and the laws of music. What these principles are he proceeds to set forth in detail.

Whether they are the true principles or not cannot be told without trial. Certainly they cannot be told from this desk without it. As one peculiar mode of life makes it obligatory to listen to dozens and scores of incompletely developed young voices every season, I am not always in the mood to rush to the defense of the embattled singing teachers. But the pamphlet, also the larger book, contains this statement in all the emphasis of capitalized letters:

"The range of every properly produced voice should be at least three octaves, and sometimes nearly four may be reached."

Critic Makes Offer.

Like Paolo in his famous literary session with Francesca da Rimini, in that book I read no more that day. Two years ago I made an offer. I renew it. If Mr. Stanley will give a public demonstration in my hearing of a small group, say half a dozen average pupils trained in his principles and with an effective, musical vocal range of three octaves, I will see to it that he gets the publicity such an exploit deserves. I shall not ask for the exceptional cases of nearly four octaves. Just three will be enough.

After a lifetime of listening to singers, you, I, anyone, can count upon the fingers the number that can go three octaves. They are as rare as radio directors who permit a musical phrase to be finished after the time is up. In the meantime, much as I should like to believe that the vocal situation is going to be transformed by Mr. Stanley's researches, I am inclined to issue what in certain legal actions is called a certificate of reasonable doubt.

"Carmen" to Be Heard Here.

"Carmen" is to be returned to the répertoire of the Chicago Civic Opera company, next season, it was announced last week by the management. Conchita Supervia, mezzo-soprano from La Scala, and the Madrid and Barcelona operas, has been engaged for guest performances of the title rôle. Mme. Supervia, who is of Spanish birth, has the distinction of having made her debut at the early age of 14. At 15 she sang her first important operatic rôle, Carmen, and while still in her early teens was a member of the Chicago Opera association for one season.

She was chosen by Richard Strauss to create the rôle of Octavion in "Der Rosenkavalier" in its first performance in Rome and later interpreted this rôle at La Scala with Toscanini conducting. She was a member of the La Scala company under Toscanini for six years and appeared for several seasons at the Royal Opera in Madrid and the Liceo in Barcelona. She took Paris by storm in the summer of 1928 when she participated in the Rossini cycle at the Théâtre des Champs-Elysées in Paris. She was engaged immediately for the Opera and Opera Comique, and during the last winter has been appearing in concert also in London, Paris, and Germany.

Fifty Events Listed.

Sunday, Oct. 18, would seem to be the day that Miss Bertha Ott will begin concert operations for the new season. At least, John McCormack is booked at the Civic Opera house and Sergei Rachmaninoff at Orchestra hall on that date under her management.

Miss Ott is prompt in making and announcing her commitments. About fifty events are already scheduled under her name, though this is by no means the total that will probably have her name at the head of their programs. Some of the more important are these:

Singers—Florence Austral, Beniamino Gigli, Yvonne Gall, Roland Hayes, Ida Kremer, Lotte Lehman, Juliette Lippe, John McCormack, Sigrid Onegin, Paul Robeson, Tito Schipa, Lawrence Tibbett, Reinald Werrenrath, Richard Tauber. The last named is rated as Germany's best tenor. At any rate, he is good.

Violinists — Mischa Elman, Fritz Kreisler, Frank Kneisel.

Pianists — Josef Lhevinne, Myra Hess, Mischa Levitzki, Elly Ney, Sergei Rachmaninoff.

Cellists—Hans Hess, Gregor Piatigorsky, Felix Salmond.

Dancers—Leila Bederkhan, La Argentina, Ted Shawn and company, Mary Wigman.

Combinations, vocal or instrumental —"The Blue Bird," a Russian revue; Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson; Gaylord Browne and Gibson Walters; Don Cossack male chorus; Kedroff quartet; Kneisel string quartet; London Singers with John Goss; Minneapolis Symphony orchestra.

Other engagements will be made and announced later. They will all be heard variously at the Studebaker, the Civic theater, and the Playhouse, with some of the larger ones at the Civic Opera house and Orchestra hall.

Late Season Concerts.

As spring burgeons, concert appearances fade away. Paula Schlueter, soprano, will give a song recital at the Playhouse this afternoon, Yetta Sokolow a piano recital at the Chicago Woman's club. Robert Macdonald will appear in an organ recital at the Oak Park First Baptist church this evening, assisted by Lillian Knowles, contralto. Maria Matyas, mezzo-soprano, and Rudolph Magnus, baritone, will give a joint song recital at Kimball hall tomorrow night, and on Wednesday the Friends of Music of Chicago will close the season with a performance at the Bal Tabarin.

This last will enlist the services of Irene Pavloska, mezzo-soprano of the Civic Opera company, also Sylvia Loder Stone, Bessie Kaplan Nelson, Benjamin Landsman, Lillyan Sacks, Sara Rose Wexler, and Louis Jacobson. The program will be in large part operatic.

The German Grand Opera company is to make its fourth American tour next winter. The season will be of eight weeks, beginning Jan. 18, and the repertoire will be mainly Wagnerian. In fact, Eugen d'Albert's "Tiefland" is the only non-Wagnerian work to be announced. "Lohengrin" and "Tannhäuser" are to be added to the list. The others will be the four items of the "Ring des Nibelungen," "Tristan und Isolde," and "Der Fliegende Holländer."

Dr. Max von Schillings has been reengaged as musical director, and the principal sopranos will be Johanna Gadski and Margarethe Baumer. Mme. Gadski sends word of a contest for young American women singers, the winner to be engaged as a member of this tour, with salary and expenses guaranteed by Mme. Gadski personally. Voice is the only requisite. Operatic experience will not be required. Applicants are requested to write to the German Grand Opera company, 11 West 42d street, New York.

"The Legend of the Piper," the opera by Mrs. Eleanor Everest Freer of Chicago, is to be sung at Sacramento, Cal., under the auspices of the board of education of that city and the direction of George Sims, superintendent of recreation. The date will be June 6 and the company will number over forty. The work will be remembered as being in the repertoire of the American Opera company, an inspiriting organization which for the last year has been only an inspiriting memory.

Other news of "Peter Ibbetson," to be sung at Ravinia this summer, is that it will be conducted by Wilfrid Pelletier, and the word is that he was chosen at the express wish of Deems Taylor, composer of the work. Mr. Pelletier is to go, at the end of the Ravinia season, to San Francisco and Los Angeles, where he will conduct "Carmen" and "Marouf." He conducted a late night performance of "Romeo and Juliet" in Montreal recently, with Edward Johnson and Queena Mario in the name parts. The performance began at midnight and ended some time after three o'clock in the morning.

TO SING CARMEN

CONCHITA SUPERVIA.

THIS mezzo-soprano from Spain is returning to the Chicago Opera next season and, because she is returning, "Carmen" is to be revived for her appearance in the name part. She was a member of the company years ago when the late Cleofonte Campanini was general director, and she sang as Carmen then. She was very young at that time, however. For that matter, she is by no means old yet, and maturity has brought her an enviable reputation in many of the most noted European opera houses.

Coincidences

Your strange coincidence will be printed if you will submit it to Strange Coincidences, Chicago Tribune.

Sensed Boy Friend's Accident.

A girl friend and I were walking home from work Tuesday at 5 p. m. We were talking about the danger of working around machinery. She told me about her boy friend, who worked on a tractor. She had the strange feeling, she said, that she could picture him on the tractor riding along and the next moment he lay on the ground, badly hurt. I told her that was because she was always thinking of the worst. We then dropped the subject.

She arrived home at 5:30 p. m., and at a quarter of 6 she received a telephone call stating that her boy friend was painfully scalded about the face and chest. The radiator on the tractor had cracked and the steam had scalded him.

When she told me the next day what had happened I considered it a strange coincidence. A. M. P.

A Pleasant Occurrence.

About one month before the Golden Gloves tournament my husband purchased two tickets.

At the last minute my two brothers were given tickets for the bouts. We intended to call each other and find out where our seats were so that we might meet afterward. However, in our rushing around, we neglected to do so.

Imagine our great surprise to find that out of those thousands of seats, our seats were not only the same row as theirs but right next to them!

Cripples, True and False.

We were playing "tag" after school. When we got tired I suggested that we limp instead of run. We had been limping for about five minutes when we saw a cripple limping in the same manner as we were. The cripple, thinking that we were imitating him, whirled his cane at us. I ran and fell. That ended my childhood days. H. W. M.

Debussy Music, Springtime Go Hand in Hand

Two Nocturnes Recorded in Paris.

By Edward Moore.

SPRINGTIME and Debussy's music somehow seem to go together rather well, so it is more than commonly to the purpose that Brunswick is issuing some of Debussy's best. Two of the three nocturnes for orchestra, "Nuages" (Clouds) and "Festivals," two sides each, numbers 90158 and 90159, are played by the Orchestre de l'Association des Concerts Lamoureux of Paris under the direction of Albert Wolff.

They are first class examples of what recorders can do when they set themselves out to reproduce some of the less frequently heard music, that which is usually confined to the elect of concert givers. In the first place, the performance is excellent. Conductor Wolff and the orchestra are thoroughly in the Debussy spirit with the light touch and flexibility and color which does not in the least stifle a great amount of exultant energy.

Next, the recording is as good as can be. It is not only that the qualities of string and wind instruments are faithfully recorded, but how many, or rather, how few years is it since tympani could be put upon a record to sound like anything more than a vague, muffled noise? In this case, they sound like tympani.

A Favorite Number.

Orchestral music of an older and consequently more conventional and possibly more popular type is also well presented by Victor in number 9733, where Mendelssohn's "Ruy Blas" overture is played by a symphony orchestra conducted by Malcolm Sargent, another European recording. The story of Ruy Blas ranks among the stirring melodramas of dramatic history, but both the period and the personal nature of Mendelssohn kept him out of musical turgidness or anything except frank, lively melody.

This overture used to be a favorite number in both popular orchestral and band concerts, and there is no reason why it should not continue in that enviable position for years to come. At least, this record makes a strong argument.

Once again it is a little amusing to see the recording companies duplicating each other at the same time. This example is Handel's famous and so called Largo, whose proper title is "Ombra mai fu" from the opera, "Xerxes." Columbia and Brunswick are both issuing it, Columbia through the voice of Jo van Yzer-Vincent, soprano, with organ and violin accompaniment, number 50282-D; Brunswick through Emmi Leisner, contralto, with orchestral accompaniment, number 90160.

You can pretty well take your choice which one you will prefer. Both are in Italian, and both voices are well fitted for the purpose. Mme. van Yzer-Vincent sings in a key which reproduces as G. Mme. Leisner approximately D. Mme. Leisner's accompaniment is a bit the better, since the violin for Mme. van Yzer-Vincent does not register as quite ideal perfection of tone.

Reverse Sides Vary.

The solo is short, taking only one side of a record, and the reverse sides are different. Columbia presents Theodora Versteegh, mezzo-soprano, in Cesar Franck's sacred song, "Panis Angelicus," again with organ and violin, which, together with "Ombrai mai fu" will be remembered as high spots in John McCormack's repertoire. The Brunswick reverse is another by Mme. Leisner and another by Handel, the solo cantata with instruments, "Dank Sei Dir, Herr." Rather curiously, it is much in the same musical mood as "Ombrai mai fu," even to the leisurely three-four rhythm. It is perhaps unnecessary to add that both of these disks are imported recordings.

Two records that cannot be slighted by any admirer of one of the foremost of German leider are of the ten inch size from Brunswick. They are made by the great baritone, Heinrich Schlusnus, and they display him at the top of his voice and form. 85001 presents Hugo Wolf's "Heimweh" and Richard Strauss' "Heimliche Aufforderung"; 85003 has Schumann's "Es zogen zwei rust'ge Gesellen" and Humperdinck's "Am Rhein." Both are confidently and earnestly recommended, particularly 85001. Franz Rupp plays the piano accompaniment for all.

"Record" Attendance.

Army Planes Keep Newsreel Cameras Busy

taken over Manhattan. The first of the two was snapped last winter. The picture ship was cruising over New Jersey when a sudden shift in the wind swept in a blanket of fog. The ship wheeled and headed for its home port on Long Island. As it swung across the bay the camera man noticed the towers of dozens of the skyscrapers sticking up through the fog like white candles atop a birthday cake. He waved to the pilot to fly over the city, and roaring above the thick clouds the photographer cranked away at a unique sight. The plane eventually got down, but it was nip and tuck with old man bad weather.

It is a dangerous business, this aerial shutter snapping. For every foot of pictured thrills at least two men must risk their lives. Sometimes they get spilled, but usually they get their pictures.

Movie Houses Turn Automat.

The newest things in the way of movie houses are the Translux theaters in Manhattan. Two new ones have just opened on Broadway. They are under the same roof, but show different types of programs. These are the "automats" of the picture house world. The auditoriums are small, there are no ushers—one just drops his quarter in the slot, enters, and takes a seat.

The house is lighted at all times—almost to daylight brilliancy. A new method of projection makes this possible, and the lighted auditorium is popular with every one except those couples who go to the movies to be alone. News pictures are being shown in one of the Broadway houses, and feature shorts make up the bill at the other.

Foreign Language Talkies.

One hears a lot, these days, about the problem of making Hollywood and Long Island movies for foreign distribution. England is making a lot of its own pictures, these days, and then, too, there is no language obstacle to hurdle in that country. In France the old picture quarrel, which has been going through an armistice, probably will be renewed this summer. American film men, members of the French government, and United States embassy officials in Paris will meet to draft a new film quota agreement. The talkies have come along since the original row and the United States producers probably will have to promise the French pictures in their own language.

The making of foreign language talkies should be profitable, for there is a demand for them right here in our own country. I have seen and heard talkies in at least four different languages in New York City, and in the Rio Grande country every Texas town has its picture house that caters to the Mexican population by showing Spanish language pictures.

If film trade agreements with foreign countries can be worked out on a satisfactory basis there is no reason why the foreign language talkie industry should not be one of the biggest gold mines in the cinema manufacturing Eldorado.

DREAMS

Have you ever had a dream which later came true? If you care to see it in print address Dreams, Chicago Tribune.

Received Death Warning.

I have for years been forewarned of any approaching troubles by dreams, but am not always able to interpret the meaning or place the ones involved.

However, on April 13, 1931, I had a confused dream. I seemed to have to cross over a stream of muddy water which reached up to my mouth. The shock, for my dream was so real, wakened me. I was as awake as I am this moment, and I heard a voice say, "your dream is a warning of death." Naturally, I slept very little that night.

I was so worried I told some friends about it the next morning. Two days later I received word that my brother in Portland, Ore., had been operated on the night of my dream, and that there was little hope he would recover. He died five days later. R. J. C.

Dream Brought Good Luck.

I was one of the unemployed for some time. One day I answered a blind ad in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. That same night I dreamed that I was granted an interview by a small concern in the suburbs for 3 o'clock.

The next day I got a call to be at the office of a concern in the surburbs at 3 o'clock. The interviewer was just the man in my dream and I landed the job. F. J. P.

Kid Gloves Restored.

Sometime ago I missed two pairs of kid gloves. I looked through dresser drawers and every place I could think of. I have a couple of bags in which I put things that I don't use. I even looked there, but no kid gloves, so I gave them up for lost.

That night, lying in bed, I racked my brains trying to think where I could have put them. I went to sleep and dreamed that I found them in one of my bags. I told the family about it, and they told me to look there again.

I did. I too keverything out, and, sure enough, there were the gloves.

Found Pen in Purse Lining.

Recently, as I was on my way to the city, I couldn't find my fountain pen, which I always carried in my purse. I decided that I had left it at home. On returning I did not find it at home. I could not believe I had lost my pen and kept talking about it. That night a member of the family said to me, "I hope you dream about your pen and that the dream will tell you where it is."

I remembered the next morning that I had dreamed that my pen was in my purse. I looked, but failed to find it. The following day a little girl at school asked me to change some money for her and in putting my hand into the inside purse attached to my purse I felt it through the lining, for it had slipped behind this pocket. Then I realized that my dream had come true. E. M.

Memorial Day Originated by Georgia Women

First Formal Exercises Held April 26, 1866.

COLUMBUS, Ga.—(AP)—Memorial day, now set aside in every state in the Union each year, and in many foreign countries, for honoring the dead, had its inception here nearly 65 years ago.

It was on April 26, 1866, that Mrs. John Tyler of Columbus called together a group of her friends for the purpose of forming a Ladies' Memorial association.

Four southern states still hold their Memorial day exercises April 26. They are Georgia, Florida, Mississippi and Alabama. Alabama was the first state officially to observe Memorial day, and New York the first state to declare it a legal holiday.

* *

First Formal Ceremony.

Mrs. Tyler and her friends pledged themselves to "perpetuate as a religious custom to wreathe annually the graves of our martyred dead." With the vow recorded, they went to Linwood cemetery in Columbus and held formal exercises.

Many memorial associations were organized throughout the south, and the spirit of the movement soon seized the people of the north. One New York newspaper observed:

"The women of Columbus have shown themselves impartial in their offerings to the memory of the dead. They strewed flowers alike on the graves of the Confederate and National soldiers."

Idea Sponsored in North.

Gen. John A. Logan, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, gave impetus to the idea in the north. He issued an order May 30, 1868, that every post should hold appropriate exercises and place flowers on the graves of dead comrades.

When the day ultimately became a legal holiday, most states observed it on May 30.

Besides the four states already mentioned which observe "Confederate Memorial day," April 26, the other exceptions are: North and South Carolina, celebrating on May 10, and Louisiana on June 3.

Pulitzer Prize Play Provokes Hot Argument

"Alison's House" Is Bad Choice, Critics Assert.

By Charles Collins.

[and Miss Dickinson, too, for that heroine of this play [she has been dead eighteen years] as something more than an alias for a special case of poetic genius. Alison for me matter] represents a type of American character that used to be prevalent before females became emancipated.

Many a family has had an Alison Stanhope without the posthumous poems. Many an American household has sheltered a sensitive girl who, for some inscrutable reason, has withdrawn from life, shut herself away from all social contacts, and let the years roll by until she withered into eccentric spinsterhood and crumbled silently away. There must have been many thousands of them, although they were too shy to come to the attention of statistics takers. They were the "queer" aunts of the old homesteads, known best to the children of the household. They were the nuns of puritanism.

In "Alison's House" this character finds her place in American drama. The play ought to stimulate a searching of many attics after the papers that "queer" aunts may have left behind. Perhaps there are new Emily Dickinsons to be discovered.

Past Prize Winners.

The controversy over "Alison's House" has caused me to refresh my memory of past Pulitzer prize winners. They were: 1918, "Why Marry?" by Jesse Lynch Williams; 1919, no award because of inferior material; 1920, "Beyond the Horizon," by Eugene O'Neill; 1921, "Miss Lulu Bett," by Zona Gale; 1922, "Anna Christie," by Eugene O'Neill; 1923, "Icebound," by Owen Davis; 1924, "Hell Bent for Heaven," by Hatcher Hughes; 1925, "They Knew What They Wanted," by Sidney Howard; 1926, "Craig's Wife," by George Kelly; 1927, "In Abraham's Bosom," by Paul Green; 1928, "Strange Interlude," by Eugene O'Neill; 1929, "Street Scene," by Elmer Rice; 1930, "The Green Pastures," by Marc Connelly.

I am not convinced that the Pulitzer prize committee was lamentably in error when it added "Alison's House" to this list.

For Sharpshooters.

Writers who deal with the theater arts [including music critics] make frequent use of the word "diction"; and often draw the fire of sharpshooters who insist that the correct word for the intended idea is "enunciation." In order to settle the point for all time, so far as this department is concerned, and to assert my right to write "diction" when I mean diction I shall refer the sharpshooting population to the following definition, which is to be found in Funk & Wagnalls New Standard Dictionary.

"Diction: 1. The use of words or the manner of using them either in literature, oratory, or song; the manner with which anything is expressed in words. It includes articulation, pronunciation, intonation, declamation, and punctuation. 2. Specif. That department of rhetoric which deals with the choice and arrangement of words and modes of expression."

This ought to persuade all of the sharpshooters in the "diction" brigade to abandon their rifle pits.

French Tribute to Belasco

HENRY BERNSTEIN, author of "Melo," French dramatist now making his first visit to this country, has issued a statement regarding the death of David Belasco as representative of the French Society of Authors and Composers. He says:

"The Society of French Authors and Composers, which is the most powerful association of writers in the world and also the most powerful association of theater professionals, has been very deeply moved on hearing of David Belasco's death. Our society wishes to express publicly the profound sympathy of its members for America's loss of the great Belasco.

"We do not forget that David Belasco presented with all his skill and his deep sense of beauty those French plays he deemed worthy of the American public's interest. All who love the theater and seek its greatness should hope to find in every country servants of its art as efficient and inspired as David Belasco."

How Mr. Belasco Died in Harness; Gotham Theaters

Mr. Leiber Wants Stars for Next Season.

NEW YORK, May 23.—[Special.]—The late David Belasco was engrossed in theatrical plans almost until the day of his death, May 14, according to tomorrow's Broadway gossip in the New York Times. On Friday, May 8, six days before the end of his career, he purchased the rights to "The Night Remembers," by Martha Madison, co-author of "Subway Express." He was looking forward joyously to a birthday celebration next July in Atlantic City, for it was his custom to make this anniversary coincide with the tryout of a new production. His office declares, however, that reports that he had a score of plays or more on hand are unfounded.

Max Faetkenheur, business manager of the Chicago Civic Shakespeare company, is in New York with great plans for next season seething in his mind. The Times will say tomorrow:

"On a star hunt through these sections is an agent provocateur for the Chicago Civic Shakespeare society whose plan is to arouse persons of stellar importance to appear in the Fritz Leiber company next season. The search will be carried to London, if necessary, to find for Mr. Leiber some support more lustrous than he has been in the habit of receiving."

A story is going the rounds of Broadway which illustrates in a grotesque manner the economic difficulties of the stage, so far as "the road" is concerned. A play whose "properties" consist only of one barrel and one revolver will not be able to travel, merely because three stage hands, at salaries of $115 a week, would have been required, under union rules, to handle these articles. Efforts to persuade the union to moderate its rules covering this point were unsuccessful; and so the affair has been called off.

Chester Erskin, who staged "He" for the Theater Guild, may put on another play for that organization before he joins the Erlanger forces for full time duty next fall. At least he mentioned this possibility before sailing for Europe last Tuesday. The play in question is "Mother and Son," by Leonard Atlas, author of "The House We Live In." Herman Shumlin was once interested in this manuscript. . . . This Mr. Shumlin, incidentally, is said to be losing his affection for "Pariser Platz, 13," by Vicki Baum, author of "Grand Hotel." He may decide to permit his lien on the American rights to lapse.

Rudy Vallee informed the ladies and gentlemen of the radio audience a few nights ago that he and his fellow musicians will contribute to the program of the forthcoming "Scandals." This summer revue goes into rehearsal two weeks hence.

Jane Cowl will end her season in "Art and Mrs. Bottle" with a week in the New York suburbs, beginning June 8. One of her managers, Joseph Verner Reed, has sailed for England to inspect "Lean Harvest" and "Autumn Crocus," and to decide whether or not these London plays should be seen in America. It's easy to imagine how the Broadway wisecrackers will bear down on the word "crocus" if that play doesn't meet with their approval.

Earl Carroll is shopping for celebrities to appear in his next "Vanities," which will dedicate his new theater. Eddie Cantor is said to have rejected an offer of $7,500 a week. Mr. Carroll is negotiating with the four Marx brothers, who collectively want $10,000 a week.

Encouraged by the success of "Meet My Sister," the Shuberts have acquired another musical piece of this intimate, no chorus type. It is called "Cocktail," and is now pleasing the patrons of the Komödienhaus in Berlin. Ralph Benatzsky, composer of "Meet My Sister," wrote the score. Its story deals with a childless queen, a king who wants an heir, and a third party.

New in Chicago: Operetta, Guild Play, 'The Rap'

"MEET MY SISTER," a musical comedy which has had a long run in New York, began an engagement at the Grand Opera house last night. It is an adaptation of a piece which has had a marked success upon the lyric stage in Europe. The score is by Ralph Benatsky, and the libretto, which deals with a romance between a spirited girl of noble family and a shy, humble professor, has been adapted by Henry Wagstaffe Gribble.

The cast includes Bettina Hall, formerly of "Three Little Girls"; Walter Slezak, son of the opera singer, Leo Slezak, and originator of the rôle of the professor in Germany; Harry Welsh, the comedian who appeared here a year ago in "A Wonderful Night"; David Hutcheson, last seen in "Sons o' Guns"; Olive Olsen, Kay McKay, Boyd Davis, Donald Campbell, Ronald Brown, and several others. "Meet My Sister" is described as an intimate musical play which has no chorus to interrupt its flow of comedy.

"He," a comedy from the French of Alfred Savoir, will have a première at the Illinois theater tomorrow night under the auspices of the Theater Guild. This production is being offered to the Guild's Chicago subscribers and patrons prior to its showing in New York, and marks the final chapter of the Guild's season in this city. The engagement is for three weeks.

"He" derives its title from a mystifying character who appears at a convention of atheists in a Swiss hotel and announces himself to be God. He meets with derision, but his stay is accompanied by a sequence of events which strike the atheists as miraculous. The play tells an unusual story in a vein of lightly satiric comedy.

For the interpretation of "He" the Guild has assembled a notable cast which includes Tom Powers, in the title rôle; Claude Rains, Violet Kemble Cooper, Pedro de Cordoba, Edward Rigby, Edith Meiser, Viola Frayne, Victor Killian, William Gargan, and Robert Su LeSueur. The stage settings were designed by Aline Bernstein.

"The Rap," a play which is described as a mystery melodrama, will begin an engagement at the Studebaker theater next Saturday night, May 30. It comes directly from New York, where it has had a nine weeks' run at the Avon theater. John Peter Leister is the author; Leonard Bergman and Raymond Payton are the producers. The former is a nephew of the late A. L. Erlanger.

The story of "The Rap" is based upon recent exposés in New York of alliances between politics and the criminal classes. The cast includes Helen Tenney, Paul Harvey, Jack Marvin, Ernest Anderson, Robert Shayne, Kenneth Bradshaw, Richard Gregg, and Edwin Vickery.

B'way Openings

NEW YORK, May 23.—[Special.]—Only one première is announced for the Gotham stage next week. The other items recorded below come under the heading of miscellaneous and incidental stage activities:

"Gasoline Gypsies"—Opens Wednesday night at the Lyric. This is a comedy by Charles Conger Stewart; acting in it will be Gene Byron, Dorothy Randall, Gertrude Flynn and Emmett Lynn among others.

"The Legend of the Golem"—Tuesday night at the theater of the New School for Social Research. A play, in the most constructive manner, of medieval religious conflict. Boris S. Glagolin, a Russian director, has staged it, and there will be 25 actors, a troupe of dancers and a choir. The performance will be repeated on Wednesday and Thursday and on June 1, 2 and 3.

"Precedent"—Tuesday night at the Bijou theater. The I. J. Golden play, which has to do with the Mooney-Billings case, will move uptown from the Provincetown theater, where it has been providing fireworks of a sort since mid-April. The original cast, including Clyde Franklin, Royal Dana Tracy, William Bonelli and Kirk Brown, will continue to play it. The settings will be new.

Critic Writes a Last Tribute to David Belasco

Master Showman Was Shy at Heart.

By Burns Mantle.

Admired Catholic Ceremony.

Belasco must always have admired the form and ceremony of the Catholic church. I recall an afternoon, nearly twenty years ago, when he took me on a personally conducted tour of what was then his famous studio atop the Belasco theater.

We had been through one room, 15x15, I should say, filled with his Napoliana. We had seen the collection of rock crystal, the frieze of spears, the paintings and the cabinets of objet d'art. We had sat for a moment at the old English dining room table, imported by Stanford White from a collection handed down by a feudal lord. And we turned suddenly around a pillar and started down what had the appearance of being the chancel of a church in miniature. David walked in front and every foot or two he would press a hidden button and another section would burst into light.

At the end of a fifteen or twenty foot walk we came to a wall shrine. He opened the doors and the interior was flooded with light. A handsome figure of a madonna was the central object and on the wall about the madonna were possibly a hundred rosaries of every conceivable hue and quality—jade and jet, polished ebony and teakwood, ivory and coral.

Showing them, David would stand back with shining eyes and drink in the surprise of the beholder, and then explain: "These were my daughter's [his youngest daughter, Augusta, who was the wife of William Elliott and who had died but a year or so before]; I was a collector and she wanted to be a collector, so she collected these.

"I put them here after she died."

This was the Augusta for whom he ordered that a candle be kept burning in her tomb, because she was always afraid of the dark.

Longed to Die in Harness.

I didn't believe David was afraid of the dark. He had pondered the mysteries and put much of what he had come to believe in "The Return of Peter Grimm." He will come back, if he can, for he loved life. But not for long. He will be ever so curious about the way they are staging things farther on.

His one great wish was, as he often said, to die in harness. He was a little jealous of Sir Henry Irving for having died on the stage. He wanted to be carried out of his theater to the mortician's parlor.

He did not die in harness, but he had his harness polished and ready, hanging on his bedroom wall. He had been reading plays for weeks. He had found one or two he thought something might be done with. He was just about to get the harness down and set to work on a play by Martha Madison and Eva K. Flint, who wrote "Subway Express." "The Night Remembers" was the tentative title.

Not many of us will come that close to getting our last wish.

It is difficult to stop writing about Belasco, once you start, if you have lived the last thirty years of your life in the theater. I came to admire him sincerely, after several years of distrust and suspicion. Not for the plays he produced so much as for the way he produced them and for the standards he set for other showmen to shoot at.

There are many fine entertainments in the Belasco list of plays, and probably not a single fine play in the literary sense. They acted superbly, but they read quite badly. He was, so long as he lived, our master showman. His influence was marked. He was, I think, the last great showman of his and our time.

* *

"If Booth Had Missed."

Which leaves but little room for my report of the week to you. Fortunately, there is but little to report.

The most interesting new play is one called "If Booth Had Missed," by Arthur Goodman. It won the $1,000 prize offered by Samuel French to the annual little theater tournament for long plays.

Originally, you will remember, this tournament was devoted to one-act pieces by amateur groups. This year the one-act play contest was abandoned because of the depression, but five long plays were tried by four home groups and one from Lapeer, Mich. They were the Wigwam players and offered a three-acter called "Side Show."

The Lincoln play starts with the night in Ford's theater, April 14, 1865, when Booth's aim was true. This time his gun arm is thrown up by a colored porter and Lincoln lives.

Thereafter the martyred one is set upon and finally taken, even as his successor, Andrew Johnson, was treated. His own party opposes his reconstruction program. The military heads want an army dictatorship. Grant deserts him. Lincoln finally asks the resignation of Stanton [as Johnson did] and Stanton refuses to resign.

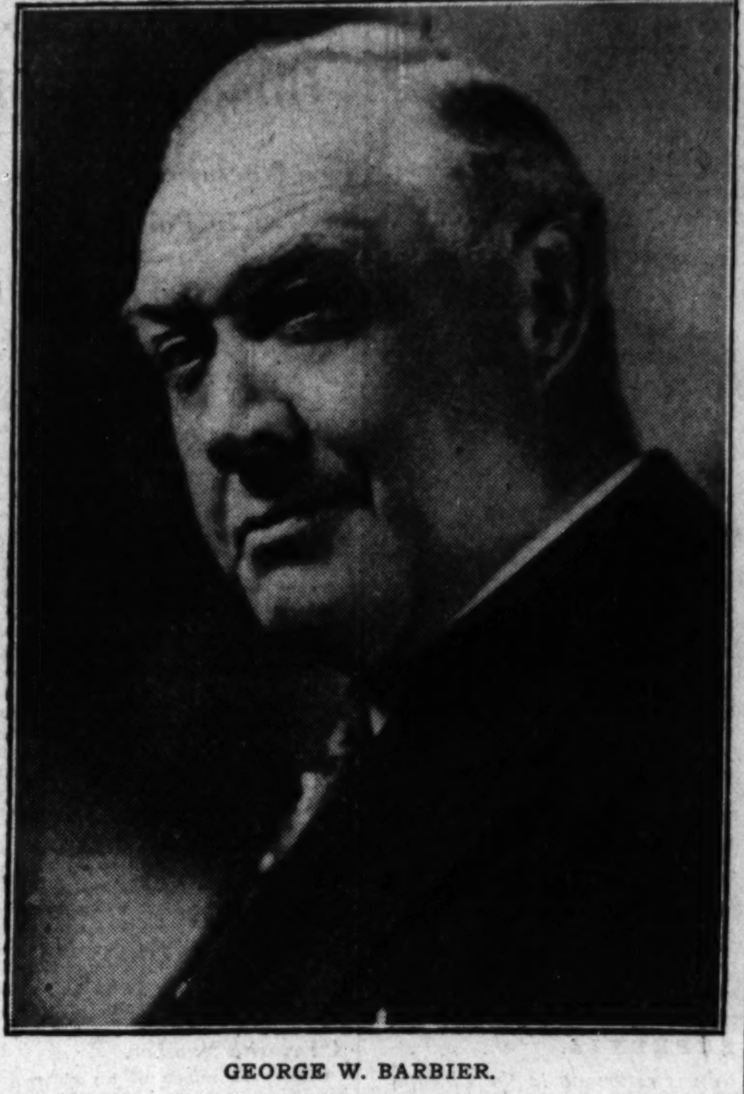
Lincoln is, as Johnson was, thereupon impeached for a violation of the tenure of office act. In a final scene in the senate Lincoln is saved from impeachment by a single vote, after he pleads his own case, but as he rises to thank his supporters a Senator Tilton rises, and crying, "The penalty of treason is death!" shoots him dead.

The play has its dramatic moments, as any Lincoln play must have, and the amateurs did it fairly well. They represented the Morningside players of Columbia university, who also won last season's prize with a piece called "The New Freedom." Nothing has come of that, either.

Saturday Night Premieres.

Apropos the opening of "Meet My Sister" last night at the Grand Opera house, the Messrs. Shubert say that they hope to establish Saturday night openings as regular events for next season, for their musical plays. They feel that there is as much of a demand for gala first nights on Saturday as on Sunday.

"GRATITUDE" COMEDIAN



GEORGE W. BARBIER.

THIS veteran comedian is one of the reasons why "That's Gratitude" is having a long run at the Blackstone theater. His character study of a soft-hearted and soft-headed business man of the middle west is mellow with humor. When he finishes with this play he will go into "pictures"; but next season will probably find him on the legitimate stage again, with the rank of a star.

Old School of Stage Producers Almost Extinct

NEW YORK, May 23.—(AP)—William A. Brady remains as the leader of the old guard of producers with the passing of David Belasco. Nearly all except Brady are gone now—Belasco, Charles Frohman, Klaw and Erlanger, and the others.

Brady still remains active, working as hard as he did in the days when he managed prize fighters in the daytime and rehearsed shows at night. He produces and directs—and even as recently as 1927 he acted the leading rôle in "A Free Soul." Two seasons ago he made a fortune off "Street Scene."

Belasco's death ended the school of realistic producers. When he had a play calling for a drawing room, he actually built a drawing room. There would be actual books in the book cases, real flowers in the vases, and good, solid furniture in the room.

The newer schools of production, headed by Robert Edmond Jones and Lee Simonson, are not so much for realism as for suggestivism. For instance, in "Miracle at Verdun" a cenotaph and a dozen crosses suggested a huge cemetery. Belasco would have built an actual cemetery on the stage.

The two Broadway premières of this week were an Irish comedy and a revue. Arthur Sinclair and Marie O'Neill, veterans of the Dublin stage, returned in the comedy, "Old Man Murphy." It is the work of Patrick Kearney and Harry Wagstaff Gribble.

Billy Rose brings out his second revue in "Crazy Quilt," with Phil Baker, Ted Healy and Fannie Brice as stars. It is a smart summer show, and rarely does it drop down among the mediocre and dull.

"Tom" Show for Benefit.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" will be acted at the Goodman theater tomorrow night by the University of Chicago Dramatic association. The performance will be for the benefit of the University Settlement. This famous old play, which has passed into American folklore, has become practically extinct on the professional stage.

Play Festival

BLANCHE YURKA; Tom Powers, Violet Heming and Martha Graham have been engaged for a dramatic festival to be held at the Lydia Mendelssohn theater, Ann Arbor, Mich., from May 25 to June 27. Robert Henderson, in association with George Coulouris, will stage the program of six plays.

Miss Yurka will appear in Sophocles' "Electra" and will take Lynn Fontanne's rôle in "Caprice." Mr. Powers and Miss Heming have been cast for the principal rôles in Noel Coward's "Private Lives" and "The Way of the World," by Congreve. Mr. Powers will be seen also as Bluntschli in Shaw's "Arms and the Man." The sixth play will be Strindberg's "The Father."

Succeeds Eva Le Gallienne.

Gale Sondergaard has replaced Eva Le Gallienne in the cast of Susan Glaspell's "Alison's House," in New York. This is the second time Miss Sondergaard has stepped into a Pulitzer prize play in the midst of its engagement. She replaced Judith Anderson in "Strange Interlude" when Miss Anderson left the cast of O'Neill's play in the middle of the Chicago run. She is the wife of Herbert Biberman, stage director with the Theater Guild.

Star Willingly Lends Name to Business Firm

Commercial Enterprises Swell Film Salary.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Discoveries of oil at the seaside resort community of Venice have made wealthy people of several picture stars. Foremost among these are Mae Murray, Lewis Stone, and Madge Bellamy. Mae Murray now has five wells spouting liquid gold on her beach property. A casual drive about the environs of the little town not far from Hollywood reveals huge derricks and oil tanks where formerly the stars used to bask in the sun and swim in the gentle breakers of the Pacific.

A Sunday afternoon drive is bound to be well sprinkled with signs advertising this and that commercial enterprise of film celebrities. Practically all of the stars are willing to lend their names to enterprises that will return them some value commercially.

In Cahuenga pass one sees an elaborate modernistic sign on the front of a much fussed up and fancy tiled beauty parlor. Esther Ralston owns it and her name appears in big letters over the combination beauty parlor, Turkish bath, swimming tank, and gymnasium enterprise.

Noah Beery Trout Club.

Along Vine street and also around the corner on Hollywood boulevard are signs advertising the Noah Beery Trout club. Little fish, big speckled fish, and various crustaceans flounder around in an outdoor water tank with glass sides, used as an ad for the trout club.

Out Wilshire boulevard one finds many picture names in a few blocks. Mary Pickford's name is over a miniature golf club furnished with modernistic trees, and tables, and chairs. A few blocks further on is the Jackie Coogan golf course.

Ruth Roland's Trout Fishing club occupies a whole block. It is landscaped with huge cataracts and pools in which the passer-by may catch trout, which will be broiled at a little restaurant on the club grounds.

A traveler passing down the ocean highway towards Laguna is confronted with Hallam Cooley's name in large letters. Cooley is in the real estate business down that way.

Raymond Griffith has developed a fine "Drive In" open air market where you may buy anything edible, and such fancies as floor wax, mops, flowers, clothes line, soap, and shoe polish.

Recently Raised Prices.

Ronald Colman and Lew Cody both have money invested in tonsorial parlors. Lew also owns a drug store. Charles Bickford owns a huge garage, filling station, and parking station opposite the M-G-M studios in Culver City. It is doing so well he recently raised prices.

Belle Bennett presides with a motherly air, no longer in demand on the screen, at "Grandma's Farm," out on Ventura boulevard, where you may get choice fried chicken. Bill Haines has a charming and profitable antique shop on La Brea, just off Hollywood boulevard.

Jetta Goudal and her husband, Harold Grieve, are doing very well in the interior decorating business. Jetta is to make a picture at Fox soon, the first in a long time.

Corinne Griffith recently opened her Victor Hugo market in Beverly Hills with a regular movie première.

Charles Chaplin will never lack for a meal as long as his friend and fellow actor, Henry Bergman, runs Henry's restaurant on Hollywood boulevard. Charlie has stock in it.

To Open First Automat.

Howard Hughes has added another industry to his oil, tool business, motion picture producing, and theater constructing enterprises. He and Harold Franklin have approved plans for the construction and opening of the first automatic restaurant in the west. It will be built on Vine street, Hollywood. With so many actors out of work an automat should become the most popular eating house on the boulevard.

The financial clouds that hovered over Eugene V. Brewster and Corliss Palmer ever since they came to Hollywood from New York to launch Miss Palmer on a film career lowered again recently. The Brewster's auctioned off a residence on Hollywood drive which they had bought [illegible] years ago in more prosperous times. The results of the sale, Brewster sadly announced, produced little more than required to pay taxes on that and another little piece of property here which he still holds.

The Brewsters have moved into a small cottage on Selma avenue. Through, or maybe because of, adversity the one time multimillionaire publisher and the beautiful Macon, Ga., girl whom he took as a protégée remain as devotedly in love as during the heyday of their romance.

Embarrassing Moments

What was the most embarrassing moment of your life? If you care to have it published address Embarrassing Moments, Chicago Tribune. Please write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

A Mistake in Identity.

One rainy day I got off the train, opened up my trusty old umbrella, and started for home. Just a few feet ahead of me I spied the familiar shuffling figure of my uncle. Catching up to him, I tapped him on the back and said, "Uncle Alex, you dear old man, aren't you afraid of getting wet? You had better walk under my umbrella."

At the sound of my voice the old gentleman turned around, and to my horror and embarrassment I saw that he was a stranger. I mumbled something about "making a mistake" and hurried away as fast as I could.

Perfumed Eggs for the Guest.

Not long ago I had a sample of a new kind of cold cream given me. Wanting the jar I put the cream in a cup, which somehow got in the ice box and was forgotten.

One Sunday morning, having a guest whom I was eager to impress with my culinary ability, I decided to fry the eggs in butter. Noticing that my efforts seemed to be going unrewarded I began to look for the reason.

Imagine my chagrin when I found that I had used face cream and the eggs were highly perfumed. F. B.

Impressing the Boy Friend.

Recently I purchased some sweet rolls. After returning to the office I proceeded to wrap them more securely in order to carry them home. While so doing my fingers became quite sticky from the sugar and cinnamon.

In the meantime a young man on whom I had tried to make a good impression in the past, and whom I had not seen for some time, came into the office, a fact of which I was unaware at the time. I started out to wash my hands when he jumped up and jokingly held out his to me. There was nothing else for me to do but politely grasp it, with my sticky paw. He said nothing, but I still wonder what he thought. That was my most embarrassing moment. H. J.

A Jovial Recognition.

One afternoon I came to Chicago on the elevated. As we neared the city a drunken man boarded the same car. I have been told that I look very much like President Hoover—as a matter of fact my friends call me "Herbie."

This intoxicated man finally noted the resemblance and in a voice so loud all the occupants of the car could hear him, called attention to me by saying: "Why, just look at that fellow. He looks like Hoover. I'll bet he is one of his relations."

Imagine my embarrassment with all the people gazing at me and the drunken man talking on and on until his station was called. H. O. T

Harsh Words for Minnie.

I had spent most of a hot spring afternoon in my garden, spading and planting. Feeling quite proud of myself, I went out after supper to view the result of my labor. What a picture met my sight! There in the middle of one bed was "Minnie," our little boy's pet chicken, and seed and soil were flying in every direction.

Just then beyond the fence I saw our neighbor in her garden. And the look she gave me! Her name was Minnie. I turned and fled, too embarrassed for explanations.

A. L. G.

Due to a Slight Misunderstanding.

A lady belonging to our church phoned one day and, as I understood her, said: "Will you bake two jelly cakes this week?" I unhesitatingly agreed.

Imagine my feeling when just in the midst of the baking she arrived and sai[d]: "Here are the two delegates you were so kind as to take in your home this week and keep for us."

O. M.

Typing Was Perfect.

I experienced my most embarrassing moment shortly after I got a position with a real estate firm. My employer came to my desk one afternoon with three gentlemen and gave me an important form to be filled out in quadruplicate. They were in a hurry for it and I was told to be careful in filling it out, as there could be no erasures.

I arranged the papers in my machine and after fifteen minutes of careful typing according to the dictation of my employer, while the others stood at my desk and waited, I carefully took the sheets out, delighted that due to my care I hadn't made a single mistake. But my delight soon changed to terrible embarrassment—I had placed the carbon paper wrong side up and the printing appeared on the back of each sheet instead of on the front.

Italian Scions Plan to Follow Fathers' Lives

Prince and Mussolini's Son Train for Power.

ROME.—(AP)—In marked contradiction to the United States, President's sons go to business school and scions of banking families are orchestra leaders, the sons of most Italian leaders plan lives like those of their fathers.

Prince Umberto and Bruno Mussolini, Italy's most famous sons of famous fathers, are treading the exact footsteps their parents took before them.

The prince, who will one day rule Italy from the throne of his father, King Victor Emmanuel, is getting a thorough training in court and military life.

Holds Colonel's Office.

He is a full colonel of a line regiment, stationed at Turin, and will fill, as a practical officer, the post of commander in chief of the Italian armies. His career was cut out for him at birth, as was his father's.

Bruno, 13 year old son of the duce, has embraced early the same career that led his father to his post as head of the Italian government and founder and leader of Fascism.

Already he is an editor. A short time ago he founded a paper, the Boys' Pen, which has a growing circulation among Fascist youths.

He is getting a sound background of Fascist political thought and will undoubtedly hold a governmental post when he grows older.

* *

Carving Political Career.

Another example is the career of Galeazzo Ciano, son of the minister of communications and son-in-law of Mussolini. While not yet holding a portfolio, he is carving a career in his government's service. He has chosen diplomacy and is at present stationed at Shanghai.

Other cases of sons following their fathers into the government are somewhat harder to find, since most of Mussolini's aids are young men, well on the sunny side of 50, and their sons, if they have them, are still in the romper stage.

Berlin Dancers Halt as Fiddler Collects His Pay

BERLIN.—(AP)—The wild wave of dancing that swept Germany after the war, reaching its crest about the time one dollar could buy four trillion marks, has now sunk to a ripple.

Just a few months ago there still was life in the old cry "On with the dance!" But 1931 really is "economy year" in Germany, and millions of people, instead of dancing, are paying the fiddler.

Ballrooms seldom are packed any more, and the frothier side of the nation's amusement industry has wilted under the high luxury taxes like a paper flower in the rain.

Latest among the pleasure palaces to go into bankruptcy is the Palais de Danse, rendezvous of Berlin's snobbiest set before war.

After the revolution is became an expensive place of relaxation for any one who had the money, and even after few Germans felt they could afford to visit it tourist gold from other lands kept it going. But now that isn't enough to pay the overhead.

And there are other flashy establishments of the sort that look empty enough these nights to suggest that they, too, will have to turn off the glittering lights and fire the jazz orchestra.

Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

DO you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or aged complexion is one fair to look upon? Nature causes the normal skin to peel off in tiny, unseen, flour-like particles, a little each day, renewing the complexion of youth naturally, but there comes a time when this skin shedding slows up. Worry, overwork, sickness, inactivity are reasons that cause the face to be blotchy, discolored, pimply and old looking. The thing to do, if you wish to look your prettiest at all times, is to assist nature in the process of absorption by using pure Mercolized Wax. Get an ounce at any drug store or beauty counter and use as directed. It gently but surely peels away the outer scarf skin, removing freckles, pimples, blackheads or a muddy complexion. The underneath skin, now in evidence, is clear, pink, fresh and velvety, and the entire face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty.

To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines we recommend a face lotion of unusual merit. One ounce powdered saxolite and one-half pint witch hazel.

SHE appears as one of the three comic Muses in "Stepping Sisters," at the Cort theater. Her burlesque characterization of an ex-chorus girl posing as a queen of Shakespearean tragedy is rich with mirth.

Japanese Wives Arrange Code for Husbands

Urge Quieter Manipulation of Chopsticks.

TOKIO. — (AP) — Japanese women have grown weary of the old, old custom of "yesing" their men folk all day long. In the new order of affairs the formerly demure, kimono clad wife has become so bold that she even dares to give her husband advice now and then.

The Fujokai or Women's World, in its stand for more rights for the housewife, has compiled a code of laws for husbands, covering jealousy, finance, home administration, health clothing, food, children, and other subjects.

Some of the "don'ts" for husbands, as arranged by the women-staff members of the Fujokai, follow:

"Don't be a killjoy all your life. Crack a joke once in a while, even if it isn't very funny. Why confine your wisecracks to your friends?

* *

Suggested Attentions.

"Don't crack your chopsticks against the bowl while eating. You're apt to get on your wife's nerves.

"Don't ignore her wishes. If she suggests that you go together to a department store, go, even though you can think of nothing quite so boring. On the way back, stop for something to eat or drink. She'll like that.

"No matter how much you love your wife, give her a vacation from you now and then. Never loaf about the house all day, you may be in the way.

"If she happens to look pretty, don't forget to tell her so. If she isn't particularly pretty, tell her so anyhow. It won't hurt you.

* *

Celebration for Birthdays.

"Don't forget her birthday. Stage a little celebration of it each year.

"Don't reprimand her bitterly when she has simply forgotten to sew a missing button on your clothes. She'll snap back at you and then something is bound to happen.

"Never lie to your wife. You mustn't get her in the habit of disbelieving you. Some day you may really want her to believe you.

"Remember that your wife has a right to an opinion, too. Of course, it may be wrong, but it's hers anyhow."

Soviet and British Build Brisk Trade Around Galoshes

MOSCOW.—(AP)—Galoshes, 42,500,000 pair of them, are on this year's program of the soviet rubber trust. The schedule also calls for 800,000 automobile tires and tubes.

The raw rubber for these products will come from English concerns, but the government is experimenting with rubber plantations in the southern Caucasus near Batum, and hopes some day to be independent of outside sources.

Until then the British will be the winner in both the import and export part of the trade. While every one in Russia seems to have a pair of galoshes, and they are absolute necessities in this climate, large quantities are exported.

In fact Russian galoshes sell in England for about $2.50 a pair whereas this winter at the shop here where only foreigners may trade, the price was around $10.

France Votes $100,000 to Build Foch's Tomb

PARIS.—(AP)—A credit of $100,000 has been voted for a tomb for Marshal Foch, who led the allies to victory in the world war.

The tomb will be in the Invalides, close to the resting place of Napoleon. It will measure 12 feet in height and will take two years to complete.

ARMCHAIR PLAYGOER

By Fanny Butcher.

LONDON has been excited about a dramatization of "Dark Hester," Anne Douglas Sedgwick's novel of 1929. It was done by Walter Ferris, who did the final adaptation of "Death Takes a Holiday," which, by the way, is having a revival in New York. The revival started last Monday night.

ANNE DOUGLAS SEDGWICK.

You may read the acting version of the Casella play, if you missed it when it played here, or if you want to live over that excellent second act. The last act and the first act read less well than they play. The second has a good deal of the thrill of the action in its printed word.

But to come back to "Dark Hester." The acting version isn't promised for publication, but the novel is waiting for every one. It is a study of the clash of two temperaments, that of the mother and the wife of a young man. The mother is "Victorian," as the wife calls her, only in the sense that she has certain delicacies of thought, manner and ideals which are completely alien to the wife who, as the mother thinks her, is hard, cold, often bitter, "dark," as her mother-in-law believes her to be.

They are as opposite in temperament as any two women could possibly be, and yet neither one is really right about the other. The mother worked to support her son, was independent in days when independence for women was almost a career in itself. Her daughter-in-law considers her tact and her gentleness weakness, and fails to see the strength which made her face a difficult life.

The daughter-in-law, "Dark Hester," has an honesty of outlook, a fairness in dealing with her husband and her child and her life which, to the older woman, is incomprehensibly cold. There you are.

The novel would have been a better novel if the author hadn't made her readers feel all along that she was being so fair with her characters that she was determined her readers should learn the lesson that there would be less misery in the world if people tried harder to understand one another.

As a record of a classic struggle between the two women who love a man it is memorable. The play has not elicited unqualified praise, although two scenes—one in which the mother and the son quarrel about the wife, and one in which the wife says good-by to the man who had once been her lover, were hailed as great emotional drama.

Australia Changes Code.

CANBERRA. — (AP) — Because confidential cable messages between Prime Minister Scullin, when he was in London, and members of his ministry in Australia mysteriously found their way into the newspapers Australia's cable code has been changed.

THE PENALTY of GRAY HAIR

Gray hair—age—slipping. All these unpleasant ideas seem to go together. Yet, it is not at all necessary. Gray Hair often comes to a young head and people who have it are neither old nor incapable. But how often you hear people say, "Why, she has gray hair!" and—she is on the shelf.

This penalty need no longer handicap the woman who uses Canute Water. This is a clear, spring-like water, of wonderful properties which actually restore hair to its original girlhood color. No complicated "color plan"; no danger of getting brunette shade when your hair is blonde. Not only the one kind but the one bottle is enough. It really is surprisingly what successful, youthifying results it gives.

Apply Canute Water yourself, in the privacy of your own home. Many women in town are doing the same thing; they simply do not mention it. You need not mention it either. Just buy a bottle from any good druggist—and get rid of the "age-penalty" in gray hair. Canute Water is so safe, so scientific and sure that your dealer knows it will satisfy you; if not, he will refund your money. Sold and recommended by Boston Store, The Fair, Owl or Walgreen's, or your own druggist. — The Canute Co., Milwaukee, Wis.—Adv.

VOICE OF THE FAN

If you would like your letters printed in this column please write on ONE side of the paper ONLY. If you want a personal answer send stamped, self-addressed envelope—PLEASE.

Puts No Money on Garbo.

Dear Mae Tinée: Wouldn't this world be a sad place instead of the happy one it is, if we all liked the same things? Go on, Mae, darlin', leave your Garbo in peace and pat her back all you want to, I like you, and your reviews and your style, but I do not like Garbo or her so-called style which, to me, is nothing but an affected, insincere pose, and I know right well that you don't expect us to swallow her as art just because you like her.

She bored me enough in "A Woman of Affairs" to last my whole life. How many years ago that was, yet, I have never spent a cent to see her since and never will. Of course, I cannot always escape the advance notices advertising the coming of another of her bromides, so I have heard her supposed to be ravishing voice. It falls as raucously on my ears as that of a New York stevedore cussing the far away growers who inadvertently shipped a tarantula in the bunch of bananas he is unloading. What? You've never heard one? Well, you've heard a couple of peddlers yell "strawberries" "ice" up and down Chicago alleys, haven't you? Garbo's voice is exactly as melodious [?] to me.

"Disgusted Reader" who plays at hating you, and I, who sincerely admire you and dote on the reviews he despises, have a good deal in common after all. Only, I'm willing that those who like Garbo, rave and spend their four bits over her all they please. That, to my notion, is their business, and I wouldn't waste good postage to tell her I wish M. G. M. would tie a can to her posing. Life's too short to get that hot and bothered over things not directly my business.

C. W.

Editor's note: You are a broad woman, I see [I mean, mentally].

Still the Mythical Kingdom.

Dear Miss Tinée: In your review of "The Front Page" I noticed that you said, "In other cities and in the films the background is still unhesitatingly mentioned as the 'Windy City.'" This town I am temporarily in probably comes under the category of "the sticks," but when "The Front Page" was shown here the mythical kingdom note was shown and Chicago was not mentioned.

I would like to comment on Mrs. M. L. S.'s letter. In my opinion (coming to here) you do not criticize pictures harshly enough. What the movies in general need more than anything else is more analytical, challenging criticism. Good pictures and good actors can bear it—the other kind deserve no better. Sincerely,

L. A. L.

Editor's note: Thanks for the information and your interest in general.

Synopsis for German Talkies.

My dear Miss Tineé: German talkies seem to be becoming quite the thing, yet you regret that you do not understand them. Why don't you use your influence to have the theaters prefix a synopsis of the whole thing or of each part?

Yours truly,
M. J. FINK.

Editor's note: When I get some, I will.

Valentino's Successor.

Mae Dear: Too bad you are not still using stars. You could pick out a fine little star for your write up about "Daybreak." Why not use all the stars and give Ramon about ten? Do not forget he might go to a monastery, and he aspires to Valentino's crown. He has all the late lamented Italian had—plus a delightful sense of humor. He can talk and sing—well, maybe not as well as some of our grand opera boys, but he seems to please a few of us ordinary beings. And really, Mae, I think he is just as good looking.

ONE OF YOUR EX-ADMIRERS.

[Until I was razzed because I thought you could "critic."]

Editor's note: Who dared to razz you? Mama 'pank!

How the Cards Are Stacked.

Dear Miss Tinée: I know that you get a pleasant kick out of publishing the righteous appeal of the mother who signs herself "Mrs. M. L. S." for more decent pictures that can be viewed by children, and then turning the page over and praising a filthy popular picture and branding as "art" the work of the director in bringing into the film things that have no place in any picture which you merely term as "coarseness."

If Mrs. M. L. S. knew how the cards are stacked against her, she would waste no time in appealing to you for aid in the renovation of the movie industry. Mrs. M. L. S. does not know that the "review" published in THE TRIBUNE is the best advertising that any picture can get in Chicago and that no important movie house would permit you to give an unfavorable write up of a picture they have booked.

It perhaps never occurred to Mrs. M. L. S. that a drink of gin and a twenty dollar note would bring praise through the "review" column of any picture and that some of them are actually written by the press agents of "stars" and advertising agents of the theater. Very respectfully,

NOT A "FAN"

Editor's Note: Are you proud of yourself?

Dear Mae: If it must be "on one side of the paper only"—here goes. Give M. T. a pat on the back for me. "Them's my sentiments," too, about "Cimarron." I've seen it three times, and I felt the same thrill go through me each time as it unfolded before my eyes.

It is THE picture of the year—of the ages. Richard Dix's performance will live in my mind all the rest of my life. I can never forget Yancey Cravat. I was so blinded by tears each time I saw "Cimarron" that I never really saw him die.

I would call him "the Finest Actor on the Screen Today."

ELEANOR CLARK.

Editor's Note: Wonder if Richard's ears are burning!

Underground Railway Has Strange Murder.

By Mae Tinee.

well till the time comes to shoo it out into the open.

Photography and sound are commendable and you get the illusion of traveling underground. I read somewhere that the subway stations aren't the lifelike reproductions they might be, but I don't know, being an infrequent visitor to New York. They suited me, all right.

"The Subway Express" isn't one of the world's greatest mystery thrillers, but it is passing fair, and ISN'T a gangster picture. It'll keep you guessing—that's a cinch.

Banner Musical Show.

With last Thursday's performance, "Fine and Dandy," at the Erlanger theater, reached the 300 mark. The show opened at the Colonial theater, Boston, on Sept. 1, 1930, and after two weeks in that city played in New York until May 2 of this year. At the time of its departure from Broadway it was the longest run musical show on the street. Over this long period "Fine and Dandy" has averaged a weekly business slightly in excess of $30,000, which is an undisputed record for the current theatrical season. "Three's a Crowd," its nearest competitor, will end its New York run on June 6, about a dozen performances short of the "Fine and Dandy" record.

Gotham Society in Evidence at Belmont Races

Lovely Clothes on Display at Turf and Field.

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—We have had several days of racing at Belmont Park already, and it is quite pleasant to be able to report that this bids fair to be one of the most successful race meetings of recent years—speaking, of course, from a social point of view. Every one has been croaking dismally that society in New York is in a bad way and that this summer will be a frightful example of the deeps to which the gay set has descended. Newport, the sad ones say, will be utterly dead and Southampton quieter than Wall street on a Sunday—in other than boom years.

Tush for their prophecies! It appears that if any group is determined to carry on and smile bravely it is society in gay Gotham. Not in years have I seen such interest taken in any social gathering, nor such a display of costly and lovely clothes.

I have often said that the reason society in New York does not patronize its annual events is because the settings are so horrible. The one bright exception is Belmont, and society most certainly show its appreciation. Since the opening of the spring meeting there hasn't been a single day that the Turf and Field club has not been crowded for luncheon. The old Manice house, set in its wide lawns amid clustering oaks and pines and old maples, is the rendezvous of every one of note. Tables are set out on the porches and on the broad lawns and between the band numbers one can catch the sound of the crowd around the course.

A Fashion Parade.

Only at Belmont does society take its racing calmly and with enjoyment. Between races there is a perfect fashion parade from the grandstand to the paddock. Every one strolls easily across the green, past the great trees to the open paddock, and stops to chat with trainers and friends while the horses are being readied for the next race.

The women of society have rather taken the upper hand in racing. Since the passing of the Whitney brothers and R. T. Wilson, those great stables are under the leadership of little Mrs. Payne Whitney and of the still impressive Mrs. Dicky Wilson, who has given up most of her bohemian ideas and gone in for carrying on her husband's colors.

Then, of course, there is Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt, but she has rather been forced out of the limelight by Mrs. Whitney of late.

Younger Element Seen.

The younger element is out in force at Belmont, as well, taking things easy until the time comes when their own horses will be running. The lovely Mrs. Francis Hitchcock, erstwhile Mary Atwell, and wife of the son of the senior Thomas Hitchcocks, has been much in evidence all week. Mary's brother, George Atwell, who married Jean Cochrane, daughter of Princess Hohenlohe-Schillingfurst, is quietly getting ready to start his own stable, possibly with a nucleus from the horses of Jean's father, Gifford Cochrane.

Then there are Jack Whitney and Cornelius Whitney and some half dozen others of the younger members of society who are determined to see their colors flashing under the wire at Belmont.

Blue a Favored Color.

Sartorially the meet has produced a deal of pleasure. For one thing, it has made plain that blue is the favored color, though brown follows it closely. Natalie Mae Coe, a deb of last season, wore blue this week, as did Mary Parker Corning and Mrs. John H. G. Pell, the former Pyrma Tilton.

Mrs. Robert Livingston Clarkson was another adherent of blue, as were the Brokaw sisters, Edna and Peggy. Mrs. George W. Harris of the Tuxedo Park clan, who never misses a Belmont meeting, wore a blue crepe suit, and had a splendid silver fox about her shoulders.

Others who have attended this week and given the lie to the sad ones are Mrs. Dodge Sloane, Mrs. Howard Brokaw, Mrs. John Aspegren, Mrs. Thomas Welles Durant, Mrs. William A. Prime, Mrs. Marjorie Oelrichs, Mrs. E. F. Hutton, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Bullard, Mr. and Mrs. F. Ashton De Peyster, Mrs. G. Oliver Iselin, and Mr. and Mrs. C. Perry Beadleston.

Guests Entertain at Hot Springs, Va.

HOT SPRINGS, Va.—[Special.]—Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Bullard of Chicago were among the arrivals here this week.

Mrs. George T. Langhorne entertained at The Cascades at luncheon. Other hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Snowden Redfield, Mrs. Ned Arden Flood, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Lewis, and Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Hoskins.

Also here are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Atterbury McGinley, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Perkins, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Bragg, Mrs. William Danforth, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Hatch.

West Virginia Resort Popular

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va.—[Special.]—Among those entertaining here this week were Mr. and Mrs. George F. Brownell, who gave a luncheon at the Casino. Their guests included Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Bernet and Mr. and Mrs. Michael Gallagher.

Others arriving include Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Green, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Butler and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Sommers.

Famous French Gardens Owned by Chicagoan

Mme. Dupuy Lives in Chateau de Clagny.

By May Birkhead.

PARIS.—[Special.]—A former Chicago woman, now an outstanding figure in the French capital and recently much in the public eye, has one of the finest gardens in Versailles.

Mme. Paul Dupuy, formerly Helen Browne of Chicago and New York, received much attention recently in connection with the marriage of her handsome daughter, Gladys, to Prince Guy de Polignac, scion of a distinguished French family. Mme. Dupuy, who is an active force in Paris journalism, lives in that quarter of Versailles which began to be developed just before the French revolution, but which has had its principal expansion from the days of the second empire to the present time.

The Dupuy property, the Château de Clagny, stands on the site of what was once the celebrated, not to say notorious, Château de Clagny which Louis XIV. in about the year 1670 ordered built for his reigning royal favorite, Mme. de Montespan. This château, which was demolished under Louis XV., rivaled in its heyday the architectural beauty and decorative magnificence, if not the size, of the royal palace of Versailles itself. The De Clagny gardens, like those of the kingly château, were outlined by the celebrated Le Notre.

Belongs to Garden Club.

Mme. Dupuy is a member of that exclusive society, Les Amateurs des Jardins, which has just decided, after electing Ambassador and Mrs. Walter E. Edge and several Parisian nobilities, to limit its membership to 275. Next month Mme. Dupuy will have her fellow members of this group visit Château de la Maye for inspection of her superb gardens, which have recently been re-created by the well known Parisian expert, Henri du Chesne. M. du Chesne also laid out the wonderful gardens of the Paris home of Baroness Eugene de Rothschild, who is American by birth, being the former Kitty Spotswood.

Mme. Dupuy has rented for the month of May the Château de la Garoupe for her daughter's honeymoon. This show place of the Riviera happens to be well known to Chicagoans through the fact that Mrs. Jacob Baur and Mrs. Charles Chadwick rented it last summer and did much entertaining there. They have taken it again this year for August.

A Beautiful Panorama.

Situated on the southernmost point of Cap d'Antibes, it is afforded a fine view in every direction. The superb panorama flung out about this region explains its choice for magnificent homes. The château was built by the present owner, Lord Aberconway, and carries out typical provincial architecture. It is filled with rare old Italian furniture, and its mantelpieces are surmounted by Della Robia decoration, while the bedrooms have access to a pillared loggia overlooking the Mediterranean. Several Americans have taken this château in recent years, among others the late Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer and latterly that connoisseur of furniture and beautiful vistas, the former Elsie de Wolfe, now Lady Mendl.

Among Chicagoans now in Paris are Mrs. Edward Litsinger and her daughter, Eleanor, who plan to motor to Budapest and Vienna through the Switzerland and Italian lakes, returning to Paris by mid-July.

Flower Festival Will Draw Many to Asheville, N. C.

ASHEVILLE, N. C.—[Special.]—The fourth annual rhododendron fête, an event which is always of interest to Chicago visitors in Asheville, will be held this year on June 24, 25, and 26. The festival dates have been set later in accordance with the expected height of the blooming period of the mountain shrubs, which cover whole mountain slopes with their flowers, during the latter part of June.

In addition to the floral spectacle presented by the rhododendrons, mountain laurel, and azaleas, the program of the festival itself this year includes a colorful floral parade, a brilliant rhododendron pageant in which 1,000 people will take part, the jesters' revel, a Mardi Gras event; speed boat races on Beaver lake, and other interesting activities. Beautiful girls, chosen from the student bodies of southern universities, will attend the festival and take part as state sponsors in the coronation of the 1931 rhododendron king and queen.

Among recent arrivals from Chicago at the Battery Park hotel are Miss Virginia Dawson, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Swain and son, Mr. and Mrs. Paul J. Bass, and Edward E. Collins. Also there are Dr. and Mrs. John B. Colwell and Charles W. Groves of Champaign, Ill., and Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Pennock of Oak Park, Ill.

At the George Vanderbilt hotel are I. G. Howe, L. S. Armstrong, and Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Wiswell of Chicago.

Earl Mattison of Chicago is a recent arrival at the Jenkins hotel.

Guests at Grove Park inn include Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Lewis of Evanston, Miss Mary Ann Mudd and Miss Gertrude Mudd of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Conley of Ravinia, Miss Conley of Ravinia, Mrs. Sam G. Goss Sr. and Mrs. George Tracy of Glencoe, Ill.; C. A. Fleming of Chicago, George H. Johnson of Joliet, Ill., and Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Wood Jr., Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Kelly, and A. Dudley Kelly of Evanston, Ill.

Recent arrivals at the Asheville Biltmore hotel include Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Kelly and A. Dudley Kelly of Evanston, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Wehr, Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Speer, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Badgley and daughters, A. W. Hammett, and Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Werner of Chicago.

'It's So Hard to Find Husband,' Complains the Betrothed Ileana

BUCHAREST.—(AP)—Princess Ileana, she of the lilting name and venturesome disposition, is betrothed.

Ever since she was 15 years old, and that was seven years ago, the question of a husband for her has been one of the stock subjects for Rumanian and European gossip. The list of engagements that have been rumored constitutes an almost complete directory of the remaining crown princes of the old world, with a few dukes and plain princes thrown in for good measure.

No Throne Ambitions.

There were rumors at the time that Dowager Queen Marie was disappointed at failure of plans to match Ileana with King Boris of Bulgaria. She married her two elder daughters to kings, her namesake Marie being queen of Jugo-Slavia, while Elizabeth is consort of George, ex-king of Greece.

Ileana herself has never had any ambition for a throne. Perhaps the troubles of Elizabeth, who had to manage on an income of $10,000 a year after her dethronement, until her father willed her a quarter of a million, had something to do with this.

At any rate, the youngest daughter has said that she is tired of royalty.

"It is so hard to find a husband," she once complained.

The man of her choice, the second to whom she has promised her hand, is Archduke Anton of Austria. He is a working aviator, the decline of royal fortunes after the war having forced him to earn his living as a test pilot and airplane factory consultant in Spain.

Rift in Last Romance.

Ileana's friends hope there will be no such unfortunate denouement to this engagement as she experienced

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark.

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, July 20, 1877.

DEAR JULIA:

It is very warm here, and I should be glad if we were about to start off on a vacation trip, but we shall not leave Chicago this summer, as we hope to go to Europe in the autumn, and must save our pennies.

Church services are sparsely attended this weather, so many are out of town. We were at a union gathering today, three or four churches having united for morning service. Will and I have been laughing over a slip of the tongue made by the earnest young visiting preacher who occupied our pulpit.

In announcing the evening service he said: "The pulpit will be occupied this evening by the Rev. Dr. So-and-So, whose topic will be 'The Devil.' He is said to be full of his subject, so the sermon will be worth listening to."

Looking over at the Skinner pew, I saw that fun loving family trying hard not to laugh, but Mrs. Blackstone never moved a muscle of her face.

I have said that the city seems deserted, but I found a good many people were in town when I attended the Faulkner-Chapman wedding last night. I don't believe I could have been induced to go to anybody else's wedding in such weather, but the Faulkners have always been warm friends of ours, and I wouldn't have missed this for anything, because of that long time friendship. The marriage took place at this season because the bridegroom, William R. Chapman, is a teacher of music in the New York public schools and this is his holiday time. He is an organist, too, and plays in Dr. Vincent's church in New York. I hope you can hear him there some time. I am told he is already recognized as a composer of great talent.

The floral decorations were lovely. I especially admired the monogram, C—F, done in tuberoses and carnations.

The ushers at this wedding were Robert Wells, Ernest Hamill, and J. H. Quinn; the groomsmen were S. W. Faulkner (brother of the bride) and Charles Wells; the bridesmaids, Lou Faulkner (such a stunning and brilliant girl!) and May Thomas. The groom, of course, walked with Mrs. Faulkner and the bride with her father.

Emma Faulkner, the bride, looked very sweet in a robe of brocaded white silk with demi-sleeves and square corsage, filled with illusion. Loops of fringe extending across the front were fastened with sprays of flowers. Her illusion veil was very becoming.

I thought Mrs. Faulkner, mother of the bride, looked most handsome in a dress of black satin over which was draped a black lace shawl.

The newly married couple went off to Montreal on their wedding tour. They will visit the White mountains later. The White mountains seem to be all the rage for bridal tours. A generation ago (when Will and I were married) everybody went to Niagara falls.

I have spent the afternoon at the First Congregational church, on the west side, where some ladies were having a committee meeting. Will drove over for me in the victoria, and hearing that Mr. Philo Carpenter had happened in to look at some old church records, Will came in. Will has an admiration, verging on veneration, for dear Mr. Carpenter, who, he thinks, is one of the finest citizens Chicago ever had. One has only to look at him to realize the truth of this, for nobility shines from his face. As he stood in the doorway of the church, bidding us good-by, I distinctly saw a halo around his head and felt as if I had had a blessing from a saint of God.

As we drove home Will told me more of Mr. Carpenter's life than I had known. He said that Mr. Carpenter—a Massachusetts man—studied to become a doctor before he came out here, and meantime worked in a drug store in

Hands Across the Sea Again as Club Starts

France-America Society Fosters Friendship.

By Cousin Eve.

A NEW international society has been born in Chicago, the France-America, and I hope America gets as good a "break" in it as will France.

This is a branch of a similar organization in New York, which has been going for some time, and of which J. Pierpont Morgan is president. The society is one of those nice ones where nobody pays dues, and its functions are purely social. Any distinguished French people coming this way are likely to be entertained by the France-America, and one believes that distinguished Americans will be coddled in France, as well.

In Paris, however, the Union Interalliée, with headquarters in a lovely old palace of the Faubourg St. Honoré, with great trees and gardens overlooking the leafy Avenue Gabriel and the Champs Elysées beyond, is a meeting place for all well placed Anglo-Americans.

The Chicago president of the France-America is Hayden B. Harris. Its directors are Silas Strawn, Melvin Traylor, Sewell Avery, John A. Holabird, Hayden Harris, Gen. Abel Davis, William Nitze, Walter Dill Scott and James H. Winston, who is secretary and treasurer.

Among the members already enrolled are Rufus Dawes, Gen. Charles G. Dawes, Gen. Foreman, and Daniel Burnham. All of these international societies probably have an eye for the future, meaning the World's Fair of 1933, when we hope that many interesting and charming people from the wide world will visit us.

Tea in Winnetka.

What a day was Sunday, with our entire Riviera north of Wilmette a-bloom! Trees like bridal bouquets, tulips in every known color nodding in the breeze. Mrs. Charles W. Hubbard chose a perfect day for her tea and garden party in Winnetka for the American Friends of China. And such a perfect party! One needs an entire new set of words to tell of it!

Mrs. Hubbard, first of all, is an authority on gardens, and again she has collected for many years beautiful and ancient Chinese things, among them numerous antique pewter pieces which were exhibited Sunday. A woman of great culture, she is known once to have gone from Honolulu to China in order to see for herself the workings of a famous Chinese puppet show.

Her house is not large. It is a white one, with a deep garden to the right. On entering one saw masses of pink peach blossoms in the vestibule, vistas of black floors, pale Chinese rugs bordered in dark blue; white walls, with here and there a Chinese iron etching outlined against the white background. Furniture was cushioned in dark blue, nearly black brocade, and hangings were pale primrose yellow. Here again were peach blossoms and shelves of wonderful potteries in faded peacock blue and others in the better known sepias and biscuit color.

In the dining room were Mrs. Silas Strawn and Mrs. Charles W. Dempster pouring tea in a cheerful, delightful place, in which every object was beautiful and rare. Wild parrot tulips, ragged and frenzied with color, strange as orchids, sprang from an old blue centerpiece. On the lovely old English sideboard were curious Chinese covered dishes in ancient pewter, each with four little inside compartments, and oddly wrought pewter covers. Again white walls and other iron etchings, and an old, rare Chinese painting, subtle in color. Everywhere were branches of the peach, the rosy plum, and the rosier quince.

Garden of Ineffable Charm.

After the exquisite house, with its ineffable charm, the garden. And there again words fail. In a frame of young, flowering trees was a green silken lawn, square and edged with twisted red tiling. In the four corners tiny lead figures of cherubs. Framing the lawn a wide band of pansies, and such ravishing pansies—full faced, velvety, yellow, purple, white, multicolored. Behind the hedge of pansies masses of tulips, mauve, red, black, white, yellow, were swaying in the wind. At the corners great heartsease plants dripped exotic flowers.

And then Mrs. Hubbard's vista—hers would not be like other vistas—an open lane toward a charming Hebe in her green niche at the far end of the garden. This vista had a tall, slim tree shooting up out of the path, its proud young limbs veiled in gauzy yellow green. It was the right idea—the vista must conform to natural beauties. And back of the tree, atop a sprinkling pipe, a copper pigeon perched—in reality a spigot, and such a spigot, fashioned by Mrs. Clay Judson, the gifted Sylvia. Around and about Hebe were flower beds, seasonal and such, and other trees and secluded places to sit, including a little terrace of stepping stones at the garden side of the house.

Quite a few smiling Chinese faces were noticed at this festival of spring, and from town came Mr. and Mrs. William Greenlee, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Houghteling, Miss Marion Gheen, Mrs. David Cook Jr., Mrs. William Hale, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Evans, Mrs. Chauncey Borland, Mrs. Joseph L. Valentine, Mrs. Joseph M. Patterson, and Col. George Langhorne, newly elected president of the Friends of China society.

Private View of Aquarium.

An occasion of the future about which everybody is alert is the opening of the Shedd aquarium next Tuesday evening. At this dedication Mrs. Shedd and her two daughters, Mrs. Schweppe and Mrs. Kersey Reed, are receiving their friends informally for a private view of this splendid memorial to Mr. Shedd who was a leading philanthropist and citizen of Chicago. Mr. Shedd left a provision for the aquarium in his will.

A buffet supper will be served, and I, for one, am more than interested because of that queer little fantastic aquarium at Naples, where I always return to see if that wicked one-eyed devilfish is still there. And he always is. On the water front of the Bay of Naples, in exotic setting, the aquarium is one of the world's great sights, and may the Shedd Aquarium be as wonderful.

News of Chicago Society

In town for a few days is Martha Walter, with her portrait of the queen of Spain, painted last fall at El Escorial, the mammoth palace north of Madrid in the mountains, where is also the octagonal crypt containing the serried tombs of Spanish kings from the time of Charles V. Hanging also in the Chester Johnson galleries, beside this magnificent blond queen in black comb and mantilla against a drapery of sapphire, are one or two gypsy children, painted—well, superbly—and an entrancing baby rolled in a pink blanket with a red curl atop his head. These Philadelphia women can paint—think of Cecelia Beaux!

Tomorrow seven perfectly magical Renoirs will be shown at this same gallery.

Speaking of Philadelphia reminds me of sad news. Mr. and Mrs. John E. May are leaving town this week to take up life in New York. Born in Philadelphia of a distinguished family, well known also in Washington, John May has spent many years in Chicago as the head of a brokerage house in La Salle street. He is a member of all the clubs and with his wife is a part of the social merry-go-round. Mrs. May, a slim and charming brunette of many accomplishments and exceedingly popular, will be much missed in musical circles.

Early in June she is sailing for France, where she will again take up that interesting nursing work among the pilgrims at Lourdes which caused her to join the Catholic church last winter. Mrs. Robert Warren, only daughter of the Mays, lives in New York.

In Search of Beauty.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mulford left town three weeks ago to stay with their brethren, the Russell Motts, at Charlottesville, Va., Virginia being rather divine at present. Inspired by James O'Donnell Bennett's article in THE TRIBUNE last May, the Mulfords were all set to make quite a giro 'round the whole state by motor to see the famous gardens, and also to stop off with Carolyn Shields Cheney at Roanoke, in Randolph county.

The former Miss Shields of Highland Park is now Mrs. Nelson Cheney, wife of a handsome Virginian and chatelaine of the old Randolph mansion near Roanoke, beautiful in line and outlook, and set in famous gardens. The Mulfords accomplished all these matters and were breathing the ambient atmosphere of Richmond on their way north when they were met by Mrs. Joseph L. Valentine, also moving from garden to garden in search of the beautiful, and finding it.

Indeed, it was Mrs. Valentine who fired my imagination about a box hedge she had seen [and I do love an old box hedge]. It was at an inspiring manse, called Hickory Hill, where the boxwood hedges leading to the house were forty feet high, untrimmed, and one hundred and seventy feet in length. Mrs. Mark Willing's garden was also reported as doing wonders after a century of oblivion. The Willing farm on the Potomac, Bushrod manor, belonged to Bushrod Washington, nephew of the first President, and will undoubtedly, with time, become a show place again. While old hedges are the main theme of Virginia gardens, Mrs. Valentine saw magnificent floral effects everywhere also.

Arts and Industries Dinner.

On Monday night, June 1st, in the Palmer house ballroom will be given the dinner of the Arts and Industries association. I wouldn't miss it for several reasons. First, it marks two years before the opening of our Century of Progress show. Then slides will be shown of principal buildings, and speeches given on the ideals aimed at. There will be talks by several in the spellbinding class whom I shall name: Harvey W. Corbett, chairman of architecture of the exposition; Senator James Hamilton Lewis; Rufus Dawes, president of the exposition, and Col. William Nelson Pelouze, toastmaster, and president of the Arts and Industries association.

This association coöperates with the fair because of its interest in industrial art. The Arts and Industries group has raised $360,000 toward founding an industrial art school in Chicago, of which $100,000 was given by the Rockefeller Foundation. This money was deposited with the Art institute as trustee, and a school of industrial art is now going forward in three departments of the Art institute.

Great progress has been made in foreign participation in the fair this year, and the slides will show new buildings, new and tricky, I hope—because that makes for discussion, and discussion is amusing.

Convalescent Home Dedicated.

A special train carried a large party out to Prince's Crossing Wednesday afternoon. In it were Mr. and Mrs. William Chalmers and their guests at the dedication of the new James and Anna Raymond building at the country home for convalescent children. Here, as the French say, "en pleine campagne," is this beautiful two storied convalescent hospital and the last word in comfort and simple beauty. All about are green fields, woods, a sweep of rolling country, pastures, cattle, and rural freshness.

The Raymond building is the memorial of Mrs. Raymond to her husband. It is gray stucco trimmed in white and has twenty beds and several open sun porches. The ceremony of dedication was held on its western veranda, on one side of which were a dozen beds, each with a little girl patient, the other side having the sick boys.

A group of crippled youngsters opened the exercises by reciting the "Salute to the Flag" and singing a verse of the "Star-Spangled Banner" in brave little voices. Meanwhile a cold, boisterous wind tore in from the prairies and it seemed to be November instead of May, as Dr. Gilkey made the invocation. Frederic Woodward of the University of Chicago presided.

Gives Check for $10,000.

Mrs. Chalmers presented the new building to the university in a touching little speech. She read, at the end, a letter from Mrs. Raymond, unable to be present because of illness in her family, and inclosing a check for $10,000 for the endowment of a bed in the new wing. Mr. Allison made an address on the uses of this convalescent home. Mr. Woodward accepted the new gift to the University of Chicago with felicitous words and the exercises were over.

Little parties were taken through the entire hospital by Mrs. William Pullman and Mrs. Joseph Watkins, Mrs. Chalmers' nieces, and ward after ward named after various Chicago families, including the Cranes, Schweppes, Sears, Armours, Pattens, Rawsons, Donnelleys, Cudahys, Morrisons, Grahams, Montgomery Wards, Thornes, and many others were explored.

In a charming library, built in memory of Thomas Chalmers, its casement windows full of sweet smelling lilacs, an elaborate tea was served, with Mrs. Patrick Valentine and Mrs. Ernest Graham presiding. To this library the children bring their chairs and books and sit when day is done. Mrs. Chalmers, in a black frock, white fur and nosegay, was full of joy—this great project of hers has been in operation for twenty years. Lots of people were on hand with congratulations, among them Mrs. Frederick Rawson, Mrs. Tyman Walker, Mrs. Charles Dempster, Mrs. Allen Clement, Mrs. John Chapman, Mrs. Edmond Russell, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Robert Carr, Charles Schweppe, William J. Chalmers, Joseph Watkins, and Mrs. Robert Wheeler.

Event for Music Lovers.

The North Shore Music Festival, in its twenty-third year, held in the Northwestern university gymnasium, brings out all Evanston and some true music lovers of Chicago. It is a great event, and the weather should coöperate. For when 5,000 people rise at once to barge under one narrow awning in a torrential rain it can't be done, and confusion comes.

Lily Pons, the young French coloratura soprano, brought out an immense crowd the first night, and Ignace Paderewski an equal demonstration when he played his own concerto in A minor with the Chicago Symphony orchestra, and, later, a Chopin nocturne. Oddly enough, I had not heard Paderewski since the great war, when he played in the Auditorium for the benefit of Poland, seated at his piano before a huge Polish flag which draped the half lighted stage. It was an unforgettable hour.

Arthur Bissell was telling me an amusing story of Paderewski. In 1884 he went to Vienna to study with Leschetizky, but this master threw the would-be pupil out, saying he was not promising enough and wouldn't do. Paderewski, in a blind rage, flung a stone through the front window of Leschetizky's house. This tempest was the turning point in his career, for the window opened and the great teacher called the red headed one back.

"You will do, after all."

Paderewski's leonine locks are white and not so woolly any more, but his fingers are the ever magical. People are so packed in at these concerts that one recognizes only here and there a familiar back, or frock, or the shoulders of a musical husband.

I saw the Charles Swifts, two nights; the William S. Monroes, in from the farm with Mrs. Calhoun and Harriet Monroe; the Frederick Haskells, the Admiral Crossleys, Howard Linns and Dawes, who made up the Hubert Burnham's gay supper party for Paderewski; Dr. Stock and his family, after the music was over. The Burnhams have one of the loveliest houses in Evanston and patios with artificial moonlight, wonderful for such a villainous night.

The Edward Hines, Buffingtons, Dawes, Theodore Robinsons, Alexander Banks, John Wilders, and Lansing Warners were among many occupying the boxes. I like the look of Evanstonians. They look more peaceful than we do, here in town. A man sitting next to me said he would hate to be tried by a jury of Evanston men because he felt they would hang him. A rather deep deduction, what?

When Chicago Was Young

Troy, N. Y. When he heard tales of the great opportunities in the west he shipped a stock of drugs and medicines to Fort Dearborn and set out for Chicago.

When he arrived, in July, 1832, there were fewer than 200 inhabitants outside the fort—mostly Indians and halfbreeds, who lived in poor log houses, built on both sides of the river near its mouth. Think what development he has seen in his forty-five years here!

The cholera was raging fearfully among the troops, and Mr. Carpenter engaged at once in ministering to the suffering, saving many lives, Will has heard it said. He opened his drug store in a log building on Lake street, and had a brisk trade at once in quinine, for the ground was swampy and malaria was prevalent.

The financial crash of 1837 found him in rather sad straits, for he had indorsed notes for many friends. I think that used to be done more than it is now. He made no effort to evade his responsibilities, but borrowed money to meet the claims. When it became necessary to repay what he had borrowed, and money could not be had, he spread out a full schedule of all his real estate and allowed two disinterested men to select from any part of it what they deemed a fair equivalent for the debt.

What they selected shows the tremendous depreciation of western farm land and Chicago city lots at that time. They took 960 acres of farm land in Fayette county, Illinois, four and a half blocks in Carpenter's addition (on the west side), half a block in the school section, three lots on Washington street near the present site of the Chamber of Commerce, and a house and lot (his homestead on La Salle street, opposite the court house)—property that was soon after appraised at more than a million dollars. All this for a debt of $8,500!

However excessive he may have thought the award, he faithfully carried out the agreement, and Will says the severest thing he ever heard Mr. Carpenter say about it was: "I should have thought they might have left me my home."

His home was a station of the underground railway, and he helped many poor souls on their way to Canada and freedom in the '50s. In 1851, because the Presbyterian church did not come out strongly enough in behalf of the anti-slavery cause, he withdrew and formed the First Congregational church of Chicago.

"Everybody loves him," says Will, "even if some people do call him an extremist. He has always been in the van of the army of righteousness. He has never been a disagreeable reformer, but he simply would not swerve from his duty as he saw it. His face shows what he is—'the noblest Roman of them all,'" Will ends.

Mrs. Carpenter has been dead some years, and Mr. Carpenter lives most of the time with his children in Chicago. He is a rich man, but not nearly so rich as he might have been if he had done as many would have done and tried tto dodge his responsibility.

I really mustn't write more.

Yours lovingly,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Foot Notes.

Philo Carpenter, the noble old pioneer whom "Will" praised in 1877, left a number of descendants, though the name has died out, as he had no sons. Grandchildren living in Chicago are Mrs. Jefferson G. Harlow, Oak Park, and Mrs. Mittie Ambler, Chicago. Mr. Carpenter's picture appears in the rotogravure section of THE TRIBUNE.

Great-grandchildren of Philo Carpenter are William W. Solomon and Mrs. Aubrey R. Clary, Oak Park; Elizabeth F. Cheney, Chicago; Frances and Irene Ambler, Chicago, and Edward Carpenter Hildreth, Wilmette.

William R. Chapman, who was renowned as a musician in 1877, became one of the best known members of New York musical circles, and is still director of the Rubenstein club. The Chapmans—the bride and groom of Martha's letter—live in New York City in winter and have a summer home in Bethel, Me.

Ernest Hamill and Robert Wells became well known business men of Chicago. Mrs. Ernest Hamill lives at 2540 Lake View avenue, Chicago. Alfred Hamill of Lake Forest is a son of the Ernest Hamills. Bradford Wells and Mrs. Alfred T. Carton are children of Robert Wells.

A. W. Sanford of Crown Point, Ind., sends some old sayings current in his family:

"A bawling cow soon forgets her calf."

"Enough to make a horse leave his oats."

"Save at the spigot and spend at the bunghole."

The Scotch grandmother of Miss Mary Curtis of the Hyde Park hotel used to say: "The wheel that squeaks the loudest gets the grease."

Miss Nina O'Neal of Oak Park offers some wise sayings of her mother's: "Every tub must stand on its own bottom." "Friendship often turns to love, but love to friendship, never."

A family story of the O'Neals is this: A young brother was taught in school to spell words containing two identical successive letters by the use of the word "double," as, "G—double o—d." So when he came to the sentence in his primer, "Up, up, Lucy, and see the sun rise," he read, triumphantly: "Double up, Lucy, and see the sun rise." "Double up" is still the form used for reveille in the O'Neal family.

If you recall a wise or witty saying (preferably with a farm slant), handed down in your family, send it in to Herma Clark, care of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

C'est la Vie

By Betty Eckersall.

Successful business men are like musicians. Both cater to the masses, and seldom does either know how to dance.

It was a clever person who said: "All men are fools and civilization only the informant." Perhaps that is the reason for education.

Broken dreams are like injured butterflies. They are colorful, illusive as their maker the sun, heartbreaking in fragile beauty, a spot of yellow in a drab life.

Words are like pebbles worn smooth and round in the bottom of the stream of life; not essential to the water, but very colorful and often making rippling music.

Sincerity is honesty. Flattery is a gross insult thought by the stupid clever finessing.

People with no imagination, no ideas of the hereafter, are like goldfish swimming around in a bowl.

For life is brutal, frank and crude, to the one whom it deigns to inform,
That living is lust and greed and hate, and love is not made but born;
For we must all be square stones in the rounding mill of strife,
And dreams are merely mythical; the reality is life.

To think is one thing; to know what to think about is another; and to many the powers of differentiating are extremely obscure.

Minds are like boats afloat on the sea of thought, endeavoring to find the port of knowledge, and in the case of many often manned by an incompetent crew.

A wild rose is like a beautiful woman. Cherish it, and immediately it pines for a life of wildness and the glamour of the sun.

If people would take words and prepare them as an exotic food for an epicure, how much more palatable little conversations would seem!

One must have food for thought, yet many would go hungry if thought were needed for nourishment.

Work of Macena Barton on View

Young Artist Paints Life on a Generous Scale—Three-Man Show Holds Interest in Allerton House Gallery.

By Eleanor Jewett.

THERE are a number of exhibitions of varying size and importance gracing the galleries and schools of Chicago now. Vacation is approaching and if all other signs were missing the many cards of invitation to student exhibits would be sufficient indication that something out of the ordinary is in the wind.

In the professional galleries Macena Barton, at the Knoedler gallery, remains the figure of the moment, her's being the only one man Chicago artist show in town, although several other exhibitions of Chicago artists are on the tapis, with the number ranging from three [in the delightful Allerton House gallery] to a score and more at the Chicago galleries, the Palette and Chisel club, and elsewhere.

Macena Barton is a definite figure among the younger painters. I know of no one who has spared herself less in the pursuit of her craft. Copy reading at night for a large publishing house, a job from which she was dismissed last December due to business conditions and one which she has recently resumed, she sleeps in the morning and paints in the afternoon. The copy reading is not done for pleasure but as a practical means to an end, the well known keeping of the wolf from the door. Heart and soul go only into her painting, which is as driving an urge in her as the desire for the drug is in an addict. She is an addict to the smell of paint, the feel of canvas, and the liberation of her ego in her work.

Life on a Big Scale.

She has a great spirit. You feel it in even the smallest of these pictures. There is always something just out of reach for which she yearns, some further portion of perfection for which she strives. She sees life on a big scale. She feels proportion and composition and the character of things on a big scale. This is the more extraordinary inasmuch as she, in her own person, is delicate, petite, exquisite. Her self portraits are amusing jokes. In them she figures largely and breezily. Possibly a Freudian complex flowering, but we are delighted with the fruit. These self portraits are among her ablest and most dramatic pictures.

She limits herself in portraiture only by the extent of her willing acquaintances; models by the hour are too costly. Her latest portrait is of a friend, "Laura." You cannot fail to find her. She is startlingly effective in a superb creation of vivid yellow dots. There is a rich, Gargantuan humor in this canvas which sets you off on a chuckle of appreciation for the wit and daring that conceived it. It is a stunning sister-piece to the portrait of Llewellyn Jones which dominates the first gallery.

In a different mood, in fact in a distinctly poetic and rather dreamy mood, was "Roxy" conceived. Here is a wistful humor in the curve of the mouth and soft glint of the eye. A poppy is caught behind one ear and the hair is a dark frame for the brown face. It is a charming, a thoroughly charming canvas.

Arms and hands are still not always as they should be, but Miss Barton laughingly acknowledges they are hard—for her, so she "drags them in as often as she can." Clothes are sometimes used as adjuncts to the composition rather than in their own character of shelter to the human frame. The extraordinarily large white coat in "Portrait of a Man" was deliberately contrived to give that amount of white to the composition. Similarly, with the muffler in the portrait of George Buehlerstock.

This particular leaning toward the bizarre is not brought into those canvases where the nude figure is used. These remain plain and clear as to background, details and coloring. The drawing of the figure is the thing, the feel for firm flesh and the conscious overcoming of anatomical problems. "Mimi," the colored girl, is especially well handled.

Interesting Still Life.

No description of Macena Barton's painting is complete without a definite mention of her fine still life. She renders to Caesar all that is his. Vase flowers are her theme. Texture, color, perfume, her flowers are gorgeous. Fruit, too, she handles characteristically with a firm and perfect touch. In the current show "Still Life with Grapes," "Fruit," "Poppies," "The Bouquet," and "Still Life" (number 26) stands out vigorous, decorative, beautifully painted.

Here is one young Chicago artist on the direct path to future recognition. Those who bemoan their luck at never getting in on the ground floor may out with their keys today and enter upon premises which later years will make much more impervious to attack. In plain English, ten dollars today will do what a hundred will not ten years from now. It is beyond reason that as sure a talent as this, so intelligently directed and so persistently wielded, can do less than grow more sure, more great with every passing year.

At the Allerton Gallery.

In the Allerton House gallery is a refreshingly delightful exhibit of work by three artists. One enters the room and immediately a pleasurable sensation attacks one. Partly this is made up of the effect of color, partly of the variety of the show, and partly of the well proportioned hanging. Nothing is crowded and nothing forced. It is a perfectly simple and perfectly honest exhibit by three earnest workers who have not an ounce of conceit among them. They have confidence and assurance; you feel that. You feel, also, the tentative courtesy of their approach.

Marjorie Stempel shows on one wall a group of charming sketches of dogs in pencil. There is a fluent beauty about these portraits that is lacking in etching. They are remarkable for the texture of the various coats, the difference, for instance, between the Boston's smooth softness and the silky softness of the Peke and the Alsatian. They are remarkable for the wetness of those appealing noses, the sensitive feel of the muzzles. They are remarkable for the individual characters of the dogs, each a personality. They are remarkable for the soft shining of the eyes. In fact, as you examine these little portraits, one by one, it is borne in upon you that you are seeing an extremely unusual and fine manifestation of understanding.

Landscapes and Portraits.

No one could do such portraiture who did not understand and love animals. You have but to look again at the white West Highland, at the Huskie, at the Scottie, to know that you are in the presence of a dog lover. If there are better dog portraits in Chicago, I have yet to see them. This work of Miss Stempel ranks with that of Marguerite Kirmse and Diana Thorne, probably the two most distinguished etchers of dogs in America today.

On the adjoining wall and carried half around the gallery are the paintings by Gasper J. Ruffolo, landscapes and portraits, one still life among them. Ruffolo has a fine flair for texture and quality. You see it in his sand, the sparkle of his water, the ordering of his costumes, the shining of his glass and pottery in "The Mounted Bird." Of his landscapes, perhaps the little ones most quickly capture your imagination. "Sandy Slope," "Fisherman's Hut" and "Evening on Lake Michigan" are fascinating.

The exhibition is completed with the showing of portraits and still life by John Goossens. His is an enthusiastic, fresh, colorful wall. Perhaps the most intriguing quality of John Goossens' work is its engaging candor. He is refreshingly simple and naive. He is delightfully conservative. Out of very little he contrives to draw a picture that charms your eye and satisfies your sense of decorative fitness. You feel the conscientious craftsman in each composition. You feel a love of painting and an enthusiasm for his art. You recognize the fact that here is some one persistently trying to touch the hem of his ideal. He has touched more than the hem of Beauty in several instances.

"Teapot" is a distinctive arrangement in color and is extremely sensitive in quality. A more rounded assurance enters into the composition of "Still Life Arrangement," in which a pitcher, a flask and a handful of crisp apples make a refreshingly cool ensemble. "Garden Flowers," jonquils and iris in a low flat dish, is lovely and so, too, is the other flower painting, "Snapdragons and Calendulas."

"The Belfry of Bruges" is a romantic moment in that magnificent old town of spires and canals. "Love Under the Water Lilies" is a little touch of amusing humor, skillfully contrived, with two china ducks billing in the shade of a blossom that leans from an Indian pottery vase. The "Nude" is not well drawn as a figure but has charm on the score of color, the manipulation of tints in the scarf and table covers making it a delicate interlude to be remembered with delight.

This exhibition, like that of Macena Barton's in the Knoedler gallery, will continue through May.

Throwing a Thunderbolt.

The international water color show is still on at the Art institute and will continue through May 31. The delightful process of throwing a thunderbolt should be tried soon, or it will be too late. We will launch one now into the calm of the Max Weber room, where a line of apparently innocuous Persian miniatures circles the walls. If these pictures were a normal size it might well be that the police would have closed the room. Nowhere has such a shameless amount of bulking flesh been permitted a long stay before. The law has stepped in hitherto with much less provocation—once, you remember, some wooden nudes lying on pale green grass attracted its interest in a local show and the offending canvas was withdrawn. Those wooden nudes are nothing to Max Weber's women. In fact, none of the pictures which have aroused comment could hold a candle to these, were these painted in an ordinary size. They get away with so much because, in order to be seen they must be peered at.

It is a titilating spectacle to watch that room being circled slowly, first two men, then a group of women, then children, one at a time, each peering closely at each picture. This round is prolonged into the hundreds. One woman was heard to tell her children: "This is art." The children sniggered and appeared not to think so well of art. They were quite right. The state of nudity in itself is right. When the flesh is put above the spiritual values of the female, then nudity is not right. It is an obscenity.

Far Cry from Rubens.

Rubens' majestic, white skinned women were joyously, paganly naked. This model, whose bulky flesh Max Weber repeats again and again, ad nauseam, shares nothing with them but their sex. She is a clod, a lump of earth made flesh, heavy, animal-like, soulless. She and her sisters in picture after picture, were the canvases on a larger scale, would be a riot—and cause a riot. Utterly shameless, utterly obvious, coarse, sensual, fat, these portraits of femininity do an injustice to the modern woman.

Max Weber in this exposition of the studio offends against good taste and does so unnecessarily. Matisse has pointed him the way, but for recognition to be given to his mimicry it would seem as though there are other places in which his work might hang rather than with the sanction of the Art institute in its most favored gallery.

The Art institute itself has this to say about these pictures: "The great distinction of Weber's painting, as revealed in these small gouaches, is an ability to create a series of different moods through a subtle and dramatic manipulation of color and simple forms. The theme is always the same: idealized, entwined nudes, or female heads, but in the varied rendering of these, Weber shows his range and profundity." These nudes are entwined, repeatedly, but if one is idealized—only one—she is still to be discovered by any one less aesthetic than the author of the Art institute revelation.

News of Exhibitions.

Drawings by A. C. Webb are on view in the Carson Pirie Scott gallery and are extremely fine. Many of them are in color and you will note with amusement the decorative value a green stop light gives to a New York street. As far as I am aware, this is the first time the stop lights have been good for more than their traffic duty.

The drawings, in the main, are of architectural subjects and have been executed with all the delicacy and vigor of line that have made Mr. Webb's etchings among the important American contributions to art.

Henry Hiltz is holding his first Chicago exhibit at the Drake hotel. It is of screens, gorgeous affairs, magnificent in color and technique. The exhibit continues to May 31.

C. Warner Williams is noted for his charming portraits of children in sculpture relief. A showing of his work is at the Woman's City club, 6 North Michigan avenue.

Portraits by John A. Nielson are on view in the Vanderhoogt gallery, Fine Arts building.

The Ackermann galleries are offering an exhibition of paintings and engravings of famous men.

Paintings by Herbert J. Day may be seen at Revell's under the auspices of the All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts.

The Lakeside Press galleries announce an exhibit of modern photography from May 1 to Aug. 1.

A new gallery for Chicago is that of Symons, Ltd., 910 North Michigan boulevard. The gallery opened Friday with a showing of antique furniture, tapestries, etc.

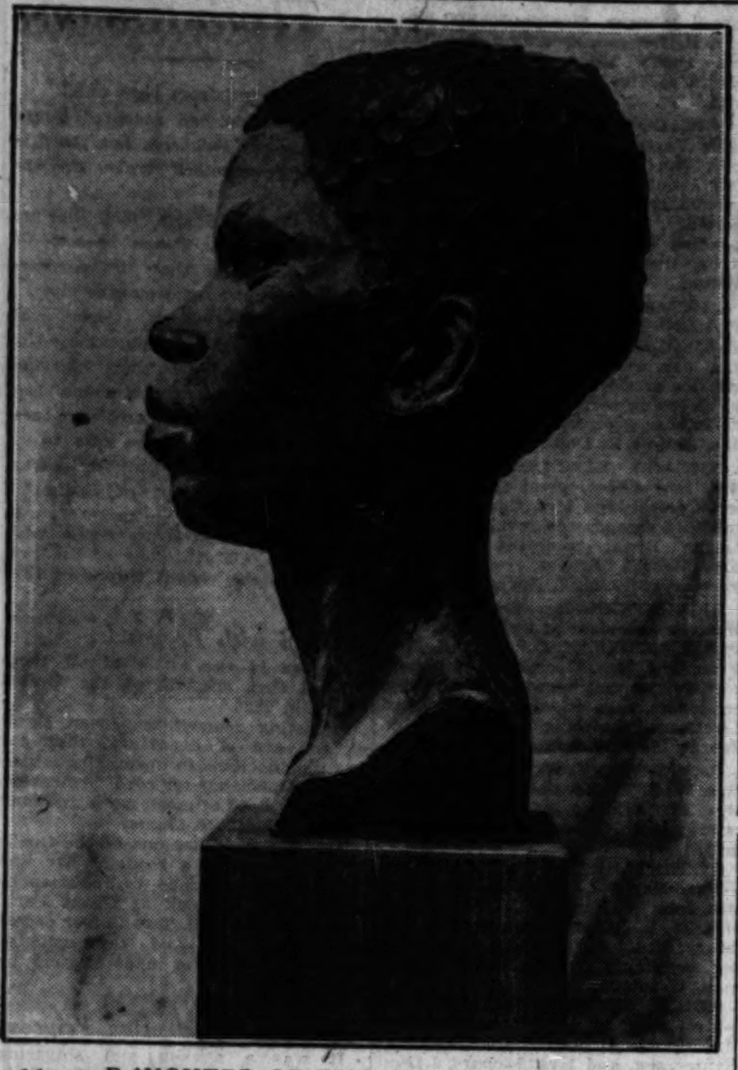
The annual exhibit of the Chicago Architectural Exhibition league may be seen in the Arts club gallery.

The Studio gallery, Increase Robinson, director, announces a spring exhibition of water colors, drawings, and prints by Chicago artists.

Etchings of ships by C. J. A. Wilson are on view during May in the Albert Roullier galleries.

Joseph Birren is showing a group of his paintings in New York during May.

An exhibition by Brown county artists is in the Hoosier Art gallery, this month.



"A DAUGHTER OF THE SOUTH," by Viola Norman, one of her three strong contributions to the current members' show in the Chicago Galleries association, 220 North Michigan avenue. Viola Norman is originator and head of the Chicago School of Sculpture, which is doing such fine work in training young artists in modeling and carving. Lorado Taft considers this school one of Chicago's assets. It fills a distinct need and in the able hands of Miss Norman gives promise of producing the skilled craftsmen of whom we never have enough. An exhibit of sculpture by Viola Norman's pupils is promised for June, probably in the Kroch gallery.

Summer Round-Up Engages Parent-Teacher Club

Object of Organization's Current Activity Is to Free Child of Pre-School Age from Remedial Physical Defects

By Roberta Nangle.

WITH vacation days just around the corner, one might expect a lull in the activities of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers. A note from the press chairman of the congress, however, informs us that its groups all over the state are now engaged in one of the largest and most important of its annual jobs.

This present work is called by the organization "The Summer Round Up of Children." The round up, in which the state congress has been coöperating with the National Congress since 1925, is a campaign to send to the entering school grade each September children as free as possible from remediable physical defects.

According to an explanatory circular, the ultimate goal of the congress in the round up is to educate parents to the need for early periodic examinations of their children by the family physician and dentist in order to insure correction of hampering defects which might not otherwise be discovered and which, if undiscovered, contribute to the retardation of the child's physical and mental development.

Examined Free of Charge.

During this month and next, in schools where the summer round up is held, pre-school children will be examined without charge by neighborhood doctors, or by doctors sent to the school by health commissioners. If defects are found, parents are asked to provide for their correction by their own physician.

The summer round up engages the personal activity of parents and guardians in helping to promote that interest in children's health which, says the congress, "has too frequently been held to be the business of the school or the health authorities." The round up works in and through the schools, but it acts to secure action by the people, instead of for the people, a course which is said to be necessary if the results are to be permanent. All children are referred to their family practitioners for correction of defects, except in cases of financial inability.

Register 305 Schools.

At the annual convention of the Illinois Congress held last month in East St. Louis, Mrs. C. W. Balch of Chicago, summer round up chairman of Illinois, reported that in 1925 only 5 schools registered for the summer round up. This spring 305 schools are promoting the project under her supervision.

Correction of defects is made during the summer months. In the fall a second free examination is held in the schools and records of corrections are sent to the summer round up committee. Mrs. Balch reports that one third of all defects were corrected in the summer of 1930. Thirty-six Chicago schools are registered for the round up this year, and forty-one schools in the suburban districts.

CLUB ETHICS

By Maude Swalm Evans

"WE'RE organizing a junior auxiliary in our club," the visiting member told the group at the club luncheon table. "The age limit is bothering us. We feel that 18 is a good age with which to start, but we can't decide on the best retiring age."

"I've heard of junior groups where the youngsters manipulated things so they were able to remain with the juniors several years after they should have transferred to the seniors," contributed the committee chairman.

"And yet if you make the age too young they won't be likely to join the senior group when they reach it, or if they do join, they'll be lost," commented the treasurer.

"That's right. I was lost once myself in a club years and years before there were juniors," recalled the bulletin chairman. "It was a professional club and I joined when I wasn't much more than a babe in arms."

"Figuratively speaking," suggested the committee member.

"Figuratively speaking," agreed the bulletin chairman. "It was made up mostly of women who were quite aged, that is, I thought so then. There was one who had the darlingest cork screw curls hanging down to her shoulders, and another who always wore a dear little black bonnet with red roses on it. I fairly worshiped those women from afar, but it was fifteen years before I felt really at home in that club."

"It was the older women almost entirely who joined clubs in the beginning," observed the committee chairman, "but it wasn't long before the younger ones became interested. As to the junior age limit, another club to which I belonged started out with 26 but has since changed to 29."

"In this club we allow members to remain with the juniors until through their 30th year and find it most satisfactory," stated the secretary. "In checking up we find it's the exception when a retiring junior doesn't join the senior group, and, after all, that's the test of the right age, isn't it?"

"It surely is," concurred the visiting member, "and I'm going to take that word back to my club."

Qestion.

"A member was present when she was elected chairman of our art department. She was not formally asked to serve, but made no objection. Is she regularly elected?—M. L. N."

Reply.

It would seem so. Silence should carry consent.

Engagement of Ileana Recalls Troth Rumors

last year. She had accepted Count Alexander of Hochberg, but the Rumanian government broke up the match.

Then Queen Marie took her to Egypt to forget. Ileana herself did not acknowledge that the romance was ended until some months later.

Besides King Boris, Ileana had been named as a possible mate for the prince of Wales, her kinsman, in that both are great-grandchildren of Queen Victoria. There were persistent reports that she was to be the future queen of Italy by marrying Prince Humbert; of Spain by marriage to the prince of the Asturias; of Austria by union with Archduke Albrecht, one of the pretenders to the vacant throne of that country.

Deluged with Proposals.

It was in the midst of all these rumors that she visited the United States in 1926.

A jesting remark by Queen Marie on the eve of departure, that she saw no objections to upstanding Americans as husbands for royal princesses, brought a flood of mash notes and mail order proposals to Ileana.

The trip gave her one of the thrills of her life when a roadster she was driving from Chicago to Indianapolis side swiped a truck at Grant Park, near Kankakee, Ill. Two Culver cadets were with her and the machine swerved on a curve made slippery by a wet snow.

Shaken and Shivering Princess.

It was a shaken and shivering princess who had to seek medical help for her nerves at a drug store in Rossville, Ind., a few miles further on. Newton D. Knight, cadet colonel, drove the machine the rest of the way.

She has had other adventures, chiefly on the Black sea, where she qualified in navigation and won a commission as captain in the Rumanian navy.

In September, 1927, a storm caught her in an open boat and the craft tossed for six hours before it made port. Two years later the yacht which she commands struck a rock and careened until it seemed certain to capsize. But the boat righted herself and was pulled off in safety.

Here's Simple Way To Actually Get Rid Of Arm And Leg Hair

That Completely Banishes Coarsened Re-growth

By a total lack of stubble you can feel the difference between this and old way.

Not only is slightest fear of coarsened re-growth banished but actual reappearance of hair is slowed amazingly.

A Discovery That is Proving to the Wonder of the Cosmetic World That Hair Can Not Only Be Removed Instantly, But Its Reappearance Delayed Amazingly.

A way of removing arm and leg hair has been found that not only removes every vestige of hair instantly, but that banishes the stimulated hair growth thousands of women are charging to the razor and less modern ways. A way that not only removes hair, but delays its reappearance remarkably.

It is changing previous conceptions of cosmeticians about hair removing. Women are flocking to its use. The creation of a noted laboratory, it is different from any other hair remover known.

What It Is

It is an exquisite toilet creme resembling a superior beauty clay in texture. You simply spread it on where hair is to be removed. Then rinse off with water. That is all. Every vestige of hair is gone; so completely that even by running your hand across the skin not the slightest trace of stubble can be felt. And—the reappearance of that hair is delayed surprisingly!

When re-growth finally does come, it is utterly unlike the re-growth following the razor and old ways. You can feel the difference. No sharp stubble. No coarsened growth.

The skin, too, is left as soft as a child's. No skin roughness, no enlarged pores. You feel freer than probably ever before in your life of annoying hair growth.

Where to Obtain

It is called NEET—and is on sale at all drug and department stores and beauty parlors. Costs only a few cents. 274RA

Mexican Market Inherits Ways of Aztec Time

Offers Anything from 'an Elephant to an Ant.'

By John Cornyn.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY.—There is in Mexico City a market that has inherited all the ways of the markets of Aztec days of more than four centuries ago. It is called "Lagunilla," the little lagoon, because, where it is situated, there was a small lagoon which disappeared when the capital was drained shortly after the beginning of the present century.

The Lagunilla market is like a great spider. Its main body is the original market, occupying a comparatively restricted space; its legs are formed by the adjoining streets running into the market and those crossing and intersecting them in many directions. The body is always conjested; the limbs are in constant movement; and there are miles of them, all of them crowded with ever-moving masses of people, who always seem to be going somewhere and never getting anywhere.

Lagunilla is the market of the middle class people of the Mexican capital. Wednesdays and Saturdays from forty to fifty thousand visit it and all are there to buy or sell, for there you can get anything from "an elephant to an ant," as the popular auctioneer puts it.

An Unusual Prosperity.

The hard times of the last year have brought unusual prosperity to the Lagunilla. With 25 per cent of the inhabitants of the capital and the surrounding towns and cities out of work, the sale of household furniture and other movable human possessions has assumed unusual activity and vast proportions. Scores of auction booths have sprung into existence in answer to the demand for sales agents. These are stretched all along the legs of the "spider," for street block after street block. Wednesday is the great sale day, and auctioning begins at 5 a. m. [daylight] and keeps up until nightfall.

If you want something, your good landlady will tell you, don't visit the regular houses of business, or even the pawn shops, of which there are scores in the capital, but go to the "firing line." This is the picturesque name with which the metropolitan street urchin, whose vivid imagination is ever ready with a nickname, has baptized the battery of auctioneers who are ever as noisy as a nest of machine guns, from daylight until dark.

Second Hand or Stolen.

They have, they assure you, everything on earth to offer, and they come near to telling the truth, for all week their agents comb the city and suburbs for second-hand articles of every description. They gather cart-load after cart-load from the needy forced to dispose of their belongings and from other sources, for 90 per cent of everything sold on the Lagunilla is either second hand or stolen.

As you pass down the "firing line" you are really in no-man's-land, in the midst of the battle of buying and selling, and the barrage continues all day, in the glare of a tropical sun, and on into the night in the pale glow of shadow-casting tallow candles and pine torches.

In many places both sides of the streets are lined with improvised booths made of boards, canvas, and nondescript material of many kinds, according to the taste and resources of the builder. As you pass up the narrow lane at the left you have to fight your way through ever-active swarms of sellers, dickerers, and auctioneer agents bent upon making you the goat. Frequently you have to step over an Indian who has squatted in the middle of the narrow thoroughfare with his little stock of goods as unconcerned as a Chink in an opium den. He wouldn't move even if an earthquake descended upon him.

Specific Sales Service.

Lagunilla, in its complexion and spirit, is as Aztec as the Indian market of four centuries ago; for on it there are no stores; fed venders, outside of the auctioneers, sell more than one article; and even the latter, for the most part, confine themselves to the sale of specific lines of merchandise.

On the Lagunilla you will find one man selling shoes, another handling old iron, a third in possession of a booth filled to the sky with the common straw hats worn by the Mexican laborers and peasants. In one corner of the market is a stall filled with old books in many tongues, including a score or more Indian languages. But it would take a directory to list separately all the things one finds at the Lagunilla. The greater part of them are displayed for sale, with only the sun in heaven over them.

In the streets adjoining the Lagunilla there are half a thousand "booths" which are nothing more than circles drawn on the street, within which each vender displays his goods. So many of them are there that you are in constant danger of stumbling over them as you make your way among them. But no one ever does, for in Mexico, as elsewhere, one instinctively learns to keep out of danger, which here consists of irate Indians and omnipresent policemen.

Three Sea Island Beaches Now Open at Charleston, S. C.

CHARLESTON, S. C.—[Special.]—Charleston's three sea island beaches, the Isle of Palms, Sullivan's island, and Folly beach, are now open for the summer season and each day finds an increasing number of residents and tourists locating where ocean breezes blow. Although ordinarily considered a bit early for surf bathing, the first week-end in May, the second and third days of the month, found scores of persons in the water and hundreds enjoying sun baths or motoring on the level expanse of beach. The last two week-ends have made the beaches proportionately more popular as the weather increased in warmth.

This year the early opening of the beach season was given an official touch by a dance at the great pavilion at the Isle of Palms and by announcement of several house parties and fishing trips at all three beaches.

The Isle of Palms is eight miles southeast of Charleston and is connected with Sullivan's island and the mainland by a series of bridges. It is accessible from Charleston via the new $6,000,000 three mile long Cooper river bridge. A paved road, state highway 401, leads to the Isle of Palms through Mount Pleasant and Sullivan's island. At the latter place is famous old Fort Moultrie and the modern Fort Moultrie army post. A passenger ferry service is maintained between the city of Charleston and Mount Pleasant.

Folly island is twelve miles from Charleston in a westerly direction and is reached over a paved causeway road. The Ashley river bridge is crossed and United States 17 followed for a half mile, then the Folly road bears to the left of the federal highway and crosses James island and Johns island before Folly river is reached.

The three beaches of Charleston are visited during the summer by thousands from the interior of South Carolina, North Carolina, and Georgia, and, in fact, by tourists from over the nation. This year, due to completion of so many paved highways connecting with those leading to Charleston, the greatest crowds ever known are predicted.

At the beaches in the summer the fishing is all that could be desired either from surf, in the open waters of the Atlantic, or in the back waterways. Crab and shrimp also are abundant and easily caught. Bass, whiting, trout, blackfish, crookers, and sheepshead are favorite fish.

Amusements are varied and include, in addition to beach sports, band and orchestra concerts, dances, golf, bowling, boxing, and talkies. During the last winter and spring an unusually large number of cottages at the beaches have been occupied by residents from the north. A score of persons from Quebec and Montreal and a number from Detroit, New York, Newark, Boston, and Philadelphia spent several weeks at the seashore and took daily dips in the surf despite what to a South Carolinian was considered unseasonably cool weather for surf bathing.

Legend Describes Defeated Chinese General as Hermit

PEIPING.—(AP)—Feng Yu-hsiang, China's "Christian general," has become a man of legend.

Seen only occasionally since the collapse of last summer's revolt in which he and Yen Hsi-shan, "model governor" of Shansi, tried to overthrow the Nanking régime, Feng has become the subject of several tales.

One account describes him as wandering around the countryside dressed in a padded coolie coat reaching to his heels, with a vacuum bottle at his side and a satchel on his back containing ink, brushes, and paper.

Other stories assert that he tried to go to Russia but was denied entrance to soviet territory.

Still others assert that he is living in a lonely temple in southern Shansi. These accounts say he has let his hair and beard grow and has become a religious hermit.

Feng has long had a passion for painting and poetry. Although lacking formal training, he wields a nimble brush and many of his paintings, especially of plum blossoms, adorn the homes of his friends in this city.

Even at the battle front he found time to compose a short verse or two. One of these, mirroring the hardships of his troops, reads:

In the north and in the south there is unceasing strife.
My lone army camps in the valley
And in my dreams I weep, wondering how to feed by soldiers.
When I awake, my pillow is wet with fallen tears.

Horse Cab Still Tourist Choice in Bucharest

Quaint Garb of Drivers Enchants Americans.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUCHAREST.—The horse still dominates the streets of the Rumanian capital. Bucharest is not dependent on taxis.

That fact annoys a few Rumanian spirits who look upon the abundance of carriages and pairs and horse cabs as signs of backwardness and incompatible with the speed of modern life.

But the traveler, in search of novelty and new sensantions, cheerfully accepts the situation, hails horse cabs and does his getting about the city leisurely, behind horses, often ignoring the taxis altogether.

What a pleasant condition, this abundance of horse cabs. In Paris if a friend comes over from the United States and you want to entertain him with something different and you look for a fiacre—horse cab—you may have to spend an hour riding around in a taxi to find one. Even then you may fail. Particularly on sunny summer afternoons when other Americans had the same idea and got there first.

And they are decrepit, one horse carriages. Ready to fall apart; leather mudgards cracked and here and there warped away from their iron frames; leather upholstering worn thin and in spots showing the horsehair stuffing underneath; old fashioned iron wheel rims clattering and bumping whenever a cobblestone street comes along. Decrepit cabs, decrepit horses, decrepit harnesses, decrepit drivers. When this old guard passes out horse cabs will be completely finished in Paris.

Patent Leather High Hats.

Berlin has a few more than the French capital. You can always find one in Potsdamer Platz. The carriages are not quite so old; the cabbies, sporting the patent leather high hat of their profession, are a bit more vigorous.

In Rome horse cabs are still more prevalent. Piazza del Popolo, below the Pincio gardens, has a big stand of them. They may also be found elsewhere, in the Piazza Colonna, for instance, below the windows of THE TRIBUNE's Rome offices in the heart of the city.

In Rome people don't stare at you if you ride a horse cab, as they do in Paris; "Funny Americans. Most modern people in the world, but they will ride in horse carriages." But in Rome, too, the horse cab is nearly out.

In Bucharest it flourishes. It is the normal means of transportation. There are no decrepit carriages in the Paris sense of the word. When one gets shaky it is tossed on the junk heap like a rattling old taxi in an American town. There are a few, very few, one horse cabs, modest vehicles charging a cheap rate. The standard cab is a carriage drawn by two horses, well groomed and in good condition. It has rubber tired wheels. Its driver wears a long, blue velvet coat down to the ankles, furnished with brass buttons and held tight to the wearer with a pink sash tied under the arms. His cap is blue and shaped like a pre-war Russian soldier's cap.

Aristocrats of the Trade.

Here and there is a carriage especially elegant, slightly larger than the ordinary, rubber tires a bit thicker, paint a bit brighter, bearskin robes more ample, driver's velvet coat newer and better fitting, harness glistening more blacky, nicked trappings polished more brightly, and horses more spanking. It is the Packard or the Rolls Royce of Bucharest streets, and charges a higher rate.

When there is a traffic jam in Bucharest, it is a traffic jam of two horse carriages. A traffic jam not without its pleasant points. As it calmly untangles you get a good look at Bucharest's pretty girls, not half hidden in the back seats of taxis, nor buried behind the wheels of their own cars, but seated leisurely like queens in open cabs, visible from head to wellshod foot and not hard to look at. Often the escort alongside is a dashing young officer.

Here and there you see a distinguished graybeard holding his carriage robe tight about him and his elderly companion against the evening chill. Here is an arrogant monocle, there a glistening shirt front framing a blazing decoration on a ribbon, on its way to some public ceremony. It is a pretty, old fashioned picture.

Tablet from Old Capitol Presented to Kin of Monroe

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—A bronze tablet from the historic old brick capitol has been presented to Mrs. Rose Gouverneur Hoes, great-granddaughter of President Monroe.

Recorded on the tablet are lines telling of the inauguration of Monroe March 4, 1817, on the steps of the old brick building which stood across the street from the present capitol.

The old building has been destroyed to make way for the Washington beautification program.

Australian Wage Earners Must Pay High Relief Taxes

CANBERRA, Australia.—(AP)—Fulfilling the forebodings of most economists, the first months of 1931 have been extremely trying for Australia.

Never before, not even during the bank crisis of 1893, when a period of overlending on farms brought banking operations almost to a standstill, has there been such wide-spread unemployment.

One of every five workers is idle, although some authorities say the percentage is greater. Special unemployment relief taxes have been imposed in several states, that in New South Wales being equal to 5 cents on every dollar earned by every person whose wages is $8 or more a week.

That a Labor government should have imposed such a burden upon such low minimum of wage has given offense to many of its supporters, but the shibboleth of "let the wealthy pay" has to a large extent been silenced by the depression.

Rates of the ordinary state and federal income taxes have risen abnormally, yet because of reduced earnings, the yield has shrunk alarmingly.

Labor has thus been forced to see that, carried beyond a certain point, the policy of flaying the rich, is suicidal.

Learning French Is Play for Little British Princess

LONDON.—(AP)—Learning French has become a game for little Princess Elizabeth.

Because she is too young to appreciate the "course" she's being given, her mother, the duchess of York, has thought out the game and regularly plays it with her.

Side by side in the nursery, mother and daughter turn over the pages of a big picture book in which are illustrated the various subjects which are spoken of on a series of special phonograph records.

Tailor Unions to Merge.

LONDON.—(AP)—Forming one of Britain's largest trades unions, three groups in the tailoring industry will merge Jan. 1, 1932, into one union to be known as the National Union of Tailor and Garment Workers. It will have 100,000 members.

Foreigners Flock to Pajama Resort on French Riviera

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

JUAN-LES-PINS. — Juan-les-Pins, the famous gay pajama resort on the French Riviera, continues to live up to its reputation for sunshine and high temperature.

Whereas bad weather prevailed all over France, the maximum temperature in the sun on the beach of that privileged resort was recently 98.4 degrees Farenheit.

This record, well maintained during the spring season, has been attracting more and more hundreds of visitors who nonchalantly lie down on the sand in filmsy pajamas or gambol in the blue waters of the Mediterranean.

Latest returns record the arrival of more than 2,300 foreign visitors, of whom 230 are Americans.

ENGAGE[D] ...

MISS ETHEL M. ...

Gambling '400' at Reno Roll 'em High, Wide

Crowds Jam Every Available Spot at Clubs.

RENO, Nev.—Attractive divorcées and their well groomed escorts are "rollin' bones" high, wide, and handsome, so to speak, in Reno's more fashionable night clubs these days.

Since the advent of the state's new wide open gambling law crowds have jammed every available spot in the more exclusive resorts.

Roulette and dice games appeared particularly popular among the women players, with a goodly percentage of the men crowding about the less romantic but just as adventuresome blackjack tables.

Waiters Serve "Nectar."

While jazz orchestras sob out the latest popular tunes and busy waiters rushed about delivering "nectar" to those occupying booths about the polished dance floors, the crowds throng to adjoining luxurious gambling rooms and seek their entertainment—sometimes gainful, sometimes expensive—playing games of chance.

Varicolored poker chips are in conspicuous places about the tables, particularly the large round white ones valued equal to Uncle Sam's dollars any place in the premises. Dice dart out across expansive tables, marked with lurid red numbers, dollars clink and clank, and the houseman under an inevitable green eyeshade, rake in or hand out silver, according to the dictates of the little spots on the cubes—all the while singing a "come on" chant.

Fashionable Garbs.

Women garbed in clothes that hinted of Fifth avenue, obviously of the divorce "colony," flick cigaret ashes into thick, soft carpets as the enchantment of the play writes expressions of joy or dismay across their features.

The Mining Camp "Sour Doughs" and the cowboys from the rugged Nevada ranges would be decidedly out of place in these "swanky" resorts. They have their little fun, however, in the less exclusive establishments "downtown." New roulette wheels are spinning all night long in other places, while crowds of men, camouflaged under thick tobacco smoke, stake their dollars on the fates.

Although every night sees its quota of patrons enjoying the attractions of the luxurious gambling palace a few miles outside the city's limits, Saturday night is the biggest of the week.

Full dress is not compulsory in all clubs, but attendance except in evening clothes is frowned upon and the patron who thinks $50 an hour is expensive entertainment is hardly likely to feel at home in the crowd which jams the place.

Reno gambling proprietors do not believe that any other city in the state will offer serious opposition to this city in the gambling business.

Salary Cut Makes Life Problematical to Polish Clerks

WARSAW.—(AP)—How to live on less than $8.00 a week is the pressing problem of 200,000 government employés of Poland.

A fifteen per cent cut in salaries has put most of them in a quandary. Hitherto they have just about managed to keep body and soul together on an average of less than 300 zlotys [$33.50] monthly.

In a round-robin protest the state's workers said that the reduction might have been managed if there had been a corresponding decrease in retail prices. But after an encouraging drop in the cost of living, the prices have climbed back.

The protest letter predicted that the cut will lower the standard of living until the workers' strength is sapped, thus decreasing efficiency.

The real grievance, however, is the fact that when the cut was first proposed in the government's budget bill, the minister of finance promised he would not order the pay reduction unless he was driven to it. Yet eleven days after the budget was passed the cut was ordered.

The civil service clerks wish they had a champion like the army's. When soldiers' pay was cut, Marshal Joseph Pilsudski made the government restore the old wage level, besides refunding the reduced back pay.

TRAVEL GOSSIP FROM FOREIGN LANDS

Belgian-Dutch Village Has No Prohibition Law

Smuggling Thrives in This Frontier Hamlet.

By Ann Somers House.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BRUSSELS.—There is but one village in Belgium where the country's partial prohibition law is not applied. All through the rest of the kingdom wines and beers are free, but hard liquor is restricted to limited quantities. Baerle-Duc, the frontier hamlet, though, may drink as much distilled liquor as it likes.

For 600 years past the Belgian village of Baerle-Duc and the Dutch village of Baerle-Nassau have been one, at least to casual visitors. You can tell the Belgian houses in this frontier village only by their black numbers on a white ground, while the Dutch houses have white numbers on a black ground. There are few streets where you see but one kind of numbers.

Possesses Two Town Halls.

Baerle-Duc-Nassau has two town halls, a Belgian and a Dutch one; it has two churches, both Catholic; but in the Belgian one only Belgians are allowed in the choir, and in the Dutch church only Dutchmen. There are a Dutch and a Belgian postoffice and a Dutch and a Belgian custom house, as well as a Dutch and a Belgian phone central. Of course, there are Dutch and Belgian schools.

Saloons are common ground. In Baerle saloons men of both nationalities meet. Belgian saloonkeepers are allowed to sell hard liquor because otherwise the immediate neighborhood of Dutch, nonprohibitionist saloonkeepers would drive them out of business.

Smuggling Thrives.

Belgians may buy Dutch goods customs free at Baerle and the Dutch Belgian goods, vice versa. Of course, in this way smuggling becomes a thriving business in the curious frontier twin village. It often suffices to climb over a garden fence or to take goods to the house across the street to smuggle them into the other country. An army of customs officials couldn't stop smuggling here.

During the world war the village was never occupied by the Germans as was the rest of Belgium. The Dutch would not have allowed it. Thousands of Belgian refugees came to Baerle and passed from there into Holland. In October, 1915, the Belgian government had a wireless station built at Baerle-Duc. The station intercepted German messages from Helgoland, Kiel, and Cuxhaven. The Germans bullied the Dutch government into surrounding Baerle-Duc-Nassau with a wall of barbed wire with just five holes for exits, so the Belgians could be watched closely as they went in or out. Nevertheless, the wireless station went on working to the end of the war.

Loudspeaker May Call Faithful to Prayer in Cairo

CAIRO.—(AP)—Loud speakers to replace the picturesque and traditional muezzin, or Mohammedan caller to prayer, are suggested by an Arabic newspaper here.

Many innovations have replaced old customs of the country, but the Moslem religious authorities were rather more than startled by the proposal that loud speakers be placed in the minarets of mosques to call the faithful to prayer five times daily.

Salvador's Chief Hopes for United Central America

SAN SALVADOR.—(AP)—Arturo Araujo, who hopes to see the Central American republics united into one nation, is starting his term as president of Salvador with a determination to free his own country of debt.

"I want the indebtedness of my country eliminated, so that we may have a self-sustaining government, one of prosperity and progressiveness," he said.

"With this done we can go ahead on the needed public improvements, works that will take full advantage of modern ideas and inventions and help to uplift the people.

"And it is also my ambition to see brought about a unity of the Central American states. Such a development would enable them to attain a high place in the world's commerce and production and, of course, would lift them to a commensurate higher plane of living."

The new president is an engineer by profession, a skilled agriculturist, and so closely in touch with the people that he holds honorary membership in forty-five labor unions and allied organizations. He was elected as the candidate of the National Labor party.

President Araujo got his engineering training at London, having graduated from one of the technical colleges of the British capital with high honors. He also got his wife in England, Mrs. Araujo having been born Dora Morton.

Both the president and the new first lady have been active in welfare work. Their model farm contains excellent homes for the workers, a school for the children and a hospital for the sick.

He was born 53 years ago in the city of Suchioto, where his father, Dr. Eugenio Araujo, practiced law.

Baltic Cities Plan Many Festivities for Summer Tourist

By Sigrid Schultz.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN.—The "Baltic sea," that sapphire blue, romantic "private lake" of the old Vikings, Hansa men, and adventuresome Slavs, has so far escaped the attention of the thousands touring Europe each summer, but this year the Baltic will help them discover its beauties.

For the first time since the famous old Hanseatic league, all the cities fringing the Baltic are combining forces—protection against the Turks is not now their aim, but to bring visitors to the famous inland sea.

Such cities as Danzig, Lubeck, Konigsberg, Kiel, Swinemuende, Warnemuende, Zoppot, as well as Copenhagen, Stockholm, and Malmo, will vie with each other from May to October to lure visitors to striking festivities.

A few of the bigger events planned by the Baltic cities are: May 14, a Baltic trip of the Graf Zeppelin, starting at Lubeck; May 15-June 15, international water sport exhibition at Helsingfors; June 8-21, Baltic sea exposition at Lubeck; June 27-29, provincial song festival at Tilsit; July 2-8, Kiel week, regatta, where formerly kings and emperors raced their sails; the battleship Panzerkreuzer A, the famous "pocket battleship," will also be launched in Kiel; July 12-18, international sport week at Zoppot; July 26, presentation of Wagner's Nibelungen Ring, at Zoppot, in the open air theater; August and September, garden exhibitions at Rostock; Aug. 2, riding tournament in Kolberg; Aug. 23-26, German East Prussia exhibition at Konigsberg; Aug. 24-29, German gymnastic meet; September, international tennis tournament at Heringsdorf.

These are only a very few of the most important events of the summer. Those visiting the Baltic will find something going on every single day in every one of the Baltic cities.

Of especial interest to music lovers will be the outdoor presentation of Wagner's "Ring of the Nibelungen" in the woods near Zoppot.

London Dish Helps Alfonso to Forget

LONDON.—(AP)—One consolation which Alfonso, duke of Toledo, found in England was his favorite savory.

It was invented by a famous London chef, and if you have plenty of cheese, it isn't hard to make. Here's how:

Take strips of shortbread biscuits—not too sweet—and cover each piece with grated cheese of five different kinds—Cheddar, Cheshire, Roquefort, Gruyere, and Dutch. Put into the oven and serve very hot.

A few drops of lemon juice or chopped green olives can be added.

Shanghai Students Take New Alphabet Home to Relatives

SHANGHAI.—(AP)—Students of Shanghai college, an American Baptist institution, have pledged themselves to teach the new Chinese alphabet of forty letters to their relatives at home.

The alphabet, which consists of phonetic signs, is being taught in all the larger schools of the country. Both the government and educational authorities approve it as the best substitute yet devised for the thousands of characters which make up the old written language.

Evening Muff with Pockets Catches Debutantes' Fancy

PARIS.—(AP)—The newest wrinkle in evening bags is a fur muff. The debutante set goes out these evenings carrying little barrel shaped muffs matching the fur of their hipbone jackets or the scarfs which accompany them.

Powder puffs, cigarets, and lighters are tucked into pockets in the muff, which are generally made of ermine, galyak, or other white furs.

STRAY LEAVES FROM THE TOURIST'S NOTEBOOK

Around World in 90 Minutes Is the New Goal

Hasty Rocket Flights Seen for Near Future.

BERLIN.—(AP)—Around the world in 90 minutes is the modest goal Germany's rocket enthusiasts have set for themselves as a sort of preliminary to journeys to the moon and planets.

As yet no passenger carrying rocket, even for earthly distances, has been demonstrated here, but Reinhold Tiling, inventor of the sailplane rocket recently shown at Osnabrueck, is so confident of its safety and practicality that he plans to build one big enough to carry himself aloft before the end of the year.

Tiling's rocket goes up like a bullet, then spreads its wings to descend like a sailplane.

Most of the rocket designers agree that no rocket will show what it really can do until it is given enough power to climb into the stratosphere, that outer layer of the atmosphere where air resistance practically doesn't exist. There speeds around 3,000 miles an hour are theoretically attained.

The rarity of the atmosphere at altitudes of 80,000 to 200,000 feet would handicap or disable the ordinary airplane, powered as it is by an engine which must suck in oxygen, and driven by a propeller which must "take hold" of the air to be effective.

For the rocket plane these would be no handicaps, as the rocket principle of propulsion by recoil functions even in a vacuum.

Once operating in the stratosphere, rocket planes could cross the Atlantic in a little more than an hour.

To take full advantage of the possibilities of recoil power, however, contend the rocket enthusiasts, an altitude of 600 miles should be utilized.

At such an altitude the pull of gravity would be balanced by centrifugal force, and a rocket running out of fuel at that height would, if left to itself, circle the earth indefinitely.

Canada Enters War for Blue Flag of the Atlantic

SOUTHAMPTON, England, May 23.—Marine history will be made at this history surfeited port next Wednesday, when Canada in the new rôle of an American David will appear for the first time as a serious challenger of the European Goliaths of shipbuilding, England, France, and Germany, in a determined battle for the blue flag of the Atlantic.

The challenge for supremacy will begin with the maiden voyage of the new Canadian Pacific liner, Empress of Britain, 758 feet long and 42,500 tons burden, speed 25.3 knots or 30 land miles an hour.

A mystery ship, with her details closely guarded ever since she was launched by the Prince of Wales on June 11, eleven months ago, the Empress of Britain attracted little attention here or on the continent in the buzz of gossip over Germany wresting the speed crown from England and the announcement that France was to build a thousand foot liner overshadowing even the Leviathan of the United States.

Canada announced her entry into the Atlantic battle by smashing the world's fuel economy record a fortnight ago when the Empress of Britain steamed down the Firth of Clyde and through the Atlantic to Southampton at 30 miles an hour, with a consumption of only half a pound of fuel oil per shaft horse power per hour.

Electrically operated and fuel oil burning, the new liner had another surprise for European and British experts, for at dusk her funnels suddenly leaped into brilliance from batteries of powerful floodlights on her top deck, a new safety device that will make her visible at night for 30 miles at sea, and 50 miles from the air at an elevation of 1,000 feet, a beacon to aviators as well as mariners.

Greeks Show Friendship.

SMYRNA, Turkey.—(AP)—The new friendship between Turks and Greeks burst into full flower when a football team from this city went to Chios to play a Greek outfit. Rain prevented the game but the Greeks gave the visitors the trophy designed for the winner.

Mace Sold for $40,000; Mystery Finally Is Solved

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN.—The mystery which has so long surrounded the disappearance of the mace and sword of the old Galway corporation has now been partially solved. It has been ascertained that the mace was sold by a Jewish dealer in antiques for more than $40,000, and afterward sold abroad for a much larger sum.

The mace, which is of solid silver, is of great archælogical and sentimental value and is being sought for by the Galway urban council, the successor of the old mayor and corporation dissolved years ago.

It appears that the last mayor kept the mace and sword in lieu of unpaid salary and his heirs decided to part with them. The dealer who bought it says he offered the mace to the Dublin museum before finally disposing of it. It is now claimed, however, that under an ancient law the mace cannot be sold outside Ireland.

Berlin-Copenhagen Boat Trip Latest Fad for Travelers

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN.—The latest wrinkle in touring Germany is to go from Berlin to Copenhagen by boat, even though Berlin is several hundred miles removed from the ocean. The new route, which leads through a fascinating maze of canals rivers, lakes, and seas, was opened recently. It takes 60 to 70 hours to make the trip.

The Berlin terminal is "Westhafen," well known canal harbor. The first ship to make the trip was the 250 ton Gerhard, especially constructed for the run. It has a crew of four.

The Berlin-Copenhagen boat leaves every Friday, at the same time that the Copenhagen-Berlin boat leaves Copenhagen. The first trip was completely successful. The cargo consisted chiefly of Danish eggs and butter. Passengers will be taken on in the near future.

French May Use Rubber Tires on Railroad Cars

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—Experts of several French railroad lines are actively studying and experimenting the possibility of applying rubber coverings around the wheels of railroad cars.

Although the great weight of modern rolling stock may make such an idea appears fantastic, French engineers are seriously considering the matter. Such cars are already running on small local lines in the west of France where petrol driven motor coaches are used.

The advantages of a possible adoption of rubber coverings for wheels would include, notably, a diminution of noise, smoother running, and an important saving in wear and tear of the rails.

There are many technical difficulties, however, and the experiments are still considered as being in their infancy.

You Don't Say!

RASTATT, Baden.—When the citizens of this town rebuilt an old nest to which a pair of storks had returned every spring for many decades, they found a pair of baby's shoes in it. To whom they had belonged is not known, since a number of babies have been born here without shoes in the last few years.

A Glorious Holiday without a care

Eight Days of Varied Travel . . . Chicago to the Saguenay River in Old French-Canada and Return

. . . ALL EXPENSES . . .
$158.00
PERSONALLY ESCORTED

Sailings June to September

CRUISE to the heart of Old French-Canada. We take you by rail to Toronto, Queen City of Canada, where your foreign adventure begins. You set sail on a luxurious steamer, one of the world's largest fresh water fleet. You will visit, en route, Montreal—the metropolis, and the fortress city of Quebec, Gibraltar of North America.

You will cruise among the Thousand Islands—set like a thousand jewels in azure blue waters, experience the thrills of shooting the great St. Lawrence Rapids. Near Quebec you will pay your respects at the miracle shrine of Ste. Anne de Beaupré and hear the thunder of Montmorency Falls, higher than Niagara.

Beyond Quebec the high Laurentians follow the St. Lawrence and you cruise in the shadow of these ancient mountains. The steamer puts in at fashionable Murray Bay, and quaint and lovely Tadoussac, Canada's oldest settlement. The glory of the Saguenay River, seen at sunset and again at dawn, is a spectacle to impress the most widely travelled. The wild grandeur of Trinity Bay, guarded by the tremendous capes, Trinity and Eternity—the ship's siren reverberating like giant laughter among the eternal hills—gives you a touch of the loneliness, austerity and beauty of the silent places.

A spirit of gaiety prevails for the entire journey, and there is not a dull moment on ship or shore. You dance every evening to the music of a lively orchestra. Delicious meals satisfy ravenous appetites. You will vote this the best vacation ever.

Remember, every expense on this enjoyable cruise has been foreseen and included in the figure quoted above, as well as stop-overs at important hotels en route. A courteous escort relieves you of every travel worry.

When Arkansans Faced Hunger and Hopelessness

Live on Scraps from Tables of the Well-Fed

Unable or Unwilling to Help Themselves.

(This article is based on observations made by Miss Eckersall early in the year. Recent dispatches say conditions have been improving in Arkansas this spring).

By Betty Eckersall.

BLUE laws, sticky, red clay roads, half starved cattle, inundated farm lands, and despondent people seem to make up the picture of northern Arkansas. It is a state fighting against itself, submerging its population under the drizzling, erosive pound of the rain. A state whose stock seem like specters as they roam through pastures that parody the green grazing grounds of Illinois.

Life in that section truly depicts the survival of the fittest, with the lines of poverty and a toil worn heritage deeply indented, even in the faces of the very young. We may be having a depression in the big cities, but we have no conception of hardship until we realize the calamitous penury these Arkansas farmers must contend with. Their once prolific fields are practically barren; begrudgingly yielding scanty crops, in many cases not even harvested.

Old Before Their Time.

The people of Arkansas resemble their country. They are dry, humorless individuals, seldom carrying extra weight, old before their time, bent over by hard work, discontented with their lot, yet either too lazy or "in a groove" to do anything to improve their condition. The children are miniatures of their parents in action and appearance. They quickly learn how to "just get by," and become adept in the means of earning spare change and keeping all knowledge of the money concealed from their parents. This is merely foresight on their part, due to the utter contempt many of the fathers and mothers have for the personal belongings of their offspring.

One of the first things indelibly impressed upon my mind about Arkansas was the apparent lack of filling stations after nightfall, and the fact that every one either retired early or sat in darkness.

There were exactly two gallons of gas in the car and the situation was becoming serious. A desultory rain was falling, and every town we drove through seemed devoid of street lamps, pedestrians, traffic, policemen, or any object that might denote an inhabitant.

Lightless Nights.

Finally, in desperation, we stopped in front of a station and "sat on the horn." The effect was startling. A shabbily dressed individual shambled out of the night, picked out the pump nearest the car, and went through the preparatory motions of filling the tank. When told that high test gas was desired he mumbled: "Waal, that's jist too bad, this heaar low is all I got." Which, of course, was the only alternative.

I asked the reason for the houses and stations being unlighted. He elucidated quite clearly:

"We ain't got any money to pay the light bills to keep these stations lit up. If folks want gas bad enough, they will git it, somehow. All the neighbors hereabout go to bed early to save burning lamps. Costs money to have lights around heaar, and we ain't got it."

This final declaration was emphasized by an expectoration of tobacco juice, right in the face of an approaching black cat. Perhaps it was superstition, but the result proved there was no danger of that animal crossing any one's path for a long, long time.

Scraps for the People.

After hours of driving, a stop was declared for food. The little town boasted of one restaurant. We entered. The largest and most palatial object was a player piano, squeakingly rendering "Chicago, Chicago, That Toddling Town." I hoped the food would be newer than the piano selections. The steak I ordered had a certain degree of toughness; otherwise it was perfection.

I ate as much as I wanted and pushed the plate aside. It was one of those places where one was supposed to stack the dishes. There was quite a bit of steak left and I noticed that, contrary to the general rule, the waiter was very careful of the débris. I asked the reason. I got it.

"Why, lady, we save all these scraps for people. After midnight there is a regular waiting line for any kind of food we throw out. We try to give the women the preference, especially those with children. Now these pieces of steak will be boiled with the left over potatoes and bread crusts, into a stew, which this one woman will feed to her three children. Before she came to us for scraps the kids were living on stew made of boiled harness leather.

Thinking Away Hunger.

"Yeah, and she supplemented that with corn toasted on the stove and mixed with a little salt. The kids would eat this corn and salt, drink a lot of water, and at least would think they weren't hungry, even if the food was not nourishing. They will do anything for food. Scrub floors, wash dishes, anything to get these scraps."

Another man took up the conversation and offered more enlightenment concerning the starving folk facing only hunger and hopelessness.

"There's a fellow up the road heaar that had some prize Holstein cows, and them cows was real purty, too. Waal, they was nice and fat and this fall he let them out in the pasture to graze. He was down heaar with us fellows till after dark, and when he went to git the cows they was gone. We found the two of them the next morning with their throats cut and the rear quarters of both animals missing. Them cows was worth five or six hundred dollars apiece, too. The fellows that killed them confessed, all right, but their only excuse was hunger, and those cows looked too fat and sleek not to make good eating.

The Unfinished Pie.

"Times is awful, all right. Course the Red Cross has helped a lot with the traveling kitchens for the people who are too weak to get into town and whose stock have died of starvation during the winter. Folks have mortgaged all their possessions and there still isn't money in circulation. Many banks have failed, people have been sick, and even the doctor heaar takes pay in flour, chickens, and victuals."

I took this all in and I couldn't finish my dessert. As the waiter took the plate away he said: "Now, that's fine. A little boy will be here tonight. He has just been wishing some one would order pie and not be able to finish it."

THEIR DOLE FROM THE RED CROSS

DROUGHT sufferers receiving spring garden seed at the Red Cross headquarters in Stuttgart, Ark. One hundred thousand packages, each containing eighteen varieties of vegetable seed, were distributed in that state. Bttty Eckersall today relates some of the scenes she encountered in a recent tour of the barren lands.

WHERE INDIA BATHES, DRINKS, AND IS BURNED

Hindus End Up in Funeral Pyre on the Ganges

Gruesome, but It's an Old Eastern Custom.

By Charles Dailey.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BENARES.—India is a land of contrasts, both of scenery and people. There are Hindus of many castes and running into hundreds of millions. There are millions and millions more of Brahmins, Buddhists, and Mohammedans, and there are Christians and Parsees. But there is only one holy of holies in India, and that is Benares.

If, therefore, one has only a week or ten days to spend in India it is possible only to hit the high spots and obtain but a flash of the picture. If there is only a day, then that day is best spent in Benares, the sacred city on the even more sacred Ganges. One who would see India only in a superficial way would better spend a few months there; he can get over considerable ground in a week. And as so many of the tourists are round the world travelers or on short tours, this article on India can touch only a few of these points.

Meet the Sacred Cow.

If the visitor has entered via Calcutta he probably will depart from Bombay ere will drop down the peninsula after seeing Madras in order to look over Ceylon, not failing to see Kandy, thence eastward by way of Singapore and the rest of Asia before his return to the American Pacific coast. If he entered by way of Bombay from Suez then his port of departure would be Calcutta and the order of these notes would be reversed.

One must remember that India can be only glimpsed by the round the world tourist and the man making the tour of the far east by commercial routes can obtain only a few glances at it. Whole books have been written of the territory that here will be touched but lightly.

It will be assumed that while in Calcutta, either before or after the trip to Darjeeling, the tourist will have had a day or so in Calcutta itself. There he will have met the sacred cow and will have reveled in its bazaars. Or, if he entered by way of Bombay, the novelty of these will be off. Let it be remembered that the cow in India is sacred and lounges indolently on the sidewalk of the shady side of the street and lets the pedestrian walk in and out of the traffic of the sun-scorched roadway.

The Healing Blood.

Naturally the visitor will have seen in Calcutta the splendid Victoria memorial and the squalid section around Kalighat, the temple that is one of the most famous and least beautiful in the entire city. Here a lamb is sacrificed every had after having been blessed by the priest. The people anoint themselves with its blood in the belief of its healing properties.

In the foreign-developed section of Calcutta, as, for instance, Chowringhee, one will find many modern shops, and the drive of some miles around the Maidan is well worth while. If an extra half day permits the tourist will cross the Hooghly river to the city known as Howrah, but before doing so he will have visited Fort William and Government house, and also will look in at some of the native shows, where the magicians are almost certain in their much varied program to climb the magic rope.

In Howrah the most important place of interest is the Botanical gardens. The tourist will not fail while there to see the banyan tree that is 150 years old, has 600 branches, many of which have taken root and in turn form their own trunk. This tree is a thousand feet in circumference and beneath its shelter can be concealed a brigade of troops.

The Burning-Ghat.

One will leave Howrah station about 7:30 o'clock in the evening and will have his dinner on the train. He will arrive about 5:15 o'clock in the morning at Moghul Sarai, where if he is wise he will have a cup of coffee and some toast and will have arranged to have the Benares hotel at which he has reserved rooms to send a motor car to meet him.

After depositing his bags in the hotel the tourist will hurry off in the same motor and proceed to the burning-ghat on the banks of the sacred Ganges and will be on the scene of this repository of the dead by 6:30. On reaching the Ganges the tourist would best take one of the boats with a flat roof, on which are placed wicker armchairs, and thus comfortably seated will see how India bathes, drinks, and otherwise purifies itself in the sacred water; how the body is burned and what is left after the fire is extinguished by a pitcherful of water thrown by the nearest relative of the deceased, and the pottery of artistic shape is tossed upon the ashes and broken, completing the ceremony.

Awaiting Their Turn.

It is all very grewsome, and yet it is India, and it has been going on for centuries among the Hindus, no matter what their caste. On the day of my visit there were the burning embers of five bodies on the tier of broad stone steps of the ghat and the ashes of several other pyres were being swept up and tossed unceremoniously into the Ganges. Two other of the stone slabs had been cleaned off and the attendants were laying crisscross pieces of wood four or five feet long on which another body was to be laid.

To the left of the ghat were five other bodies, each wrapped in a white sheet, all awaiting their turn, while I saw another body similarly bound brought to the scene and without further ceremony or religious rite gently laid down to await its turn. There were no priests, no mourners, these being inside a temple at the top of the hill of the burning-ghat.

Whole books have been written on Indian superstitions, but they have no place in this brief series. Among Hindus there will be no funeral finery. A simple piece of white cloth is usually the shroud; often if the family is more than poor the body will be clad in nothing but a loin cloth as it is carried on a stretcher to the burning-ghat.

Yet there is another ceremony incident to death in India, the Parsees, of which perhaps a few lines in another article in this series, being probably the only exception among the natives. The Hindu does not die in his house. When it seems that his life is a matter of moments the dying one is carried in a sheet into the open air and laid upon the ground and there goes to his reward under the canopy of heaven. Our American Negroes shun the haunted house; the Hindus take no chance.

Their Sacred Shrine.

And while one sits in a comfortable chair on the Ganges to witness the finale he notices that men, women, and children are bathing in the same river directly in front of the ghat. Everywhere else as far as the eye can see the people are bathing in the sacred stream in the belief that the Ganges water will heal any malady. Other Hindus will be observed standing waist deep in the river while doing the family wash and still others are coming in an endless stream down the steps where the bodies are burning carrying upon their shoulders an urnlike vessel which they fill with the yellow water of the Ganges and carry it back to their homes as their holy drink. And at the very edge of the water, often under a wide umbrella, are the fortune telling priests earning their living in donations of annas.

Let one not think for a moment that it is only the poor that come here. It is the sacred shrine of Hindus of all castes. On the slope that rises from the river are palaces equal or superior to those one will see on Lake Shore drive in Chicago or Riverside drive in New York. There are temples costing millions of rupees, with architecturally wonderful minarets and towers; there are the magnificent homes of the maharajahs, who come at certain seasons to bathe in the Ganges.

An Unholy Place.

Directly opposite this scene of splendor is a sand swept plain reaching as far as the eye can see and barren even of the humblest home. For tradition has it that this is an unholy place, and any one born or living there will be reincarnated as an ass. Such is India, as seen at Benares.

One tires of it all in an hour or so and goes to his hotel for a belated breakfast. That formality over the tourist doubtless will visit the Monkey temple, where countless monkeys play hide and seek in and outside the temple and upon its walls. Nearby also is the golden temple, where the bull is sacred. This bull walks in and out the most revered sections of the temple, even the priests giving ample room and low bows as he ambles about.

After that, a few steps away, one comes to a small street in which are crowded the silk shops for which Benares is famous. Women tourists will spend hours in these shops and come back time and time again for the purchase of brocades and silks. What with its burning-ghat and its silk emporium, Benares is a city of contrasts.

Every Phase of Life.

And Benares, as all India, is hot. I find in my notebook that the thermometer in my room at the hotel registered 110 in the early afternoon and was 92 at 10 o'clock the same night when I turned in. This was in May and the worst was still to come.

One will see in Benares every phase of life—of riches and poverty, of fakirs and priests, and of gods galore. It is Siva who is the chief god of Benares and he rates very high in all India. Then there are the pilgrims, which one often mistakes for beggars, and he may be correct. In front of every temple there will be seen queer characters, whose photographs may be found in every album of snapshots compiled by tourists in India after they have returned home. One sees the man who, doing penance, has been sitting for years on a bed of spikes outside a temple, and asking for alms. Another has extended his arms in a form of supplication to the god inside the temple until they have become ossified. But still the coppers come to him.

In Benares one will see perhaps a girl of five being carried in a sedan chair alongside a boy of seven. They will be gaily caparisoned, but that does not mean they are rich. The clothing they wear, as well as the sedan chair, was rented for the occasion. It is only a betrothal party, and the girl is being carried to the home of her mother-in-law-elect, there to be trained in duties becoming a wife.

They marry young in India, but the girl is adopted as a mere child into the accredited family until she reaches a marriageable age.

SATURDAY NIGHT ON THE GANGES

A GLIMPSE of the Ganges at Benares, where the Hindus swarm by the thousands to bathe, drink, and otherwise purify themselves in the sacred waters. Here, too, the bodies of the dead are consigned to funeral pyres. Then what is left of the deceased is swept up and tossed unceremoniously into the river.

What Learning Another Language Will Do for You.

Like being well read and well versed in one or many fields of learning, there is something about knowing more than one language that makes you distinctive, individualistic and interesting to others. It will help you in your social contacts—in business. Like the study of art or music, it satisfies the desire for self expression. And it gives you that scholarly background typical of the educated man or woman.
Learn French, Spanish, German, or Italian here at the Berlitz School. It's easy by our Conversational Method . . . and your progress is not only rapid but certain. See how you like this Method. For a free demonstration lesson call, write, or phone Harrison 0392.

SPECIAL NOTICE

Starting at once and continuing until further notice, we offer the most unique plan of home ownership in the annals of Chicago Home selling. We will sell the remainder of our 61 new brick bungalows which we just recently built at terms of only

$50 down and $50 a month

The monthly payments include principal, interest, taxes, insurance, all refinancing charges for renewal of mortgages, etc.

Under this plan you will never have to pay any additional money — merely keep up your monthly payments until your home is paid for in full.

You have often heard of homes being sold like rent, but if you will investigate our proposition carefully you will find that these homes are being sold on terms below what you could rent homes of similar character for.

We fully realize that owing to present depression many people are afraid to obligate themselves by purchasing a home because the thought of meeting such items as taxes, insurance, refinancing etc., makes them feel that they may lose their home. We have anticipated all of these things for our customers and we believe our plan, while being revolutionary in real estate selling, will make hundreds of happy home owners out of people who formerly were afraid of a venture of this kind.

ATTRACTIVE FEATURES:

A large living room, with coved ceiling, six double lighting brackets, three double outlet receptacle [base] plugs, and five windows, extends across entire front of the house.

A large, well proportioned dining room with paneled walls and drop chandelier.

Two nice, well lighted bedrooms, each with two windows and double ceiling lights.

The bathroom, with newest plumbing fixtures, color schemes, and tile floor. Built-in 5 foot 6 inch full recessed bath tub, set in arched alcove, with overhead shower, rod and curtain. Full pedestal lavatory with full apron sink and swinging double mixing faucet, and soap dish. Morton white enameled steel medicine cabinet with glass shelves and Venetian mirror door.

An unusually high attic, fully floored, contains six French windows. Can be easily converted into two large rooms.

There is plenty of closet space, including one cedar lined guest closet with full mirrored door.

These bungalows are of steel construction and the best materials and workmanship are apparent even to the casual observer. The roofs are of Newille interlocking four-ply composition, fireproof shingles made by Amalgamated Roofing Co. All window sills and caps on porch rails are of genuine cut stone. Chimney of pressed brick.

The fully cemented basement is extremely large and well lighted by six windows and contains two stationary laundry tubs.

The building is heated with an oversized Peninsular warm air furnace equipped with a humidifier that moistens the warm air as it heats the house; hot water tank and gas heater attachment.

The back porch is glazed and screened and contains swinging French windows. The yard is fenced and both front and rear yards are completely covered with black soil.

Hardwood oak floors throughout.

Striped Holland shades and curtain rods throughout, fringed shades in living and dining rooms, and screens for all principal windows and doors are furnished by us free.

Every improvement is already in: sewer, water, gas, telephone, electricity, cement sidewalks and asphalt streets. Sidewalks running from street to alley are also included.

This house, while worth a great deal more, is priced at only

$7450

Located in a well built up, restricted community, these homes are near schools [both private and public], churches, stores of every kind, and are as near as one block from street car and suburban transportation. Only 20 minutes from the loop. Less than 12 cents fare.

HOW TO GET THERE:

Take Cottage Grove, State, or Vincennes-av. car and transfer to 103d-st. car. Get off at Princeton-av. Or drive out South Park-blvd., State, or Halsted-st., to 101st-st.

SHARP DROP IN COTTON, OFF $1.50 BALE FOR DAY

Cotton was under pressure practically from the opening until the close yesterday, the start being the highest and the close practically the lowest. Liquidation, with short selling, the latter based on expectations of better weather in leading parts of the belt over Sunday, combined with poor support, carried prices down.

The close was at losses of 24@26 points on Chicago futures, with New Orleans off 26@29 and New York 20@24 points. New Orleans led the break on spots, dropping 30 points, or $1.50 a bale, to 8.70c. New York lost 25 points to 9c, with Galveston off 8.95c and Houston to 8.80c. Liverpool was closed and nothing was heard from that quarter. Prices follow:

CROP EXPERTS TELL OF KANSAS WHEAT PROSPECTS

R. O. Cromwell, Lamson Bros. & Co.'s crop expert, reports from Salina, Kas.: "About 4 out of every 5 reports received from country elevator operators west of here, where temperatures were reported as low as 27, say no damage as ½ inch rain with it; the fifth man reports heavy damage. No damage here."

"From Dodge City to Hutchinson fields show thin stands, spindly straw with short heads, becoming generally more numerous going west," says H. O. Donovan in a wire from Dodge City, Kas. Most of these fields are early planted wheat on poorly fertilized land, where local men say 18 bu were promised a short time ago with prospects of only 8 now. Could find but little damage from Friday night's frost. Need spell of warm weather to show its actual results."

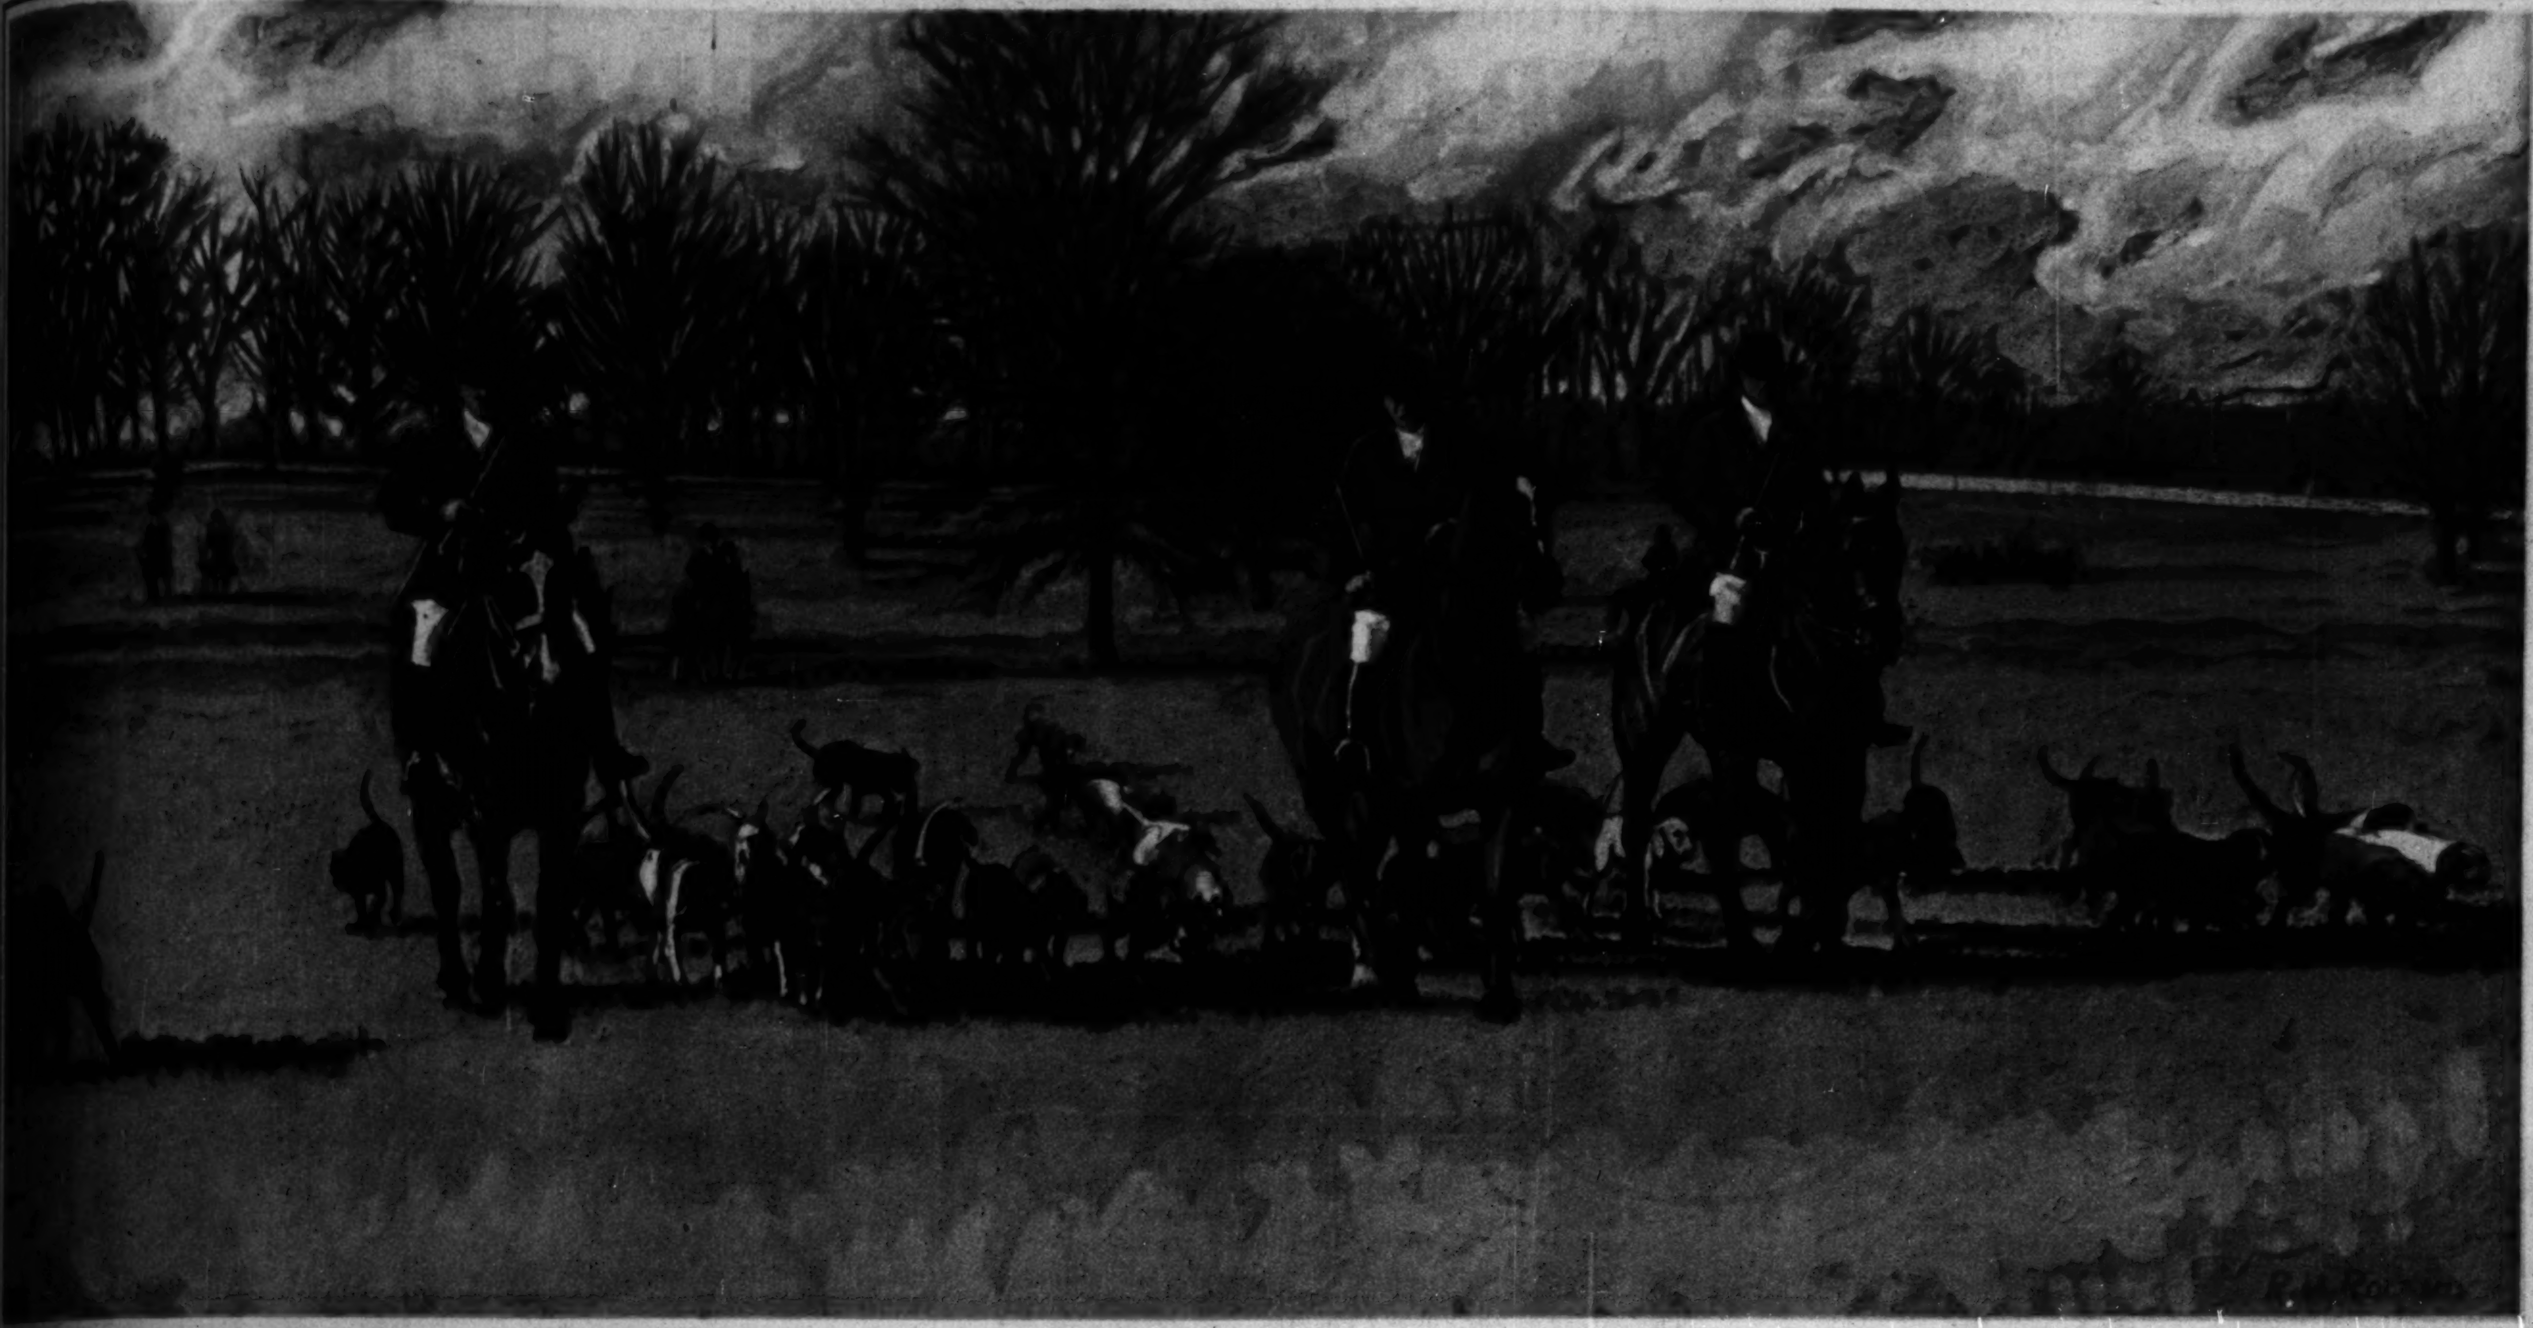
WHEN HUNTSMEN WIND THE MERRY HORN: STUDIES OF THE CHASE



AFIELD IN AMERICA WITH HORSE AND HOUND—The picturesque start of a hunt on the preserve of a well organized American club. Fox hunting had its devotees in this country even in colonial days, when each sportsman brought his own hound; in recent years, however, it has enjoyed a remarkable increase in favor. Wherever in vogue, it is carried on under the dictates of a complete ceremonial code; it is more than a sport—it is a social rite.
(From a painting by Raymond Roland, after a photograph.)

IN THE ENGLISH MANNER—The members of a hunt riding down a quaint Hertfordshire village street, the "pink," the scarlet hunting coat, adding vivid splashes of color to the scene. In this setting, with its aristocratic sportsmen, thoroughbred horses, and eager hounds, is caught the flavor of the chase, as mellow as the atmosphere of old England itself. So popular is the hunt in the tight little isle that it involves expenditures estimated at $50,000,000 a year.
(After a painting by Raymond Roland.)

MEETING THE NEEDS OF TO-MORROW—TO-DAY

CHICAGO & NORTHWESTERN RAILWAY

ROUNDS OUT ITS GREAT

5 YEAR IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM

VAST UNDERTAKINGS CARRIED TO COMPLETION

THE culmination of the Chicago & North Western Railway's five-year building program brings to completion projects that have a direct bearing upon the welfare of Chicago and the vast territory served by the "North Western." It is with a feeling of satisfaction, therefore, that we reproduce on this page some of the accomplishments attained.

In making these developments a part of this railway system we not only provide our patrons with a service that satisfactorily meets their needs of today, but also anticipates those of tomorrow. This work will go on. For it is our established policy to provide at all times the best possible transportation service.

Fred W. Sargent
PRESIDENT

CHICAGO PASSENGER STATION

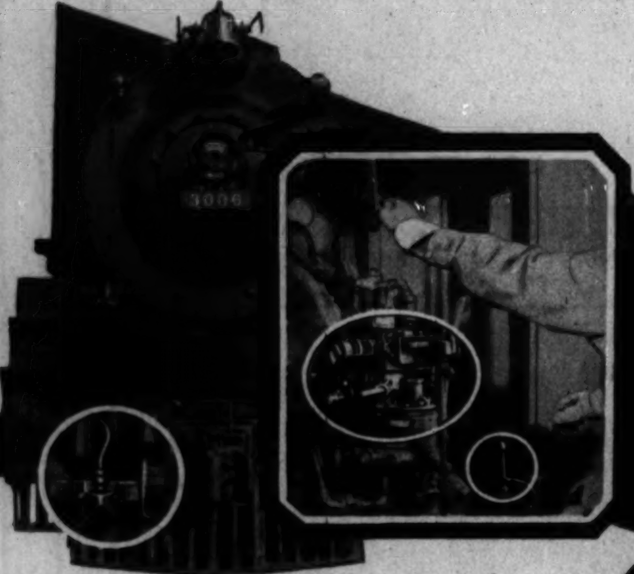
Among the recent additions to this modern, conveniently located station is the Pedestrian Bridge over the heavy traffic of Canal Street. It connects with the Daily News Building Arcade and provides quick entrance and exit for 80,000 commuters daily. Other improvements include a modern, roomy, air-cooled Cafeteria, enlarged Taxicab Stand with new cab entrance and driveway, and train shed alterations.

WELLS STREET FREIGHT STATION
(Merchandise Mart)
Wells, Kinzie and Ferry Streets

Where merchandise shipments are handled with utmost speed. Has 2,350 feet of steel enclosed inbound and outbound platforms. Three sets of tracks, handling 93 cars, serve outbound platform; two tracks, with a capacity of 50 cars, serve inbound platform. Built under the world's largest building. Ideally located for shippers and receivers.

CHICAGO & NORTH WESTERN RY. EXPRESS TERMINAL

This new terminal will materially speed up the handling of express shipments in the Chicago district, actually saving more than an hour's time for shippers and receivers! Occupies over three acres of ground, and 37 cars can be "spotted" along outside platform at one time. Its location at Milwaukee Avenue and Halsted Street makes it easily accessible from all parts of city.



CONTINUOUS AUTOMATIC TRAIN CONTROL

The invisible guardian of your safety. Limits the speed of trains—applies brakes if necessary—is ever watchful of the rails ahead. No matter what the condition of weather or track, this marvelous protective device can be depended upon. Exclusively a "North Western" feature between Chicago and Omaha.

PROVISO YARD— WORLD'S LARGEST FREIGHT YARD

Adjacent to Chicago. Particularly well situated to serve the West, North, Northwest and Southwest, trains moving directly to destination without passing through Chicago's congested areas. Electrically operated hump and classification yard insure a considerable saving of time in handling freight into the Chicago district. Covers 1,250 acres, has track capacity of 26,000 cars, with 15,000 through cars per day.

NEW CLASS "H" LOCOMOTIVES

These giant locomotives—there are 35 of them—are 103 feet 4 inches long, and with tender weigh 823,000 pounds. They are capable of a speed of 85 miles an hour and have a pulling power 50 per cent greater than the passenger locomotives they replaced. Such immense and flexible power insures smooth starting and easier handling of trains.

THE PIONEER—First locomotive to run from Chicago. A "Monarch of the Rails" in the late Forties, yet note its size as compared with the present-day Class "H" Locomotive.

WOOD ST. TERMINAL POTATO AND VEGETABLE YARD

Largest and most modern yard in the world for handling potatoes and vegetables. Team track facilities provided for 600 cars, with auxiliary tracks for 1,850 additional cars. Located at Western Avenue, Lincoln, 14th and 16th Streets, Chicago—nearest to markets and the downtown district.

EXTENSIVE TRACK IMPROVEMENTS

The Mayfair cut-off and the third track improvement between Jefferson Park and Barrington, illustrated above, are only two of the many track elevations and track and yard improvement projects completed by the Chicago & North Western during the last five years. The result has been faster service and the elimination of grade crossings.

IN addition to the improvements illustrated here, the Chicago & North Western Railway has completed numerous other undertakings. The building of a Chicago Avenue steam plant and the placing in service of oil electric locomotives in the downtown district, both for smoke elimination purposes . . . a modern "hotel" for cattle and sheep, erected at West Chicago . . . enlargement of many suburban station platforms . . . numerous improvements in facilities and machinery at the Chicago Shops . . . participation in the Wabash Avenue Bridge project and the 16th Street Separation project . . . enlarged facilities for unloading and loading passengers at Arlington Park Race Track—all, and more, for the sole purpose of providing "North Western" patrons with a service that is modern, efficient and complete.

SHIP AND TRAVEL VIA

CHICAGO & NORTH WESTERN RY.

ACTION: SPORTS AND SPECTACLES OF THE SPRINGTIME

STREAKS OF SPEED ON THE RIVER OF HENDRIK HUDSON—A spectacular panoramic view of the 132 mile Albany-to-New York City outboard motor boat race, won by Wade Woodworth, all-American football star from Northwestern university, in the record time of 3:10. Similar spectacle will appear on Lake Michigan next Sunday in the Milwaukee-to-Chicago outboard marathon, opening event in the motor boat regatta sponsored by The Tribune at Navy pier. (Acme photo.)

WHAT THE WELL-DRESSED BATHING GIRL IS WEARING THIS YEAR—As seen on the beach at Venice, Cal., where these seven naiads race a rolling Pacific comber to shore. All censors may not be exactly pleased over the modes, but at least the discontented ones will have company; the woolen mills won't care for them, either. (Acme photo.)

STYLE—Eileen Bennett makes good a long reach for a fast tennis ball in a London tournament. (Associated Press photo.)

A CASUALTY OF THE DIRT TRACK—A racing car's career is temporarily suspended when it bursts into flames at Langhorne, Pa. The driver was unhurt. (Acme photo.)

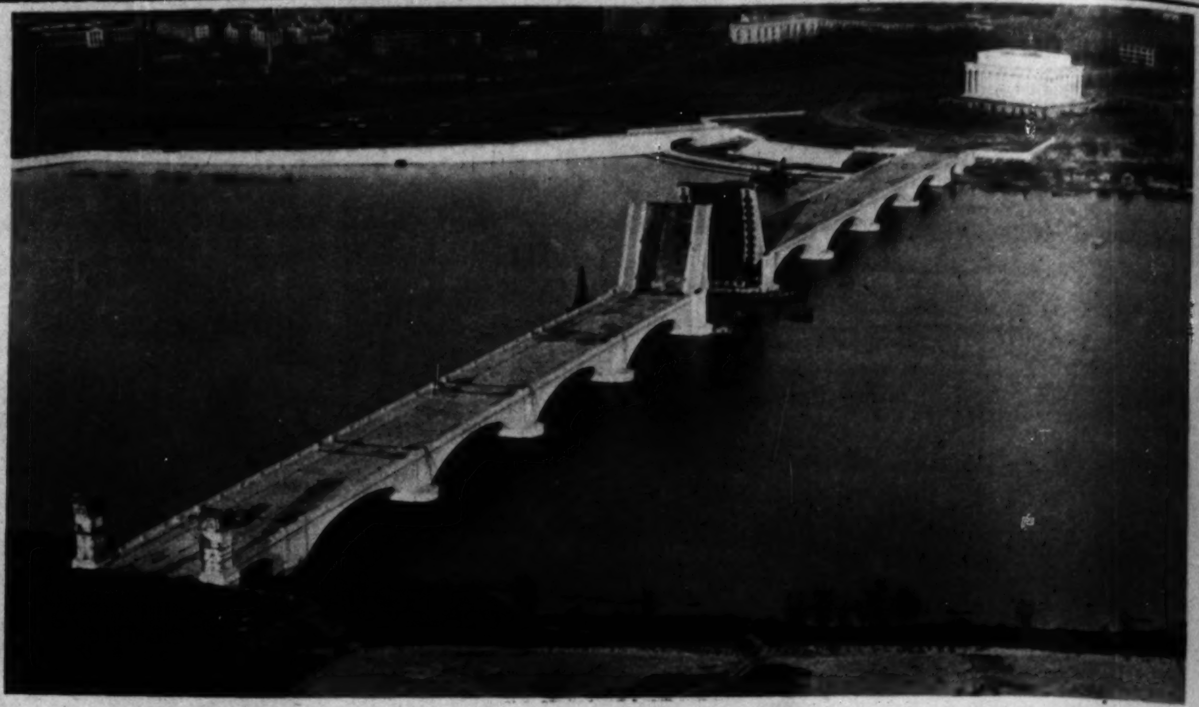
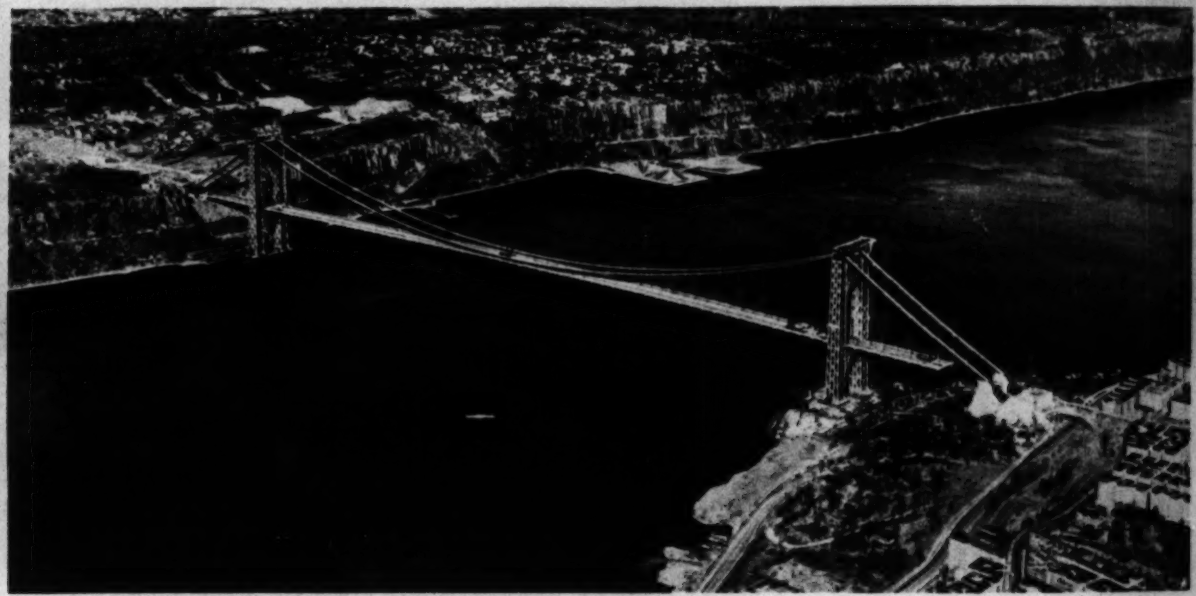
BRIDGES

THE RHYTHM OF THE BRIDGES—One after the other, with stately majesty, the bridges crossing the Chicago river are elevated to admit steamers from the lake or to give them passage out. Economically, to Chicago, it is a costly and ever annoying process; but optically, to spectators, it is a sight of never failing fascination. (Tribune photo, by Edward McGill.)



THE ARLINGTON MEMORIAL BRIDGE—An air view of the impressive new construction over the Potomac river at Washington, D. C. By linking the Lincoln memorial on the Washington shore with Arlington National cemetery on the Virginia side, the span becomes a significant symbol of union. (Associated Press photo.)

THE LARGEST ARCH BRIDGE IN THE WORLD is being completed at Sydney harbor, Australia, at a cost of $29,000,000. The huge arches of the cantilever structure each weigh 13,500 tons, and the total span is 1,650 feet. This architectural triumph in steel on the other side of the globe, providing for railway, vehicular, and pedestrian traffic, is expected to be open for service early in 1932. (Acme photo.)



A NEW SPAN ACROSS THE HUDSON—The George Washington bridge, linking upper New York City with Fort Lee, New Jersey, nears completion. Huge towers support the most colossal mass of steel and concrete that has ever been suspended. Work on the structure began in May, 1927. (©Fairchild Aerial Survey photo, from Associated Press.)

BROOKLYN BRIDGE—Forty-eight years ago today, "amid the booming of cannon, the shrill whistlings of thousands of steamers, and the plaudits of great masses of citizens"—according to a newspaper account of that time—the first of the great structures to span the river between Manhattan and the shores of Long Island was dedicated to the use of the people. The bridge has never lost its interest for visitors or native New Yorkers. (Associated Press photo.)

LONDON'S TOWER BRIDGE, more towerlike than the Tower of London itself, is considered one of England's greatest engineering feats. Two massive Gothic towers rise upon huge piers and are connected with the river banks by permanent spans. Chains, hanging between the central towers and smaller towers on the shore, hold these spans in place. The bridge opens by hydraulic power to allow craft to pass up and down the Thames.

STAGE AND SCREEN

GROOVING THEM DOWN THE SOUND TRACKS—Bobby Jones, who is now egging movie-goers on against Old Man Par from the screen, pitches to a California green.

JOE COOK, versatile star of "Fine and Dandy," must have stepped out to get a spot of lunch when this group was flashlighted. The center of the stage is occupied by one of his assistant comedians, by name Dave Chasen. The others are merely the indispensable girls. (White photo.)

IN STRICTLY MODERN DESIGN, as this architect's drawing proves, Earl Carroll is building himself a $4,000,000 theater in New York. It will seat 1,700; it will have an open counter for the sale of tickets instead of a box-office; and carved in black marble over its stage door will be Mr. Carroll's favorite gag: "Through these portals pass the most beautiful girls in the world." . . . CERTAINLY, Mother understands this kind of baby talk. It is the little darling's inarticulate way of expressing happiness and saying: "I am bathed and powdered with Vivaudou MAVIS Talcum. I glow all over. Feel simply grand. Vivaudou MAVIS is so fine and gentle to my skin. All the acid-sore spots and that miserable chafed feeling are gone." Vivaudou MAVIS is of the purest Italian Talc. It is milled so fine, it is almost impalpable to the touch . . . So fine, it is light as a fragrant breath on the tenderest skin.

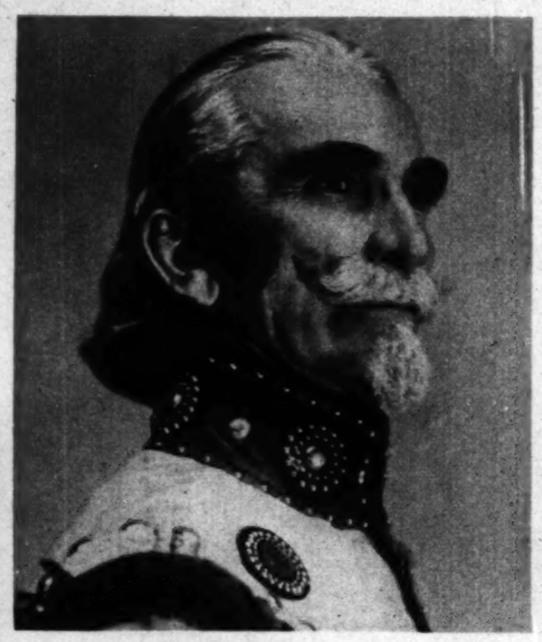
VIVAUDOU MAVIS TALCUM

WELL, I'LL BE SWITCHED, THE HAY AIN'T PITCHED—Marian Marsh dons a pair of overalls, mounts one of a team of fiery nags, and helps bale the horses' spinach during a vacation from the movie lot. But so far as we know it isn't to lift the mortgage on any old homestead.



HE MIGHT BE Buffalo Bill or Diamond Dick, but his name is Tex Cooper and he contributes wild-western atmosphere to the Theater Guild's production of "Green Grow the Lilacs." He is a veteran of the cattle ranges and the rodeos. (Vandamm photo.)

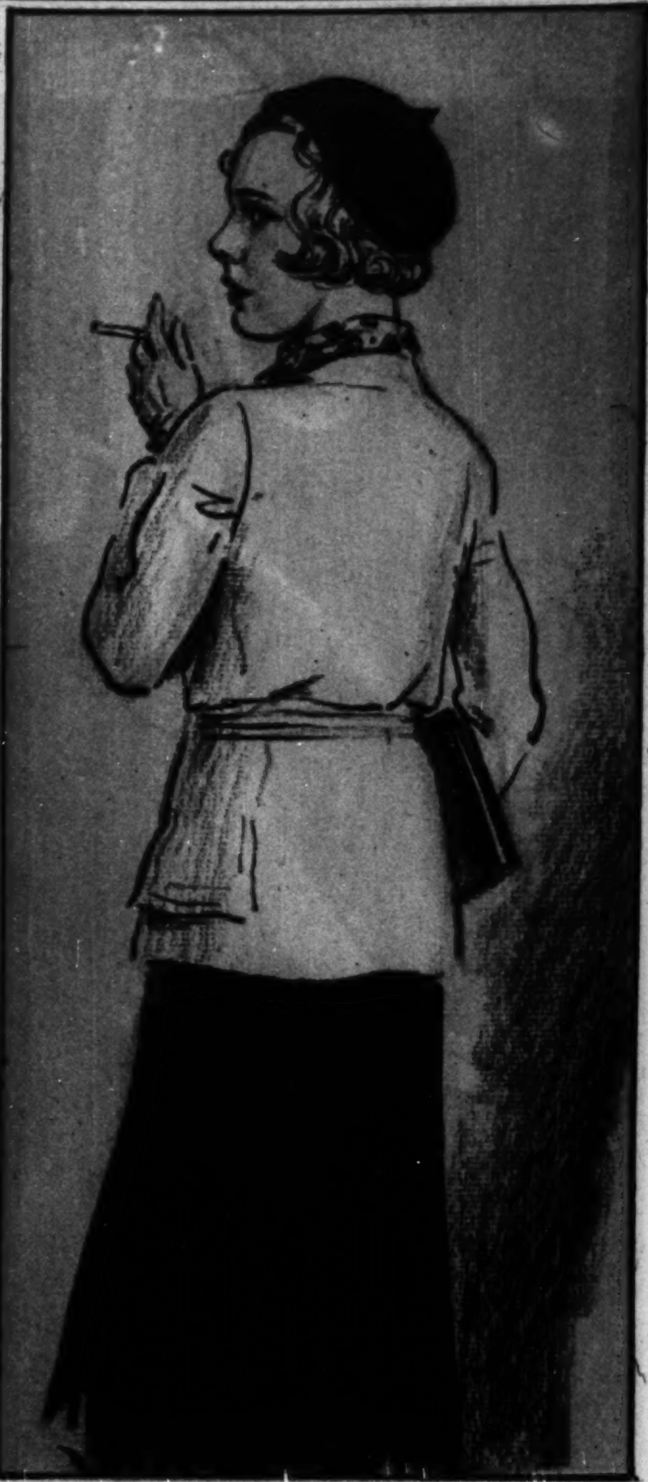
The Lady Smoker

W. E. Hill

(Copyright: 1931: By the Chicago Tribune.)

From the glittering nineties. Thirty-five years or so ago, when Miss Cissy Casino sang a ditty about "Naughty Cigaret" and actually smoked one, the boys and girls of grandpa's day were pretty well shocked at the state of things the stage was coming to!

The lobby smokers. And here are a few lady theater lobby smokers puffing away between the acts as big as you please—particularly the short lady on the right, who told her girl friend she'd die if she couldn't have a smoke. (For years she never touched the filthy weed, saying that men would respect her more if she didn't smoke. Well, somehow or other the men respected her too much. Now she smokes all the time.)



The schoolgirl. Laurel is only in first year high school, and consequently does not get the consideration that older members of the household are accorded. Though her mother, her sister, and her Aunt Caroline are inveterate smokers, Laurel is supposed not to have her growth or something and has to puff her cigaret in strict seclusion.

Grandma's ashes. Elderly lady smokers, so statistics show, are very untidy cigaret addicts and will drop cigaret butts, ashes, and burnt matches all over with impunity. How often in our modern homes will you hear a tidy member of the family complain, "I do wish grandma wouldn't drop ashes down the cracks in this sofa! And she leaves cigaret stubs all over my Boston fern!"

The school teacher. Miss Parkinson is a resident teacher at Detmer School for Young Ladies for nine months of the fiscal year, and of course has to comply with the rules of the curriculum, which says, "No smoking," on account of the girls' morale, etc. But from July to October the aroma of tobacco smoke will stick to Miss Parkinson like the bark on a tree!

The young housewife. A young wife and mother will make terrible headway in a carton of cigarets, because she has to light at least five in order to get one good smoke. No sooner has she lit a cigaret and started in than the interruptions begin.

Sworn off. Winifred's husband just hates to see her smoke, being that old fashioned, so Winifred doesn't smoke much around the house and has practically sworn off just to please him. Waits until she goes calling.

The beach smoker. A most unpleasant type of lady smoker is the bathing girl who rushes happily up from the surf, all dripping, and cries, "O, do give me a puff! Just a couple of drags from your cigaret will do!"

The comic girl smoker. Mrs. Mae Sealpack has a lighter and everything that goes with my lady nicotine, and when she lights a friend's cigaret she will say, "My Lawd, Mary, it worked!" And over her desk is a motto which reads, "'T is better to smoke here than hereafter."

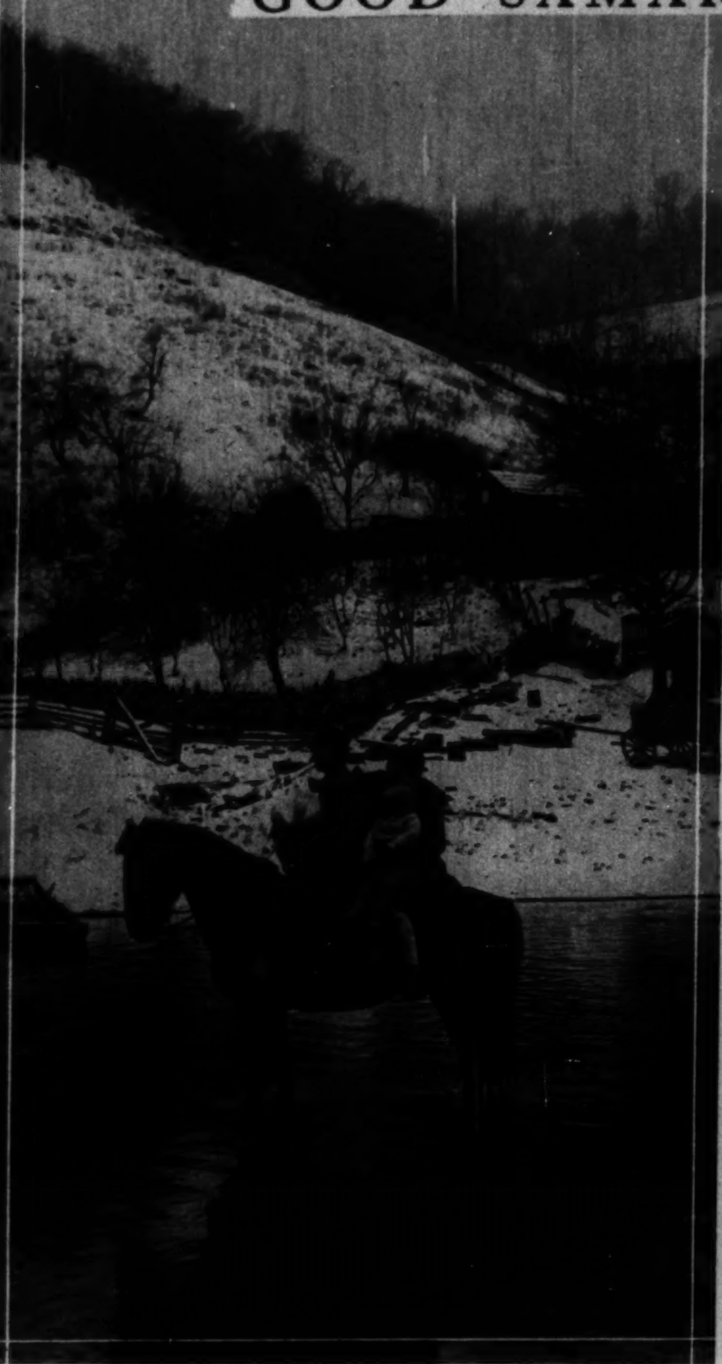
GOOD SAMARITANS ON HORSEBACK

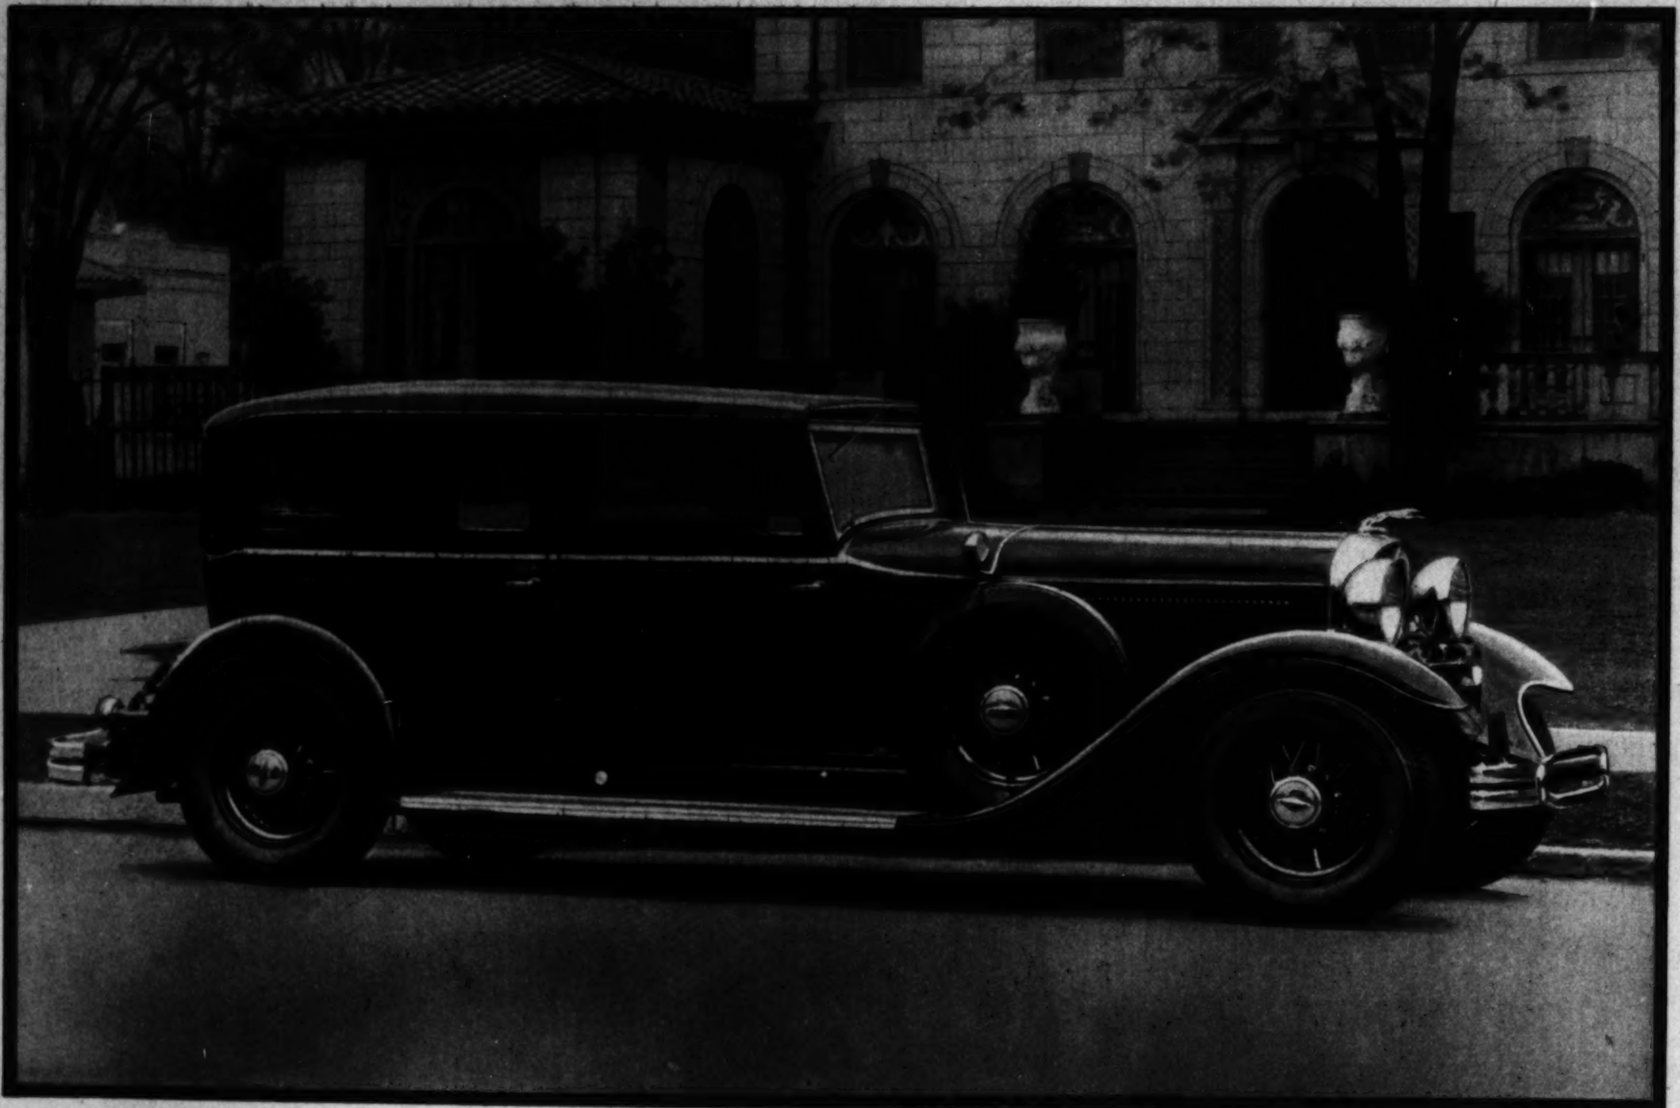


EN ROUTE TO THE DOCTOR—Streams are forded and many obstacles overcome by the good Samaritans of the Frontier Nursing service, a philanthropic organization operating in the remote regions of Kentucky. One of the corps of twenty-six nurses here takes a mountaineer mother and her little brood to the nearest town.

A RIDE DOWN THE HILLSIDE—Transporting a Kentuckian injured far from hospitals or medical service. The nurses carry on their errands in all kinds of weather, day and night, summer and winter, over rough bridle trails, in a country without railroads, automobile roads, or bridges.

A NIGHT CALL ON THE FRONTIER—A hurry-up summons brought this angel of mercy to a mountain shack long after most of us had finished our day's activities. Life along the outposts of civilization bears heavily upon the women and children, and it is in relieving their distress that the nurses do their most important work.

THE GUIDING SPIRIT—After a distinguished wartime career in France with Miss Anne Morgan, Mrs. Mary Breckinridge founded and is now director of the Kentucky nursing service. A Chicago committee co-operating in the work includes Mrs. Frederic Upham, Mrs. Waller Borden, Mrs. Eugene Buffington, Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, Mr. and Mrs. William V. Kelley, Mrs. Frederick Haskell, and Mr. and Mrs. D. Mark Cummings. Mrs. Breckinridge was a recent visitor here. (Caufield and Shook photos.)



THE NEW LINCOLN JUDKINS THREE-WINDOW BERLINE

A New Expression of Established Excellence

THE new Lincoln is a fresh expression of an ideal—to make a motor car as nearly perfect as it is possible to produce. Built in a precision plant famous throughout the world, backed by the entire resources of the Ford organization, this fine car more than maintains the Lincoln tradition of well-balanced excellence.

One is first impressed with this Lincoln's poised beauty. Gracefully long and low, its sweeping lines reflect a spirit of swift, fleet motion. All appointments are restful and relaxing, luxurious in every detail, to make complete the pleasures of fine car motoring.

The new Lincoln engine supplies a generous power that is smooth-flowing and silently alert. Driving brings a sense of gliding ease. With the new Lincoln free-wheeling transmission all gear shifts are gentle and precise. Between second and high speeds, back and forth as you will, shifts are made without disengaging the clutch.

Embodied in this Lincoln is that expected distinction of design, that traditional precision of engineering long associated with Lincoln motor cars. Prices range from $4400 f. o. b. Detroit.

THE FASTEST KENTUCKY DERBY ▾ ECHOES OF THE CHICAGO JUBILEE

45,000 SEE TWENTY GRAND BREAK THE KENTUCKY DERBY RECORD—Twelve of America's fastest horses pound past the packed stands for the first time at picturesque Churchill Downs. Prince D'Amour leads the field, Ladder racing a head behind; and next to last runs Mrs. Payne Whitney's great 3 year old. In the backstretch Jockey Charley Kurtsinger flicked his whip twice; at the turn into the stretch only Sweep All was in front; and Twenty Grand flashed to a $48,725 victory four lengths ahead of this contender, with the time of 2:01 4-5. [illegible] THRILL TO PYROTECHNIC SPECTACLE—The blazing splendors of The Tribune's fireworks display, on the [illegible] gala night of the Chicago Jubilee, light the night sky above the radiantly colorful Buckingham fountain as half a million people, massed in the great plazas of Grant park, admiringly murmur and enthusiastically cheer. "Keep smiling; Chicago [illegible] you make it!" was the final flaming message of the pyrotechnic pieces. (Tribune photo, by Edward McGill.)

FORT DEARBORN IS OPENED AGAIN—The Black Horse troop rides in dedicatory ceremonies at the replica of the old stronghold, built on the lake shore for the World's Fair of 1933. The old flag of fifteen stars was raised during the dedication, in which soldiers in deerskins and Indians in war attire participated. This Century of Progress exhibit is now open to the public. THE RED ARMY PARADES IN MOSCOW 50,000 STRONG—As soviet Russia celebrated May day, this formidable aggregation of soldiery was massed in front of the Lenin mausoleum in Red square. Tanks rumbled, artillery rolled, planes roared, and a million civilians marched in this communist show. (Acme photo.)

STYLE SUGGESTIONS FOR THE JUNE BRIDE

A FRENCH WEDDING IN BLUES—A departure from the established white was the Worth-designed pale blue wedding gown and tulle veil worn by Mlle. Alleine Allez of Paris. Her fourteen bridesmaids also were dressed in pale blue satin, to which dark blue velvet caps gave an interesting accent. White orchids carried by the bride and the pale pink roses of the bridesmaids broke the monotony of blue. (Paul O'Doye photo.)

A FILM BRIDAL GOWN—Palest pink muslin of gossamer tissue, embroidered in silver sequins and rhinestones, fashions an enchanting costume for lovely Laura La Plante. Her pink tulle veil is held in place by a tiny cap.

DOROTHY MACKAILL, a Hollywood importation from Yorkshire, enhances the pictorial quality of her own blond charm with the traditional lace incrusted white satin, orchids, and pearls.

A FASHIONABLE WEDDING GOWN of exquisite simplicity. The diagonal lines, the molded silhouette, and the skirt which expands into graceful fullness stamp it with authentic smartness. Worn by Marguerite Churchill of the films. (Autrey photo.)

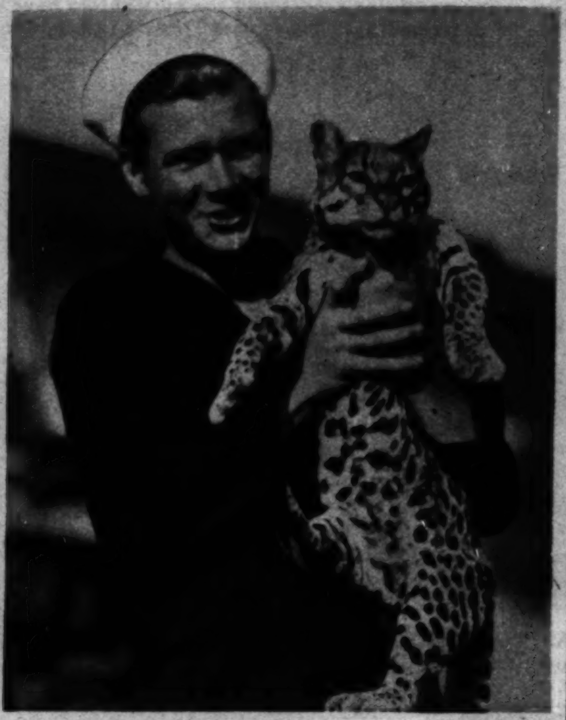
THE SAILOR HAS A MASCOT ON EVERY SHIP—On the cruiser Memphis it's "Tassy," the wallaby looking pleasant after a juicy carrot. "Tassy" is a good gob, except that once she lunched on the captain's fern, for which she got five days on bread and water in the brig.

"GRUNTS" does just that aboard the Delaware, the grunts being those of a lucky porker comfortably full of food and content.

THE PELICAN, whose beak holds more than—but never mind; it's "Honest John," long-nosed but easy-going mascot of the Maryland. And a great favorite he is.



THE PRETTY KITTY, "Tabby," began life in Nicaragua's jungles; captured there by bluejackets, and now official mascot of the naval air forces at San Diego, Cal.

"I WONDER WHAT'S BECOME OF SALLY" is the theme song of the aircraft tender Aroostook. "Sally" was the mascot of that ship until, one day, she slid overboard to catch herself some breakfast. Now, of course, she's an ex-mascot, which might disqualify her for this page; and her hide may be some fine lady's wrap, which would eliminate her somewhat definitely.

THE BEST SAILOR aboard the cruiser Concord is "Conkie;" he can go places where no two-footed gob would venture. (And frequently does, with shipmates' hats.)

JUST A CUB, the badly spoiled pet of the battleship California. Always growling around the deck; but the growls are just his way of expressing joy of life. (Acme photos.)

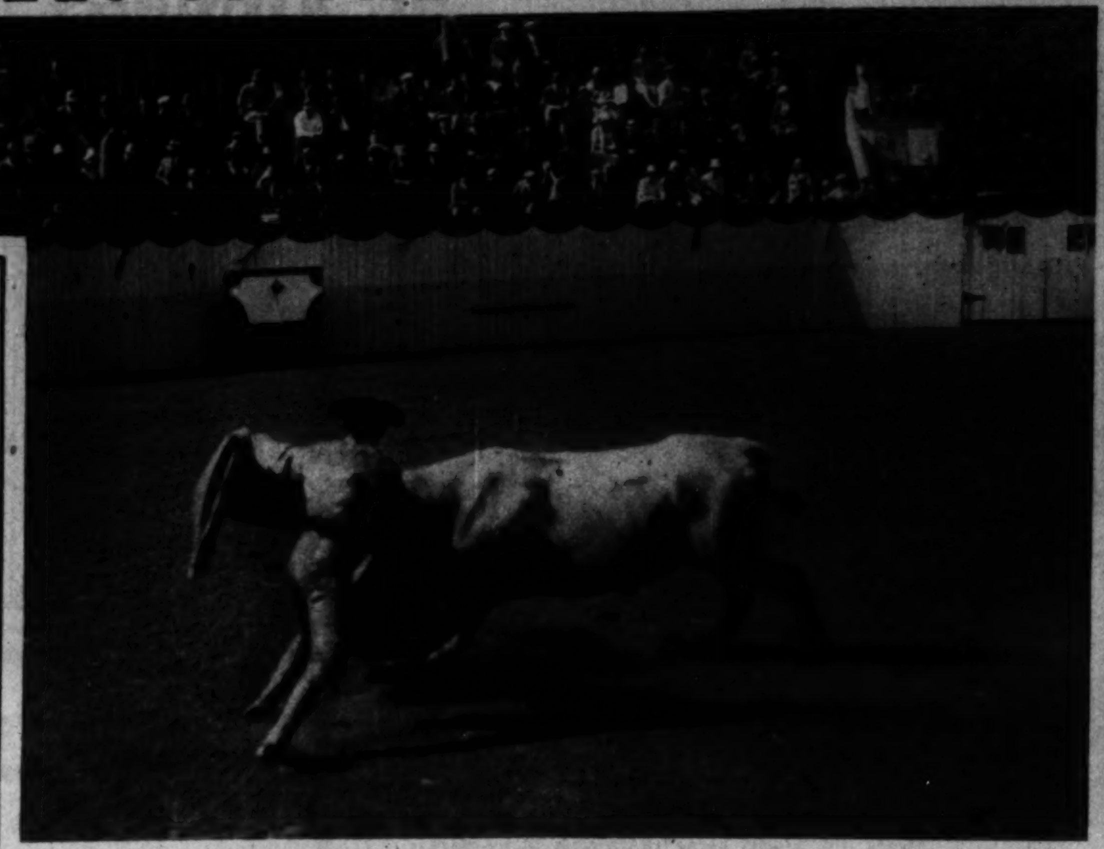
TALL TALES OF THE CAMERA: SNAPSHOTS CURIOUS AND STRANGE



THE BULLFIGHT CATCHES ON IN AMERICA—But it's the toreador who takes the chances. For offensive and defensive purposes in this production the bullfighters have only dummy weapons and nimble feet. The style is described as "Portuguese"; the scene is San Pablo, Cal. (Acme photo.)

ANOTHER QUICK STOP OF THE CAMERA—Razed at Stepney, England, a collapsing 140 foot stack is poised by the lens in mid-air. (Associated Press photo.)

MASS PHENOMENON at the University of California, southern branch, at Los Angeles. The basketball spectacle was a feature of a "play day" program. (Associated Press photo.)

The DISTINGUISHED Set among cigars

Hurry, hurry, hurry . . . we live at a fast pace. We rush hither and yon from eight in the morning until midnight—16 hours a day. The modern tempo requires the modern Van Dyck Cigar—right for our 16 active hours—mild enough for after breakfast—yet with fragrant tobaccos that keep our taste contented to the close of a busy day. For one week, try Van Dyck. See if you don't get more smoking pleasure from the cigar which is mild all through.
